PREFACE

FOR a long time past the writing of this study of the spiritual teaching of St. John Eudes has been contemplated, but hitherto other preoccupations have made it impossible for me to accomplish it. Now, thanks be to God, it is concluded, and I am happy to offer it to the priests of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, to the religious of Our Lady of Charity, to the members of the Society of the Heart of the Admirable Mother, and to the numerous admirers and friends of St. John Eudes. In enabling them to become better acquainted with his doctrine, may it also cause them to be permeated with his spirit and assist them to walk faithfully in his footsteps.

In writing this work I have made frequent use of the introductions with which I prefaced the Saint's writings in the Oeuvres complètes and the Oeuvres choisies; and I have also profited by the labours of M. Letourneau, M. Bremond, and M. Pourrat. But the most systematic and the most complete exposition of the teaching of our Saint is to be found in Le Royaume de Jésus, and that book has been my chief guide. I have not, however, neglected the later works of the Saint, in which his doctrine is presented to us in its definitive form.

PREFACE

In conclusion I would add that this study is but an essay. A definitive synthesis of the teaching of St. John Eudes will not be possible until all its details have been minutely studied. I have only attempted to show the path that must be followed.

CHAPTER I

ST. JOHN EUDES: AND HIS WRITINGS

ST. JOHN EUDES wrote many books. His Oeuvres Complètes, published some twenty years ago, ran twelve octavo volumes, and yet we are without certain number that were never printed, the manuscripts of which were lost in the Revolution of 1789. Not that the Saint was primarily a writer; he was an indefatigably zealous apostle with no other ambition than that of promoting the glory of God and the salvation of souls, and throughout his long life he occupied himself to that end in numerous ways.

Possessing extraordinary aptitude for missions, he did not cease to preach until he was at the end of his strength. Above all, he was convinced that what was chiefly lacking in the Church of France was a supply of virtuous and zealous priests, and it was for that reason that he founded the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, the principal object of which is to labour at the training of the clergy in the greater seminaries; while to assure a shelter for girls and penitent women he founded the Order of Our Lady of Charity, which is vowed to their relief. In addition, from 1643 onwards, he used all his powers for the establishment and propagation of the public cult of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. And finally he instituted for persons in the world several associations intended to honour these Sacred Hearts and to occupy themselves with good works, especially in coming to the help of the ecclesiastical seminaries.

10- THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

The works written by the Saint were bound up with his apostolic labours, and their only object was to ensure the success of the latter. They were not learned works but popular books intended as propaganda, written to meet the needs of his institutes and to help his priests, pious souls in general, and even ordinary Christians to lead a life conformable to their vocation. Written simply and clearly, without any literary object, they are permeated with his penetrating unction and delicate piety, and therein is the secret of their success. But before studying the teaching that underlies them all, it will not be without value to draw up the list of these works and to show their subject-matter and the work on behalf of which they were respectively composed.

A. ST. JOHN EUDES AT THE ORATORY:

Le Royaume de Jésus

John Eudes was born at Ri, in the diocese of Séez, on November 14, 1601. From his tenderest years he was notable for his piety, and especially for his devotion to the Holy Virgin, so that at the college of Caen, where he studied under the Jesuit Fathers, his fellow-pupils called him "Eudes the Devout." He was admitted into the congregation of the Blessed Virgin in 1618, and therein, as he tells us, received great graces, and when his school days were over he decided to enter the ecclesiastical state, and for two or three years he attended the course of the theological faculty at Caen.

The Influence of the Oratorians

It was in 1623 that he asked for admission to the Oratory, into which he was received the by Père de Bérulle himself on March 25th. Ordained priest on December 20, 1625, he was sent to Aubervilliers, in the solitude of Notre Dame des Vertus, to recuperate his failing health, and remained there two years, during which he spent his time in prayer, spiritual reading and other pious exercises. During his sojourn at Paris and at Aubervilliers he was able to profit by the instructions of both Père de Bérulle and Père de Condren and was so stirred by their teaching that he mastered it completely and made it the very essence of his piety and of his apostolate.

There is no need for us here to set out the teachings of those holy men; suffice it to say that they delighted to concentrate their devotion on the Incarnate Word and on His Most Holy Mother, that they looked upon the Christian life as a continuation and an extension of the life of Jesus in each one of us, that they stressed the virtue of religion and the supreme worship of adoration that we owe to God in union with His Divine Son, and finally that they held an extremely lofty view of the priesthood, being accustomed to consider it the Order of Jesus Christ and as such the greatest and the holiest of all the orders.<sup>(1)</sup> We will

(1). This school of thought is very dogmatic and is particularly insistent on the dogma of the fall of man by the sin of Adam and his restoration by the Incarnation. The followers of Bérulle delighted in meditating on these great mysteries in the light of St. John's Gospel and of St. Paul's Epistles. We look in vain in their work, for those moral studies that attracted Other writers whose doctrine is ordinarily less theocentric.

constantly find these ideas, so dear to Bérulle and his disciples, in the writings of St. John Eudes, for they constituted the basis of his spiritual teaching. It is true that he sets them forth in his own way, and often draws upon the words of St. Francis of Sales, Rodriguez, St. Gertrude, St. Mechtilde, St. Brigid and many other writers of various schools, but in all essentials his teaching is certainly that of Bérulle and Condren.

In 1627, after devoting himself for several months to the service of the plague-stricken people in the neighbourhood of Argentan, he was sent to the Oratory at Caen, where he began to preach missions, employing his free time in the direction of souls either at the Oratory or amongst the religious communities of the town, especially the Carmelites and the Benedictines of Holy Trinity. The letters exchanged during this period between him and the Carmelites and the Benedictines, respectively, show that his wisdom and holiness were already held in high esteem; and it is to this period of his life that one of his best works belongs: La Vie et le Royaume de Jésus dans les âmes Chrétiennes. It was published in 1637 and dedicated to Madame de Budos, Abbess of Holy Trinity in Caen, and to her religious. It was also dedicated to all those souls who desire to love Our Lord, and especially to those of whom he had charge.

Le Royaume de Jésus

At that period books of piety were numerous. Not to mention the works of Grenada, at that time very popular, there were available for the faithful St. Francis of Sales's two works: the Introduction to the Devout Life and the Treatise on the Love of God, which were praised by everyone. But those books, excellent though they were, did not completely satisfy our Saint. He did not find in them, at least to the extent he would have desired, St. Paul's noble teaching on our incorporation with Christ by baptism and our obligation to live with His life and to act in His spirit, which is the logical consequence of it. Not that St.

Francis of Sales (to name him alone) ignored this teaching or failed to recall it, but he treated of it only incidentally and in passing, whereas our Saint, like Bérulle and Condren, looked upon it as fundamental and made all his instructions converge upon it. Thus in writing Le Royaume de Jésus he believed that he was filling a gap: he wished to bring home to all pious souls the principles of the French School.(1)

This had been attempted in the previous year by one of his colleagues, Père Jean-Hugues Quarré, in his Spiritual Treasure, a first-rate book totally inspired by Père de Bérulle, and our Saint thought highly of it and recommended it to his readers in Le Royaume de Jésus. But he dreamed of a manual that would be simpler, more practical and more complete, and it was for that reason that he wrote Le Royaume de Jésus, in which are to be found, together with very precise ideas on the Christian life and virtues, exercises to be practised every day, every week, every month, and every year for the leading of a truly Christian life and for preparing for a holy death.(2)

(1). It is not merely in this respect that Le Royaume de Jésus differs from the works of St. Francis of Sales. Its teaching is more austere in every respect.

(2). In 1662 the author added to his book the Méditations sur l'humilité and the Entretiens intérieurs which comprise the eighth part of it; and already in 1648 he had inserted in the sixth part a long discussion on Dévotion due aux saints lieux, the oratorical style of which contrasts with the remainder of the book.

14 - THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

In writing the book the author strove to be clear. As he was not writing for the lettered, he spoke the language of the people without any other care than to be understood by everyone; and in his desire to be useful he did not content himself with indicating the manner of making the various pious exercises, but frequently put forward ready-made aspirations which, none the less, he recommended should not be made use of hastily, but should be read slowly, savoured, and meditated upon so that the mind and the heart might be thoroughly pervaded by them.

"Most of these exercises," he says in his Preface, "are in the form of aspirations to Jesus, in order that every type of person can make use of them, for there are many who cannot easily use the truths of Christianity in their devotions when they are simply put to them baldly or by way of mere instruction. None the less this will not prevent those who prefer this latter method from extracting from the aspirations the various points and truths to enable them to meditate on the different subjects therein contained, according as the spirit of God shall work in them.-

The practical nature of the book.

Furthermore, in the interest of his readers, the Saint did not hesitate to repeat himself: "I have made use of repetitions in some places," he says, "but I have purposely done so, nature of the partly that you should more clearly understand certain things which seem to me of great importance, and that they should be the more impressed upon your minds, and partly so as to avoid giving you the trouble of having to refer back, since certain truths and practices have a bearing upon several subjects and exercises.

For this reason I have inserted such passages in several places so that if you should wish to read and to make use of exercises or subjects to which they apply, and either cannot or do not wish to read the other portions, you will not be deprived of a knowledge of these truths or practices, nor will you have the trouble of bunting for them in other parts of the book."

There we see his character and the nature of his apostolate. He was an entirely practical man, not concerned with speculation, and solely occupied in teaching his readers how they should live. But this he did excellently, for his book is remarkably detailed and souls of good-will find in it everything that they need for raising themselves to the highest perfection. And indeed, Le Royaume de Jésus has always been popular with the pious. Concerning it Henri Joly wrote in La Croix of October 5, 1919: "Le Royaume de Jésus is a book of Christian prayer and practice applicable to all times and all needs. Not merely does it serve to mark a memorable date, it is of definite value by reason of its fundamental, universal, and (one might say) eternal qualities. Like the Imitation, or St. Bonaventure's Life, of Jesus, like St. Ignatius's Exercises, or the Introduction to the Devout Life of St. Francis of Sales, it deserves to be in everybody's hands."

And Père de Jaegber, S.J.(1) has written: "In the spiritual life one cannot do better than make use of St. Paul's great doctrine of life in Jesus Christ, the Head of the mystical body. Now that teaching, already so well treated of by St. Augustine and St. Thomas, in their works, has been made by St. John (1) La vie d'identification au Christ, ch. 1V.

16- THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Eudes, more than any other, the centre of his sublime spirituality. . . . And we could not wish anything better than to see the Eudist form of spirituality propagated everywhere and his noble book Le Royaume de Jésus in everyone's hands. If this magnificent teaching were better known, if this book were in the hands of those who direct souls towards the loftiest form of divine union, and who instruct priests, monks and nuns, then undoubtedly many souls would be raised higher and would be favoured by various degrees of mystical union who now can only vegetate in mediocrity."

B. THE CONGREGATION OF JESUS AND MARY

(Les Règles et Constitutions. Le Manuel de Piété. Les Offices Propres.)

In 1643 St. John Eudes left the Oratory to found the Congregation of Jesus and Mary at Caen. In many respects the new Society resembled the Oratory, but it had more specialised aims. Its objects were the professional formation of clerics in the seminaries and the re-awakening of the Christian spirit in the laity by the preaching of missions. Despite incessant difficulties it succeeded in firmly establishing itself in Normandy and Brittany, and at the death of its founder it possessed "greater seminaries" at Caen, Coutances, Lisieux, Evreux, Rouen and Rennes.

But while founding seminaries and preaching missions the Saint also laboured at the organisation of his Society, and for this purpose he wrote Les Règles et Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Le Manuel de Piété à l'usage d'une Communauté Ecclésiastique, and a collection of Offices Propres. These works, which are mutually complementary, are a rich spiritual patrimony wherein the Saint's children find all that they need for their instruction in the true priestly life in accordance with the spirit of their Founder and the nature of the works entrusted to them.

The Rules of the Congregation.

In the mind of the Saint the Rules, which are drawn up in Latin, are one with the Constitutions, but they can be separated and, in fact, since the nineteenth century, they have been habitually published separately.(1) They were taken by the Saint from Holy Scripture. In place of the vows of religion the members of his Institute are bound by what are termed the vows of baptism and of the priesthood, and for their more perfect practice the members are subjected to the demands of the common life. Thus St. John carefully gathered together the noblest teachings of the Bible on the duties of the Christian life, the obligations of the priesthood, and the special virtues required in community life; he then grouped them methodically, connecting them together so as to form a continuous text, and it is this choice collection of maxims from Holy Writ that he placed at the beginning of the Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary under the name of Rules.

The Rules merely contain the principles of Christian and sacerdotal life; the Constitutions point out the method of putting them into practice, and are divided into thirteen sections.

(1) These Rules were recently republished under the title of Regulae Vitae christianae et sacerdotalis, and they comprise the third volume of his œuvres choisies.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

The Constitutions

Of these the first treats of the state of the Congregation, its objects, its foundations, its spirit. It is the shortest but the most important part, for the determining element in a society, that on which all the rest depends, is its object. Since it is intended chiefly for the formation of clerics in the seminaries, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary had to be a purely sacerdotal society; it is composed of priests and of aspirants to the priesthood, and its spirit is solely that of the supreme Priest which its members must possess "in its plenitude," so as to be able "to communicate it to others."

The second section deals with general discipline and daily routine.

The third treats entirely of the virtue of religion and the exercise of sacerdotal duties, such as the celebration of Holy Mass, the recitation of the Divine Office, preaching, and hearing confessions.

The fourth part concerns the charity that all members of the Institute must have for each other and for strangers. St. John dwells on that at all the greater length in that he makes charity "the rule of rules."

The fifth part is about humility, obedience, poverty, chastity and other moral virtues; while the sixth is devoted to the recruiting and training of subjects of the Congregation.

The seventh, eighth, and ninth parts have for their subject the works of the Society, the seminaries, missions, and the college at Lisieux of which the Saint had accepted the direction, but with the express intention of accepting no others.

The tenth part speaks of general assemblies, the eleventh of the superior general, the twelfth of particular superiors, and the thirteenth of the principal officials in each house.

Thus we see that the Constitutions are very complete, and in them full consideration is given to everything that concerns the intimate life of the Congregation. In drawing them up the Saint made use of the constitutions and rules of other ecclesiastical societies, notably the Oratory and the Society of Jesus. He borrowed from the Oratory all that concerns the condition of the Congregation and its administrative organisation; and he took from St. Ignatius a large number of the rules relative to general discipline and the exercise of authority. Similarly he profited by a certain number of ascetical works, especially the Spiritual Conferences of St. Francis of Sales. But with such discernment did he select the material that he borrowed from his predecessors, and so thoroughly did he augment it with the fruit of his meditations and his experience that one is struck by the unity of thought and of style that runs through his whole book. In short, from one end of it to the other, one finds that deep religious spirit, ardent zeal, compassionate yet steady charity, and entire abnegation that characterised the Saint. Moreover, from end to end are to be found in it the prevailing qualities that characterise all his books, a happy union of lofty principles and practical detail, of eloquence with precision, of energy and gentleness, of simplicity and powerful analogies. We believe, in fact, that the Constitutions is one of the best books that issued from his pen, for from the ascetical point of view it is incomparably rich, and from the literary aspect it is superior to most of the Saint's works by reason of the largeness and regularity of its plan, the true proportion of its parts, the unvarying precision of style, and the purity of its language.

Nor are the Saint's spiritual children ignorant of the value of this book. "It was in the year 1654," wrote Pierre Costil, "that Père Eudes sketched out the complete constitutions that he has given us and for which we cannot doubt that he received particular lights from the Holy Spirit (apart from those parts that he borrowed from the constitutions of other communities noted in his day for their regularity), so much good sense is there in them, so much of the Christian and priestly spirit, and of all that is necessary for good government and the maintenance of fervour in the body of the Congregation. That is the verdict of all his children down to the present day, and they themselves realise that they can read nothing more useful to them than the particular constitutions that deal with the virtues, and that the holy man had forgotten none of the motives or practices which display the necessity or advantages of such reading, or which demonstrate its scope and its operation."

M. Mollevaut, a priest of Saint Sulpice, who had examined these Constitutions, found them "admirable," and Cardinal Pitra stated that he "knew no rule that led to a greater self-denial and a more priestly life."

The Manual of Piety.

The Manuel de Piété is a collection of prayers for rounding off the exercises of piety and other actions of the day. It can be useful to everyone, especially to priests, but the Saint wrote it for the members of his

Congregation. "Receive this book, my dear Brethren," he says to them in his preface, "not as from the hand of a despicable man and a miserable sinner, such as I am who, being of myself mere nothingness and an abyss of darkness and sin, can produce nothing else; but receive it as from Him Who is the absolutely unique principle of all good; let it be to you literally a manual, i.e. have it frequently in your hands, read it attentively, and put it into practice faithfully."

In the Manuel we find prayers for reciting every day before and after morning prayers, four ways of beginning and ending this morning prayer itself, litanies and other prayers to be recited before midday together with four ways of making the examen which should follow; also prayers to be said before the Blessed Sacrament after dinner and supper, litanies in honour of the Blessed Virgin for recitation after Lauds, night prayers, preparations for the Divine Office, and for meals, conversations, etc. In it also are exercises for each week, each month, each year, as well as others for things that have no fixed time, such as sickness, travels, deliberations, and so forth.

And so it is plain that the Saint forgot nothing and left to his children a complete and eminently practical manual. It goes without saying that it is animated by the spirit of the French School, but with those special additions which provide the particular features and devotions preferred by our Saint.

A large number of the prayers in the Manuel are taken from the Liturgy or from earlier writers, and sometimes the Saint reproduces them in their original form; but frequently he makes additions or modifications in the spirit of his own devotional outlook. And side by side with these prayers are others composed by himself, such as the Ave, Cor Sanctissimum, the Ave, Maria Filia Dei Patris, the Ave, Joseph Imago Dei Patris, prayers to be said in the morning, at midday, and in the evening. In general they are notable for their conciseness, precision, and vigour, as also for their sweet and impressive unction.

In addition to the Litany of the Holy Name of Jesus and that of the Blessed Virgin, there are in the Manuel Litanies in honour of the Holy Trinity, the Heart of Jesus, the Holy Childhood of Our Lord, the Blessed Sacrament, the Passion, the Heart of Mary, her Holy Childhood, the Holy Angels, St. Joseph, St. Joachim, and St. Anne. Those of the Holy Childhood of our Lord, the Passion, and the Blessed Sacrament are not by St. John, but, in accordance with his custom, he has remodelled them. It is believed that the remainder were written by him, though they are taken partly from Holy Scripture and partly from the works of the Fathers and ecclesiastical writers.

The fourth part of the Manuel contains also thoughts for certain feasts and ceremonies such as renewal of baptismal vows or of clerical promises, and these were written by the Saint and are full of wealth of teaching and of piety. In short, St. John delighted to express

1 The Ave Cor Sanctissimum, which dates from 1643, contains the germ of all St. John's spiritual teaching, for in it are to be found: (a) his devotion to the Sacred Hearts which he did not separate from one another and which he honoured "conjointly"; (b) consideration of the Christian virtues in these Sacred Hearts; (c) the acts which go to make up prayer as understood by the Saint; (d) the complete consecration and immolation of self to Jesus and Mary; (e) fidelity, of which we treat further on; (f) the Saint's views on the life and reign of Jesus in souls: ut in ipso vivas et regnes! The Ave Cor is in the (Oeuvres Complètes, and in the present writer's book on Devotion to the Heart of Mary.

the lofty thoughts and sentiments of his mind and heart in either Latin or French prayers, and it was a work in which he excelled.

New Feasts offices.

But precious though this manual was, it was not enough for the Saint, who was convinced that the best means of developing devotion and making it produce all its fruits was to make it the subject of a liturgical feast, and accordingly he introduced into his Congregation a number of feasts already established in some dioceses or Religious Orders, and in doing so frequently touched up or completed its liturgy. Examples of this are the Feasts of the Holy Name of Mary, of her marriage Espousals with St. Joseph, of the Expectation, of Our Lady of Pity, of the joys of the Holy Virgin, of Our Lady of Victory, of St. Gabriel, and of St. Lazarus. And the Saint went yet further: with permission of the bishops concerned, which at that time was sufficient, he instituted several new feasts for which he wrote the Masses and the Proper Offices; the best known examples are the Feasts of the Heart of Mary (1643), of the Heart of Jesus (1672), and of the Priesthood (1652); but there were others, for instance, that of the Holy Childhood of Jesus, of the Holy Childhood of Mary, and of the Apparition of Our Lord to His Holy Mother after His resurrection. The collection of Offices re-fashioned or composed by St. John fills a large volume printed for the first time in 1652 and republished in 1668 and in 1672.

There is no need to praise the Masses and the Offices written by the Saint in honour of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary; everyone recognises their perfection and beauty<sup>(1)</sup>; and the Office of the Priesthood is not inferior to them. Without being perfect, the other Offices are far from devoid of merit. In all of them there is one of the most striking characteristics of St. John's work: a piety that is gentle and tender, ardent and enthusiastic, that penetrates and soothes the mind with its sweet perfume. What the Venerable Père Boudon said of the Office of the Heart of Mary might also be said of them all: "It is almost impossible to read them attentively without one's heart becoming more tender," which is very similar to the decision of the doctors who approved it in 1651: "These Offices," they said, "are entirely suited to nourish faith, to inflame charity, and to develop Christian piety in souls."

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

From the doctrinal point of view they are remarkable in that they constantly evoke in the mind the Saint's great and noble teaching on the Word Incarnate and His union with His Holy Mother and with all the members of His mystical body. In short, St. John chants in these Offices what he has explained at length in Le Royaume de Jesus, the Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique, L'Enfance admirable, Le Cœur admirable, and in his other works, so that if one is not familiar with his writings it is difficult to understand fully his Offices. But when once his beautiful teaching has been savoured, one is delighted to see it expressed with such simplicity and piety in the Offices.

Of these the hymns form the most original part, they reveal the Saint as having a wonderful facility. "They show him," says M. Joly, "as having broken

(1) See the present writer's Bl. John Eudes and the public Cult of the Heart of Jesus, as also Devotion to the Heart of Mary.

with the exigencies of rhythm and with the resources of a latinity which he scarcely bends to the requirements of his subject in ingenious neologisms." But that does not apply to all. There are some that the Saint chiselled with particular care and has transformed into veritable jewels. Others are less finished and in these there are thoughts, expressions, and sometimes even verses that are taken from earlier Offices, a fact that should hardly surprise us when we realise that the author's work is relatively considerable and that, furthermore, his subject was almost always the same: Jesus and Mary and the links that exist between themselves and with us.

C. THE ORDER OF OUR LADY OF CHARITY: ITS CONSTITUTIONS

It was in 1641 that St. John laid at Caen the foundations of a Congregation of women intended to labour for the conversion of penitents, and this institute was authorised by Royal Letters Patent, dated 1642, and approved by the Bishop of Bayeux on February 8, 1651, and by Pope Alexander VII on January 2, 1666. The Saint consecrated the new society to the Heart of Mary and placed it under the protection of Our Lady of Charity. The titular Feast of the Order is that of the Heart of Mary which, as in the case of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, is kept on February 8th; but the sisters observe with equal solemnity the Feast of the Heart of Jesus, which is kept on October 20th in the institutes founded by St. John.

He gave his nuns the rule of St. Augustine and the

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Visitation Constitutions, but these last he modified and augmented to bring them into harmony with the spirit and end of his institute. They open with a preamble which sets out the humble glory Of the society and the founder's desires and recommendations for his daughters.

The spirit of his nuns.

The humble glory of the nuns of Our Lady of Charity. is to be the Daughters of the Heart of Mary. It is true that all Christians can claim this title, but it belongs in a very special manner to these nuns by reason of their vocation which has its origin in the heart of her who is the Refuge of Sinners, by reason also of the signal benefits they received from the Heart of Mary during the bitter trials that marked the beginnings of their institute; but above all by reason of the consecration of the Order to the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin. "For," says the Saint, "when it pleased God to put the idea of this community into the hearts of those whom His divine mercy made use of in order to found it, He also gave them the thought of consecrating it to the honour of the most worthy Heart of His well beloved Mother, to which it has been effectively dedicated and consecrated so that those received into the Order should strive to impress on their souls a perfect likeness of the most holy life and excelling virtues of the Most Holy Heart of their good Mother, and so by this means make themselves worthy of being true Daughters of the Adorable Heart of the Mother of Dilection."

After that the holy founder besought his daughters to dwell in the Heart of Mary and in that of her Divine Son, and therein to seek "their place of repose, their city of refuge, their impregnable fortress, their garden of delights, and their earthly paradise."(1)

"Live," said he, "the life of this blessed Heart, share its sentiments, enter into its dispositions, follow its inclinations, love whatever it loves, hate whatever it hates, desire only what it desires, rejoice only in that in which it rejoices, fear only that which it would fear if it were still subject to fear, be grieved only by that which would grieve it if it were yet capable of grief, labour for the accomplishments of its designs, give yourselves unceasingly to the spirit that animates it, so that this same spirit may possess you and may lead you in all things, that its grace may sanctify you, that its love may inflame you, that its charity may embrace you, and above all that its zeal for the salvation of souls may devour you."

"Finally," continued the Saint, "treasure in your hearts the fact that you are the Daughters of the Most Holy Heart of the Queen of Heaven; never forget that glorious name, have it ever before your eyes, engrave it in your minds, imprint it upon the inmost recesses of your souls, and let it be ever on your lips. In this way ~all your thoughts and affections, all your words and actions, will tend to make you worthy Daughters of the Most Holy Heart of the Mother of Jesus."

We see, then, how imbued is this preface with ardent piety, and it must ever be very dear to the Religious of Our Lady of Charity, for therein they find their titles of nobility, a pledge of the tender affection of their founder, and an exposition of that devotion which must be the life of their institute.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Object of the nuns.

We have said that the real end of the Order is to the labour for the conversion and instruction of penitent women. This the Saint explains in the first constitution, and having done so, he proceeds to display the excellence of this work and the motives that must move the sisters to devote themselves to it entirely. He would have them regard this first constitution as the soul of their institute, and employ their minds, their hearts, their care, and their industry to ensure the salvation of the unfortunate sinners committed to their charge, embracing with joy all the trials and difficulties they encounter in this thankless task.

And thereby it is made plain that if, in many respects, the Constitutions of Our Lady of Charity are but reproductions of those of the Visitation nuns, yet they have not the same end, and the spirit that animates them is not absolutely identical. The Visitation is a contemplative Order, instituted for the purpose of bringing the advantages of religious life to those who, by reason of advanced age or delicate health, cannot undergo the austerities of the older Orders. It aims only at the perfection of divine love. "It is," says Mgr. Bougaud, "a sweet sanctuary of interior recollection . . . a silent communication with the cherubim in prayer." But the nuns of Our Lady of Charity, although subjected to solitude and silence, are vowed to an active apostolate. They can only sanctify themselves by devoting themselves to the salvation of souls, and everything in their lives (vows, labours, prayers, sacrifices) is a condition and a means of their apostolate, whereas the same observances and 1 *Life of Bl. the same exercises are for the religious of the Visitation Order only a means of mortifying nature and of acquiring union with God.

The Constitutions for the nuns.

In the constitutions relative to the exercises of the religious life, administrative organisation and employments, St. John only very slightly for the nuns. He changed what was laid down by St. Francis of Sales. But in those parts that deal with the Christian virtues he rarely on the contrary, held to the text of St. Francis. Almost always he mixed therewith his personal views and added detailed instructions the importance of which he had been taught by experience. Especially is this the case in the constitutions on obedience, chastity, humility, and silence; those portions are largely the work of St. John Eudes, while those dealing with gratitude and charity are almost entirely from his own pen. The second is admirable; we believe there is not another in the whole book which bears the mark of a more exquisite gentleness. Fraternal charity, indeed, together with zeal for souls, was the virtue that the Saint wished to see supreme amongst his children. He wanted "charity to be the queen, the rule, the soul and the life of the institute; that it should unite all hearts, minds, and spirits in the Order so closely that there should be but one heart, one soul, and one mind; and that it should be manifest from their countenances, their conversation, their labours, in all places and in all things." But this ~benevolent and gentle charity need not prevent that fraternal correction that the sisters owe to one another, especially when they have been given authority; for, as the Saint justly remarks, "one of the most Outstanding effects of true charity is that it helps others to conquer their faults by pointing them out and correcting them in a spirit of gentleness and benignity.

In writing the life of the Venerable Mother Marie de Ste. Euphrasie Pelletier, founder of the Good Shepherd of Angers, Mgr. Pasquier and M. Portais were led to appreciate the Constitutions of Our Lady of Charity, and they wrote a high eulogy of them that we cannot forbear to quote.

Père Eudes," says Mgr. Pasquier, "adopted the Rule of St. Augustine and the Constitutions of the Nuns of the Visitation for his own daughters, with the exception of certain changes made necessary by the particular end that he proposed for them. He added to the three usual vows that of working for the souls of sinful women. In a limpid style, that is as fresh as that of the best writers of the seventeenth century, he pointed out to the Sisters of Refuge the supernatural beauty of their vocation. His views were so profound, and his exposition of them was so luminous, one might have supposed that they were meditations by Bossuet on grace and the ministry of the priest. With him, as with Bossuet, we are on the solid ground of the most trustworthy theology, and we follow him without weariness in his simple yet attractive dissertations. Even the professors of St. Sulpice had no other language and no loftier outlook when training the clerics they received in their first seminaries to meditate on their vocation."(1)

And M. Portais writes that "Père Eudes imposed on his Religious the Rule of St. Augustine as St. Francis of Sales had prescribed it for the Daughters of the Visitation, adding thereto Constitutions conformable to the especial needs and works of his Institute. It was only after the approbation of the Order by Alexander VII that he could prepare the Rules and Constitutions for the printer, but then he gave the matter his whole attention assisted by M<sup>re</sup> Mère Patin and the two superiors who succeeded her. Out of respect for St. Francis of Sales he changed nothing in the Spiritual Directory; and, even if he did not follow the same order, yet he did not modify the Visitandine Constitutions more than was absolutely necessary. But he placed at their head, together with certain Desires and Prayers for the Religious of Our Lady of Charity, an admirable Constitution on the end of the Institute and the motives which should lead those who Profess it to carry out its undertakings with all their hearts. Finally he drew up Rules for the girls and the Penitent women, desiring above all that they should be kept entirely separated from the Community. Taken as a whole this work is a veritable masterpiece; everything in it is regulated in detail with a wisdom, moderation, tact, and foresight that are incomparable."(1)

D. ST. JOHN EUDES AND THE MISSIONS

L'Exercice de Piété. Le catéchisme de la mission. Le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le Saint Baptême. Le Bon Confesseur. Le Prédicateur apostolique.

11 St. John was a born missionary. He had all the Natural and supernatural qualities necessary for success in that ministry in which he laboured throughout his life and in which he was so extraordinarily successful, as his contemporaries unanimously proclaimed. "I have listened to many preachers in my life, some of them the most skilful in France and in Italy," said Pierre Camus, sometime Bishop of Belley, "but I never heard one who worked more potently upon the heart of man than this good Father.»(1)

And St. Vincent de Paul, writing on June 18, 1660, states that "certain Norman priests led by Père Eudes have just given a mission in Paris with wonderful success. The Cour des Quinze-Vingts is very large, but it was too small to contain all those who came to hear the preaching.(2) And similarly M. de Renty wrote to M. Olier on June 16, 1648, that "Père Eudes labours here with incredible results. His ability in setting forth the truths of salvation, in displaying the love of God for us in Jesus Christ, and the horror of sin, has so penetrated hearts that all the confessors are overwhelmed. . . . His sermons are thunderbolts that give no rest to consciences till they reveal their secret sins, so that the confessors have to toil rather at consoling than at striving to move to repentance."

Even M. Olier himself applied to Père Eudes when he wanted to procure the benefit of a mission for his parish of St. Sulpice; so that M. Faillon tells us that M. Olier "knew of no one with a greater gift for preaching the word of God and bringing about remarkable conversions than this extraordinary man whom he called 'the marvel of his century,' and whose labours had been blessed with such abundant fruits by God."(4)

ST. JOHN EUDES: AND HIS WRITINGS

The Saint's missionary books.

To ensure the success of his missions St. John wrote several books, including three for the faithful: L'Exercice de piété, Le catéchisme de la mission, and Le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le Saint Baptême; and two for his missionaries: Le Bon Confesseur, and Le Prédicateur apostolique.

Of these, L'Exercice de piété, the first edition of which appeared in 1636, is an entirely practical volume in which the author sets out to teach the faithful how to pray morning and evening, to sanctify the actions of the day, to hear Mass, to confess and to communicate fruitfully. He made use of this little book himself in his missions, in leading the morning and evening prayers, and he recommended parents to use it for family prayers. To it he added an excellent summing-up of the Christian life in eight articles and, under the title of Paradis sur Terre, a resumé of Christian perfection which is a masterpiece.

Very often the people evangelised by the Saint were extremely ignorant, and to instruct them he soon to teach the catechism to the children, and it often happened that adults also attended on these occasions. St. John attached great importance to this work, and he was accustomed to take with him such priests as had a special aptitude for teaching the 'Catechism, and these were of great assistance to him.

But there was need of a handbook in which would be found a brief exposition of Christian doctrine, for use by the Children, and it was with this end in view that he wrote the Catéchisme de la Mission, which appeared for the first time in 1642 and was subsequently frequently republished. Other more learned catechisms

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

have appeared since then, but that of St. John remains one of the most practical and most pious.

Le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le Saint Baptême appeared in 1654, and has been recently republished. Though very short and very simple, it is rich in doctrine, and treats of the excellence of baptism, the graces conferred by it, the relations established by it between us and the three Divine Persons, the happiness which it contains in germ, the holy and divine life that it obliges us to follow, the means and the easiness of attaining to that, and the mysteries contained in the ceremonies of baptism. All these great questions are discussed with remarkable lucidity and precision. But what gives the book a particular savour of piety and makes its reading the more profitable, are the numerous texts borrowed by the author from Scripture and the Fathers for the purpose of supporting his arguments. In fact the Contrat is in some parts no more than a string of Scriptural texts which mutually complete and explain each other. Yet this little book, written for the simple, has been much appreciated by priests and religious of acknowledged learning and sanctity.

In 1644 St. John published a small book called Avertissements aux confesseurs missionnaires, which he wrote for his colleagues and the auxiliary priests who accompanied him on his missions, that it might guide them and help to maintain amongst them uniformity of method in the tribunal of penance. In its contents, as also in its title, this book recalls the Information for Confessors of St. Francis of Sales, but St. John had taken care to add to the meekness of the Bishop of Geneva the firmness of St * Charles Borromeo whose regulations he followed on the delaying or refusing of absolution. St. John's book had a rapid success and appeared in a second edition which, since 1644, has been followed by several others.

But this volume was only an essay, and the day came when its author wished to complete it by adding to it the fruits of his long experience. He quickly realised that the only way of doing this successfully was to remodel his work completely; and so he produced an entirely new book which he called Le Bon Confesseur, and this work, which appeared in 1666, was given a most cordial reception by the clergy and was frequently re-issued in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

"Of all the books," says Martine, -given by Père Eudes to the public, Le Bon Confesseur brought him most honour. He received from all sides the thanks and the just praises that he merited by a work of such great utility."

And a little later Pierre Cousin wrote: "We might say that this little book, the first that has appeared in France for the reform of the confessional, has two advantages over most other works on the same subject. The first is that the method that it teaches is so easy that no one could fail to understand and to practise it faithfully. And the second is that the duties of confessors are therein exposed, not drily, but with a devotion that arouses that of the reader even as it instructs him. "

During his missions St. John did not fail to give conferences to his assistants on how most usefully to preach, and in order that these rules might be conserved in the society and that even after his death his missionaries should never neglect them he decided to bring them together into a volume with the significant title, Le prédicateur apostolique. But though he toiled at it for a long time he could not complete the work till the end of his life, and it was his successor, Père Blouet de Camilly, who published it in 1685.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

In this book the author insists on the supernatural character of preaching, and he urges the preacher to raise himself above all thoughts of vanity and of self interest and to aim solely at instructing and touching his hearers. He also goes into numerous details on the preparation and composition of sermons and of how to deliver them: but what he desires above all else is that the preacher be a man of prayer and that he be the first to practise what he preaches to others.

E. ST. JOHN AND THE PRIESTHOOD

Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique

The main preoccupation of St. John and his favourite work was the elevation and the sanctification of the clergy, and he employed himself on it to the best of his ability during his missions by giving conferences to priests on the holiness and obligations of their state. He did more: he wrote for priests a certain number of books which between them cover all the functions of the priesthood. Besides Le Bon Confesseur and Le Prédicateur apostolique of which we have just written, he composed a treatise on the Divine Office and another on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, which have not yet been printed; and finally the Mémorial de la vie, ecclésiastique, which was published after his death by Père Blouet de Camilly.

The Mémorial is not a treatise, and we must not seek therein a complete and methodical exposition of the duties of a priest. The seventeenth century has left us several very valuable books of that nature, of which the best known and the most valuable is the Treatise on Holy Orders, by M. Olier, which appeared in 1675. St. John did not profit by it in writing the Mémorial, for by that time it was almost completed, but he must have read it, and presumably he greatly appreciated it for, on the priesthood as on the Christian life, his ideas fully corresponded with those of the venerable founder of St. Sulpice.

Previous to the Treatise on Holy Orders there had been available for the clergy the Instruction for Priests, by the Carthusian Molina: a justly celebrated work which has been republished in our own day. St. John thought highly of it, and recommended it in his Mémorial; indeed he was helped by it several times.

A handbook for the clergy.

None the less, books of this type, excellent though they might be, were not, in the eyes of the Saint, sufficient for the clergy. They needed shorter and more practical works which they could have always at hand and which would briefly sum up their duties and tell them how best to carry them out. His Mémorial was intended to fill this need. In it he paid homage first to the holy priests of the Church Triumphant who are, after Our Lord, the models of the clergy; and then he dedicated it to all priests of the Church Militant. The address in which he offers it to them contains a very fine panegyric of the priesthood; it concludes with these words: "After consecrating this little work to the saintly priests of the Church Triumphant, I wish equally to dedicate it to all good pastors and to all holy priests of the Church Militant, as a slight testimony of the respect that I cherish for the Royal Priesthood of my Lord Jesus, whom I honour in my dear brethren. And I wish to place this book in your hands so that it may serve as a reminder of all the qualities and the merits, the obligations and the duties of your profession, as also the method of exercising in a holy manner all the priestly functions." There we have the object of the book clearly shown: it is a manual intended to help priests to correspond to their vocation and to carry out its duties in a saintly manner.

Of necessity a volume of that kind must be composed of very diverse elements. If it is to be practical it must contain both instructions and methods of work; and that, in fact, is what we find in the Memorial. The author himself tells us in a foreword that in it are five principal things, namely: considerations on the excellence of the priesthood, a summary of the duties of priests, exercises of piety for the various actions of the day, a guide for retreats, and a series of meditations for the use of clerics; in short, five sections of very unequal extent and of quite different natures. And now a short word on each of these.

So long as a priest cherishes only popular ideas of his state and his duties, such as those that are often to be met with amongst the faithful, he does not feel the necessity of aspiring to perfection and experiences none of the holy ardours of true zeal. St. John realised this better than anyone, and so he began the Mémorial by reminding priests of the sublimity of their calling, which we have already stated to be the theme of the long dedication in which he offered his book to his priestly colleagues; and without fearing to repeat himself he devotes the first part of his book to the same subject. In both sections the Saint's style is highly coloured and distinctly oratorical, and very possibly both sections (but especially the first) are merely extracts from conferences given by him to the clergy. At all events they are certainly faithful echoes of his conferences and enable us to have some idea of that ardent and devotional eloquence that so strongly impressed his hearers and communicated to them something of the apostolic zeal with which his own heart was filled. We cannot read them without being struck by the deep veneration with which the servant of God addressed priests and the admiration that filled his soul when considering the sublimity of the priesthood. Equally striking is the enthusiasm with which he spoke. It would be impossible to find loftier or more accurate ideas on this subject.

The second part of the book is a summary of the duties that devolve on the priesthood. It was drawn up for secular priests employed in the sacred ministry, and indeed some details in it apply only to them. It was this part that was called a "memorial" by St. John, but that word is now given to the whole book. And it would seem that this section is the oldest part of the volume, the primitive nucleus of the whole; in any case it is superb, and supplies fresh evidence of the Saint's ability to condense a whole programme for the life of perfection into a few pages. The thirty-four articles to be found in it contain everything essential about the priesthood. St. John deals with the necessity of aspiring to perfection, the fundamental laws of the ecclesiastical life, the principal vices that must be guarded against, the care that must be exercised over souls committed to one's charge, and the exercises of piety and devotions that are specially suited to the clergy: he forgot none of these things. And in these few pages one will look in vain for exaggeration, or even for hyperbole, so commonly used by orators; for the exactness and moderation of his teaching is matched by the precision of his style, so that together they make this memorial a model of its kind.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

The book's third part contains a series of exercises or practices for sanctifying the actions and especially the priestly duties of each day.

The fourth part, which is the Directory for Retreats, is very short and contains the system followed by retreatants in the seminaries conducted by the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, and a few brief notes on the various exercises of the retreat. The chief interest of it is to be found in the "extraordinary examens" inserted by the author, which contain valuable instructions (notably on the Christian virtues) which find their fitting place in a memorial on the ecclesiastical life, but had till then not been discussed.

The book ends with a series of meditations for the use of the clergy. They could be used during retreats, but they form no part of the Directory, and in the author's eyes they are a work apart, constituting the fifth and last part of the Mémorial. These meditations fall into two distinct groups, of which the first deals with the questions of vocation and Holy Orders, the material being extracted for the most part from the Roman Pontifical. It was evidently the Saint's intention that they should be used by those about to be ordained, and possibly they were even written expressly for them.

The second group of meditations have as their object the chief obligations of a priest: hatred of sin, renunciation of the world and of himself, love of God, of Christ, of the Blessed Virgin, and of the Church. These are much the most attractive, at least to our mind, and they are as remarkable for the conciseness of their style as for the loftiness and solidity of their doctrine. With a little development they would make an excellent clergy retreat.

F. ST. JOHN AND DEVOTION TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Dévotion au Cœur de Marie. L'Enfance admirable. Le Cœur admirable.

All the distinguished priests who brought about the revival of piety and of the ecclesiastical spirit amongst the French clergy of the seventeenth century were faithful servants of Mary, but perhaps none loved her with so much zeal as did St. John Eudes. He himself would give way to none on this point. ---I willingly," he said, "give place to everyone in talent, knowledge, and all the rest, but I could not endure that anyone should surpass me in respect, confidence, and love towards the Mother of God."

We have already seen that he instituted several Feasts in honour of Mary; but he also wrote several works to propagate devotion to her, to wit: La Dévotion au très saint cœur et au très sacré nom de Marie, L'Enfance admirable, and Le Cœur admirable. In 1648 the Saint, who was then giving a mission at Autun, obtained permission from Mgr. Claude de la Madeleine de Ragny to celebrate solemnly in the Cathedral the Feast of the Heart of Mary instituted by himself in 1643, and on this occasion he published at Autun the Mass and Office of this Feast together with a Mass and Office of the Name of Mary. The book was called La Dévotion au très saint cœur et au très sacré nom de Marie.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

This book he reissued at Caen in 1650, adding to it a Discours sur la Dévotion au Cœur de Marie composed of four chapters. In the first of these St. John shows that this devotion has its origin and its basis in the Holy Gospels. In the second, he exposes the main considerations which ought to move us to honour the Heart of Mary. In the third, he points out the object of this devotion by explaining what he means by the words «Heart of Mary»; and in the fourth, he indicates the means to be employed in rendering to this dear Heart the cult it merits. In short, the Discours is a small treatise on devotion to the Heart of Mary and, although very brief, it is still, we believe, one of the best that we have.

The childhood of our Lady

L'Enfance admirable appeared in Paris in 1676, and is in three parts, of which the first treats of the mysteries, the second the excellences, and the third the virtues of the admirable childhood of the Holy Virgin and of the means of honouring it. In the childhood of the Blessed Virgin the Saint enumerates twelve mysteries, as also twelve excellences and twelve virtues, therein evidently finding a reminder of the twelve stars that formed the crown of that woman in the Apocalypse in whom we are accustomed to see the Blessed Virgin.

The first three mysteries are the predestination of Mary, which is inseparably united to that of her Son, the promises that announced His coming, and the figures by which it pleased God to manifest in advance some of His perfections. St. John passes quickly over these three mysteries. But, on the other hand, he dwells at length on the Immaculate Conception, beginning by establishing the dogma which at that time was not defined and which still found occasional adversaries; then he relates the origin of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception; and he ends by setting out the privileges attached to the Immaculate Conception. With regard to the birth of Mary, St. John comments with much knowledge and piety on the twenty-fourth chapter of Ecclesiasticus and the eighth chapter of Proverbs, which are applied by the Church to the Holy Virgin. Then the Saint considers the name of Mary, explaining its various meanings, showing its excellence and pointing out the ways of honouring it.

ST. JOHN EUDES: AND HIS WRITINGS

The last mysteries of the childhood of Our Lady are her life for three years with SS. Joachim and Anne, her departure from her father's house, her presentation in the Temple, the sojourn that she made there and the life she led there. Holy Scripture tells us nothing of these, but certain ecclesiastical writers give comparatively circumstantial details of them, and these St. John repeats and comments upon with his accustomed piety.

The excellences in the childhood of Mary on which the author dwells are first the nobility of her parents, their eminent sanctity, the fervour of their prayers (of which the fruit was the conception of Mary), and the announcement made to them by St. Gabriel of their miraculous fecundity. At this point he pauses to narrate the praises of the Archangel Gabriel, whom he looks upon as "the angel of holy love," since it was his mission to announce the mystery of the Incarnation to mankind, and he was the guardian angel of «the Mother of Dilection.» Then he shows that Our Lady's birth was, as the Church sings, a subject of joy for the entire universe.

The excellences mentioned up to this point by the Saint are extrinsic to the person of Our Lady, and relate to the circumstances accompanying her conception and birth; but in the chapters that follow he fixes our attention on Mary herself, and discourses to us on the incomparable beauty of her virginal body, the perfection of her holy soul, the lofty knowledge communicated to her by the Holy Spirit from the moment of her conception, the plenitude of grace with which her heart was from that moment enriched, and the wonderful sanctity of her life even during her infancy. Many of these questions had already been touched upon in the first part, but here St. John treats of them with greater fullness and, so to speak, ex professo.

In the last two chapters of this second part the author establishes the fact that Mary was already from her infancy, at least morally, Queen of the Universe and Mother of Christ and of all the members of His mystical body; for in the mind of God she was already adorned with all her titles, and the wonderful privileges with which she was favoured in her conception and throughout her childhood were intended to prepare her for the supereminent dignity for which she was destined. Consequently the Saint was not wrong in enumerating the royalty and maternity of Mary amongst the favours of her holy childhood, and in so doing he considered himself but the interpreter of Catholic liturgy.

The third part of this book considers the virtues which shone with peculiar brilliancy in the Holy Childhood of Mary, and the means of showing fitting honour to them. It also contains eight meditations on the Holy Childhood.

St. John's book on Devotion au très Saint Cœur de la bienheureuse Vierge was only a little book of propaganda; there was still need of a comprehensive work which set forth devotion to the Heart of Mary with all the fullness demanded by such a subject; and despite the labours of all sorts that overwhelmed him, the Saint decided at an early date (1652) to undertake a work of which he, more than anyone else, understood the importance. It required laborious researches, and the task of putting together the material collected called for much time, great mental activity, and a robustness of health that would not break down under the strain of the labour. All these things were vouchsafed to the Saint. He was given the time and the necessary strength to bring the work to completion, and on July 25, 1680 he could write in his Memoriale Beneficiorum Dei: "To-day, July 25 of the year 1680, God has given me the grace to finish my book on Le Cœur admirable de la très Sainte Mère de Dieu." Shortly after this he was taken ill, and he died on the following August 19th at the Caen seminary. "We cannot wonder," says Boudon, "if the death of the Venerable Père Jean Eudes was so precious, so sweet, and so full of heavenly consolations. It seemed as though heaven were wide open to him, and the hour of death, which is generally so formidable, was for him

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

a time abundantly filled with delight and spiritual consolations. He spoke of Paradise as though he were already there, and his words were charged with unction and with life for those that were present. It is the privilege of devout servants of the Blessed Virgin not only to die in a Christian manner, but with sweetness and peace. It is no cause for wonder, then, if she caused a stream of peace to flow into the heart of him who was one of her most zealous servants of this century, and the blessed child of her Heart." (1)

The author, thus, had not the consolation of seeing the publication of his book, but it was brought out in 1681 by Père Blouet de Camilly.

The Sacred Heart of Mary.

Le Cœur admirable de la très Sainte Mère de Dieu is the largest of St. John's works, for it is divided into twelve books, of which the first explains what is meant by the Heart of Mary, and the second and third lead us to contemplate in the physical world and in the Mosaic Law twelve tableaux in which God the Father deigned to prefigure its perfections in advance. The fourth and fifth books show us the Word imprinting upon the heart of the Blessed Virgin a perfect reproduction of the divine attributes and a wonderful participation in the properties of each of the three Divine Persons. In the three books that follow we are taught devotion to the Heart of Mary by the sayings of Holy Scripture, by the writings of the Fathers and Doctors, and finally by the teaching of popes and bishops and the example of the saints. The ninth book is very long and deals with the merits of the Heart of Mary, while the tenth contains an explanation of the (1). Devotion to the Immaculate Mother of God, I, 111, ch. iv.

ST. JOHN EUDES: AND HIS WRITINGS

Magnificat, which St. John calls «the canticle of the Heart of Mary.» The eleventh book is entirely practical, the author recalling therein at some length the reasons that should lead us to honour the Heart of Mary, and pointing out the method of so doing. It concludes with two series of meditations for the Feast and the Octave of the Heart of Mary. The subject of the twelfth book is the Heart of Jesus and for the most part is devoted to explaining the saying of St. Bernadine of Siena that the Heart of the Divine Master is a furnace of love for the whole universe. It also concludes with two series of meditations for the Feast and the Octave of the Heart of Jesus.

And so the author has planned the book on a grand scale, and though based on mystical reflections it is not lacking in logic. By it the Saint is enabled to consider in all its aspects that devotion of which he had made himself the apostle. All such matters as the perfections of the Heart of Mary, its relations with the three Divine Persons, its union with the Heart of Jesus, its joys and its sorrows, its part in the work of redemption and of the sanctification of the human race, are discussed very fully by the author, and he has neglected nothing that could contribute to making that adorable Heart better understood and more fervently loved. After setting clearly in relief the precise subject of the devotion, he shows the grounds for it, and traces its history from the beginnings of Christianity; he then produces the literature that has enabled it to take its place in Catholic liturgy, and he explains how to reduce it to practice in the ordinary course of life. And so Le Cœur admirable de la très Sainte Mère de Dieu embraces the theory, the history and the practice of devotion to the Heart of Mary, and each one of these questions is treated therein with such knowledge and sureness of touch that to this day nothing notable has been added to the Saint's teaching on the subject. And it is no less remarkable that he treats of these matters in language so simple and so full of unction that, despite the treasury of doctrine and erudition to be found in it, this book is yet a work of piety easily understood by everyone. We have to confess, however, that the plan followed by the author has several times led him to discuss again questions already dealt with, and that at times he allows himself to be led into digressions that prove fatiguing to modern readers.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

But in spite of these failings we believe that any who give themselves the trouble of reading the book with the attention it deserves will agree with M. Joly that "it has raised up to the Heart of the Blessed Virgin a monument stamped with her image and worthy of perpetuating her memory by itself alone."

In this study of the Saint's works we have already mentioned certain aspects of his spiritual teaching, but now we must pass to a direct study of it in which we shall strive to set out its principal points clearly and precisely, and in the course of this exposition we will deal successively with devotion to the Incarnate Word, the life of Christ within us, prayer, the Christian virtues, and finally the priesthood.

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

THE object of the Christian religion is God in the unity of His nature and the Trinity of His Persons. But since the Incarnation it is principally to Jesus Christ that the religious life of humanity has been directed. That is easily understandable. The God of Heaven rules us from his lofty throne, the spirituality of His nature conceals it from our sensible faculties, the infinity of His perfections disconcerts our intelligence, and when we reflect on Him what impresses us most is His majesty, which dazzles us, His omnipotence which overpowers us, and His justice which terrifies us. The God of the crib, of Calvary and of the altar is, on the other hand, more within our grasp. In making Himself our brother He permits us to approach Him with all the powers of our nature, and above all He is as it were stripped of everything that could overawe us, so that nothing is allowed to appear in Him but an infinite goodness that draws us to Him. Moreover, since the Incarnation the centre of attraction for religious souls has been changed, as the Abbé Lejeune puts it, not in order to separate us from God but to enable us to go to Him by an easier way and to know Him in the Person of the Incarnate Word.

Germain Habert, the first biographer of Cardinal de Bérulle, remarked on this subject:

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

The Incarnate Word.

"Although the Holy Trinity is the greatest of all the mysteries that we adore, although it Word. is the principle and end of all, and although all things exist but to honour It . . . yet I venture to say that in the course of this present life in which we proceed by faith the chief attention and the greatest devotion of the Christian is given not to the Trinity but to the Incarnation. And that is the spirit and the practice of the Church which, in this as in all other devotions, faithfully follows the very spirit and practice of God. For in fact God, in His divine Providence, only reveals the Trinity to us in relation to the Incarnation; He unveils the Three Persons to us only so far as is necessary for our better understanding of the Second Person; and whereas He reserves the manifestation of this first and greatest mystery till we attain to glory in Heaven, it might be said on the contrary that He takes pains to depict amply for us the Incarnate Word. That is the aim of all Holy Scripture . . . to give us a perfect knowledge of His various states, offices and qualities. Holy Writ instructs us on these points on every page, and all the time that the Eternal Father speaks to us He sets His Son before us, we might say, and in doing so proclaims as on Thabor: 'This is my beloved Son; hear ye Him.'"

So impressed with this idea was Cardinal de Bérulle, and so enthusiastically did he propagate it that he deserved to be styled by Urban VIII "Apostle of the (1). Avant et après la Communion, p. 2, ch. i, n. iv.

Quoted by Bremond in L'École française, p. 44. It is for this reason that St. John Eudes, instead of speaking simply of the Father and the Holy Ghost, often calls them the Father of Jesus and the Holy Spirit of Jesus.

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

Incarnate Word." He had a "singular devotion" to Jesus Christ, Whom he strove to see and to honour in all things; and St. John Eudes, as a faithful disciple of that illustrious master, invites us to concentrate all our devotional efforts on the adorable Person of the Saviour. He would have us find "all our delight" in Jesus after the example of our Heavenly Father, and make Him "the sole object of our thoughts and our affections, the end of all our actions, our centre, our paradise, our all in all." (1)

Relations of the Incarnate Word with the Blessed Trinity.

But we should not get the idea that the worship of the Incarnate Word, understood in this sense, is in any way prejudicial to that which we owe to the other two Persons of the august Trinity. Jesus cannot be separated either from the Father, from Whom He proceeds, or from the Holy Spirit, Who proceeds from Him. He is but one and the same God with the one and with the other, and therefore the homage that we give Him is addressed equally to the Father and the Holy Ghost even though we perhaps have not the explicit intention of honouring them with Him and in Him.

"When I exhort you," says St. John, "to kneel every morning in adoration of Our Lord Jesus Christ to thank Him and to offer yourselves to Him, I do not mean that these acts should be made only in regard to the Person of the Son of God, but in regard to the Most Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. And this, in fact, is always infallibly done, even though one has not always got this expressly in mind. For since Jesus is but one with the Father and the Holy Ghost,

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

and since all the Most Holy Trinity, or, as St. Paul puts it, all the fullness of the divinity dwells in Jesus Christ, we must necessarily conclude that to adore and to glorify Jesus is to adore and to glorify the Father and the Holy Ghost; to offer to Jesus all the glory rendered to Him in heaven and on earth is to offer this same glory to the Father and to the Holy Ghost; and to beg the Father and the Holy Ghost to glorify Jesus is to beg them to glorify themselves."(1)

For the rest, our Saint's habit of making the Incarnate Word the preferred object of his devotion had nothing exclusive in it, and frequently he addressed himself directly to God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. (2) He loved to contemplate the divine perfections, and he had a particular devotion to the divine will. He consecrated Sunday to honouring the Blessed Trinity; and he delighted in meditating on the relationship that baptism and the priesthood establish between us and each one of the Divine Persons, often addressing himself to the Father and to the Holy Spirit and beseeching Them to love Jesus on his behalf.

A. THE GENERAL DEVOTION AND SPECIAL DEVOTIONS

The cult of the Incarnate Word extends to all that He is in Himself, in His two-fold nature, divine and human, and to all His operations in heaven, on earth, and in hell.

(1). Ditto, Part 1, n. iv.

(2). Worship of the Most Holy Trinity holds, of course, a prominent place in the life of the faithful and in Catholic liturgy; as, for instance, is testified by the Gloria Patri, the doxology that concludes the hymns in the Divine Office, and also by the sign of the Cross, the use of which is so frequent.

The praises of Jesus.

"Consider," writes St. John, how Jesus is infinitely worthy of praise, glory and benediction, and for an infinity of reasons.

For He deserves infinite praises for all that He is and for all that He does in regard to His Eternal Father, glorifying and loving Him infinitely and continually from all eternity to all eternity. Also for all that He is in Himself, in His divinity, in all His divine perfections, in His divine Person, in His sacred Humanity, in His body and His soul, in all the parts of His body and soul the least of which merits infinite praise, in all His mysteries, qualities and offices, in all His words, thoughts, deeds, and sufferings, in all His - virtues and in everything that is in Him, the smallest of which is so worthy of praise that though all the angels and saints are occupied throughout eternity in praising and glorifying it with their whole power yet they cannot give it the glory it deserves.

"Moreover," he continues, "He merits immortal praise for all that He is and for all that He does in regard to His Holy Spirit, His Holy Mother, all the angels, all the saints, all mankind and all the creatures on earth and even in hell. For he merits no less praise for the consequences of His justice than for those of His mercy, everything that is in Him and from Him being equally holy and adorable. How many subjects and reasons there are for blessing and glorifying our Most Adorable and Most Lovable Jesus! But . . . you ought to be much more impelled to praise and love Him for what He is and does in regard to His Father, Himself and His Holy Spirit, than for what He is and does in regard to yourself and other creatures; for the interests of God must be infinitely dearer to us than our own."(1)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Now Cardinal de Bérulle instituted a Feast of Jesus, the precise aim of which was to honour the Incarnate Word in all His perfections, divine and human.

"The particular purpose of this Feast," said the Cardinal, "is primarily to consider, love, and adore the Son of God as regards what He is in Himself, in His two natures, His divine Person, all His glories, His powers and offices, His benefactions and operations, but chiefly in what He is in Himself and in all His glories known and unknown. . . . And this solemnity is the more reasonable and Christian because if particular mysteries, such as the Incarnation, the Nativity, and others, have each their Feast, it is right also to allot a day of solemnity to Him Who is their principal, subject, and end; to the Word made flesh considered, not in the operation and accomplishment of His mystery, but in His permanent and eternal state as the Man-God."(2)

And Quesnel has written that "those who call this Solemnity the Feast of the Glories of Jesus do not give a sufficiently comprehensive and extensive idea of it,

(1). Royaume de Jésus, Part IV, n. 111. The principle expressed at the end of the paragraph was dear to Bérulle and his school. Cf. Bremond: cf. École française, p. 29. It is to be found also several times in the Royaume de Jésus and other works by St. John.

(2). Oeuvres, Migne, col. 99 sq., 1070 sq. Bérulle assigns two other ends to this feast: "Secondly," he says, "we ought to be in contact with the Son of God Who is connected with us in His Person and in the Person of the Father to Whom He refers all that He is in His two essences, eternal and new, and generally all that appertains to him. . . . In the third place, we should unite ourselves to the sacred Humanity of Jesus, just as it is united to the Divine Nature in the unity of the Person of the Word, and thus bind and unite ourselves to the Divine Person subsisting in that Humanity."

for it includes His humiliations just as much as His glories, and is properly the particular feast of neither the one nor the other, but of Him Who is the adorable subject of it. In fact, Jesus Christ is the object of this feast to the same degree as He is the object of the adoration of the angels and saints in heaven, wherein we hope some day to celebrate the Feast of Jesus in its perfection, adoring therein not .

.. certain particular actions of Christ, but the whole Christ Who is consummated in God His Father and Who there consummates with Himself His complete human nature, His mysteries, perfections, and qualities."(1)

During his sojourn at the Oratory St. John specially loved this Solemnity. Thus he wrote in 1634 to a Benedictine nun of the Holy Trinity at Caen: "I give you for this month (January) and for your eternity the great Solemnity of Jesus that we are keeping on the 20th of this month. It is one of the three great Solemnities . that are continually kept in heaven. . . . And until you go to keep it in heaven, I want to celebrate it for you on earth, or rather I beg Jesus that He will honour Himself and glorify Himself in you in the way that He desires. I beseech Him to grant that all that has ever been, or is now, or ever shall be, in you . . . may give homage and glory to all that is in Him, in His body, in His holy soul, in His divinity, in His humanity, and in His temporal and His eternal life."(2)

And when he left the Oratory he did not renounce the Feast of Jesus; he had it celebrated in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary with the Mass and Office written by Cardinal de Bérulle. He only abandoned it in 1672, when he instituted the feast of the Divine Heart of Jesus.(1)

The mysteries of Jesus.

But he did not stop short at honouring Jesus in His perfections considered as a whole; Jesus. he strove to give a particular cult to each of the mysteries of His life, and he believed he was obliged to this for various reasons that he sets out in Le Royaume de Jésus. In particular he calls to mind the example of the Heavenly Father continually occupied in contemplating and loving Jesus in Himself and in all his states and mysteries, and the authority of the Church which constantly brings these mysteries to our notice, and also the honour given to God by each of them, as well as their own intrinsic excellence. "We have," he says, «a very special obligation of honouring all that is in Jesus, for all greatness deserves honour, and infinite greatness deserves infinite honour. But Jesus is the greatest of the great, He is greatness itself: an infinite and incomprehensible greatness. And everything in His divinity and His humanity, all His states and mysteries, and the smallest things that happen in connection with Him have a greatness and an infinite dignity of their own and comprehend an infinity of marvels: for that reason they merit infinite honour and glory.» (2)

In Le Royaume de Jésus the Saint indicates the order to be followed in honouring every year all the mysteries of the life of Jesus in the closest possible conformity with the order followed in the liturgical year of the Church. He omits none of them and, after enumerating them all, he adds by way of conclusion: "Thus we should leave nothing in Jesus to which we do not render some particular honour. In this way we should consider and honour Him everywhere, at all times, and in all things."(1)

But there were certain mysteries for which he had a marked preference because of the love shown to us therein by Jesus and the spirit of grace contained in them, and by which we must profit if we would perfect the Christian life within us. These mysteries were the Holy Childhood, the Passion, the Eucharist, and the Priesthood.

The Holy Childhood and the Passion.

What impressed him most in the Holy Childhood was the abasement of the Incarnate Word and the beautiful virtues of simplicity, humility, gentleness, innocence, and obedience of which He gives us so many admirable examples in this mystery. St. John considered this state the apex of wisdom and of Christian perfection, and he spared no pains to capture its spirit and to communicate it to his disciples. And not content with honouring the Holy Childhood from Christmas to the Purification, he also consecrated the Monday of every week to it.(2)

The Passion is a mystery of humiliation, suffering, and death, and has ever held a prominent position in Qui vivis et regnas.

Christian piety. Fully entering into the spirit of the Church, St. John set apart Friday in honour of this great mystery, and he strove to draw thence, along with a love of the cross, a spirit of death to sin and to the old man, so as to participate more and more abundantly in the life of the Risen Christ.(1)

The Eucharist and the Priesthood

The Eucharist is the very centre of the Christian life, and procures for us the sweet consolation of rejoicing in the presence of the Incarnate Word and of nourishing ourselves with His Body and Blood. To It St. John devoted the Thursday of each week, and he found in It both a lesson on sacrifice which led him to immolate himself generously for the glory of God and a lesson on charity for his neighbour. In fact, he applied to this mystery of love the words in which our Divine Master so strongly recommends this virtue: Hoc est praeceptum meum ut diligatis invicem sicut dilexi vos. (2)

As for the Priesthood, every one knows in what esteem it was held by Cardinal de Bérulle. "Of all the qualities and distinctions that the Son of God acquired in our nature," says Bourgoing, "the highest and the most marked is the dignity of sovereign priest. . . . Now that union and fidelity to the Person of Jesus that was always so marked in his faithful servant (Pierre de Bérulle) also united him to the unction of His sovereign Priesthood, as was shown by the expressions and lofty thoughts that he showed forth in various treatises, in his whole life, and by establishing in His Church a Congregation of priests whose principal aim was to make themselves worthy priests of Jesus Christ, to adore His Priesthood, to honour and to augment the dignity of the priesthood and to carry out its duties in a holy fashion." (1) And on this point, as on so many others, St. John entered fully into the views of his master, and it was to labour more efficaciously for the improvement or the advancement of the priesthood that he founded the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and instituted a feast in honour of the Priesthood of Christ and of all holy priests and levites.

We will see later, when treating of prayer, what precisely the Saint invites us to consider and to honour in the mysteries of the Incarnate Word. For the moment we may merely note that, following Bérulle and his school, he exhorts us chiefly to consider the interior of the various mysteries, and by that he means «the virtue, the power, and the particular grace that resides in the mystery and that is proper and peculiar to it, each mystery having its virtue and its proper and peculiar grace; and also the thoughts and intentions, the interior affections, sentiments, dispositions and occupations with which it was carried out. » (2)

B. DEVOTION TO THE HEART OF JESUS

While he was still at the Oratory it does not seem that St. John rendered any particular cult to the Heart of Jesus. But possibly he felt drawn to it, for Le Royaume de Jésus was pervaded with that spirit of confidence and love that characterises devotion to the Sacred Heart. But the devotion itself, as the Saint later conceived ceived it, does not appear in it, though we can certainly say that it is to be found there in germ. (1)

Devotion to the Heart of Jesus.

The older biographies of St. John are unanimous in telling us that what attracted his attention to this devotion about the year 1643 was the reading of the works of St. Gertrude, St. Mechtilde, St. Teresa and certain other holy people, and this assertion agrees with what we learn from the Saint's own writings. (2) But it is obvious that these external influences did but second a special attraction of grace for, as Pius X states in the decree of the Saint's beatification, it was not without divine inspiration (non sine aliquo divino afflatu) that he first thought of rendering public worship to the Sacred Hearts?

However that may be, when he founded the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1643 he dedicated it to the Sacred Hearts and he stated in Le Coeur Admirable that "the chief aim for which it has been established is to honour specially that most august Heart which it looks

(1). In Le Royaume de Jésus St. John certainly tells us that Jesus is all love, but he never thinks of that love in its relations with the heart of flesh. He but rarely speaks of the latter. It is true that in one passage (OEuvres complètes, I, p. 320) he tells us that this heart merits a particular cult, but he is considering it in itself and not in relation to love. And so we see that the synthesis of the elements constituting the object of devotion to the Sacred Heart was not formed in the Saint's mind when he published Le Royaume de Jésus; that did not come till later.

(3). Père Ange Le Doré has tried to prove that St. John received in 1641 the formal mission of establishing the public cult of the Sacred Hearts, through the instrumentality of Marie des Vallées. But this view, which is a novel one, does not seem to us to be well founded, and we have said why in our book

Marie des Vallées et le culte public du Coeur de Jésus. It is not impossible that the Saint himself received this mission by way of revelation, but his earliest biographers say nothing of this.

upon and respects as its first and principal patron, and as the rule and example that it offers to its children that they may study to conform the sentiments and affections of their hearts to it." (1) To the Sacred Hearts the Saint also dedicated the Order of Our Lady to Charity and all the associations that he subsequently founded; and so that these divine Hearts should be given the adoration that is due to them he instituted in honour of the Heart of Mary (1643) and in honour of the Heart of Jesus (1672) a special feast, with proper Mass and Office, which he caused to be kept in his institutes as a double of the first class with octave. Moreover, he strove, not without success, to propagate them outside. Hence came the title of Originator of public worship of the Sacred Hearts conferred on him by Leo XIII, (2) and those of Doctor and Apostle of this same cult given to him by Pius X. (3)

There have been many discussions on devotion to the Heart of Jesus as conceived by our Saint, and we have dealt with the question several times. ((1)) It would be useless to return to these discussions here; it will be sufficient to set out the Saint's teaching as it is to be found in his books and his Offices, for these Offices agree entirely with his theory of the devotion.

(1). Oeuvres complètes, VII, p. 411. It is known that the Saint instead of saying, as we do now, "the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary," liked to say, "The Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary," which expression is now never used. On the subject of this expression, cf. Oeuvres complètes, VI, p. 88 sq.

The theology of this devotion.

St. John was the first theologian to treat of the proper object of the devotion, and in doing so he could not fall back on any decision by the Church. In order to resolve the question he studied the various meanings that Holy Scripture gives to the word Heart. "This word Heart," he writes, "has several meanings in Scripture: (1) It means that material and corporal heart that we bear in our breast; (2) It is used to signify the memory; (3) It denotes the understanding by which we make holy meditation; (4) It expresses the free will of the superior and reasonable part of the soul, which is the noblest of its powers, the root of good or evil; (5) It refers to that supreme part of the soul that theologians call the highest point of the soul; (6) It sometimes means the whole interior of man; (7) It signifies the Holy Ghost Who is the heart of the Father and the Son, which they wish to give us as our spirit and our heart; (8) The Son of God is called the Heart of the Eternal Father." ((2))

The Saint did not ignore any of these meanings, but on the contrary tried to elaborate a theory embracing them all. For this purpose He distinguished three Hearts in Jesus, His divine Heart, His spiritual Heart and His corporal Heart, but he hastened to add that these three hearts make but one in the Man-God, "because, since His divine heart is the soul, the heart and the life of both His spiritual and His corporal heart, it establishes them in so perfect a unity with Him that these three hearts are but one absolutely single heart that is filled with infinite love for the Holy Trinity and inconceivable charity for mankind." ( 1 )

The divine Heart of the Saviour is His increased love, i.e. the essential love that He has in common with the Father and the Holy Ghost; but sometimes the Saint means by this phrase the notional love with which the Father and the Son produce the Holy Ghost, or the personal love which is the Holy Ghost Himself.(2)

The corporal Heart is the Heart of flesh which St. John considers as not merely the symbol,<sup>3</sup> but also the organ of sensible love and the other passions.

But the spiritual Heart of the Man-God is, according to St. John, the superior part of His soul, which includes the memory, intellect, and will; but he at once adds, in speaking of devotion to the Heart of Mary:

"Above all (under the title 'Heart of Mary) we intend and desire to revere and honour primarily and principally that faculty and capacity of loving, both natural and supernatural, possessed by this Mother of Love,

(1). These words in italics clearly show that the object of our Saint's devotion is love.

(2). In this connection, M. Baruteil says in his Genèse du culte du Sacré-Coeur de Jésus (p. 99) that, "Père Eudes, when precisely defining the object of his devotion, attained to a view-point worthy of a great mystic, and especially of a great theologian, scrutinising in the light of the Holy Spirit the unfathomable mysteries of charity in God, in the Trinity, and especially in the Heart of the Son of God, both as God and as man."

(3). According to St. John the Heart of flesh is the symbol of the spiritual Heart and of the divine Heart of the Man-God in a twofold respect; viz. both as the principle of life and as the principle of love. Cf. Le Coeur Admirable, Bk. I, ch. 111 and 1V.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

and entirely used by her for loving God and her fellows, or rather all the love and charity of the Mother of the Saviour in regard to God and ourselves. . . . For, while the heart represents the whole interior, yet it chiefly signifies love. . . . And so it is this incomparable love and ineffable charity that we specially regard and revere in our Most Honoured Lady and our very dear Mother. It is this that we principally mean by her most holy Heart, and it is under this beautiful aspect and under this glorious title of MATER PULCHRAE DILECTIONIS, MOTHER OF LOVE AND OF CHARITY, that we wish singularly to honour and to praise this most lovable Virgin and admirable Mother.-

And then, as though he feared lest he might not have been understood, he adds a little later: "It is this love, the miracle of divine loves, this charity, the most wonderful manifestation of holy charity, this virginal heart filled and running over with such love, such charity, that we intend to honour, to praise and to exalt in every way that we possibly can."

He continues in these terms: "In the most honourable and holy Virgin Mother of Jesus we desire to honour not merely some of her mysteries or some of her actions . . . not merely some of her qualities . . . not even simply her most worthy person(1); but Primarily and principally to honour in her the source and origin of the holiness and dignity of all her mysteries, actions and qualities, and even of her person, to wit, her love and charity, since, according to all the holy (1). We believe that here the Saint opposes his devotion to that of Cardinal de Bérulle which had as its object the Holy Virgin considered in all her perfections. Bérulle had, in fact, established a Feast of Mary corresponding to the Feast of Jesus.

doctors, love and charity are the measure of merit and of all holiness."(1)

It is obvious that these principles are valid for devotion to the Heart of Jesus just as much as for devotion to the Heart of Mary; and so there is no possible doubt about our Saint's views. Although, in a wide sense, he extended devotion to the Sacred Heart to the whole interior life of the Saviour, what he primarily and Principally intended by the phrase "Heart of Jesus" was its love, all that love: divine, spiritual and sensible, of which His fleshly heart was the seat; His love for His Father, for His most holy Mother, and for us. And so for him the Feast of the Heart of Jesus was the feast of charity, as is plainly shown by the more important passages in the Mass and Office such as the invitatory, the collect, the introit, the Gospel, the hymns, versicles and antiphons. Notable in this respect is this antiphon from the First Vespers: Cor meum caritas est: qui manet in caritate in Corde meo manet et Cor meum manet in eo. And in the Office, in Le Coeur admirable, in his Magnificat, and in the picture of Our Lady of Hearts, St. John always presents the Heart of Jesus as a furnace of love, and on this point there is no difference between his devotion and that of Paray.(2)

Comparison with the oratorian Feast.

And thus the Feast instituted by him is quite distinct from the Feast of Jesus instituted by Cardinal de Bérulle, the object of which was not the love of Jesus, but the actual Person of the Incarnate (1) OEuvres complètes, VIII, pp. 431-435. The same doctrine is expressed in the same terms on p. 132.

(2). See my book, Le B. Jean Eudes et le culte public du Coeur de Jésus, pp. 53 sq., 267 sq., 273 sq.; and on La dévotion au Coeur de Marie, pp. 88 sq., 523-524.

Word considered in His two-fold nature and in all His perfections, divine and human. No doubt there are characteristics common to both Feasts, and in fact St. John introduced into his devotion to the Sacred Heart the lofty views of Bérulle on the life of Jesus within us.(1) Furthermore, we might say of both that their object is all that is great and holy in the other feasts, for the Person and the Heart are, each of them, the prime agent of all the mysteries of the Incarnate Word, but by different titles and in different ways, just as the person and the foot are, each of them, the prime agent of walking, but by different titles and in a different way. But despite these common characteristics the two feasts are none the less distinct in their subject and in their spirit, and therefore M. Bremond is wrong when, in his Histoire du Sentiment religieux, he tries to link St. John's feast with that of Cardinal de Bérulle by maintaining that the subject of the former is not the Heart as a furnace of love (as is the case with the devotion at Paray), but what he calls the Heart-Person.(2) For the rest, the eminent academician seems himself to have realised that his thesis is somewhat

(1). Moreover those views are always found in the Saint's devotion to the incarnate Word, whatever be its special subject; and that is natural since, whatever be the mystery in which He is considered, Jesus is always our Head, and our life is always a participation and a prolongation of His.

(2). Vol. III, pp. 645 sq. In order to support his thesis M. Bremond brings forward among other arguments the preoccupation of Bérulle and his disciples with the "interior" significance of the various mysteries, from which, according to him, it is but a step to the cult of the Sacred Heart. But we, on the contrary, believe that there is a very considerable distance between the two, and that several stages have to be traversed if that gap is to be crossed. It would, in fact, be necessary (a) to pass from the "interior" to love; (b) to consider love in itself, abstracting from every particular mystery; (c) to envisage it in relation to the Heart of flesh, which M. Bremond is wrong in neglecting.

exaggerated, for, referring to St. John, he wrote to us on March 31, 1919: "Perhaps I Bérullise' him too much.',"

C. PURE LOVE

The feelings that we must have for Jesus Christ are those that, taken together, go to make up the complete religion of the creature in regard to his Creator. In the front rank must be adoration which is due from man by reason of his own nothingness and the absolute sovereignty of God. And to adoration must be added praise, thanksgiving, reparation, and especially confidence and love. Indeed, what struck St. John most forcibly in the life and mysteries of the Incarnate Word (even while the Saint was still at the Oratory) was not His greatness, but the love and the tender pity that He displays towards us. And therefore, in Le Royaume de Jesus, after summing up the considerations that oblige us to employ our whole life in the service of Jesus, he stresses the reflection that the Divine Master has given us all that He has and all that He is.

Reasons for loving Jesus.

"He has given us," he writes, "His Father to be our Father, making us children of the very Father of Whom He is the Son. He has given us His Holy Spirit to be our own spirit, and to teach, rule, and conduct us in all things. He has given us His holy Mother to be our Mother; He has given us His angels and saints to protect us and to intercede for us; and He has given us everything else in heaven and on earth for our use and our needs. In His Incarnation He has given us His own Person; He has given us His whole life, for every moment of it He employed for us, so that He never had a thought, said a word, or performed an action, even the least, that He did not consecrate to our salvation. And finally, He has given us in the Holy Eucharist His Body and Blood, and with these His soul and His divinity together with all the infinite marvels and treasures to be found in His divinity and His humanity; and all this He gives us every day, or at least as often as we choose to prepare ourselves to receive Him."(1)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

And in Le Coeur admirable he adds: "But, besides that, Jesus gives us His most lovable Heart, which is the principle and origin of all His other gifts. For it was His divine Heart that made Him go forth from His Father's bosom and come upon earth to give us all these graces; and it was His Heart, humanly divine and divinely human, that merited and acquired them for us by all the sorrows and anguish that He bore while He was in this world." (2)

And thence the Saint concluded that we in our turn are bound to give and to consecrate entirely to Jesus all the undertakings and actions of our lives. His Royaume de Jésus is full of the thought that Jesus is all love for us and that in return we must be filled with love for Him. In the fourth part of it there is a long chapter in which the author sets out with joy all the perfections of the love of Jesus for us and draws from his heart a magnificent chant of love for the divine Master.(3)

(2). OEuvres complètes, VIII, p. 311.

(3) In the eighteenth century this chapter was applied to devotion to the Sacred Heart. In actual fact we believe it impossible to find a more beautiful commentary on Our Lord's words to St. Margaret Mary. "Behold the Heart which has so loved men."

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

It has been remarked that, in concentrating itself on Jesus, love of God has acquired a tenderness unknown before(1); and Le Royaume de Jésus is a manifest proof of this. In it love of God overflows with a vivacity, a delicacy, an abandon, and an intimacy that carries one away, and this exquisite tenderness is revealed in the very terms that the Saint uses in connection with the Saviour. Not only does he never tire of repeating the name of his Well-Beloved (after the example of St. Paul), but when he directly addresses Him the most affectionate phrases flow spontaneously from his heart, and he calls Him his "dearest, best, most amiable, most desirable, most benign Jesus," while in another passage he hails Him as 'the desired of my soul, my life, my all, king of my heart, my sweet love,' etc. We would never finish if we were to enumerate all the phrases in which St. John expresses his tender love for the Divine Master.

How to show this love.

But true love does not stop short at affection, it translates itself into acts; if we would show Jesus that we love Him we must take pains to do what He expects of us; and it is not difficult to find out what that is. Jesus asks us to observe the evangelic precepts, and counsels, to fulfil the duties of our state, to obey those who are charged with our guidance, and to submit ourselves to the dispositions of Divine Providence which are manifested by the events, both great and small, with which our lives are mingled. In that programme we will find plenty to which to attend, but St. John would have us go further and place our whole being at the service of the Divine Master, spending ourselves, body and soul, in the interests of His glory and the salvation of our brethren. With Bérulle and his followers, he considers that we have pledged ourselves to this by our baptism; for, in receiving that sacrament, 'We profess,' he says, 'servitude in regard to Jesus and to all His members. . . . And, in consequence of that profession, all Christians have nothing of themselves, any more than have slaves, and have no right to make any use of themselves, either of the members of their bodies, or of the powers of their souls, their lives, their time, or of the temporal goods they may possess, save only for Jesus Christ and for His members, who are all those who believe in Him.'(1)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

But the value of our works does not depend solely on their nature, it derives also from the motives for which we act. When it is charity and charity only that moves us the value of what we do for God is markedly enhanced, and that is why St. John exhorts us not only to serve Christ but also to do it with the sole object of pleasing Him, through pure love of Him, and without any motive of self-interest. "Of all the works of a truly Christian soul," he wrote, "the noblest, the most holy, the loftiest, and that which God chiefly demands of us, is the exercise of pure divine love. That is why we should take great care in all our pious works and all our acts to protest to Our Lord that we wish to do them, not through fear of Hell, nor for the reward of Paradise, not for merit, nor for our own satisfaction and consolation, but for love of Him, for His pleasure, for His glory alone and for His most pure love."

And the Saint never ceases to urge his readers on to this pure love, which is why Le Royaume de Jésus is truly, as has been said, "the manual of perfect charity." (1) Indeed, the same might be said of the Manuel de piété and of the Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie. In this respect the Saint's teaching is summed up in the phrase spoken by Our Lord to St. Catherine of Siena: "My child, think of me, and I will think of you.--- The Saint presses us to make our own this invitation by the Divine Master, and to do everything with the sole object of pleasing Him, abandoning the care of all our interests to Him. (2) Moreover, that is the best means of endowing our actions with all the perfection of which they are capable, and consequently of laying by treasure for Paradise. (3)

It was in this way that St. John thought of devotion to the Word Incarnate from 1637 onwards, and when later his piety turned specially to the Heart of Jesus he found nothing to change in it. His devotion was already so impregnated with confidence and love that, if it could grow in intensity, it certainly had no need to take a new direction; and when explaining the practice of devotion to the Heart of Jesus as conceived by the Saint, P&Pères Dauphin and Le Doré depended on Le Royaume de Jésus as much as, if not more than, on Le Cœur admirable and the Office of the Sacred Heart.

(1). The Rennes Edition, 1869, avant-Propos.

(2). Royaume de Jésus, II, n. xxx.

(3). We see thereby that the Saint's spirituality is strictly theocentric, in the sense that it is disinterested and directed entirely to the glory of God. On this subject see what he says in Le Royaume de Jésus on the end of man, prayer, the Christian virtues, confession, indulgences, aridities, etc.

72- THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

D. DEVOTION TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (The Cult of Jesus in Mary)

As is well known, St. John threw himself with ardour into propagating the cult of the Most Holy Virgin, and it would require a volume to study in detail his apostolate and doctrine concerning devotion to her. Here we can but sketchily indicate the way in which he thought of this devotion.

We have said that he was already completely devoted to the Blessed Virgin when he first entered the Oratory; but in the school of Bérulle his devotion became, if not more ardent, at least more doctrinal and more profound through being governed by his teacher's principles. And in fact his devotion to Mary is profoundly "Berullian." (1)

(1). In his study, La dévotion à la Vierge au commencement du XVIIe siècle, Charles Flachaire ranged St. John and M. Olier in a group apart, distinct from that of Bérulle; and in that he was certainly mistaken. Indeed, he spoke of them in strange terms. Read his own words: "The third current, derived from the preceding, took a very different direction. Those we encounter in it were daily subject to visions, ecstasies and transports in God. Marial piety with them was less a product of speculative mysticism than an experience lived through: it was passionate, impetuous, tormented. To understand it we have to know something of their ardent lives, and as regards M. Olier this is made possible for us by his Mémoires, which are still unpublished, and by the unpublished fragments of his writings on the Virgin. And Père Eudes, in some respects a disciple of M. Olier, made himself by unwearying propaganda the apostle of a special cult: that of 'the Holy Heart of Mary,' which is subject to the twofold Peril of materialisation and of being parcelled out into details in practice." Loc. cit., p. 7.

And elsewhere he writes: "The analysis we have just made of Sulpician piety and of devotion to the Heart of Mary leads us to guess at, if it does not demonstrate, the dangers and extravagances (!) which may result from the purest intentions. . . . M. Olier did not fear to indulge in theological adventures, and Père Eudes, without expressly wishing it, ran the risk of entangling himself in pious materialisations.

Speculative hardihood and mystical transports need temperaments of solid good sense. It is of importance that the privileges of the Virgin, the power of her intercession, and the nature of the bond uniting her to her servants should be examined by calmer minds." Pp. 141-142.

And further on we find this: «It should be behind closed doors that contemplatives abandon themselves to the spirit of a very infectious sentimentality and unusually sweet affection, to excesses of imprudently hyperbolic glorifications, and to the fever of waves of 'tenderness.' . . . Several masters of the spiritual life amongst the Jesuits, then M. Olier, Père Eudes, and very many others gave themselves up with far too little reserve to a devout dream; they flattered rather than honoured Mary; they loved and celebrated her less as a patron and queen than as a mother and a mystical spouse. They entered upon this cult with the ardour of their feelings turned towards the invisible, but not destroy with the personal preferences peculiar to their theology, and the particular sentiments of the cherished devotions; they created, they overloaded, and they unwearyingly adorned with prodig complaisance a symbol which summed up all their piety.» Pp. 155-157.

It is truly surprising to see a Catholic write in these terms of two celebrated men universally esteemed, one of whom was beatified while de Flachaire was alive (though he seems ignorant of the fact), and was canonised by Pius XI. As for the cult of the Heart of Mary, which seems so dangerous to Flachaire, everyone knows that it has long been approved by the Church. Flachaire reproaches St. John with loving and honouring Mary less as a queen than as a mother or as a spouse. But what is wrong with that? Is Mary not the mother of all the faithful? Has she not a right to receive from us all the tenderest and most delicate marks of love? Following the example of many saints, St. John chose Mary as his spouse and drew up a contract of alliance with her which is definitely dated 1668. It is to be found in Vol. XII of the OEuvres complètes. Has Flachaire taken the trouble to read it? If so, he completely failed to understand it. M. Bremond tells us (IX, p. 248) that when Flachaire wrote his thesis «he was little familiar with really mystical matters.» In that case perhaps he would have done better not to write of things that he did not understand, or to write of them only with that reserve and modesty that is called for in such a case.

It was in Le Royaume de Jésus that the Saint most precisely and succinctly set out the principles that should govern devotion to Mary as he conceived it. With Cardinal de Bérulle he taught first of all that we must not separate Jesus and Mary, but unite them in our devotions: "Jesus and Mary," he said, --are so closely connected that he who sees Jesus sees Mary,

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

he who loves Jesus loves Mary, he who has devotion to Jesus has devotion to Mary. Jesus and Mary are the two chief foundations of the Christian religion, the two sources of all our blessings, the two subjects of our devotion, and the two to whom we must look in all our actions and devotions." (1)

Several times in his works the Saint set himself to display clearly the union of Jesus and Mary in the work of salvation. In L'Enfance admirable he rightly affirms that the Son and the Mother were the subject of one and the same predestination, since it is only as Son of Mary that Jesus has His place in the eternal designs of God .(2)

Inseparable union of Jesus and Mary.

In other writings, and especially in Le Coeur admirable, he bases his argument on the close union and perfect conformity of thought and feeling which always existed between Jesus and His divine Mother, and in giving expression to the perfection of this union he loved to repeat that Jesus and Mary always had but one mind, one will, one heart: "Although the Heart of Jesus," he wrote, "is distinct from that of Mary and surpasses it infinitely in excellence and holiness, yet God has so closely united these two Hearts that it may be truly said that they are but one Heart since they are always animated by the same spirit and filled with the same sentiments and affections. If St. Bernard says that he has but one heart with

(1). Royaume de Jésus, II, n. xi. The Saint expressed the same ideas in this anthem which he used for commemorating the Sacred Hearts: Benedictum sit Cor amantissimum Jesu et Mariae, fons vivus benedictionis, fornax amoris, thronus divinae voluntatis, sanctuarium divinitatis.

Jesus (Bene mihi est, cor unum cum Jesu habeo), and if he says of the earliest Christians that they had but one heart and one soul by reason of the intimate union existing between them, how much more can we say that Jesus and Mary have but one soul and one Heart through the most perfect union and conformity of spirit, of will and of feeling which exists between such a Son and such a Mother!"(1)

The object of the union of Jesus and Mary is the glory of God and the salvation of the world. Scripture and Tradition rival each other in proclaiming this. St. John had studied both, and he delighted in showing the part, secondary, it is true, but none the less real, taken by the Holy Virgin in the work of redemption and the role played by her in the distribution of grace. He summed up his teaching on this point by saying, as we have just seen, that Jesus and Mary are "the two chief foundations of the Christian religion, the two sources of all our blessings,- and from this he concluded that they must be "the two subjects of our devotion and the two to whom we must look in all our actions and devotions."

It goes without saying that he added the force of example to that of precept. Sometimes he united the Son and the Mother in the same prayer, and we have an example of that in the salutation to the Sacred Hearts, Ave Cor Sanctissimum, which is addressed to the Heart of Jesus and to the Heart of Mary, though the praises rendered "conjointly" to one and the other have not the same significance.(2) And we know that when he established the Feast of the Heart of Mary in

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

1672 he gave an important place therein to the Heart of Jesus.

At other times he added to the prayers he addressed to Jesus an analogous prayer addressed to Mary, and examples of this abound in Le Royaume de Jésus.

Finally he recommended that all the mysteries of the Blessed Virgin should be honoured in the same way as those of Jesus, due proportion being, of course, preserved. And so he wrote litanies, and established a Feast, in honour of the sacred childhood of Mary, which corresponded to the litanies and Feast of the Sacred Childhood of Jesus; and similarly he wrote litanies, an Office and a Mass in honour of each of the Sacred Hearts (of Jesus and Mary), and encouraged a cult to the Name of each.

To honour Mary Is to honour her Divine Son

Another principle stressed by our Saint was that we ought to honour Jesus in Mary and Mary in Jesus. God asks of us and as she desires," he wrote, «we must look on and adore her Son in her and see and adore therein none but Him. For that is how she wishes to be honoured since, of herself and by herself, she is nothing, but her Son Jesus is everything in her: He is her being, her life, her holiness, her glory, her power and her greatness." (1)

And in truth this is what has always been done, at least implicitly, for the honours given by Christians to Mary are based upon her dignity as Mother of God and thence they ascend even to her Son. This is explained by St. John with his customary lucidity in his Coeur admirable: "Come," he says, speaking of the

(1) Royaume de Jésus, loc. cit.

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

Heart of Mary, "Come and lose yourselves in the gentle waters of this stream of peace, this torrent of delights. . . . Hasten, why do you delay? Why do you put it off for a single moment? Is it not that you fear to wrong thereby the unparalleled goodness of the most adorable Heart of Jesus, your God and your Redeemer, if you address yourselves to the charity of the Heart of Mary? But do you not know that Mary is nothing and has nothing and can do nothing save from Jesus and by Jesus and in Jesus, and that it is Jesus who is all, who can do all, and who does everything in her? Do you not know that it is Jesus who has made the Heart of Mary what it is, and who desired to make it a 'fountain of light, of consolation and of all sorts of graces for all those who have recourse to it in their necessities? And do you not know that not only is Jesus resting and dwelling continually in the Heart of Mary, but that He is Himself the Heart of Mary, and that therefore to come to the Heart of Mary is to come to Jesus, to honour the Heart of Mary is to honour Jesus, and to invoke the Heart of Mary is to invoke Jesus? " (1)

None the less he advised that we should explicitly refer to the Son the homage offered to the Mother, and so we get those beautiful words that form the invitatory of his Office of the Heart of Mary: Jesum in Corde Mariae regnantem, venite adoremus.

A last principle inculcated by St. John was that we ought to model ourselves on Jesus in the practice of devotion to Mary. "As we have to imitate the virtues and foster within us the sentiments of Jesus, we must also imitate and foster the feelings of love, piety and devotion that He cultivated in regard to His blessed Mother. And He loved and honoured her most perfectly, choosing her for His Mother, giving Himself to her as her Son, taking from her a new being and a new life, desiring to be thus connected with her, subjecting Himself to her, and externally being guided by her during His Childhood and His hidden life, establishing her as Queen of heaven and earth, glorifying her and making her be glorified by all the world."

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

And so, the Saint continues, we must "acknowledge and honour Mary as the Mother of our God, and consequently as our own Mother and Sovereign. We must thank her for all the love, the glory and the services which she has rendered to her Son Our Lord Jesus Christ, and, referring all our being and our life to her (after God), put ourselves in dependence upon her and beseech her to take charge of all that concerns us. And we must subject ourselves to her as slaves, begging her to take full command of us as of something that is entirely her own, to dispose of us as she pleases for the glory of her Son, to deign to make use of all our actions for honouring those of her Son, and to associate us with all the love and all the praises she has ever given Him in the past and will render to Him through all eternity."(1)

And so we see that devotion to Mary, as thought of by St. John, goes very far. It implies a complete donation, an entire consecration, a constant subjecting, of our whole person to Mary and through her to Jesus, and consequently an assiduous application in honouring her, in serving her in all the details of our lives, in performing all our acts for her glory, in a word in living with her in the most intimate and constant union possible. It is this point of view that produced the acts of consecration to Mary that are to be found so often in the Saint's writings, and in particular the noble words that end the salutation written by him in honour of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary: Tibi cor nostrum offerimus, donamus, consecramus; accipe et posside illud totum et purifica, et illumina et sanctifica ut in ipso vivas et regnes et nunc et semper et in saecula saeculorum.

These principles are those of the French school, and -are to be found in one form or another in all the writings of that great school. They are the same as those that inspired Blessed Grignon de Montfort and which he made known to the faithful in his excellent Traité de la vraie dévotion à la sainte Vierge.

We have already said that St. John, like the Church in its liturgy, calls upon us to honour every year the various mysteries of the life of the Most Holy Virgin, and it goes without saying that above all he would have us honour the inner spirit of these mysteries. Is not that the best way of grasping their real meaning and of so eventually being of but one mind, one heart, one soul with the Holy Virgin and her Divine Son, which is the object of every truly Christian life?

Feast and Offices

of Our Lady.

But for some mysteries our Saint had a special devotion, for instance the Immaculate Conception, the Holy Name of Mary, her holy Childhood, her glorious Annunciation, her joys, her sorrows, and especially her Heart. We have already seen that he consecrated to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary the two Congregations as well as the confraternities founded by him, and that in them he had caused to be celebrated in honour of each of these Hearts a solemn

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Feast under the rite of a double of the first class with octave, and had himself composed the Mass and Office for them. To them he dedicated the chapels that he built at Coutances and Caen; and in his Testament he bequeathed these two Hearts to his spiritual children begging them to be faithful in celebrating their Feasts every year with all the devotion of which they were capable. In some respects he did more for the Heart of Mary than for the Heart of Jesus, since for a long time he gave it the first place in his apostolate, instituted its Feast as early as 1643 while that of the Heart of Jesus only dates from 1672, and it is with it that he is chiefly concerned in his writings.

We have elsewhere studied the subject of devotion to the Heart of Mary', and need not now go over that again. It will suffice here to say that in Mary, as in Jesus, the Saint distinguishes three Hearts that make but one: the divine, the spiritual, and the corporal.

Under the name of the Divine Heart of Mary St. John ordinarily means the Incarnate Word: Jesum in Corde Mariae regnantem venite adoremus. But sometimes he gives this name to the Holy Ghost or to the complete Trinity. And so it is that he ends the hymns of, her Office with the following doxology:

*O sacrosancta Trinitas, Aeterna vita cordium,
Cordis Mariae sanctitas,
In corde regnes omnium.*

(1). See the introduction to Le Coeur admirable and my book on La dévotion au Coeur de Marie, which is an historical and doctrinal study of the question.

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

The corporal Heart of Mary, on the other hand, is her heart of flesh', and we have elsewhere remarked that in the devotion to the Heart of Mary the heart of flesh does not occupy so prominent a position as it does in devotion to the Heart of Jesus.(2)

As for the spiritual heart, we have already seen that in St. John's view it is the superior part of Mary's soul, which includes her intellect, memory, and will, but primarily and Principally her love and charity, her love for God and her charity for mankind. In his eyes

(1). Flachaire (loc. cit., p. 134) says that this symbol (the Heart of Mary) was too liable to call up concrete representations, and that this devotion "was soon to confirm the law of materialisation from which few cults are immune. Père Eudes," he adds, "foresaw the danger, but he was perhaps not always able to avoid it; for he dealt only rapidly with the sensible element and in his treatise of 1650 hardly mentioned the corporal heart. Nothing is more curious than the tenacity of certain contemporary Eudists in claiming for their founder the honour (or the responsibility) of having insisted on the cardiac organa itself. Undoubtedly Père Eudes distinguishes three hearts in Mary: « He corporeal heart which beats within her virginal breast, the spiritual heart which is the superior part of her soul, and her divine heart which is Jesus,' but he soon adds: 'Above all we mean and desire to honour and revere primarily and principally that faculty and capacity for loving, both natural and supernatural, which is in this Mother of love and which she entirely employs for loving God and mankind, or rather (we honour) all the love and all the charity that the Mother of our Saviour has for us.' And so it is the spiritual side that he stresses." But this is precisely what contemporary Eudists have always thought and loudly proclaimed; and if they have tried to show that in his devotion St. John did not ignore the heart of flesh it is because that has been denied and because a devotion to the Sacred Hearts in which the heart of flesh held no place would be conformable neither to the exigencies of human nature nor to the spirit of the Church. «In all the devotions or feasts that concern the Sacred Humanity of Christ," says Père de Galliffet very justly, "there is always a double subject, the one sensible and corporal, the other invisible and spiritual, and these are united together and honoured indivisibly, the spiritual object communicating its dignity to the corporal object. . . . But the corporal and sensible object has of itself that which always gives its name to the devotion." (Excellence de la dévotion au Sacré-Coeur, 1, ch. 1 V.)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

the Heart of Mary is before all a furnace of love, and the chief fruit of devotion to this most holy Heart should be an increase of love for God and mankind. This the Saint repeated over and over again in his books and in his Offices, and he even had a statue made, called Notre-Dame des Coeurs, ( 1 ) which showed the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary beneath the emblem of a furnace of love at which he and his priests sought to kindle torches with which to encircle the world in the fire of divine love.

E. JESUS IN EVERYTHING

Devotion to the angels and saints is familiar to everyone, and in Le Royaume de Jésus the Saint recommended it in these terms:

"We ought to have devotion to all the saints and angels, especially to our own good angel and to the (1). A picture of this statue is to be seen at the beginning of Vol. VI of the OEuvres complètes, and in Le Doré's Les Sacrés Coeurs et le V. Jean Eudes, Vol. II. After describing this statue in his Paray-le-Monial, p. 226, n. i, Père Hamon, S.j., adds: «This statue was certainly constructed under the influence of the ideas of Père Eudes, and it is therefore his apostolate that it propagates. Did Père Eudes actually have it made? Père Lebrun answers affirmatively, without giving any proof. . . . He thinks that Père Eudes expressed in the third book of his Coeur admirable (OEuvres complètes, Vol. VI, p. 335) the ideas of which this statue is the symbol. But if we consider the context of the lines that he quotes, we have difficulty in agreeing with him." It is true that I never dreamed of proving that this statue was the work of Père Eudes, but the name it bears, the inscriptions that adorn and explain it, and the very subject itself, sufficiently proclaim the fact. And one of the Saint's opponents expressly states that -wherever he (Père Eudes) had any influence he caused to be set up and to be publicly sold statues and pictures of Our Lady of Hearts, as he called them- (quoted by Le Doré, loc. cit., II, p. 375). As for the passage in Le Coeur admirable referred to by Père Hamon, if the reader will turn to it we believe that, like me, he will find therein the ideas symbolised in the statue of Our Lady of Hearts.

saint whose name we bear, also to the saints who conversed with Our Lord when He was upon earth, to the order of angels and saints to which we should be associated in heaven, and to the saints and angels who are protectors of the places wherein we dwell or through which we pass, and of the persons with whom our lot is cast. "

While preserving all due proportion, Père Eudes looked upon devotion to the saints in the same way as that in which he regarded devotion to the Blessed Virgin:

How to honour the Saints.

"To honour the saints as they should be honoured," he says, we should adore Jesus in them; for He is everything in them: omnia in omnibus. He is their being, their life, their sanctity, their joy and their glory. We must thank Him for the glory and the praise that He renders Himself in them and by them, and thank Him the more for the graces He communicates to them, and by them communicates to us, for the interests of God should be dearer to us than our own. We must offer Him all the honour and love that His saints give Him, and pray Him to make us sharers in this same love and in all their other virtues.»

And he adds: "When we address the saints we must humble ourselves before them, esteeming ourselves most unworthy even to think of them, and unworthy to be thought of by them; we should thank them for the services and the glory they have given Our Lord, and should offer ourselves to them, begging them to offer us to Jesus and to ask Him to destroy within us everything that displeases Him, and to make us sharers in the graces He has given them. We should also ask them to honour and love Him for us, and to give Him a hundredfold on our behalf all the love and glory that we ought to have given Him throughout our lives; and pray them to associate us in the homage and praises they render Him in heaven, and to make use of us in honouring and glorifying Him in every way they please."(1)

It need hardly be said that these principles also apply to relics of the saints, for Père Eudes had the greatest veneration for these. "We ought," he wrote, "to consider and honour relics of the saints as a portion of Jesus and part of His members, and should carry them with us in union with the love with which He bears all the saints of all eternity in His bosom and His Heart, thereby uniting us with the love and the praises rendered to Him by those saints whose relics we carry, and which will be rendered by them eternally.» (2)

Seeing Jesus in others

When he treats of charity the Saint makes use of the same ideas, urging us to see and love Jesus in our neighbour. "Look upon your neighbour as . . . the temple of the living God, bearing in himself the image of the Most Holy Trinity and the character of Jesus Christ, for he is a portion of Christ, bone of His bone, flesh of His flesh. Look upon him as he for whom Christ so laboured, so suffered, and gave His Blood and His life; and also look upon him as one whom Christ commends to you as though he were Christ Himself, assuring you that what you do to the least of these, i.e. of those that believe in Him, He will consider it as done to Himself.(3 ) If we weigh well the importance of these truths, what charity, what respect, what honour we will have for each other.» (1)

(3). Matt. xv, 40.

DEVOTION TO THE INCARNATE WORD

85-

and In ourselves.

And again it is Jesus that we should have in mind when we are concerned with our selves, whether in labouring for the acquisition of Christian virtues, or in giving our body the rest or the nourishment that it requires: "When you have to rest or to give your body food or refreshment, do it with this intention of considering your health, your life and your body not as merely your own but as being one of the members of Jesus, as Scripture tells us, and as something that belongs to Jesus: Corpus autem Domino (2) and of which you must in consequence take care, not for your own sake but for Jesus, in so far as it is necessary for His service; reminding yourself, like St. Gertrude, of Our Lord's saying that what we do to the least thing that belongs to Him, we do to Himself." ( 3 )

In actual fact, indeed, even creatures devoid of reason should lead us to love Jesus; for, as God, He created them, and, as man, He acquired for us, at the price of His Blood, that right of making use of them that we had lost through sin. They sing His glory "with all their being and all their natural power," and invite us to glorify Him with them. Let us make use of them with thankfulness and for the greater glory of Him who placed them at our service.

To sum up: St. John would have us see Jesus in everything and everywhere; in the natural world and in the spiritual world, because He reigns in both the one and the other although in different ways; in death wherein He exercises His sovereignty, in the particular judgment which shows forth His justice, in heaven which is the kingdom of His glory, in purgatory where He reveals both His justice and His mercy, and even in hell where He triumphs over His enemies in the most terrible manner.

In this way Jesus will truly be our "only aim," since we will only see persons and things as they stand in regard to Him. He will be our "all," since we will seek only Him and love only Him in everything, in accordance with that phrase of St. Paul's which St. John would have us make the rule of our lives: Omnia in omnibus Christus.

CHAPTER III

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US (1)

Not only is Jesus the object of our religion, He is also that of our life, for everything of the Christian life that we possess comes from Him and is but the continuation and completion of His life in each one of us.(2) Now this

(1). On this question, see the Regulae vitae christianae et sacerdotalis (I, ch. 111), in addition to Le Royaume de Jésus which treats of it at length.

(2). "The French School," says M. Letourneau, "has the courage to study and to expound the loftiest and the most beautiful of the doctrines of St. John and of St. Paul on the life of grace. It in no way consents to whittle them down or to dissimulate regarding them under the pretext of accommodating them to the intellectual weakness of the mass of the faithful. On the contrary, it insists on putting them forward with the utmost plainness. It loves to contemplate first the marvels of divine life in the soul of Jesus, in His intellect, and His will, i.e. in His Heart; it exalts and glorifies in every possible way this interior life in the soul of Jesus. Then it delights in considering how this divine life of grace flows from the head into the members of the mystical body of Christ, and how the faithful, from St. John the Baptist onwards, reproduce in themselves the death and the life of Jesus. Its members are never more at home than when poring over the texts of St. John (the Evangelist) and St. Paul which set out this magnificent teaching: In ipso vita erat; Ego veni ut vitam habeant et abundantius habeant; Ego sum vitis, vos palmites. . . . Would it not be a calamity for us to be deprived of these superb commentaries, and is it not greatly to our advantage to be nourished on such substantial doctrines? Would it not be deplorable to see even priests neglecting to make the effort necessary to permeate themselves with them? Nor can we say that similar lessons could easily be learnt elsewhere: that is not so. And so St. Teresa, who so admirably described the marvels of divine love, studied this teaching of St. Paul's in the same way as did our Fathers of the seventeenth century." way of looking at the Christian life was of capital importance in the eyes of our Saint, indeed he wrote an entire book, Le Royaume de Jésus, to bring it into prominence and to teach pious souls to reduce it to practice in their daily lives. He himself tells us as much in the Preface of this book:

The reign of Christ with us.

"The name I have given to this book indicates its two subjects, namely The Life and the Kingdom of Jesus in Christian

Souls. I call it primarily The Life of Jesus in Christian Souls, because its first and principal end is to point out that Christ must be living within all Christians, since Christians are only on earth for the purpose of thereon continuing the most holy life that Jesus once led there, and since the chief business of a Christian must be to labour to form and establish Jesus within himself, in accordance with the Apostolic desire: Formetur Christus in vobis, (1) i.e., to cause Him to dwell in his spirit and in his heart and to establish the holiness of His life and habits in his soul and in his body. That is what St. Paul calls 'bearing and glorifying God in our bodies,' (2) and St. Peter 'sanctifying Jesus Christ in our hearts.' » (3) For Christ being our leader and we His members (and therefore all that is in Him being in us, and all that is in us being in Him), it follows that as He is sanctified for us (4) and is Himself our sanctification, as His Apostle assures us, (5) so when we sanctify ourselves we do so for Him, in order that

He may be sanctified in us (and our sanctification is the sanctification of Jesus in us), and that we may fulfil the admonition of St. Peter: 'Sanctify the Lord Jesus in your hearts.' (1) Now, all that is done by accustoming ourselves to see, to love, and to glorify this same Jesus in everything, and to do all our actions in His holiness. And that is what this book teaches by very easy, gentle, and potent means.

In the second place I call it The Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls because its design is not merely to propose to you very easy and efficacious means of causing Jesus to dwell within you in His Holiness, but also the means of causing Him fully to reign within you.» (2)

The author justifies this view of the Christian life by quoting numerous passages by St. John and by St. Paul, but he relies chiefly on the Apostle's teaching concerning the mystical body of Christ. This, of course, was that the faithful form one moral body with Our Lord, of which body He is the head, so that the Saviour has two bodies and two lives: His natural body that was derived from Mary, and His mystical body which is the Church redeemed at the price of His blood; similarly, His personal life of suffering which was spent on earth and now continues in heaven in glory, and His mystical life which He lives in His members and which also begins with trials and ends in the beatitude of heaven.

(2). Here is how St. John Eudes understands the kingdom of Jesus in Souls: "Yes. Jesus is King . . . . He is your King and the King of all the hearts He has created . . . . But He only reigns in those in which sin, the world, and vanity are dead and in which pride, self, and the will are thoroughly subjugated, or at least so enfeebled that they do not prevent Him from being master, so that He has the keys of your dwelling, and His divine will is therein obeyed in all things and disposes of everything as it pleases. But the number of such hearts is very small." (Le Coeur admirable, Bk. III, ch. in, sect. 2.) Cf. La Vie admirable de Marie des Vallées, 13k. VIII, ch. iv (Quebec MS.).

The mystical Body of Christ.

This teaching delighted our Saint and, following the example of Bérulle and Condren, he made it the basis of his instructions on the Christian life. «He seems to delight," says one of his biographers, "in studying St. Paul's doctrine on the mystical Body of Christ, and he sees in the Church the unceasingly progressive development of this great body. For him, every Christian is above all else a member who, when he comes to take his place in the general body, must reproduce in himself the various mysteries that are accomplished in the entire body, just as they are accomplished in the actual Person of Jesus Christ. It was in order to bring out this aspect of the Christian life that he wrote La Vie et le Royaume de Jésus. » ( 1 )

Generally spiritual writers consider it from another point of view. They see the Christian life in its internal principle, which is sanctifying grace and charity, and it is only accidentally and in passing that they mention St. Paul's teaching on the life of Jesus within us. This is true of St. Francis de Sales whose Introduction to the Devout Life and Treatise on the Love of God are full of the idea that the Christian life in all its degrees is nothing else but the love of God, and the object of these two well-known and valued books is simply to teach us to preserve, to increase, and to put into practice the divine charity. But St. John, on the contrary, always considers the Christian life in its relations to Jesus Christ. Whether he writes of prayer, of the Christian virtues, or of ordinary actions, he constantly returns to the principle that the divine life that we enjoy is the continuation and prolongation in each of us of the very life of Jesus, and, as we shall see, he would always have us act in Christ's name, with His dispositions and intentions, and in union with Him and with all the members of His mystical Body.(1)

Let us then carefully study the Saint's teaching on this important question.

A. INCORPORATION WITH JESUS BY BAPTISM

Baptism, by incorporating us with Jesus, initiates us into His life, and so St. John Eudes applies to baptism all his teachings on the Christian life. In almost all his writings he treats of this matter, (2) he even made it the subject of a separate book (Le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le Saint Baptême), and always he insists on the close union established between Jesus and ourselves by this sacrament.

"In baptism," he writes in his Entretiens intérieurs, "God delivers us from the accursed alliance we had contracted with Satan and makes us enter into marvellous relations with Himself. . . . These relations are the noblest and the most perfect that could possibly be; for it is not merely a question of an alliance of (1). These two points of view (which are not the only ones from which the matter may be considered) do not exclude each other. On the contrary, they are complementary to each other and we cannot without inconvenience neglect either. But the predominance given to one or other of them results in an appreciable modification of the interior life and stamps it with a particular character. Later on we shall see that St. John, like St. Francis de Sales, sees in the Christian life a life of love for God and one's neighbour; but he looks upon it above all as a participation in the life of Jesus.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

friend with friend, of brother with brother, of child with parent, or of wife with husband, but of members with their head. and that is the most intimate, the closest union possible."

Unity by Baptism.

But he also takes care to point out that the union of head and members in the human body, close though it be, is but a figure and a shadow of the union of Jesus with the members of His mystical body, because the material world is only a figure of the spiritual world, and nature but a shadow of grace: "And besides that," he adds, "the union of the vine-branch with the plant of the vine and of members of the body with their corporal head is in conformity with the quality, and the base and material nature, of the things which that union joins together. But the union of the members of Christ with their Head is conformable to the excellence and the holy and divine nature of the things that it joins together; and consequently the alliance that Christians have with Jesus Christ excels the union between the head and the members of a human body by as much as this divine Head and these holy members are exalted above the natural head and its members."

But St. John goes even further, and reminds us that "the relations we contract by baptism with Jesus Christ and, through Him, with the Eternal Father, are so lofty and so divine that they are compared by Christ Himself to the unity existing between the Father and the Son: Sint unum sicut et nos unum sumus, Ego in eis et tu in me, ut sint consummati in unum. ( 1 ) And thus the unity of the Father and the Son exemplifies our union with God by baptism, and this same union is a vivid representation of that adorable unity."

(1). John xvii, 21-22.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

Describing the union established by baptism between Jesus and ourselves, St. John also observes that it is based on the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ and operated by the Holy Ghost: "That same Holy Spirit who is the unity of the Father and the Son . . . is the sacred bond of our association and union with Christ and through Christ with the Eternal Father." (1) Thence the Saint concludes that baptism unites us to Jesus and, through Him, to the Father, in the closest union that can possibly be conceived after the hypostatic union of Christ's human nature with the Eternal Word. Rightly understood, is it not an image and even, so far as is possible, an extension in each of us of the union of the Word with human nature?

this union.

Now the consequences of our incorporation with Jesus are numerous. St. John specially stresses the principal ones: 'I beg you to consider,' he wrote in Le Coeur admirable "that Our Lord Jesus Christ is your true Head, and that you are one of His members, and that from that fact there flow five important results: (a) That He stands to you as the head to its members, so that everything in Him is yours, His spirit, His heart, His body, His mind, and that you must make use of them as your own for the purpose of serving, praising, loving and glorifying God. (b) That you stand to Him as do the members to the head, for which reason He ardently desires to make use of all that is in you for the service and the glory of His Father, as of things that are His own. (c) That not only does he so stand in regard to you, but also He wishes to be in you, to be living and reigning within you, as the head lives and reigns in its members; and that He desires all that is in Him to live and reign in you: that His mind should live and reign in your mind, that His heart should live and reign in your heart, that all the powers of His soul, all His interior and exterior senses and all His passions should live and reign in the faculties of your soul, in your interior and exterior senses, and in your passions, so that . . . the life of Jesus may visibly appear even in your flesh and in your external deportment. (d) That not only do you stand in a particular relationship to the Son of God, but that you must be in Him, as the members are in their head, that all that is in you must be incorporated in Him and receive life and direction from Him, that there is no true life for you save only in Him alone . . . that outside Him there is only death and perdition for you, that He must be the sole principle of all the movements, customs, and functions of your life, and that finally you must live only for Him, in Him and by Him, in accordance with the divine words: Nemo enim vestrum sibi vivit et nemo sibi moritur. Sive enim vivimus, sive morimur, Domini sumus. In hoc enim Christus mortuus est et resurrexit, ut et mortuorum et vivorum, dominetur.' ( 1 )

That you are one with this same Jesus, as the members are one with their head, and that consequently you must have but the one mind, the one soul, the one life, the one will, the one sentiment, the one heart . . . and that He Himself must be your mind, your heart, your love, your life, your all."(2)

Another consequence of our incorporation in Christ

(1). Rom. xiv, 7-9.

(2). OEuvres complètes, VI, pp. 113.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

is that we associate ourselves with His relations and take our place in His genealogy and His parentage, so that His Father becomes our father. By creation we were servants of God, by baptism we become His children. He would have us call Him "father," and this name is no vain title, for at baptism He infuses into us a new life which is a participation in the life of His Divine Son, and He extends to us the love He bears for this well-beloved Son. The Saviour Himself has told us as much in express terms in the beautiful prayer He addressed to His Father after the Last Supper: "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and the world may know that thou hast sent me and has loved them, as thou hast also loved me." (1) St. John delighted to savour these last words, and he translated them in his own way when he said that the Father loves us "with the very heart" with which He loves His Son. He added that after regenerating us the Heavenly Father continues to bear us in His Heart and upon His breast, and in this connection he loved to quote the lofty words of Isaias: "Weaken unto me, O house of Jacob, all the remnant of the house of Israel, who are carried by my bowels, are borne up by my womb. Even to your old age I am the same, and to your grey hairs I will carry you. I have made you, and I will bear: I will carry and will save." (2)

Baptism and the Holy spirit.

And after giving us His Father to be our own father, the Divine Master gives us His Holy Spirit to be our spirit. Already, in the Old Testament, God had promised ised us this Holy Spirit(1); but at baptism He communicates It to us to be, in some sort, our spirit and our heart and to make us share in the most intimate virtues and dispositions of Jesus.

"Being children of God," says St. John Eudes, "and being but one with the Son of God as the members with their head, it necessarily follows that we ought to be animated by the same spirit. Therefore St. Paul says: 'And because you are sons, God hath sent the spirit of his Son into your hearts' (2); and elsewhere: 'If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.' (3) And so the Holy Ghost has been given to us to be the spirit of our spirit, the heart of our heart and the soul of our soul, and to be ever with us and in us, not merely as in His temple, but as in a part of His body, i.e. in a part of the body of Jesus Christ, which is His and must be animated by Him, since the members and all the parts of the body must be animated by the same spirit as that which animates the head."(4)

Finally Jesus makes us members of His family, giving us His Mother to be our mother, His Church to be our second mother, His angels and saints to be our brothers and protectors. And, in fact, from the moment of our regeneration in the baptismal font the Blessed Virgin and Holy Church both show us (each in their own way) a truly maternal tenderness and solicitude, while the angels and saints for their part watch over us as over their own brethren. And constantly this consoling teaching is to be found in the Saint's writings.

These wonderful privileges are accompanied by an interior the Christian the living representation of Jesus. For at baptism the Divine Master purifies us from the stain of original sin and, if necessary, from any actual sins that we have committed; He gives us a new being by clothing us in sanctifying grace, that grace which St. Peter calls a "participation in the very nature of God." To this He adds infused virtues which, like faculties in the natural order, put us in a position to fulfil the acts of the super natural life, and the gifts of the Holy Ghost the object of which is to make us susceptible and docile to the action of the Holy Ghost. All these gifts, which theologians compare to the sails that enable a ship to respond to the breezes that catch them, are at the same time bonds which complete our union with Christ, perfections which make our souls the image of His own, and principles of activity which all contribute, each in its own way, to the blossoming of His life in our own.

And then the action of Jesus within us is completed by the workings of actual grace which stirs us and helps us to practise the Christian virtues, for "like the vine in its branches and the head in its members, the Divine Master never ceases to pour into the souls of the just a vivifying force that precedes, accompanies, and follows all their virtuous acts".(1)

And yet all that is but a beginning and a preparation: eternal happiness is the goal to which Jesus wishes to guide us. He awaits us in heaven to associate us with His glorious life and to make us His co-heirs, the heirs of His Father. As members of Jesus Christ we can effectively have no other end than His, and this end is participation in the intimate life of God, and in the happiness that He finds in the contemplation and love of His divine perfections. Thence it follows, as St. John Eudes remarked, that baptism, by incorporating us with Jesus and giving us, in Him and by Him, a new being and a new life, introduces us into a totally new world.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

"God," he says, "has placed the Christian in a new world. What is this new world of the Christian? It is God with all His perfections; it is the bosom of God; it is Jesus Christ the Man-God, considered in Himself, in His life, in His mysteries, and also in His body which is the Church Triumphant, Militant, and Suffering. That is the world of the new man.... In the world of Adam there are skies, stars, and elements. In the Christian's world the sky is God and the bosom of God; the sun is Jesus; the moon is Mary; the planets and stars are the saints; the earth is the Sacred Humanity of Jesus; the water is Christian grace; the air is the Holy Spirit; fire is love and charity; the bread that we eat is the Body of Christ; the wine that we drink is His blood; the clothes that we wear are Jesus Christ: Quicumque enim in Christo baptizati estis, Christum induistis. There are no poor and no plebeians in the Christian's world; all true Christians are infinitely rich: Omnia vestra sunt. They are all noble, all princes, and all kings."(1)

B. THE BAPTISMAL VOW

In return for the benefits which it brings us, our incorporation with Jesus imposes on us the obligation of dwelling in Him and continuing His life, as do the members in regard to their head.

"Jesus, Son of God and Son of man," says St. John, "being not only our God, Saviour, and Sovereign Lord, but also our head and we His members ... it necessarily follows that, just as the members are animated by the spirit of their head and live with his life, so we also must be animated with the spirit of Jesus, live His life, walk in His ways, adopt His sentiments and inclinations, and do all our actions with the dispositions with which He performs His; in a word we must continue and fulfil the life, the religion and the devotion to which He consecrated Himself while upon earth."(1)

To that we formally pledge ourselves, either in person or by our god-parents, when we receive baptism, and it is a solemn engagement which St. John stresses strongly in several of his works.

"Ye must," he writes in Le Royaume de Jésus, "have a close and most intimate union with Jesus throughout our life and adhere perfectly to Him in all our actions. That is the solemn vow and public profession that we make in the presence of the whole Church at baptism. For then, as we are told by St. Augustine, St. Thomas Aquinas, and the Catechism of the Council of Trent, (2)

(2). St. Augustine: "Voventur autem omnia quae offeruntur Deo, maxime Sancti altaris oblatio; quae, sacramento praedicatur nostrum illud votum maximum, quo nos vivimus in Christo esse mansuros, utique in compage corporis Christi- (Epist. 149-alias 59-ad Paulinum n. 16). And St. Thomas says: "In baptismo vovent homines abrenuntiare diabolo et pompis ejus et fidem servare.... Sub voto baptizatorum cadit abrenuntiare pompis diaboli et fidem Christi servare" (Summa, IIa IIae, 88, 1 ad primum). The Catechism tells us: "Aequum est nos ipsos, non secus ac, mancipia, Redemptori nostro et Domino in perpetuum addicere et consecrare. Et quidem, cum baptismo initiaremur, ante ecclesiae fores id professi sumus: declaravimus enim nos Satanae et mundo renuntiare, et Jesu Christo totos nos tradere. Quod si ut christianae militae adscriberemur, tam sancta et solemni professione nos ipsos Domino nostro devovimus; quo supplicio digni erimus, si . . . ex mundi et diaboli praeceptis ac legibus vixerimus" (Catec. Conc. Trid., p. 1, a. 2, n. 18-19). Cf. Bérulle, Narré, n. xxiv, Migne, col 615.

100- THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

we solemnly vow to renounce Satan and all his works and to adhere to Christ, as do the members to their head, and to give ourselves up entirely to Him so as to dwell in Him. But to profess this is to profess to be faithful to His dispositions and intentions, to His laws and maxims, to His spirit and guidance, to His life, His qualities, and His virtues, and indeed to everything that He has done and suffered. . . . In a word, Christianismus est Professio vitae Christi, Christianity is a profession of the life of Christ, as St. Gregory of Nyssa tell us. (1) And St. Bernard assures us that Our Lord does not admit among His professed followers those who do not live according to His life: Non inter suos deputat Professores quos vitae suae cernit desertores."

And in another work he writes: (2) "Men you have entered into alliance with God by the holy contract of baptism you have offered, given, and consecrated yourself to His divine Majesty, and you are obliged to two important things. For, firstly, you have promised by the mouths of your godparents to renounce Satan and all his pomps and works. Secondly, you have promised to adhere to Christ by means of faith, hope and charity . . . and to follow Him not merely as a servant follows his master, but as a member follows its head, and consequently to live with His life.... For as the life of the arm is a continuation and extension of the life of the head, so the Christian life is a continuation of the life of Jesus upon earth. So that whoever has been grafted on to this divine tree and incorporated with this adorable head by holy baptism must live with His life and walk in His footsteps: Qui dicit se in ipso manere, debet, sicut ille ambulavit, et ipse ambulare."

The offering Christ made of Himself.

In Le Royaume de Jésus the Saint analyses the profession made by Jesus on His entry into the world, and he observes that Jesus made this profession in His name and in the name of all the members of His mystical Body. And so, in becoming members of that body, we at least implicitly make the same profession. He reduces this to three points:

"Christ devoted Himself to fulfilling perfectly the will of His Father, and in that He found all His happiness.

"He devoted Himself to serving His Father and to serving mankind for love of His Father, choosing the lowly and abject status of a servant so as the better to give honour and homage to the supreme majesty of His Father by this abasement. He devoted Himself to loving and glorifying His Father and to causing Him to be loved and glorified in this world, to doing all His actions for the pure glory and love of His Father and to doing them with the holiest, purest, and most divine dispositions. . . .

«Finally He devoted Himself to being entirely immolated and sacrificed for the sole glory of His Father, desiring to be a victim and to suffer in this character every kind of contempt, humiliation, privation, interior and exterior mortification, and lastly a cruel and shameful death...

Consequent obligations on our part.

"Consequently by vowing to adhere to Jesus and to dwell in Him, which, as St. Augustine says,(1) is the greatest of our vows, votum maximum nostrum, we undertake three great obligations, most holy and divine, on which we should frequently reflect:

"1. We oblige ourselves, with Christ, never to do our own will, but always to submit ourselves to the will of God and to obey everybody else in whatsoever is not contrary to God's law, finding therein all our happiness.

"2. We profess ourselves the servants of God, of His Son, and of all the members of Christ, in accordance with St. Paul's phrase: Nos servos vestros per Jesum, ( 2 ) and in consequence of this no Christian has anything of his own, any more than a slave has, and has no right to make any use whatever of himself, the members of his body, the powers of his soul, his life, time, or temporal goods, save only for Jesus Christ and His members, i.e., all those who believe in Him.

"3. We oblige ourselves to be victims continually sacrificed for the glory of God, spirituales hostias, as St. Peter says. Obsecro vos, fratres, per misericordiam Dei, ut exhibeatis corpora vestra hostiam viventem, sanctam, Deo placentem, is the entreaty of St. Paul.(3) And what is here said of our bodies must also be said of our souls, and therefore we are obliged to glorify and love God with all the powers of our bodies and souls, to do so to the utmost of our ability, to cause Him to be glorified and loved as much as we possibly can, in all our actions and affairs to seek only His pure glory and pure love, to live in such a way that our lives may be a continual sacrifice of praise and love for Him, and to be ready to be immolated, consumed and annihilated for His glory." (1)

And so St. John concludes from the baptismal vow that the business of the Christian life is to bring about the formation of Jesus within us. ---The mystery of mysteries and work of works," he says, "is the formation of Jesus, as is indicated for us by St. Paul's words: Filioli, quos iterum parturio, donec formetur Christus in vobis. ( 2 ) That is the greatest mystery and the greatest work done in heaven and on earth by the most exalted persons on earth and in heaven, viz.: the Eternal Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, the Most Blessed Virgin and Holy Church.

The formation of Jesus within us.

"It is the greatest action done by the Eternal Father in all eternity during which He is continually occupied in producing His Son in Himself. And outside Himself He has done nothing more admirable than the formation of His Son within the most pure Virgin at the moment of the Incarnation. So also the most excellent work performed on earth by the Son of God is the formation of Himself within His Holy Mother and in His Eucharist. It is also the most noble operation by the Holy Ghost who formed Jesus within the womb of the Virgin, who, in her turn, never did anything, and never will do anything, more lofty than her co-operation in this divine and wonderful formation of Jesus within her. Similarly it is the holiest and greatest work performed by Holy Church which has no more important work than the production of Christ in the Eucharist by the mouth of her priests, in a certain and admirable manner, and the formation of Him in the hearts of her children, for in all her functions she has no other end than the formation of Jesus in the souls of all Christians.

"And so, our principal desire, care, and occupation must be to form Jesus within us, i.e., to make Him live and reign within us so that His spirit, devotion, sentiments, inclinations, virtues, and dispositions are supreme in us. To this end all our pious exercises must tend; that is the work that God places in our hands and at which He would have us labour continually."(1)

C. RENOUNCING THE OLD ADAM (2)

If we are to live the life of Jesus we must above all renounce sin and all that leads to it. Hence we must renounce the devil, the world and especially that which Scripture calls concupiscence, the flesh, or the old man, which means everything in us that is vicious. For not only did the sin of Adam strip human nature of the supernatural gifts with which it had been endowed by God, it also perverted it, thereby depriving man of his primitive rectitude, which is the reason why our natural inclinations are now disordered and tend without regulation to what is inferior. This depraving of our nature constitutes a permanent obstacle to our welfare and a continual incitement to evil, so that there is within us, in our sensuality and pride, our obstinacy and self-will, and generally in everything in us that comes from ourselves, the principle of all sins, the germ of all vices and, as St. John Eudes says, a veritable "Antichrist."

The corruption of nature by sin.

"If we look at ourselves in the light of God, « he energetically says, we shall see that of ourselves,' as sinners, we are so many incarnate devils, so many Lucifers and Antichrists, having nothing in ourselves, of ourselves, that is not contrary to Christ; we shall see that we bear within us a demon, a Lucifer, an Antichrist, namely our own will, our pride, our self-love, which are in fact worse than all the demons, worse than Lucifer, worse than Antichrist, because the malice of all these comes from self-will, pride and self-love. We shall see that of ourselves we are a hell full of horror, of malediction, of sin, and of abomination; that in principle and in germ we have within us all the sins of earth and hell, since the corruption sown in us by original sin is the root and source of every kind of sin ...; we shall see, too, that in consequence of that, if God did not bear us continually in the arms of His mercy, if He did not perform a perpetual miracle to keep us from falling into sin, we would precipitate ourselves every hour into an abyss of all sorts of iniquity.» 2

(1). By this expression, which constantly recurs in his writings when treating of renunciation or humility, St. John distinguishes very clearly that within us which is the work of God and that which is the work of Adam or our own, i.e. the flesh, concupiscence, or the old man. The latter, which is the sequel of sin, must be destroyed as completely as possible; while the other, on the contrary, has to be consecrated to God and employed in His service.

(2). Royaume de Jésus, II, n. xxvi. The gravity of the corruption of nature caused by the sin of Adam is disputed. Nowadays, when naturalism prevails, the tendency is to belittle it; whereas in the seventeenth century it seems to have been sometimes exaggerated. However that may be, it is obvious from the passage just quoted and from others that we will later quote, that our Saint, like most of his contemporaries, extends the corruption of nature by original sin as far as orthodoxy allows.

Hence the renouncing ourselves.

It follows from this corruption of nature by sin that our only way of salvation is to renounce ourselves and to give our necessity of selves to Jesus so that we may act under His influence. St. John never ceases to repeat this; he would have us make constant efforts to combat the instincts of depraved nature which are the great obstacle to the life of Jesus within us. And as these instincts are part of ourselves 'are indeed ourselves as deformed by sin, he urges us to labour unwearingly to go out from ourselves, to strip ourselves of ourselves and, as he says in his vigorous language, "annihilate ourselves."

"We must labour," he says,---to annihilate ourselves, i.e., our own feelings, self-will, self-love, pride and vanity, all our perverse inclinations and habits, all the desires and instincts of depraved nature, and everything that is of ourselves. For since we have of ourselves nothing in us that is not depraved and corrupted by sin, and is consequently contrary to Christ and opposed to His glory and love, everything must be destroyed and consumed so that Jesus Christ may perfectly live and reign within us."

And he adds: «This is the first principle and the first step of the Christian life, and is what is called in Scripture and the writings of the Fathers 'losing oneself,' 'dying to self,' and renouncing self. It must be one of our chief cares, one of the principal exercises to which we must give ourselves by the practice of abnegation, humiliation, and both interior and exterior mortification, for it is one of the most powerful means of forming and establishing Jesus within us.» (1)

(1). Royaume de Jésus, II, n. xli.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

107-

So, too, in Le Coeur admirable, he writes: "Whoever would find a place in the true earthly Paradise, i.e., in the Paradise of the Second Adam which is the Heart of His most holy Mother, must desert the race and genealogy of his first father and enter that of his second. He must cease to be a son of Adam that he may become a child of Jesus, and must die to the corrupted and depraved life of the old man, to his evil and perverse spirit, his irregular inclinations, and all that comes from himself, so that he may live by the holy and heavenly life of the new man, may be animated by his spirit and be guided by his sentiments and inclinations: Hoc sentite in vobis quod et in Christo Jesu. This death seems to be terrifying, this flaming sword in the hand of the cherubim seems formidable, but its effect is very different to its appearance. For it is a sword of love, the sword that has wounded and slain all true lovers of Jesus, that is, all the saints. It wounded them that it might heal them, it killed them to bring them to life; it made them die to sin, to the world, to themselves, and to everything that was not God, so as to make them live with the life of God. It struck them, in fact, with a desirable and precious death: Pretiosa in conspectu Domini mors sanctorum ejus, with a death which is not death but is life and the source of life."(1)

How to effect this.

This annihilation of all that is vicious in us is the work of a lifetime and calls for incessant efforts, for the flesh dies but slowly and it is only the saints who succeed in overcoming it completely. And so it does not suffice to renounce our corrupt nature from time to time, we must, as Père Eudes always explained, live in the habitual practice of renunciation and mortification, which alone can lead us to durable results.

(1) OEuvres complètes, VI, pp. 240-241.

And so that we may bring this conflict with the flesh to a happy conclusion St. John advises us to begin all our actions with a formal act of renunciation followed by an act of oblation to Jesus: "At the beginning of your actions," he writes, "be careful to raise your heart to Jesus and to tell Him that you renounce yourself, your self-love and pride, i.e. all your own particular dispositions and intentions. And tell Him also that you give yourself to Him, to His holy love and His divine Spirit, and that you wish to perform all your actions in the dispositions and with the intentions with which He did His. By this means you will give Him much glory in all your undertakings and in a little time will advance far in the ways of grace."(1)

Every time that Père Eudes puts forward a method for the carrying out of a pious exercise or a virtuous act he introduces those two acts of renunciation of self and of oblation to Jesus, as is proved by a glance at Le Royaume de Jésus or the Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique, or by studying in his Manuel de Prières the various ways of beginning and ending prayer and the acts suggested for the examination before midday.

But we must not forget that however great our efforts may be, they can but second the action of grace without which they would remain sterile. In the supernatural order we must await everything from Jesus, even the destruction of the obstacles that oppose His action, and that is why Père Eudes, while advising us to do everything that depends on us for (1). Royaume de Jésus, VI, n. 1.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

conquering the old man, urges us to ask Jesus to deliver us and to free us from him. And so he says: "Annihilate yourself often at the feet of Jesus, annihilate all that is in you, and beg Him by the great love with which He annihilated Himself to use . . . His great power to annihilate our old selves and to establish Himself within us, saying to Him: 'O Good Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy divine annihilation as described by Thy Apostle: Exinanivit semetipsum. I adore Thy great and omnipotent love for Thy Father and for us, which has thus annihilated Thee. I give myself and abandon myself entirely to the power of this divine love, so that it may annihilate me totally. O most powerful and good Jesus, use Thy great power and infinite goodness to annihilate me and to establish Thyself within me, thereby to root out my self-love, my own will, my pride, and all my passions, sentiments and inclinations, so that Thy holy love, Thy sacred will, Thy divine spirit, Thy profound humility and all Thy other virtues may reign within me."(1)

Similarly in Le Cœur admirable are these words: "O Jesus, it is with all our heart that we renounce our first father (Adam), who is not our true father since he bequeathed us death before giving us life. Thou art our true Father, Thou who has suffered death in order to give us life; and we wish to be Thy true children. But this we cannot be if we do not cease to be children of Adam, and if he does not die within us. O Jesus, Thou art the cherubim placed by God Thy Father at the gate of the second Paradise; the flaming sword is in Thy hand. Strike, then, strike with that sword the old Adam, the man of sin and of perdition, he who is directly contrary to Thee and who consequently is a true Antichrist. If this Antichrist does not die in us Thou canst not live within us, O Jesus, and Thou wilt live within us only in the measure in which he dies. Slay him, then, within us, so that Thou mayest live completely in us and that we may say with Thy Apostle: I live, now not I, but Christ liveth in me." ( 1 )

The law of mortification obviously extends to the whole of man. The body requires to be mastered as well as the soul, but as St. John is generally addressing pious souls to whom corporal mortification is familiar he seldom speaks of other than spiritual mortification. It is our pride, self-love, and self-will that he would have us attack, and that is the more understandable in that the whole of his spiritual teaching aims at causing the spirit of Jesus, the love of Jesus and the divine will to reign within us.

D. THE OBLATION OF SELF TO JESUS

By killing the old Adam within us, renunciation clears away the chief obstacle to the life of Jesus in us, but for the exercising and developing of this life we must remain united to the divine Master, submit ourselves to His action and let ourselves be guided by Him. That is what is implied by that adherence or oblation so much stressed by writers of the French School.

"Under the present dispensation," writes Bérulle, If mankind is sanctified outside itself, it is sanctified in Jesus Christ. Et secundum mensuram donationis Christi. . . . Every man . . . must be detached from himself and emptied of self, he must be appropriated to Jesus, subsisting in Jesus, grafted to Jesus, living in Jesus, he must work in Jesus, and fructify in Jesus."(1)

Close adherence to Christ.

Elsewhere he exhorts his readers: "Give yourself entirely to Christ's spirit which impresses on souls a living image and perfect resemblance of its own conditions on earth. There He is unknown, abased and humiliated there He is a captive, suffering and dependent and He well knows how to work in us through His spirit . . . producing a life of suffering and subjection, of captivity and dependence, thereby honouring His condition in the conditions to which He is pleased to reduce us and honouring Himself in us. Open your soul to His operations, abandon it entirely to His intentions, and knowing your own acts to be too feeble to be able to honour Him, give yourself up to the efficacious power of His spirit, so that He may deign to make use of you to honour Himself by means of His power and operations."(2)

And again he writes: "Jesus alone is our fulfilment and we must bind ourselves to Him as being by His divinity the foundation of our existence, by His humanity our link with God; the spirit of our spirit, the life of our life, the fullness of our capacity. Our first knowledge must be that of our own deficient and imperfect condition ' and our first movement must be to Jesus as our all in all. And in this search for Jesus, this adherence to Him, this profound and continual dependence upon Him, is our life, our strength and all our power to act. Never must we act save as united to Him, directed by Him, and from Him drawing our inspiration to think, to speak, and to work, so that without Him we can neither exist nor labour for our salvation."(1)

St. John echoes his master: "We must acquire a most intimate union with Jesus, a most perfect adherence and application to Him throughout our life, in all our exercises, and in all our actions."(2) Plainly what the Saint asks of us is not mere habitual adherence to Christ by sanctifying grace, but an actual adherence expressly renewed in each of our acts of devotion, and even in everything we do. And this adherence consists of two acts which he never separates from each other. The first is an act of oblation which consists in offering ourselves, giving ourselves, abandoning ourselves to Jesus and to His holy Spirit; while the second is a prayer by which we formally ask Him to take possession of us and to make us live with His life.

Consider, for example, the first disposition that he demands for prayer: "We are most unworthy to appear before the face of God, to see Him or to be seen or heard by Him, and . . . of ourselves we can have no good thought or perform any good act in the least pleasing to Him. Therefore, we must annihilate ourselves at His feet, giving ourselves to Our Lord Jesus Christ, and begging Him that He Himself will annihilate us and will establish Himself in us, so that it may be He Himself who prays within us."(3)

So, too, with the practice of virtues: "Give yourself

often to Jesus," says the Saint, "with a lively desire to practise this virtue with all the perfection that He asks of you, and beg Him to destroy in you all that is contrary to this same virtue, and to establish Himself in you for His pure glory."(1)

The Saint does not use different language when treating of the way of honouring Christ's mysteries: "We must," he tells us, "give ourselves to Jesus if we would honour the mystery we have to honour in every way that He desires. And when we have used all the capacity that it pleases Him to give us for honouring this same mystery, we must beg Him to deign Himself to use the power and holy inventions of His spirit and His love for honouring Himself in us. For this end we must ask Him to destroy in us everything that is contrary to the glory of this mystery, to produce in us by this mystery all the graces and effects that He desires to produce in us, and to rule us in accordance with the spirit and grace of this mystery. Similarly we must beseech Him to impress upon our souls an image and participation of this mystery, to consummate this mystery in us, and finally to accomplish all the designs that He has in regard to us in this same mystery, granting that we may do and suffer all that pleases Him for this end."(2)

We have already pointed out the necessity of self renunciation and of making an act of adherence to Jesus: only this is capable of delivering us from the influence of the old Adam and of destroying him within us. Listen to the Saint's recommendation on this point:

"Renounce yourself entirely, then; renounce your self-will and all the power and capability that you think you feel in yourself. For all the power that Adam left in human nature is but impotence; the feeling of it within us is but illusion, presumption, and a false opinion of our selves; and we can never have true power and real liberty to do good save by renouncing ourselves and departing from ourselves and from all that is our own, so as to live in the spirit and the virtue of Jesus Christ.

"And when you have made this renunciation, then adore Christ, give yourself entirely to Him, and beg Him to take possession of all the rights of Adam within you and your own also, since He has acquired the rights of sinners by His blood and by His death; ask Him therefore to be pleased to dwell within you in place of Adam., to free you from your own nature, and to take all that you are for His own use. Protest to Him that you desire to lay in His hands all that you are, and that you wish to relinquish your own spirit (which is a spirit of pride and vanity) together with all your intentions, inclinations and dispositions, so as henceforth to live only in His spirit, in His intentions, and in His divine and adorable inclinations and dispositions.

"Beg Him, therefore, to draw you out of yourself as from a fire by His wonderful mercy, so as to bring you into Himself and to establish you in His spirit of humility, and that, not for your interest or satisfaction, but for His pleasure and for His pure glory. Ask Him also to use His divine power to destroy in you your pride and not to rely on your infirmity for establishing His glory by the way of perfect humility within you. And remembering that, of yourself, as a sinner, you are an incarnate devil, a Lucifer and an Antichrist . . .

by reason of the iniquity, pride and self-love which is always in each one of us, place yourself often, but especially at the beginning of the day, at the feet of Jesus and His Holy Mother, saying to them:

'O Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, hold fast this miserable demon beneath your feet, crush this serpent, kill this Antichrist with the breath of your mouth, bind this Lucifer so that he may do nothing to-day contrary to your holy glory.' "(1)

After that we are not surprised to find constantly in Le Royaume de Jésus, the Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique, and the Manuel de piété, acts of oblation to Jesus accompanied by the prayer we have just quoted, and preceded by an act of self-renunciation. Such acts as these, when they express and (by reviving) strengthen the intimate dispositions of the soul, are for St. John, as for Cardinal de Bérulle, the chief means to be used for forming Jesus within us and for living His life.

Till we have offered ourselves completely to Christ we can do nothing.

Not that the Saint dispenses us from the efforts necessary for forming us to the practice of piety and Christian virtues; on the contrary, he would have us do everything that depends on our selves for arriving at that goal, striving for our part as though we had nothing to expect on the part of God. But the essential thing in his eyes is that we should break away from our own selves and offer ourselves to Jesus, who is the principal author of all the good that we do. Our own task is to place ourselves at His disposition as docile instruments to be used at His pleasure; not to oppose His workings, but meekly to follow His inspirations and to let our selves be guided by Him after the fashion of a child with its mother. That is the best way in which human liberty can co-operate in the work of sanctification that Jesus would accomplish in us. Without despising particular methods, St. John only gives a secondary importance to them, and in Le Royaume de Jésus he does not hesitate to write that "The practice of practices, the secret of secrets, the devotion of devotions is not to be attached to any particular practice or devotion, but to take great care in all your devotions to give yourself to the Holy Spirit of Jesus . . . so that He may have full power and liberty to act in you according to His desires and to instil into you such dispositions and sentiments of devotion as He may wish, guiding you by whatever ways He pleases." (1)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

E. IMITATION OF JESUS (2)

If Jesus is to live in us it does not suffice that we submit ourselves to the action of His grace; we must, as we have said, co-operate with it to the best of our ability, striving to conform ourselves to the divine head of whom we have the honour to be members. St. John presents Our Lord to us as the Book of Life, on which we must always keep our eyes, as the Example that we must copy, as the Prototype whose characteristics we must reproduce, and as the Supreme Law to which we must submit all our actions.

(2). Some writers have distinguished imitation from adherence, as being two things that are mutually exclusive. They are certainly two distinct things, but they complement and require each other. Adherence is the oblation of self to Jesus; it submits us to His grace, it even anticipates this by offering us to its action. Imitation is a free and considered act by which, under the action of grace, we strive to enter into the thoughts and sentiments of Jesus and to regulate our lives by His. By the first of these we offer ourselves to Jesus in order that He may impress on us an image of His life; but by the second, we strive with the help of grace to express in ourselves the life of Jesus. But it goes without saying that adherence itself like every supernatural act, is due to the action of divine grace.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

It is true that all spiritual writers recommend the imitation of Jesus Christ, but many of them, in tracing the rules of Christian life and perfection, confine themselves to setting out the evangelical precepts and counsels, and citing the examples afforded by the Saviour's life rather as a stimulant to virtue than as a rule of life. This was not Père Eudes' method. Like Bérulle and Condren, he never separated the teaching of Jesus from His Person and His life. From the very start he places his readers in the presence of the Divine Master and demands that they order their lives in harmony with His.

Conformity

with the dispositions of Our Lord.

Above all, it is necessary that we learn to think and to desire as He does; that is what St. Paul demands in the famous words that our Saint loved to quote, and which he applied to the cult of the Sacred Heart: Hoc sentite in vobis quod et in Christo Jesu, clothe yourself with the sentiments of Christ. The Saviour's thoughts become our own by faith which is a participation in His knowledge and which makes us see things with His eyes. By hatred of sin and by renunciation of the world and self we enter into His feelings. Those, in fact, were the dominating sentiments entertained in the holy soul of Jesus by the immense love for His Father with which it burned. There, then, is where our conformity with the Divine Master must begin, and together with prayer, which was the constant occupation of the Incarnate Word, this constitutes, in the eyes of St. John, the foundations of the Christian life.

118-

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

These fundamental dispositions sketch, as it were, the outlines of the image of Jesus in the Christian soul, but the picture is completed in the soul by the industry with which it clothes itself with the Saviour's virtues for the Christian virtues, are, for P&e Eudes, only the continuation and extension in each one of us of the virtues of Jesus. He would not have us consider them merely in themselves, in their intrinsic excellence, as do the pagan philosophers; it is in Jesus, who is their principle and complete model, that we must study them, and it is for the purpose of making ourselves similar to Him and for glorifying His Father, as He Himself did, that we must strive to practise them.

Conformity with the Divine Master is brought about in us by our participation in the various conditions and mysteries of His life. St. John, in fact, teaches that the mysteries of Jesus, as well as His life and virtues, must be renewed and completed in Christians: "It is a truth worthy of notice," he writes,---that the mysteries of Jesus are not yet in a state of perfect completion and accomplishment; for though they are perfect and complete in the Person of Jesus, we who are His members do not possess them perfectly, nor does His Church, which is His mystical Body. For the Son of God intends that we and all His Church should share, extend and continue the mystery of His Incarnation, and those of His birth, and His childhood . . . and all His other mysteries."(1)

(1). Royaume de Jésus, III, n. iv.

THE LIFE OF JESUS WITHIN US

119-

Meditation on the mysteries of Christ.

At bottom the whole of the Christian life is a participation in the Saviour's mysteries. Mystically dead with Him at Holy baptism, we have with Him to lead a new and heavenly life. Whatever the circumstances in which we find ourselves we must spiritually conform to the Saviour's mysteries by applying ourselves to expressing in our lives the virtues which shone so brilliantly in each of those mysteries. Moreover, the Saint advises us to meditate assiduously on the mysteries of Jesus; and, as we have said, he counsels us not to limit our reflections to exterior facts which only give the external appearance of the mysteries, but to penetrate their spirit and roots by considering the thoughts, affections, and interior occupations of Jesus in the various mysteries, as well as the special grace attached to each of them and the fruits that we should acquire from them. In short, to follow the true rule of Christian life we must go to the very Heart of Jesus and, so far as possible, examine its intimate dispositions: "Jesus," says St. John, "gave me His Heart to be ... the model and rule of my life and of my actions. I wish to keep my eyes on this rule and to study it carefully, so as to follow it faithfully."(1)

Furthermore, as we are members of Jesus Christ and continuators of His life, we must, according to St. John, always and everywhere look upon ourselves "as His representatives," and do each of our actions, whether small or great, "in His name and in His spirit," i.e. "with His intentions and dispositions."

Many spiritual writers advise us, before taking any action, to put ourselves mentally in the presence of death or of eternity, and by this means the thought of our last end becomes the rule and test of the whole moral life. Certainly this is an excellent way of sanctifying our actions, and Père Eudes does not fail to recommend it. But he prefers that at every occurrence we should ask ourselves what Jesus would do in our place, and to act accordingly: "Christians," he writes, "being members of Jesus Christ, hold His place upon earth. They represent His Person, and consequently they ought to do all that He does . . . whatever He would do in their place. just as an ambassador, holding the position and representing the person of his king, must act and speak in his name, i.e., as his king would act and speak if he were present." (1) Therefore, in St. John's view, to act in a Christian manner is to act as Christ would, with the same intentions and dispositions as He, or, to use the Saint's phrase, "in His spirit."

Consequently he invites us to pray with the dispositions that Jesus had when praying; when confessing, to permeate ourselves with those feelings of hatred for sin which filled His soul during the Agony in the Garden; when assisting at Mass, to unite ourselves with the dispositions of both priest and Victim. And so, in all our labours, in our recreation, our goings and comings, and in even our commonest actions such as going to bed or getting up, sleeping or eating, we ought, in his opinion, to raise up our hearts to Jesus and to conform ourselves to the sentiments which animated Him when performing the same actions.

"Our Holy Redeemer," he wrote in Le Coeur admirable, "desires to transform Himself into us and to transform us into Himself.... In His mercy . . . He would associate us with Him and make us His cooperators in the great work of this marvellous transformation. That is why He gives this commandment to all Christians: Pone me ut signaculum super cor tuum, ut signaculum super brachium tuum:(1) imprint upon yourself exteriorly and interiorly a living image of my interior and exterior life. Notice that Our Redeemer did not say: 'Put my seal upon your heart and upon your arm,' but rather: 'Put me myself as a seal upon your heart and upon your arm. As I am the image of my Father and the divine character of His substance, let your heart also be a living image of me, let it live with my life, let it be animated with my spirit, let it be filled with my sentiments, and be embraced by my love and charity. And put me also as a seal upon your arm, i.e., let your exterior be a portrait of my exterior, of my modesty, my humility, my sweetness, my affability, let it copy the mortification of my senses and of the holiness that was always manifested in my exterior deportment.' " (2)

F. UNION WITH JESUS

Between the Christian life and the life of Jesus, St. John marks out in addition to the ties formed by dependence and conformity others which it is important to study because of the practical consequences that follow from them. These fresh ties or relationships are those of society and union with Jesus.

(1) Cant. vii, 6.

(2). OEuvres complètes, VII, pp. 228 sq.

To grasp thoroughly this new aspect of Christian life we must recall once more that Christians are members of a moral body, or, as we generally say, of a mystical body of which Christ is the head. Now in a moral body it is obvious that each member has his own life and his own activities; and yet the life of each is associated with the life of the others and especially with that of the head. But in addition to this, each member, and especially the head, acts in the name and to the advantage of all, so that both head and members work in concert, mutually supporting each other and thereby contributing to their reciprocal perfection.

The Communion of Saints.

That is precisely what happens in the supernatural order. Though its principle and rule is Jesus, the Christian life is no less our own personal life, as the Council of Trent declares.<sup>(1)</sup> We have it by the Saviour's liberality, but it is ours and it is we who are primarily interested in its preservation and development. But our spiritual life does not unfold itself in solitary isolation; it is intimately bound up with that of all the faithful, and especially with that of Jesus, the divine Head of whom we are members.

Whether we are aware of it or not, when we act in a Christian manner it is not merely in our own name that we act, but also in the name of Christ, as His representatives, His ambassadors, and the continuators of His life, and our action profits Him. Not that it adds anything to the fullness of His personal life or perfects

(1). «Unica formalis causa (justificationis) est justitia Dei, non quia ipse justus est, sed quia justos nos facit, qua videlicet ab eo donati ... vere justi nominamur et sumus, justitiam in nobis recipientes, unusquisque suam secundum mensuram, quam Spiritus Sanctus partitur singulis prout vult.» Conc. Him in Himself, but it procures for Him, outside Himself, that extension of life and complement of perfection which the head finds in members that are obedient to its influence. It is in this sense that the Church is called by St. Paul the fullness of Christ, and that we all meet, in his phrase, in the perfection of the Divine Master.<sup>(1)</sup>

But, in return, the whole life of Jesus turns to our advantage. As the religious Head of all humanity, He has associated His members with all the acts of His life and has caused them to benefit by the holiness with which He accomplished them. "The Saviour," says Bossuet in his Reflections on the Agony of Jesus Christ, "charged Himself not only with the sins, but also with all the interests, obligations, and duties of His children.... Their agony was, on the Cross, distinctly present to the eyes of His Heart: He foresaw the nature of the illness from which they must die; and, as He knew well how greatly the pains and symptoms of a violent or sudden illness would, with the senses, hamper the highest faculties of the soul and make them weak and powerless in their prostration, how can we gauge the measure the extent and the force of the charity with which He regarded their agony as inseparable from His own? All that He then did, He did as a fulfilment of their obligations and as doing what they would not be able to do when their time came. He offered on behalf of His children all His agony and its consequences, by a movement of love which He communicated to them for their profit if they should be in such a condition as to be able to share in it, and if their obscured reason made them incapable of actually entering into His dispositions. He made this act of love on their behalf in the eyes of His Father so as to assist them in their helplessness."(1)

And what Bossuet says of the Agony of Our Lord must be extended to apply to all the conditions and actions of His life on earth. Always and everywhere He acted in His capacity as our head and in the name of the members of His mystical Body as well as in His own personal name. And that is why (as well as in order to give us an example to follow in every situation that can arise) the Divine Master deigned to experience all the phases of human life and to subject Himself to all its necessities. He wanted in His own person to sanctify our whole life, and to supply for our insufficiency by rendering to the Father, for Himself and for us, the particular duties demanded by the various conditions of human life.

We profit by all the actions of Christ.

St. John took great pleasure in the thought of this. He often recurs to it in Le Royaume de Jésus, but especially does he insist on it in the meditations that he invites us to make on the subject of our birth and baptism, and in those that he proposes as a preparation for death. For it is, in fact, at the two (1). In his booklet, L'École française (p. 11), M. Letourneau compares the ideas on death held respectively by St. Francis de Sales and by Bossuet, and expresses himself thus: -Proceeding by comparison, read first St. Francis' meditation on Death in The Devout Life. There you will find wise reflections on the uncertainty of the time of our death, on the parting we must then make from relations and friends, on the decay of the body, and on the necessity of being converted and of abandoning oneself to God. It is all most judicious and practical. But then see the very different tone taken by Bossuet, who tells you that you must imitate Jesus in His death, which was the supreme sacrifice of human nature." The ideas of Bossuet are those of all the French school, and they are to be found in Le Royaume de Jésus, VII, n. Xviii- xxxi.

extremes of our span of life that we have the most need of finding in Jesus a source whence to supplement our helplessness. The child can do nothing, and generally the dying cannot do much. What a joy, then, to know that Jesus, on entering the world, consecrated to the Father not only the beginning of His own life but also the beginning of ours! What a consolation to know that if sickness prevent us in our last moments from reflecting on God, Jesus has in advance accepted death in our name and has placed our soul with His own within the hands of our common Father! And so it is also with all the rest of our life; for, as St. John tells us, «since the office of the head is to perform all his actions on His own behalf and on behalf of his members,» (1) Our Lord in His prayers, His works, and His sufferings acted for us as well as for Himself, and thereby He made good in advance the deficiencies and imperfections that are in all our works. The Divine Master Himself taught this truth one day to St. Margaret Mary when He said: "I make you heiress of my Heart and of all its treasures both in this world and for all eternity, permitting you to make use of it according to your desires.... It will make reparation for, and supply for, all your failings and will acquit you of your obligations." (2)

In order to share in this divine assistance by which the Saviour makes good our deficiencies it suffices, strictly speaking, to be habitually united to Him by sanctifying grace; for the smallest degree of grace makes us living members of Christ, and so long as they are not separated from him, the members always profit, even without their knowledge, by what is done by their head.(1)

(2). Vie et OEuvres de la Sainte (Gauthey), I, p. 173.

However, actual union with Jesus Christ remarkably enlarges the channel by which His favours reach us, and this union St. John incessantly recommended to his disciples. He advised them never to lose sight of the Divine Master, to consider themselves in everything as His members, and to have recourse to every kind of pious method for living and dying with Him. (2)

First means of bringing about
union.

The first means that he points out for thus associating our actions with those of Jesus is that of reminding ourselves in the the various circumstances of our lives of what Christ did for us in similar circumstances, so that we may not merely conform our conduct to His but also identify ourselves with everything that He did in our name. Thus, since when offering Himself to His Father at His entry into the world He at the same time offered each of the members of His mystical Body as so many victims ready to be sacrificed for His glory, it is our duty to accept and to ratify this oblation of our lives that He made to God the Father. And so we find Père Eudes addressing Christ thus: "O my divine Head, in Thy temporal birth Thou hast offered for me to Thy Father all the duties that I should have offered to Him in my own, and Thou hast practised the acts and exercises that I should have practised. With all my heart I consent and adhere to all that Thou didst then do for me; I ratify and approve it with all my will, and I desire to sign it with the last drop of my blood. "(1)

effecting the same.

Next the Saint reminds us that the life of Jesus belongs to us, and that we can use it as our own for fulfilling our obligations. In actual fact in giving Himself to us Our Lord conferred on us a real right over all His works. Besides, He is our head and we are His members. Now, the head and the members make but one, and even as the head can dispose at its will of what belongs to its members, so in the same way the members can make use of what belongs to the head. Jesus, therefore, is ours, and we can always offer His external works and internal dispositions to His Father, thereby supplementing the poverty of our homage and making reparation for the multitude of our failings. Listen to Père Eudes on this point: "I well know what I will do. I have a Jesus who has in Himself an infinite treasury of virtues, merits, and holy works, and who has been given to me to be my treasure, my virtue, my sanctification, my redemption and my reparation. I will offer Him to the Eternal Father, to the Holy Spirit, to the Blessed Virgin, to all the Angels and to all the Saints in reparation and satisfaction for all the sins of which I have been guilty in their regard. O Holy Father, O Divine Spirit, I offer you all the love and honour that my Jesus gave You throughout His life by all His divine thoughts, words and deeds, by the divine use He made of all the parts of His body and soul, by the virtues which He exercised, and by all the sufferings that He bore, in satisfaction for all the offences that I have committed against You in all my life. '(2)

So convinced was Père Eudes of the reality of the rights that Christ has given us over His Person and His life, and also over the person and life of every member of His mystical Body, that he believed we can make use of the heart, the soul, and all the powers of the Divine Master and of His members to render to God the cult of adoration and of love which His infinite goodness demands. And so, after urging us to repeat as a chaplet the following words which are the practical expression of the first of God's commandments, and which he later inserted in the Ave, Cor sanctissimum: "I love Thee, O my God, with all my heart, with all my soul, and with all my strength," he goes on to give us this commentary:

"In saying the words 'with all my heart' we must understand it of the Heart of Jesus, of that of the Blessed Virgin, and of the hearts of all the angels and saints in heaven and on earth, which all together have but one single heart with the Most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, by reason of the union that subsists between all these hearts. And that Heart is ours, for St. Paul assures us that everything without exception is ours: Omnia vestra sunt; (1) and consequently we can and must make use of it wherewith to love God." (2)

It is unnecessary to point out the grandeur and beauty of these views. They surprise us a little at first because in these days we are accustomed to restrain our relations with Christ. We see in Him only the Redeemer who has made satisfaction for our sins, and the God who has a right to our adoration; whereas He is, in addition, the Head whose life must be united to ours in order to cover our failings and to give us the perfection that will make us pleasing in the eyes of the Heavenly Father.

Third means for the same end.

A last means of benefiting by the merits of Christ and the saints is to address ourselves directly to them, begging them to make reparation for all our iniquities and to glorify God in our place. On this, Père Eudes writes: "This is the most pleasing prayer that we can make them, and to none other do they hearken more willingly." (1) It assures us a special part in the love and the praises that they continually render to God, for this God of goodness regards as coming from us the adoration that is rendered to Him at our request and in our name. (2) St. John especially urges us to end all our devotions with a prayer of this kind. He would have us, for example, at the end of our morning prayers ask Jesus and His saints to make good all the faults of which we have been guilty during this holy exercise and to continue it in our name throughout the day. And similarly in the evening, when we go to rest, he desires us to invite them to glorify God on our behalf while we sleep through the night. (3)

As regards himself, the Saint feared lest he should appear egoistic in his pious practices, and that is why, following the example of Christ, he offered all his devotions not only for himself but for others. He considered this a means of giving God more glory and of enabling his neighbours to profit by whatever good he (St. John) should do. Moreover, he most strongly recommends this eminently Catholic practice to us (1) which he had learnt from Cardinal de Bérulle, and which, moreover, Our Lord Himself taught us when He showed us in the Our Father that we should not separate our own interests from those of our brethren.

CHAPTER IV

PRAYER

A. PRAYER IN GENERAL

ST. JOHN did not write any separate book on prayer, but the few pages devoted to the subject in Le Royaume de Jésus enable us to give an account of his ideas on it. Moreover, that book is full of prayers and meditations that make it, in M. Joly's words, "a manual of prayer" and show us the theoretical ideas of the author reduced to practice.

In that volume the Saint uses the word "prayer" in its widest sense so that he applies it to every kind of prayer, whatever may be the acts of which it is composed and the manner in which it is offered. In his eyes spiritual meditation and the reading of good books are true prayers for they arouse in us sentiments of piety and acts of love of God.

Prayer is often defined as a request made of God for things that we need, and some Christians restrict prayer to this limit. Such a prayer is certainly good, and the Divine Master recommends it in the Gospels: "Ask and you shall receive," He said to His apostles, "seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you";<sup>(1)</sup> and on another occasion he reproached them for having made no requests: "Hitherto you have not asked anything in my name. Ask, and you shall receive."<sup>(1)</sup>

(1). Matt. vii, 7.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

St. John's definition of prayer.

But, excellent as the prayer of petition may be, it is not the whole of prayer, nor even its main element. St. John gives us a much wider idea of prayer which he takes from Catholic tradition. "Prayer," he says, "is a respectful and loving elevation of the mind and heart to God; a sweet and holy communication of the Christian soul with its God."<sup>(2)</sup>

As a rule, in actual fact, a Christian speaks to God in prayer in the style of the Our Father, and God replies by putting into his mind good thoughts, or acts of faith, confidence, love, and the like. But it may happen in prayer that the mind and heart are raised to God with a more or less active feeling of adoration and love which finds no expression in either external or internal words, and yet this is most certainly prayer. And that is why the Saint begins by telling us that prayer is "a respectful and loving elevation of the mind and heart to God."

After defining prayer St. John goes on to describe in detail the elements that go to compose it: "In prayer," he says, "the Christian soul considers and contemplates (3) God in His divine perfections, in His mysteries

(1). John xvi, 24.

(2). St. Augustine, St. John Damascene, and many subsequent writers define prayer as Ascensus mentis ad Deum, but in adopting this definition St. John Eudes develops it in his own way. He remarks that it is a respectful and loving elevation, and an elevation of the heart as well as of the mind, and this indeed is how everyone considers it. And the second part of his definition (an intercourse with God) is also classical, and is to be found in St. Francis de Sales' Treatise of the Love of God, as well as in the writings of St. Teresa and many others. On the idea of prayer, see Bremond, Histoire du sentiment religieux, VII, pp. 5 sq.

(3). He is not here dealing, at any rate exclusively, with infused contemplation. St. John often uses the word contemplation in Le Royaume de Jésus, but in its widest sense. By it he means attentive consideration (apparently without reasoning) of the divine perfections or of the mysteries of Our Lord and of His Holy Mother.

PRAYER

and in His works; it adores Him, blesses Him, loves Him and glorifies Him, giving itself to Him and humbling itself before Him by reason of its sins and ingratitude; and it begs Him to have mercy and to teach it to model itself upon Him, imitating His virtues and perfections. Finally, it asks everything it needs for serving and loving God."

These few lines, inserted almost accidentally in one of the chapters of Le Royaume de Jésus, really contain the germ of a complete theory of prayer, to which we will return when dealing with the subject of mental prayer. For the moment we may merely note that according to St. John prayer is before all and above all an exercise the object of which is to render to God that tribute of adoration and love, of satisfaction and thanksgiving, to which He has a right. It is only when he has drily performed these duties that a Christian may turn to his own needs and ask for their fulfilment, and he does so less from self-interest than from a desire to be able to love and to serve God. For, as St. John (like Cardinal de Bérulle and his followers) frequently reminds us: "the interests of God must be dearer to us than our own." (1) Accordingly prayer in his view is profoundly theocentric.

The theocentric character of prayer.

Then the Saint portrays the excellence of prayer so defined. "Prayer," he says, "is a participation in the life of the angels and saints, in the life of Jesus and His most holy Mother, and even in the life of God Himself and of the Three Divine Persons.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

For the life of the angels and saints, of Christ and His Blessed Mother, is nothing else but a continual exercise of prayer and of contemplation, since they are unceasingly occupied in contemplating, glorifying and loving God, and asking for us whatever may be necessary for us. And the Three Divine Persons are perpetually occupied in contemplating, glorifying and loving each other, all of which acts are the primary and principal elements of prayer."

Those last words, intentionally placed last, stress still more, if possible, the theocentric character of prayer as conceived by our Saint, and show us that in his view it is primarily and principally an exercise of contemplation and love, resulting from the charity with which our hearts are flooded by the Holy Ghost. Seen in this light it is truly a participation in the life of the angels and saints and a foretaste of the life of heaven.

"Prayer," continues the Saint, "is perfect felicity, sovereign happiness, and truly heaven upon earth. By this divine exercise the Christian soul is united to God, who is its centre, end, and sovereign good. Therein it possesses Him and is possessed by Him; therein it fulfils its duties to Him, its homage, its adoration, and its love, and therein it receives from Him its lights and blessings, and the thousand manifestations of the exceeding great love that God has for it. Therein, finally, God takes His delight in us in accordance with His own words: 'My delight is to be with the children of men,'<sup>(1)</sup> and makes us understand by experience that true joy and perfect happiness are to be found in God, a hundred or even a thousand years of the false plea sure of the world not being worth a single moment of the real delights that God gives to souls who put all their happiness in conversing with Him by means of prayer."<sup>(1)</sup>

(1). Prov. viii, 31.

PRAYER

Of course prayer has its difficulties and trials, as Père Eudes well knew: he devoted a chapter of Le Royaume de Jésus to spiritual dryness and afflictions. But whether it be easy or laborious, delightful or arid, prayer is always an exercise of praise and love of God, and even when we are deprived of the sweetness of sensible devotion the Saint would have us find all our happiness in conversing with God in prayer.

The necessity of prayer.

He adds that prayer is "the true and proper function of a man and of a Christian, for man is created only for God and for union with Him, and a Christian is only on earth in order there to continue what Christ did while He was upon earth." Therefore prayer is the basis of a truly human life, and above all the foundation of a Christian life. It is true that if we are to be really Christian we must add to prayer the practice of virtue and the fulfilment of our daily duties; but it is prayer which makes us love and practise virtue and gives us the necessary courage to face the demands of duty however formidable these may be.

And the Saint concludes with this pressing admonition: "That is why as forcibly as I possibly can I exhort you who read these lines and conjure you in the name of God, that since our most lovable Jesus deigns to find His delight in being with us and in conversing with us by means of prayer, you do not deprive Him of His pleasure, but find out by experience how true is the Holy Spirit's declaration that 'her conversation hath no bitterness, nor her company any tediousness, but joy and gladness.'<sup>(1)</sup> Look on this matter as the first, the most necessary, the most pressing and most important of all your affairs, and free yourself so far as possible from other less necessary affairs so as to give as much time as you possibly can to this, especially in the morning, in the evening, and shortly before dinner."<sup>(2)</sup>

B. MENTAL PRAYER

Mental prayer is internal prayer which consists, not in the recitation of a formula, but in purely interior acts in which language has none but a purely accidental part, as, for instance, happens when we make use of a formula to arouse our attention or to stimulate our devotion.

It has always been held in high honour by pious souls, and especially in religious communities; but it is since the fifteenth century that the custom has arisen in many institutes of devoting a fixed time every day to the regular practice of mental prayer; and it was for the purpose of helping souls to fulfil this duty fruitfully that there grew up what we now call "methods of prayer."

St. John considered mental prayer of capital importance, and called it "the mother and nurse of true piety;"(3) indeed in his Memorial de la vie ecclésiastique he boldly declared it to be "as necessary for the soul of a Christian, and much more so for that of a priest and pastor, as is material bread for the body."(4) So, too, in his Bon

Confesseur, after showing that piety is indispensable to o.ll who propose to hear confessions ' he adds these strong words: "But what is piety? If you would be acquainted with it and possess it you must practise mental prayer. Then you will soon know and possess it. But I declare to you that so long as you do not know by experience what mental prayer is you will not know what true piety is and you will not be fit to hear confessions. " ( 1 )

Fruits of prayer.

He is no less outspoken in his Prédicateur apostolique: "It is in prayer," he says, "that God so enlightens our minds that we are able to see the importance and the beauty of Christian virtue; it is therein, too, that He possesses Himself of our hearts so that we may taste of and love that virtue. And when we are fully persuaded of this and powerfully influenced by it, then we have a wonderful power of making it intelligible to others and of firmly impressing it in their hearts. The truths with which God enlightens our minds, and by the consideration of which we are moved to serve and to love Him, have an incomparably greater power of inflaming our hearts than have those which we derive solely from books without having meditated and pondered upon them before God. There is almost as much difference between these two sets of truths as there is between well-cooked and well-seasoned dishes and those that are totally unprepared."(2)

He considered that ecclesiastical and religious communities absolutely require mental prayer, and that without it they cannot survive: "Without prayer," he one day wrote to the superior of one of his houses, "it

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

is impossible for a Congregation to subsist in the spirit of piety and virtue which is necessary for it if it is to be pleasing to God and useful to the Church." And he added: "There is little difference between making half an hour's prayer and not making it, yet nothing is more necessary for ecclesiastics, and I know of no seminary in which they do not make an hour's mental prayer. (1)

In Le Royaume de Jésus also the Saint strongly recommends pious souls to practise mental prayer. "This manner of prayer," he tells them, "is so holy, so useful and so full of blessings that its value cannot be expressed in words. And therefore, if God draws you to it and gives you this grace, you ought to thank Him as having given you a very great gift. If He has not yet given you this gift, beg Him to do so and for your part do everything you can to correspond to His grace and to practise this holy exercise which God will teach you more clearly than will all the books and all the teachers in the world if you will cast yourself at His feet with humility, confidence and purity of heart."(2)

(2). These words show that the Saint does not attach very much importance to treatises on, and consequently to methods of prayer. Not that he despises them. He advises his priests to give retreatants and beginners in the spiritual life the guidance they require for commencing the practice of prayer, and he even suggests to them that they should give them the sixth volume of Louis of Grenada's Memorial of the Christian Life. He also advises that beginners should be given subjects of prayer suited to their capabilities, and he would have them give an account of their prayer. But in spite of all this he only attaches secondary importance to these means of training. For him as, indeed, for everyone else, the true master of prayer is the Holy Spirit, and it is for Him to teach us to make it well. Cf. Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, p. 6, ch. ii; and p. 13, ch. 1v.

PRAYER

The nature of mental prayer.

St. John does not dwell at any length on the nature of mental prayer, but the few lines given to the subject in Le Royaume de Jésus have a clarity and precision that leave nothing to be desired. "In mental prayer," he says, "the soul occupies itself interiorly with God, taking as its subject one of the divine perfections, or some mystery, virtue, or saying of the Son of God, or something that He has done or is now still doing in the order of glory, grace, or nature, in His Holy Mother, in the Saints, in His Church, or in the natural world. The soul first uses its understanding to consider quietly, attentively and perseveringly the truths to be discovered in this selected subject that are capable of exciting it to love God and to detest its sins. Then it causes the heart and the will to produce diverse acts and affections of adoration, praise, love, humility, contrition, oblation and the like, together with the resolution of fleeing from evil and doing good, according as the Spirit of God shall suggest to it." (1)

With all their brevity these few lines plainly show the Saint's mind on the subject of prayer; they tell us what should be its subject and of what acts it should be composed. Let us glance, then, at the author's teaching on both these points. In the first place he would have us take as the subject of our prayer one of the divine perfections, a mystery, a virtue, or a saying of the Incarnate Word, or else consider how He operates in His saints, in His Church, or in the natural world. In brief, he would have us occupy ourselves in our meditations with God and the Incarnate Word. He seems to exclude purely moral subjects, which instead of draw ing souls to God and His love, throw it back upon itself and plunge it into preoccupation with its own personal interests. Nor would he have us limit ourselves in our prayers to considering in themselves the Christian virtues, the evangelical truths or the example of the Saints, but he wants us always to consider them in their relations with the Incarnate Word. In his eyes the Christian virtues are a participation in the virtues of Jesus, the Gospel truths are words of instruction that have fallen from His lips, and the examples left by the saints are the fruits of Christ's sanctifying action in each of them; and it was in this way that he was accustomed to consider them in his works and his letters. And thereby we see that his views on prayer were in perfect harmony with his teaching on devotion to the Incarnate Word and the life of Christ within us.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Acts of the intellect and the will.

As for the acts that go to make up prayer: these are of two kinds, springing respectively from the intellect and the will. It is true that, strictly speaking, prayer consists in the affections of the will acting under the influence of grace; but the will is a blind faculty, and if it is to be attached to what is good the intellect must present that good to it and make it recognise it. And so we should begin our prayer with acts of the intellect, eluding our understanding," as he says, "to consider attentively and perseveringly the truths it discovers in those subjects that are capable of exciting it to love God and to detest its sins, which truths it discovers in the subject under consideration." Thus we should not dwell on purely speculative truths: to do so would be to make our meditation a study, whereas it ought to be an exercise Of Piety. The only truths which should engage our attention are those which can move us to love and serve God, and these we should consider with gentle and insistent attention; gentle, because prayer should be made quietly, without striving or fatigue; and insistent, because otherwise the heart will remain cold and will soon stray off to other matters.

Later on we shall see what the Saint asks us to consider in the mysteries of the Incarnate Word, but for the present we may note that he does not ask of us wise and profound considerations, but very simple and easy reflections. Prayer, in fact, is within the grasp of all pious souls; provided that they know the mysteries and the teaching of the Incarnate Word they know enough to be able to make first-rate prayer. "O Jesus, my Lord," writes our Saint, "Thou art entirely lovable, infinitely lovable, and infinitely worthy of being loved. It is enough, my God, that I have this knowledge. What need have I of great learning, of internal illuminations and considerations? It suffices me to know that my Jesus is entirely lovable, and that there is nothing in Him that is not worthy of being infinitely loved. Let my mind, then, be content with this knowledge; but let my heart never weary of loving Him who can never be sufficiently loved. " (1)

There are to be found in the Saint's works, and especially in Le Royaume de Jésus, some meditations complete in themselves, which are models of mental prayer, and it is obvious at a glance that their "points" are extremely simple and well within the range of all minds. This is the case, for example, with the meditations

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

tions set out in Le Royaume de Jésus for each day of the week and for devotions on the subject of baptism. Unfortunately, for want of understanding these principles many souls are never trained to prayer, for they try to make use of learned reflections which are beyond their capability and which have nothing in common with prayer.(1)

As for the acts of the will demanded by prayer, they may be reduced to three. The first is an act of adoration united to acts of praise, thanksgiving, reparation, and (especially) love. We have to adore Jesus in all His mysteries, in all His virtues and works, because He is our God and therefore always has a right to the supreme worship owed by the creature to his Creator. We must praise and glorify Him because of His infinite perfections, we must thank Him for His benefactions and above all for the glory that He procures His Father; we must ask His pardon for our ingratitude and our sins, and lastly protest that we love Him with our whole heart and that we want to use all that we are and all that we have for the purpose of loving him.

(1). "God be praised!" said St. Vincent de Paul one day, repeating these three words four or five times over, for he had just been told by M. Coglée, a priest of his society, that he devoted himself in his prayer chiefly to making acts of affection. St. Vincent greatly praised this method and said that that was the way in which we must act in meditation, not beguiling ourselves by looking for reasonings, but arousing the affections by acts of love of God, of humility, of sorrow for sin, and the like. For of what use are reasonings to us when we are persuaded of the truth of the matter on which we are meditating? "Oh," he said, "how I wish that the company (of St. Sulpice) would make a practice of promptly following the lights given by God and not leave these for the purpose of beguiling themselves by looking for reasons that are useless to us since we have no need of them! ...I beg all priests to ask this grace for the company to-day in their Masses, and all the clerical students and brethren in the seminary to pray for it when they are assisting at Mass and receiving Holy Communion. And let their second intention in communicating be to obtain this grace from God for our little company." Entretiens, Vol. XI, p. 401. Quoted by Pourrat: La spiritualité chrétienne, III, p. 584.

The second act is what the Saint calls oblation, and by that he means not only the giving and consecration of self to Jesus, but also and more particularly an act by which, renouncing all power of disposing of ourselves or of acting of our own accord, we give ourselves up to Him entirely, so that He can take possession of us, eradicate in us everything opposed to His influence, make us sharers in His mysteries and virtues, and guide us in everything as the head guides the members that it vivifies. It is, in short, that "adherence- so strongly recommended by Bérulle and his school. To this oblation is naturally added a request to Jesus to take possession of our heart and to establish therein His life and virtues. It is true that this request is already virtually included in the oblation of which we speak, but St. John almost always makes it the subject of a formal act, as for instance in the Ave Cor, (1) and in many of the prayers that he prints in Le Royaume de Jésus and in the Manuel that he wrote for his congregation of priests.

The last act involved in prayer is a resolution of fleeing from evil and of doing good, imitating the example of the Divine Master and putting His holy teaching into practice. This shows us that the Saint had the same view of prayer as had Père de Condren, M. Olier and all the followers of Cardinal de Bérulle. (2)

(1). In the Ave Cor we find after acts of adoration, praise, thanksgiving and love, these words: "Tibi cor nostrum offerimus, donamus, consecramus, immolamus; accipe et posside illud totum, et purifica et illumina et sanctifica ut in ipso vivas et regnes et nunc et semper et in saecula saeculorum. Amen." This is that oblation or adherence which we have just explained.

(2). On the method of prayer followed by the French school, see Règlements de l'Oratoire in Bérulle's OEuvres (Migne col. 1638-1643); also the Avis to Bourgoing's Meditations sur les vérités et excellences de Jésus-Christ (reprinted by Bremond in his Introduction à l'étude de la prière); Olier: Catéchisme chrétien pour la vie intérieure, II, vi-viii; Introduction à la vie et aux vertus chrétiennes, ch. iv; Amelotte: Vie du Père de Condren, 11, ch. xviii; and Letourneau: La méthode d'oraison. mentale du Séminaire de Saint-Sulpice. In this last book Letourneau quotes a large number of the texts that we have just indicated. In the Sulpician system oblation or adherence is called «communion» and the resolutions are styled «co-operation»; but if the names are different, the doctrine is identically the same.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

But in that there is no cause for surprise, for prayer, as taught by this school, is but a putting into practice in our relations with God of the principles that sum up St. John's spiritual teaching.

We might add that the various elements in prayer unite and interact throughout its whole course, so that in St. John's view there is no necessity to make our considerations and our affective acts two distinct matters. The intellect and the will have to work together, as they do in the meditations given in Le Royaume de Jésus. Nor is it necessary to separate the various acts of the will so as to make them in the order we have just shown. For they also combine and intermingle, and we may even say that in practice each of them calls up the other two, implicitly contains them and can suffice for the making of a good prayer.

How to meditate on the mysteries:
seven
considerations.

Let us now turn to the mysteries which St. John says must be "the subject of our contemplation and adoration,- "the object of all our pious exercises," the "daily bread and nourishment of our spiritual life," and consequently the ordinary subject-matter of our mental prayer. To help us in meditating on these mysteries the Saint points out seven things which we have to consider and to honour in each of them.

PRAYER

The first consideration:
the external

Of these the first is the body or external aspect of the mystery, which St. John explains as being "all that externally happened in the mystery. For example, the external aspect of the mystery of Our Lord's birth includes the nakedness, poverty, cold, helplessness and insignificance in which He was born, the baby clothes with which He was covered, His lying on the manger straw between the ass and the ox, His tears and infant cries, the little movements of His sacred hands and feet, the first use He made of His eyes, His mouth, and His other senses, His repose upon the breast of His Blessed Mother, the refreshment He drew thence, the sweet kisses and embraces that He received from her and from St. Joseph, the visit of the shepherds, and everything else that was said and done exteriorly in the stable at Bethlehem on that night that saw the birth of the Son of God."

Père Eudes then adds: "All that deserves to be considered and honoured, for there is nothing of small moment in the mysteries of Jesus, in them everything is important, divine, and adorable. And if the Son of God takes the trouble to give His mind and His Heart (which, it would seem, should only take note of what is divine) to considering and counting our every step and even the hairs of our heads, as He Himself assures us; and if He writes in His Heart and preserves as treasures the least actions that we perform for Him, so as to honour and glorify them for ever in heaven: with what care, in that case, should we apply our minds and hearts to considering, adoring and glorifying the smallest occurrences in His life and mysteries since there is nothing in these that is not infinitely great and admirable, and which does not deserve infinite honour and adoration."

The second: the interior spirit of
the mystery.

The second feature that we must consider in each mystery is, in St. John's words, the « interior spirit of which is the particular virtue, power the mystery. and brace in that mystery, proper and peculiar to it, each mystery having its own particular virtue and spirit. Included also in this interior spirit are the thoughts, and intentions, the affections, sentiments, dispositions, and interior occupations with which it was performed; in a word all that passed interiorly in regard to it in the mind, the heart, and the holy soul of Jesus when He performed that mystery, as well as in the minds and hearts of all who were there present.»

"It is this," the Saint proceeds, "that must be chiefly considered and honoured in the mysteries of Jesus: and yet it is precisely this that is least considered and honoured. For many content themselves with contemplating the exterior body without passing on to the interior spirit of these mysteries, though this last is the principle, the foundation, the substance, the life and the truth of the mystery, whereas the external body is but the shell, the accidental accessory and appearance of the mystery. The external body is fugitive and temporal, but the interior spirit to be found in each mystery is permanent and eternal."(!0 (1). These views on the interior spirit of the various are common to all spiritual writers of the French school. "They love," says M. Letourneau, «to penetrate the very interior of the sensible mysteries of Jesus, contemplating its life of supernatural grace, and examining in it the marvels of that divine life which flows from the head into the members of the mystical body of Jesus Christ." L'École française, p. 7. Cf. Bérulle in Migne, col. 1052 sq.; and Bremond: L'École française, p. 70 sq.

The other considerations

The third thing to be honoured in Our Lord's mysteries is composed of the effects that He has produced and still continually produces by each of them.

The fourth comprises the particular designs entertained by Jesus in each of His mysteries.

The fifth is the share and the special part taken by the Blessed Virgin in each mystery. «Forshe,» says St. John, "has a quite particular and extraordinary part in all her Son's states and mysteries. She alone has a greater share therein than all the angels, the saints, and the whole world put together; for the Son of God worked in her greater and more wonderful things by each of His mysteries than He worked in all the angels, in all the saints and in all the rest of the world. Moreover, Our Blessed Lady has by herself given greater honour to all her Son's mysteries than have all the angels, the saints, and the rest of the world together."

The sixth thing that we have to consider in His mysteries is the part played therein by the angels and saints particularly connected with each mystery.

Lastly, the seventh matter to be considered and revered is the singular and special part that we have in these mysteries. "For we," says St. John, "have a quite special part in every one of Our Lord's mysteries, inasmuch as in each of them the Son of God had some idea, some plan, or some particular aspect of His love to reveal for each of us. He desired therein to communi cate certain graces to us and to give us certain special favours both on earth and in heaven."(1)

Obviously the Saint does not seek to persuade us to consider all these things in our meditations. From them every one is free to choose those which most attract him or correspond to his particular needs and to concentrate his thoughts and his love on these. And in due proportion it goes without saying that these principles equally apply to other possible subjects of prayer, especially to the mysteries of the Blessed Virgin, the Christian virtues, and the teachings of Our Divine Master.

Prayer is
love.

Such is the view of prayer given us by St. John and the method of practising it that he proposes, and we have already said that these are also the views of the whole French School. Prayer, for all writers of this School, is before all else adoration and love: it is profoundly theocentric. Moreover, it is a means of increasing the life of Jesus within us, and that is why all these writers stress the necessity of oblation or adherence of self to Jesus, as explained by Cardinal de Bérulle. But since participation in the life of Jesus demands real efforts to permeate ourselves with His thoughts and virtues, it implies serious resolutions that will ensure its efficacy.

We may add that prayer, as conceived by the followers of Cardinal de Bérulle, gives little opportunity to the imagination or to the discursive element. All it demands of the intellect is certain considerations entirely based on the doctrinal information given us by the Gospels without any admixture of the artificial or the arbitrary. The intellect need only be filled with the spirit of prayer in order that the heart, in its turn, may thence derive an increase of love and of generosity in the service of God.

C. THE DIVINE OFFICE

In the opinion of St. John vocal prayer is scarcely less useful than mental prayer, provided that the heart prays as well as the tongue, in which case prayer is, in fact, both vocal and mental. But if they are recited out of mere routine and without attention, vocal prayers leave us more dissipated and colder than we were before we began them: and that is why, apart from those that are of obligation, the Saint advises us to make but few, and to accustom ourselves to making these in a holy fashion, with great attention and application, engaging the mind and heart in various holy thoughts and affections while the tongue speaks.(1)

The principal vocal prayer, at least for priests and religious, is, of course, the Divine Office, and St. John made it the subject of a special book which was never printed and which has now been lost. But he also treats of it at some length in Le Royaume de Jésus, (2) and from this book Pierre Hérambourg drew all that he tells us of the way in which the Saint recited his Office. The author stresses the preparation that is necessary if we are to say it in a holy fashion:

"The chief reason," he says, "why we are very often worried by distractions and useless and extravagant thoughts in our vocal prayers is that our minds must always be occupied by some thoughts, whether good or

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

bad. Therefore, if evil and useless thoughts are to be excluded, we must take great care from the beginning of our prayer to give our minds and hearts entirely to Jesus so that He may fully possess them; and for our part we must accustom ourselves to filling our minds with good thoughts and holy affections, being careful not to let ourselves perform so holy an action slackly and imperfectly, or out of mere habit and routine rather than from piety and devotion."

Dignity and value of the Divine Office.

With this object in view he invites us to remind our selves that recitation of the Divine Office is «one of the holiest actions performed in heaven and on earth. So grand and lofty is it that not only does it continually and eternally occupy the vast host of angels and saints in heaven as well as the Queen of Angels and Saints, the Blessed Virgin; but it also occupies through all eternity the Three Divine Persons of the Sacred Trinity who unceasingly praise, bless and glorify each other. The Divine Office is holy and divine, and consequently should be chanted or recited in a holy and divine manner, that is, with holy and divine dispositions.»

The Saint might have stressed the special nature of the Divine Office by reminding us that it is the official prayer of the Church, and he also might have insisted on its doctrinal wealth, the examples of virtue that it puts before us, and the devotional spirit of the prayers that go to comprise it. In this respect it is specially suitable for strengthening faith and piety. But he omits these considerations, some of which have a motive of self-interest, and he confines himself to the general consideration, applicable to all prayer, that recitation of the Office is a holy and divine action that must be performed in a holy fashion.

Then he reminds us that we are unworthy and incapable of carrying out this duty as it should be done, and again he exhorts us to renounce ourselves and to give ourselves to Jesus so that He may praise God in us and for us:

We are unworthy to recite it.

"Considering," he says, "the dignity and holiness of this action, acknowledge that, of yourself, you have no worthiness or capacity in you for performing it in a holy way, and that everything in you that comes from yourself is opposed to this, and even that you are quite up-worthy of presenting yourself before God and of appearing before such lofty majesty. Therefore annihilate yourself at His feet, give yourself to Jesus, and beg Him to empty you of self and to establish Himself in you, so that He Himself may perform this work, praising and glorifying His Father and Himself in you, He alone being worthy to do that. Give yourself up to the zeal and love with which He unceasingly praises His Father in heaven and on earth, beneath the earth and throughout the world. For, strictly speaking, there is but the one Jesus praising and glorifying God throughout the universe: He praises and glorifies Him eternally in heaven, by Himself and by His Holy Mother, by His angels and by His saints. So, too, He continually praises and blesses Him upon earth, by Himself in the Blessed Sacrament upon our altars, wherein He perpetually praises and adores His Father, and also by all holy souls on earth who praise God whether in public or in private. Moreover, He praises and magnifies Him in the nether regions where He is in His Divine Person and where He perpetually acts in regard to His Father even as He does in heaven. Finally, He praises and exalts Him unceasingly throughout the world, which is filled with His presence and divine majesty, and with the perpetual praises and benedictions that He everywhere renders to His Father.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

"Unite yourself with all these praises rendered by Jesus to His Father and with the Most Holy Trinity everywhere and at all times, and unite yourself also with His humility, attention, love, purity and holiness, together with all the other divine dispositions with which Jesus is ever filled in His praise of His Father."

reciting it.

And then St. John shows us «an excellent way" of saying the Divine Office. It consists in devoting the various Hours of the Office to the principal mysteries of the life of Jesus: the first nocturne to the divine life which He has from all eternity in the bosom of His Father, the second to His life in the world before the Incarnation, the third to His hidden life within Mary; Lauds may be devoted to His Sacred Childhood, Prime to His hidden and laborious life at Nazareth, Terce to His public life, Sext to His Passion, and None to His death and burial. Finally Vespers may be consecrated to His life on earth in the Eucharist and in the members of His mystical Body; and Compline to "the state and dominion that is His throughout the world, in heaven, on earth, in purgatory, in hell, in the world of nature, of grace, and of glory, over mankind, the angels and all creatures; and generally in honour of all that He has been, is, and will be in His divinity and His humanity, and of all that He has done and will do eternally in regard to His Father, Himself, the Holy Ghost, His Blessed Mother, His angels and saints, and all creatures."

"When saying each part of the Office," St. John says elsewhere, "we must apply our mind to considering that part of the life of Jesus in honour of which we are saying it; that is, we must consider what happened in Jesus during that part of His life, His thoughts and plans, affections and dispositions, the actions that He performed, the virtues He practised, His interior occupation in regard to His Father, to Himself, to the Holy Spirit, to His Blessed Mother, and to His angels and saints, and especially the thoughts, designs, and love that He entertained in regard to you in particular. We must also consider the glory and praise given Him during that part of His life by His Father, by the Holy Spirit, by His Holy Mother, and by the angels and saints."

And after considering all that passed during that part of His life, "we must," the Saint continues, "think of ourselves; and realising how remote are our lives from the holiness and perfection of that of our Head, whom we are obliged to imitate, we have to abase ourselves profoundly and to ask His pardon. Then we must give ourselves to Him so as to honour and imitate that portion of His life with the perfection that He asks of us; beg Him to imprint Himself on us and to glorify Himself in us by eradicating in us everything that could hamper His action in us; and finally we must unite ourselves with all the praises that have been given, are being given, and will be given to Him in that part of His life by the Father, the Holy Spirit, etc."

St. John then adds: "If it is part of the temporal

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

life of Jesus that we are honouring in our Office, we must, when we give ourselves to Him to honour that part of His life, offer and consecrate to Him the corresponding part of our own life in honour of that part of His; begging Him to destroy everything evil in that part of our life and to bring it about that everything in that part of our life may render glory and homage to all that passed in the corresponding part of His life. "

In fact St. John advises us to join to the recitation of the Office prayer that is purely mental and independent of the Office itself: and though he assigns a special subject to it he looks upon it in the same light as ordinary mental prayer. And this is but the view of those theologians who tell us to give our attention above all, not to the words that we pronounce (although they must be pronounced carefully), nor to their meaning, but to God to whom our prayer is addressed.

The Saint then goes on to say that this method of praying is very easy and does not lengthen the recitation of the Office. ---Notice,- he says,---that it is not necessary ... when doing all this to stop or to interrupt your recitation of the Office; for it can all be done by giving your mind to these practices while you continue to chant or recite the Office, so that whether you have much or little experience in making such interior acts you will need no extra time for this particular act. On the contrary, the time that you give to it will seem very short because of the great sweetness and fruitfulness that you will discover in thus interiorly giving your mind and heart to Jesus, who is the source of all benediction and consolation.

But the Saint also shows us another way of worthily

PRAYER

A second method.

reciting the Divine Office: as we recite each hour we can unite ourselves with the praises given to Jesus in heaven, on earth, and in the nether regions by His Father, by the Holy Ghost, by His Blessed Mother, His angels, His saints, and by all creation. And he advises that we should do it by acts similar in all due proportion to those he has just described.

For the holy recitation of the Little Office of Our Lady or of the Rosary he recommends practices of the same sort that will be found in Part VI of Le Royaume de Jésus.

D. THE HABIT OF PRAYER

How to pray always.

Yet another way of praying, as St. John tells us, consists in "performing all our actions in a Christian and holy manner, offering even the smallest of them to Our Lord when we begin them, and from time to time raising our hearts to Him as we perform these actions... For to do them in this way is to do them in the spirit of prayer and to be continually praying, thereby fulfilling the commandment of Our Lord who would have us 'pray without ceasing.'(1) This is an excellent and very simple way of being always in the presence of God.» (2)

Elsewhere the Saint returns to the same thought: "By means of the aforesaid practices, and by frequent elevations of the mind and heart to God, your whole life will belong to Jesus, all your actions will glorify Him, you will walk always before Him, and you will

(1).1 Thess. v, 17,

(2) Royaume de Jésus, 1, n. xiv.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

always be in His presence; for this is the true and the simplest means of being always in God's presence and of continually loving Him.

"I know quite well that he who is in the grace of God and who offers Him every morning all that he is about to do throughout the day, even though during the day he gives no thought to God, none the less thereby causes all his actions to glorify God (so long as they are not of themselves evil). But since Our Lord Jesus has offered for us to His Father all His actions upon earth, and thinks of us and loves us every moment, that man would need to have very little knowledge and love of Jesus to think of Him only once or twice a day. Certainly, if we truly love our Adorable Saviour we must find all our happiness in thinking of Him and in frequently raising our minds and hearts to Him, which can be done without any trouble or forcing of the mind, but quite easily and gently. For with the help of His grace which is never lacking, and with a little care and fidelity on our part, we become so accustomed to this holy practice that it almost becomes part of our nature.

Ejaculatory prayer.

"To prove that, I will tell you the true story of a priest I knew whose name is written in the book of life. This priest, by the constant exercise of this practice, reached the stage at which he could, while taking his meals, easily make acts of love of Jesus almost as many as the morsels he put in his mouth; and this he did not only without any forcing of his mind or any inconvenience or any harm to his health, but even with such facility and gentleness that it in no way prevented him from speaking and from taking charitable recreation with his neighbour whenever in company or whenever the occasion presented itself. I do not tell you this in order that you might do the same, for then you would at once say that I was asking something very difficult of you; but I tell you so that you may know the great power of a holy habit, and how wrong the world is in imagining a thousand difficulties and trials where in reality there is but charm and delight."(1)

So we see that for St. John the habit or spirit of prayer is a duty of thankfulness and a necessity of the heart. He constantly recommends it. In very truth his book Le Royaume de Jésus is nothing but an initiation into the interior life and the habit of prayer. And the same may be said of his Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique. And what the Saint so insistently recommended he himself was the first to practise; it is, in fact, perfectly clear, and Père Hérambourg definitely asserts as much, that the priest in the story just quoted is none other than the Saint himself.

E. HOLY MASS

Holy Mass, which St. Francis de Sales calls "the sun of pious exercises," is a prayer; but it is a prayer of a particular kind, for it is the sacrifice of the new law and the representation and continuation of the Sacrifice of the Cross. St. John gives several pages of Le Royaume de Jésus (2) to showing us how to assist at it with most profit. Here, as everywhere, he rests his teaching on the great principle that being members of Jesus Christ we make but one with Him:

"As soon as you leave your house to go to Mass," he
(1). Royaume de Jésus, VI, n. xix.
(2). VI, n. xxiv-xxx.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

says, "you must reflect that you are going not merely to assist or to witness, but that you are actually going to perform an action which is the most holy and divine, the greatest and most important, the loftiest and most wonderful that can be done in heaven or on earth. And reflect, too, that consequently it must be performed in a holy and sacred way, i.e. with holy and sacred dispositions, and with the utmost care and application of mind and heart, as being the most important affair on earth. I said 'you are going to perform,' for every Christian being but one with Jesus Christ, the Sovereign Priest, and consequently being a sharer in His divine Priesthood (for which reason all are called priests in Scripture), he has a right not only to assist at the Holy Sacrifice, but also to perform with the priest what the latter does, that is, to offer with him and even with Christ the Sacrifice which is offered to God on the altar. "

and victims.

A little further on the Saint reminds us: "You must remember that Christians being one are with Jesus, as the members with their head, for which reason they share in all His qualities, and Jesus in this sacrifice being both priest and victim; so, similarly, all those who assist at that Sacrifice must assist as priests or sacrificers for the purpose of offering with Christ, the Sovereign Priest, the very Sacrifice that He offers. And also they are present as holocausts and victims, making but one victim, just as they make but one priest, with Jesus Christ, and so they must be immolated and sacrificed with the same Jesus Christ to the glory of God."

The Saint then goes on to explain what we must do in our double character of priest and victim: "And therefore," he says, "since you share in the divine Priesthood of Jesus Christ and as a Christian and a member of Christ bear the name and character of priest, you must exercise that character and use the right that it gives you of offering to God, along with the priest at the altar and even with Our Lord, the Sacrifice of His Body and Blood which is offered to Him in Holy Mass. Moreover, you must offer it, so far as is possible, with the very dispositions with which it is offered to Him by Jesus Christ. And how holy and divine are those dispositions! What humility they express, what purity and holiness, what detachment from self and from all creation, what attention to God, what charity for mankind, and what love for His Father! Unite yourself by desire and intention with those dispositions of Jesus, beg Him to impress them on you, so that you may offer the divine Sacrifice with Him, in union with His own dispositions.

PRAYER

Intentions at Mass.

"Unite yourself also with the intentions for which He offers it. He has five principal intentions, of which the first is to honour

His Father in all that He is in Himself and in all things, and to render Him an honour, a glory, and a love that is worthy of Him. The second is to give Him thanks that are worthy of His goodness, and of all the benefits He has ever conferred on creatures. The third is fully to satisfy for all the sins of the world. The fourth is for the fulfilment of His plans and His will. And the fifth is to pray for all that is necessary for mankind, whether for the soul or for the body. In conformity with these intentions you should offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass:

"That," continues St. John, "is what you must do as priest. But besides that, you must, as victim, when offering Jesus as a victim to the Father in Holy Mass, offer yourself also with Him as a victim; or rather beseech Jesus to come into you and draw you into Himself, so that He unites Himself to you and unites and incorporates you with Him as a victim, to sacrifice you with Himself to the glory of His Father.

slain and then consumed in the fire ask Him to cause you to die to your self, i.e. to your passions, to your self-love, and to all that displeases Him; ask Him to consume you in the sacred fire of His divine love, and to bring it about that henceforth your whole life may be a perpetual sacrifice of praise, of glory and of love for His Father and for Himself.»

And after recommending the reader to communicate sacramentally or at least spiritually, the Saint concludes with these words: "After thanking Our Lord for the graces given you during Mass, go your way with the firm resolution of thoroughly utilising the day in His service, and with the thought in your mind that henceforth you have to be a victim that is both dead and alive: dead to all that is not God, and alive in God and for God, totally consecrated and sacrificed to the pure glory and the most pure love of God. Protest to Our Lord that this is your desire and that you offer yourself to Him to do and to suffer for this purpose all that He pleases. Beg Him to bring this about in you by His great mercy; beseech Him to give you the grace to raise your heart frequently to Him throughout the day, to do nothing save for His glory, to die rather than offend Him; and implore Him, for this purpose, to give you His Sacred Blessing."

And so we see that the Saint would have us add to the spirit of prayer the spirit of sacrifice. For it is by this two-fold means that we are enabled to lead a holy life entirely conformed to that of our head, which life is itself a continual prayer and a perpetually renewed sacrifice.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES.

F. EXAMINATION OF CONSCIENCE

Taken by itself examination of conscience is not prayer, but in practice it is always accompanied by prayers intended to ensure its success. Furthermore, it is often, especially in the evening, one of the elements of prayer; and sometimes, as we shall see, it is even changed almost entirely into prayer.

St. John introduced into his Congregation of priests the three examinations customary in the Oratory, to wit: that of the morning, the examination before midday, and that of the evening. His view of them was the same as that of Bérulle and Condren, but in his Manuel de Piété he determined the subject and fixed the method more precisely than did they.

How to make the morning examination.

The morning examination is anticipatory and follows the conclusion of the morning's prayer. This is how the Saint requires it to be practised: "Let every one make an anticipatory examination, that is, let him foresee the faults into which he is accustomed to fall and the occasions of it that are likely to occur during the day; as also the virtues that he is particularly called upon to practise, especially humility, obedience, charity, and meekness. Let him make a resolution of avoiding the one and embracing the other, and let him ask the necessary grace from God." (1)

These four virtues mentioned by the Saint are those which he loved to contemplate in the Heart of Jesus and the practice of which he specially recommended. This is shown by the beautiful prayer that superiors of his houses recite every day during the visit to the (1). Oeuvres complètes, 111, 272.

Blessed Sacrament that follows supper: Christus Jesus, mitis et humilis Corde, propter nimiam charitatem suam qua dilexit nos, humiliavit semetipsum factus obediens usque ad mortem crucis: itaque omnia nostra in humilitate et obediencia et charitate et mansuetudine fiant. (1) We shall shortly see that they also form the principal subject of the evening examination.

The evening examination.

This takes place at the evening prayer and concerns itself with the faults committed during the day. It begins with an act of adoration and of respectful submission to the Sovereign judge: "Let us adore Our Lord Jesus Christ," cries the Saint, "as our sovereign judge and submit ourselves to His power of judging us. Let us adore and bless Him in the judgment that He exercises, and in the sentence that He will pronounce on us at the hour of death, whatever it may be; and let us beg Him to make us sharers in the light, by which He will make us see our sins, and in His divine justice, so that we may know and detest the sins we have this day committed."

Therein we can see the spirit of the French School, preoccupied before all else with giving to Jesus the honour that is His due and always careful to place His interests before our own, and to urge generous souls to the practice of pure love.

There then follows the actual examination itself "Let us examine ourselves," he says, "on the faults we have committed to-day in thought, word, and deed, and especially on those to which we are most addicted, and on those that we have committed contrary to the resolutions taken during the morning prayer, and against humility, obedience, charity and meekness."

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

The examination concludes with an act of contrition and of amendment: "Let us beg God," writes the Saint, "to give us a true spirit of repentance and contrition. Let us give ourselves to the Son of God to share with Him the humiliation, contrition, and penitence that He bore for our sins. Let us detest them because He detests them. Let us promise to correct them by means of His grace out of love for Him; and let us offer to the Eternal Father the life and virtues, the passion and death of His Son together with the merits of His Blessed Mother and of all the Church in satisfaction for our offences.

"Let us beg the Most Blessed Virgin, St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, our good angels, and all the angels and saints to supply for our deficiencies, to ask pardon for us from God, and to obtain for us the grace of a true conversion."

Inspired by desire for the glory of God rather than our own sanctification.

The spirit that inspires these acts is always the same. They all tend to the glory of God more than to our personal sanctification and lead to the kindling of pure love.

This examination is followed by prayers animated by the same spirit which express, together with sorrow for past sins, a desire for a true and sincere conversion. These are the prayers in question:

Peccavimus, Domine, peccavimus in coelum et coram te. Parce, clementissime Pater, Parce famulis tuis, quos redemisti pretioso sanguine dilectissimi Filii tui, et Propitius esto nobis vilissimis peccatoribus, peccata nostra toto corde detestantibus propter te et tibi soli vivere cupientibus.

R. Et averte iram tuam a nobis.

OREMUS. Respice, quaesumus, Domine, super hanc familiam tuam, toto corde tibi prostratam et ex nulla virtute sua subsistentem, sed in sola misericordia tua confidentem; ut eam, beata Maria semper virgine intercedente, cum beatis Gabriele, Joseph, ac omnibus sanctis, ab omni iniquitate emundes atque custodias et a te nunquam separari permittas, sed corde magno et animo volenti tuae facias inhaerere voluntati. Per Dominum. ( 1 )

examination:
our interior
dispositions.

The examination made before noon follows the recitation of the litanies of the Holy Name of Jesus or other litanies in honour of certain mysteries of the Incarnate Word. Its subject is not the faults committed, but the interior dispositions which ought to animate us in all the details of our lives. The subject varies in accordance with the weeks and days of the month.

Thus, during the first week, the examination concerns the particular virtues we ought to practise and also the mysteries and saints that we ought to honour during the year or the month. The object is the same for every day of the week.

During the second week the subject is God and His attributes, so that on Sunday it is the Blessed Trinity that is considered, on Monday the Divine Will, on Tuesday God's love for Himself, on Wednesday His love for His creatures, on Thursday the Divine Mercy, (1). Oeuvres complètes, III, pp. 313-315.

on Friday the Divine justice, and on Saturday the holiness of God.

In the third week the examen bears on the qualities and titles of the Incarnate Word. Thus St. John invites us to adore Jesus on the various days of the week respectively as the only Son of the Father, as the principle of the Holy Ghost, as our Redeemer, as our Superior and Father, as our Head, as Priest and Victim, and as the only Son of Mary.

During the fourth week we are to reflect on the virtues of Jesus, taking respectively for each successive day His love for His Father, His humility, His patience, His dearest virtue, namely purity, His charity for mankind, His obedience, and His love for His Holy Mother.

As for the way this examination is made: it is always the same. The Saint explains it in a very short but precise phrase in which he enumerates the acts to be made. These are four in number: adoration, thanksgiving, reparation, and an offering of self, or, if you like, adherence. Here are a few passages from his writings that will serve as examples and will show better than any analysis the method recommended by the Saint:

for this examination.

"Let us adore Our Lord Jesus Christ in the particular virtues that we have to practise this year and this month, and also in the mysteries and saints we have to honour.

"Let us thank Him for the honour He has given His Father by the practice of these virtues, by these mysteries and these saints; and also for the favours He gave these same saints, and the graces He has given us by their intercession and by these same mysteries.

"Let us ask pardon of Him for the faults committed against the aforesaid virtues.

"Let us give ourselves to Him to honour these mysteries and saints and to practise these virtues with all the perfection that He asks of us, and beg Him to eradicate in us everything that can hinder us, and to give us the necessary grace. For this end let us invoke the prayers of our saints for this month....

"Let us adore with Jesus the Most Holy Trinity, all that it is in Itself and in all Its works in heaven, on earth, and in hell. Let us rejoice in It, thank It, ask pardon of It, and give ourselves to Its infinite power, wisdom, and goodness, so that It may destroy in us everything displeasing to It, and may possess and rule us, and establish for ever the rule of Its glory in our souls and bodies....

"Let us adore Jesus as the only Son of God and as one God with His Father and the Holy Ghost; as our Creator, preserver and governor, also as our Brother who has made us children of God and has given us His Father to be our Father. Let us thank Him for that, and ask His pardon for our misuse of His favours. Let us give ourselves to Him and beseech Him to make us sharers of His love for His Father and of His zeal for His glory....

"Let us adore Jesus in His most pure love of His Father and in the perfect submission He has always had to the Divine Will, and thank Him for the honour rendered to the Father by the practice of these virtues, asking His pardon at the same time for the faults we have committed against these same virtues. Let us give ourselves to Him so as to share in this love and submission; and let us beg the Blessed Virgin, the angels and the saints, to obtain for us this grace ...(1)

It is clear that examination of conscience has no place, or very little place, in all this. Rather does this exercise comprise a summary view of the imperfect way in which we have acquitted ourselves of certain duties incumbent upon us as Christians or as priests. Fundamentally it reduces itself to a prayer with a special subject, the acts of which, however, are those recommended by all the masters of the French School.

(1) Oeuvres complètes, 111, 286. This is all certainly a kind of particular examen, but it in no way resembles the particular examen and the spiritual book-keeping to be found in the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius, which St. John never mentions at all.

CHAPTER V

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

St. John was always practical.

ST. JOHN often wrote of the Christian virtues, but always from a practical point of view (1), and it is useless to search his works for a dogmatic study on the nature of the virtues, their origin and progress, or their connections with each other and with sanctifying grace. For the Saint put speculative questions on one side, and concerned himself solely with what can help souls to acquire true and solid virtues. He has much to say on this subject in Le Royaume de Jésus, and begins by showing the excellence of the Christian virtues in general and how to practise them. Then he attends particularly to those which seem to him to be the most necessary and most important. We will here do the same, and in explaining his doctrine need scarcely do more than let him speak for himself.

A. THE EXCELLENCE OF THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES AND HOW TO PRACTISE THEM

Since the Christian life is but a participation in the life of Jesus, the Christian virtues, in which that life finds its full development, are also simply a continuation and reproduction in each of us of the Saviour's virtues. It is in His school that we must study them, it is on His grace that we must rely if we are to practise them, and it is through love of Him that we must exercise them.

St. John Eudes sadly observes that even amongst the faithful true and solid virtues are rare. "There are," he says, "many persons who esteem virtue, desire it, seek it, and take great trouble and labour to acquire it, and yet we see very few who are adorned by true and solid Christian virtues." And, asking the reason for this, he replies that "one of the main causes is that these persons conduct their search for virtue not so much in the spirit of Christianity as in that of the pagan philosophers and of heretics, that is to say not so much in the spirit of Jesus Christ and of the divine grace that He has acquired for us by His Blood, as in that of human nature and reason." (1) And he fixes on

(1). We see many who either every day or every week very carefully select certain virtues to be practised, and who keep a sharp look-out to see whether they neglect any opportunities that arise for practising them, and note their falls carefully for the purpose of confessing them and, if possible, of avoiding them for the future. But after practising this for a long time it is clear that they have derived little profit from it, because they forget the inner aspect of the matter and do not enter into the spirit of the virtue in question, nor do they practise it with the suitable and necessary dispositions. . . . Every virtue has a spirit which is its essence or rather its soul and the form that vivifies and perfects it. Now those who would live the life of grace and acquire solid and Christian virtues must most carefully attend to these dispositions so as to make them their own, if they are to perform their actions perfectly; for without this, virtue is but external and superficial. And, moreover, they must know and seek the spirit of virtue or (as some say) its essence, so that when they practise this same virtue they can do so with its own spirit: that is to say, as they perform the external action they can have the internal sentiment or spirit of the virtue in question" (Quarré: Le trésor spirituel, 1638, pp. 157-158). Père Quarré's teaching is obviously the same as that of St. John Eudes. Both of them tell us that external acts of virtue are nothing without its internal dispositions, which constitute what they term "the spirit of grace," "the spirit of virtue," or "the spirit of Jesus." « For in their eyes the spirit of Jesus means the intimate dispositions of His Heart or the Holy Ghost which communicates them to Him. This is, in fact, a commentary on St. Paul's saying: Qui Spiritu Dei aguntur, ii sunt filii Dei. Let us note in passing that these principles are constantly to be found in the teachings of the French school, and that is why writers of that school so often speak to us of the Christian spirit, the spirit of prayer, the interior spirit, the spirit of the various mysteries, and the spirit of the virtues.

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

three points as the source of the error of those who pursue virtue in too natural and human a manner:

Mistaken attitude towards the virtues.

---1. They look upon virtue," he says, -simply with the eyes of human reason, esteem it as something in itself most excellent, in conformity with reason and necessary for the perfection of man to distinguish him from the beasts who are governed purely by the senses; and by these considerations, which are more human than Christian, they move themselves to desire and to acquire it.

---2. They persuade themselves that they can acquire it by their own efforts, by taking pains, by vigilance, by reflection, resolution and actual practice. And therein they greatly deceive themselves, for they ignore the fact that it is impossible for us to perform the smallest act of Christian virtue without the help of divine grace.

---3. They love virtue and strive to acquire it, but not so much for God and for His glory as for themselves, i.e., for the sake of their own merit, self-interest, and satisfaction, and for the purpose of making themselves more worthy and accomplished; which is the way in which pagans, and heretics, desire and seek it. Even the very devils desire it in this way, for, being full of pride, they desire everything that can serve to make them more distinguished and outstanding. And so, since virtue is a most noble and excellent thing, they desire to have it: not in order that they may be more pleasing to God, but out of a spirit of pride and of self-esteem."(1)

The virtues acquired by acting in this way are not Christian virtues; they are natural and purely human virtues: human in the idea formed of them, in their principle, and in their end, which is self-love. «They have no foundation and no stability,» says St. John, "for they rest only on the weak human mind and reason and on the shifting sand of self-love and vanity."

The true view of virtue.

But Christians who in the search for virtue act in accordance with the spirit of Jesus Christ, take a very different course. As St. John tells us:

«1. They consider virtue, not merely in itself, but in its principle and source, that is to say in Jesus who is the source of all grace, who eminently and in a sovereign degree possesses every kind of virtue, and in whom virtue is of infinite worth. For since everything in Jesus

(1). M. Henri Bremond seems to think that these words are directed against St. Ignatius and his followers. Such is not our opinion. St. John is not attacking any writer, or any school of asceticism; he attacks only the purely natural spirit with which certain persons, including Christians, and even Religious, seek after virtue. So little does he attack the school of St. Ignatius that he ranks the works of Rodriguez and Le saint travail des mains of Père Thomas Le Blanc amongst the books that he would have in the hands of the novices of his Congregation. So, too, he would have the treatises on humility and obedience by Rodriguez and Le Blanc read in the houses of his institute after the reading of the Constitutions which is obligatory twice every year. Cf. Bremond: L'École française, pp. 135 sq. Revue d'ascétique et de mystique, Oct. 1922, p. 423; and Eudes Oeuvres complètes, IX, pp. 252, 264, 301.

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

is holy, divine and adorable, virtue is sanctified and deified in Him and consequently is worthy of infinite honour and adoration. And therefore, if we consider virtue in Jesus Christ, that consideration will be infinitely more potent in leading us to esteem, love, and seek it, than if we were to regard it merely in respect to its intrinsic excellence, and the esteem in which it is held by human reason.

"2. Those who are guided by the Christian spirit in practising the virtues know very well that they cannot perform the smallest act of virtue by themselves; that, on the contrary, if God should withdraw Himself from them, they would at once fall into an abyss of all sorts of vices; and that since virtue is a pure gift of God they must ask for it confidently and perseveringly. Therefore they continually ask God for the virtues that they require, without ever wearying; and at the same time for their part they bring the greatest possible care, vigilance, and toil to their efforts at acquiring it. Yet they take good care not to trust to, or to rely on, their own carefulness or practices, their desires or resolutions, nor even to the prayers they offer to God on this subject; but they await everything from the pure goodness of God, and are in no way anxious when they cannot perceive in themselves the virtues they desire.(1)

(1). The principle here pronounced by St. John is often to be found in his works. For instance, here is how he repeats it in connection with confidence in God: «we must take as much care,» he says, «and must so labour, as if we expected no help from God; and yet we must no more depend on our own care and labour than if we had done nothing at all, but expect everything solely from God's mercy.» The same teaching is attributed to St. Ignatius, who says: "Haec Prima sit agendorum regulae: Sic Deo fide, quasi rerum successus omnis a te, nihil a Deo penderet; ita tamen iis operam omnem admove, quasi tu nihil, Deus omnia solus sit factur.» Or, as Père Brou translates this. «The golden rule of action is: To have the utmost

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Instead of being troubled and discouraged, they rest peacefully and humbly before God, realising that it is due to their own fault and their own faithlessness. For they know that if God treated them as they deserved, not only would He give them none of the things for which they asked, but He would even deprive them of all the graces He had ever given them. They know, in fact, that He shows them too much kindness in not entirely rejecting and abandoning them. And this knowledge kindles a new fire of love in them, and a new confidence in that infinite goodness, together with an ardent desire to seek in every possible way the virtues necessary to them if they are to serve and glorify Him.

«3. It is not for their own sakes, for their own satisfaction or reward that they desire virtue and frequently strive to practise interior and exterior acts of love of God, of charity towards their neighbour, of patience, obedience, and humility, and of mortification and the other Christian virtues. They do this, not for their own sakes, but for God's pleasure and for His interests, in order to make themselves similar to their Head, who is Jesus Christ, to glorify Him, and to continue the exercise of the virtues which He put into practice upon earth; and it is in this that Christian virtue properly consists. For, just as the Christian life is nothing else but a continuation of the life of Christ, so, too, Christian virtues are a continuation and completion of His virtues. And if virtues are to be put into practice in a Christian manner, it must be in the spirit in which Jesus practised them and with the motives and intentions that were His. Thus Christian humility is seen to be a continuation of the Humility of Our Lord; Christian charity a continuation of His charity, and so with the other virtues."

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

And the Saint sums up his teaching with these words:

"In short, Christian virtues are the actual virtues of Christ, with which we must be clothed, and which He communicates to those who adhere to Him, who ask for them with humility and confidence, and who try to practise them as He practised them." Thus, then, union, prayer, and practice are the ways recommended by St. John for acquiring these virtues.

But so as to be sure of being correctly understood, and for the purpose of helping simple souls to apply these principles, he illustrates in a separate chapter in greater detail how we should practise virtue:

How to acquire a particular virtue.

"When," says the Saint, "you desire to advance in perfection in regard to a given virtue:

1. Adore it in Our Lord, and reflect how marked was this virtue in Him, and with what perfection He exercised it throughout His life.

2. Seeing yourself so remote from this perfection, humble yourself before Him, asking His pardon for all your failures in practising this virtue, acknowledging that you have no power of yourself to practise it in the slightest degree, and that you are quite unworthy of receiving the necessary grace, and begging Him, none the less, to give you in His great mercy the grace to practise this virtue whenever occasion shall arise.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

3. Often give yourself to Jesus with a great desire of practising this virtue with all the perfection that He asks of you, and beg Him to destroy in you everything contrary to it, and to establish it firmly in you for His pure glory.

4. Take care actually to practise this virtue by interior acts and exterior consequences, uniting yourself to the dispositions and intentions with which Jesus Christ exercised these same virtues."

And, with his usual wisdom, he adds: "Whenever you commit some fault contrary to that virtue, be not troubled or discouraged but humble yourself before God, asking His pardon for it and offering Him in satisfaction for your fault all the honour that His Beloved Son and Holy Mother rendered to Him by the exercise of this same virtue. Then give yourself to Jesus with a new desire of being faithful to Him henceforth in the practice of that virtue, and beg Him in His great mercy to repair your fault and to give you new grace with which the better to practise that virtue as occasion offers."(1)

There we see the fundamental principles of the French School applied to the Christian virtues. Whether it be a matter of the idea of the Christian life, of prayer, the virtues, or of any other pious exercise, we find them always and everywhere.

(1). Royaume de Jésus, II, n. xxiii.

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

B. THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES IN PARTICULAR

The Christian virtues of which St. John treats in particular in Le Royaume de Jésus are humility, confidence in God, submission to the divine will, charity towards our neighbour, zeal and love of the cross.

It may perhaps cause surprise that he does not deal with faith, with love of God, or with religion, which, with hope, are the most excellent of the virtues. The reason is that before broaching the virtues the Saint discusses what he calls the foundations of the Christian life, and these, in his view, are faith, charity with its accompanying dispositions (hatred of sin, of the world, and of self), and finally prayer, which is one of the acts of the virtue of religion.

The foundations of a Christian life: faith, hatred of sin, prayer.

"The first foundation of the Christian life," he writes, "is faith. For St. Paul tells us that 'without faith it is impossible to please God. For he that cometh to God must believe that he is'. (1) 'Faith,' says the same Apostle, 'is the substance of things to be hoped for'; (2) it is indeed the foundation stone of the house and the kingdom of Christ. It is a heavenly and divine light, a participation in the eternal inaccessible light from the countenance of God; or, in Scriptural terms, faith is 'the light of thy countenance, O Lord, (which) is signed upon us'. (3) It is a communication, and as it were an extension of the light and the divine knowledge which was infused into the holy soul of Jesus at the moment of His Incarnation. It is the science of salvation, of the Saints, of God, which Christ drew from the bosom of His Father, and which He brought to us on earth to dissipate our darkness, to illuminate our hearts, and to give us the knowledge necessary to us if we are to serve and love God perfectly. Thereby He would subject our minds to the truths which He taught us and still teaches us both in His own Person and through His Church. By this means He would express, continue and complete in us that voluntary submission, docility, and subjection displayed by His human mind in regard to the lights communicated to Him by His Eternal Father and the truths taught Him by the Father. So it is that faith, which is given to us for the purpose of leading our minds to belief in the truths announced by God, is a continuation and a completion of the loving and perfect submission of the human mind of Jesus to the truths, declared to Him by His Eternal Father.

(4) Ps. iv, 7.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

"And it is this light, this divine knowledge, that gives us, so far as is possible in this life, perfect knowledge of everything that is in God and outside God. Reason and human science too often deceive us, because they have too weak and limited a light to enable them to attain to a knowledge of the things of God, which are infinite and incomprehensible. Moreover, in consequence of the corruption of sin, human science and reason are too full of shadows and obscurities to be able to have a true knowledge even of the things that are outside God. But since the light of faith is a participation in the truth and light of God, it cannot deceive us, rather does it make us see things as God sees them, that is to say in all their truth and as they appear in the eyes of God."

Then, having briefly summed up the teachings of faith on God, Jesus Christ, the Church and ourselves,

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

the Saint thus concludes: "We have, then, to see all things not in the vanity of our senses, nor with the eyes of the flesh, nor with the limited and deceptive view of science and reason, but in the truth of God and with the eyes of Christ, i.e., with that true light that He draws from the bosom of the Father, with which He sees and knows everything. This He communicates to us so that we may see and know all things even as He sees and knows them."

So it was with St. John Eudes. He lived in the supernatural world and looked at everything from the point of view of faith. His books are little more than an exposition of the purest teaching of the Gospels which he strove to inculcate in his readers, and with which he would have them be penetrated to the marrow.

Our actions must

But faith is not merely a light for the intellect, it is also a rule of conduct to which we must conform our whole life if we wish it to be really a copy and a continuation of that of Jesus: "Just as we must see all things in the light of faith," says the Saint, "if we are truly to know them, so also we must regulate all our actions by this same light if we are to do them in a holy fashion. For, as God rules His actions by His divine wisdom, as the angels rule theirs by their angelic intelligence, men of the world by worldly maxims, and the voluptuous by their senses, so also Christians must rule themselves by the light with which their Head, Jesus Christ, governs himself, i.e. by the faith that is a participation in the knowledge and the light of Christ.

"That is why we have to strive by every means fully to comprehend this divine science, and never to under take anything save under its control. For that purpose we should place ourselves at the feet of God at the beginning of our actions (especially the more important ones), adoring Him as the author and consummator of faith, and as the true light, the Father of lights, who enlightens all men coming into the world.

"We must remember, too, that of ourselves we are but shadows and that all the lights of human reason, knowledge, and even experience are frequently but obscurities and illusions, on which we can place no confidence. Let us renounce worldly wisdom and the prudence of the flesh; let us beg Jesus to destroy them in us as being His enemies and not to allow us to follow their laws and maxims. Let us rather beseech Him to enlighten us with His heavenly light, to guide us by His divine wisdom, to make us know what is most agreeable to Him, and to give us grace and strength to stand bravely by His words and promises, to be deaf always to all considerations and persuasions of human prudence, courageously preferring the truths and maxims of the faith He teaches us by His Gospel and by His Church to the reasonings and speeches of men who are guided by worldly principles."

Furthermore the Saint invites us to read on our knees See all things with every day a chapter of the Life of the eyes of Jesus. Jesus, i.e., of the New Testament, so that, as he says, 'We may learn the details of His life, and, by reflecting on His actions, His virtues, and His words, note the rules and maxims which He followed and which He would have us follow. For Christian prudence consists in renouncing the maxims of worldly prudence, in invoking the spirit of Jesus Christ that He may enlighten us and guide us by

His maxims, and in asking Him to govern us by the truths He has taught us in pursuance of the virtues and actions that He practised."(1)

The faith teaches us to think like Jesus, to see all things "with His eyes," but that alone is not sufficient. If we are to be truly Christian we must clothe ourselves with His feelings, in accordance with St. Paul's exhortation: Hoc sentite in vobis quod et in Christo Jesu. (2 )"But," writes St. John Eudes, "Jesus Christ had in Himself two kinds of extremely contrary feelings: infinite love for His Father and for us, and extreme hatred of what is contrary to the glory of His Father and our salvation, i.e., sin. For since He infinitely loved His Father and us, so He infinitely hated sin. So greatly does He love His Father, and so greatly does He love us, that He performed infinitely great things, suffered appalling torments, and lived a life supremely precious for the glory of God and our love. On the other hand, so great was His horror of sin that He came down from heaven to earth, emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, lived for thirty-four years a life full of toil, of contempt and of suffering, shed His blood to the last drop, and died the most shameful and cruel of all deaths; and all that through His hatred of sin and His extreme desire to eradicate it in us.» (3)

Consequently hatred of sin and of all that leads to it, i.e., the world and the flesh, is a fundamental condition of every Christian life. St. John explains this with his usual lucidity and vigour. And if he does not dwell on positive love of God at this point, it is because his book Le Royaume de Jésus entirely turns on that sub ject. In it the author constantly praises the practice of pure love.

The same is true of the virtue of religion. St. John does not devote a special chapter to it, but he deals with prayer, the Divine Office, Holy Mass, and Christian devotion, and those are the chief exercises that go to make up the virtue of religion. And in the later editions of that book the author inserted a long chapter on Devotion to Holy Places, and this completed his teaching on the point.

C. HUMILITY

Humility is one of the virtues on which St. John most frequently dwelt. In his books on the Christian life and on devotion to the Sacred Hearts, in the Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, in his prayers and offices, humility always has a prominent place, so necessary did this virtue seem to him for the leading of a truly Christian life.

The most necessary of all the virtues.

He states, indeed, in Le Royaume de Jésus (1) that it is the most necessary of all the virtues, the virtue par excellence of Jesus Christ, and the proper and special virtue of Christians since it is the guardian of all graces and of all other virtues, and draws down the most abundant benedictions upon souls. It is, too, with holy love, the true measure of sanctity: "Give me," he says, "a truly humble soul, and I will declare him to be truly holy, adorned with every kind of virtue. In such a one God is greatly glorified, and in him Jesus dwells. For such a one is His treasure and paradise of delights," (1). 11, n. xxv-xxviii.

and will be greatly exalted in the kingdom of God, according to the promise of Eternal Truth that 'he who humbles himself shall be exalted.' On the other hand, a soul devoid of humility is a soul without virtue, it is a hell, a dwelling-place of demons, and an abyss, of every kind of vice."

"Finally," he writes, "we may in some sort say that humility is the mother of Jesus, for it was by it that the Blessed Virgin was made worthy of giving Him birth. Moreover it is by this virtue that we shall become worthy of forming Him in our souls and of making Him live and reign in our hearts."

(a) Humility of the mind.

Now, in humility the Saint distinguished two elements: humility of the mind and humility of the heart. Strictly speaking, humility of the mind is not the virtue of humility, it is only its condition, but a very necessary condition. It consists in a profound realisation of what we are in the eyes of God: "For," says St. John, "if we are to know ourselves thoroughly we must see ourselves not as we seem to be to the eyes and the deceptive judgment of men, and to the vanity and presumption of our own minds, but as we are in the eyes and judgment of God. And to do this, we must see ourselves in the light and truth of God, by means of faith."

Realisation of ourselves demands that we should reflect on what we are as human beings and on what we are as children of Adam and sinners. As human beings, we are but dust and nothingness, since we are creatures of God and derive from Him whatever of good there is in us. Of ourselves we have nothing, we can do nothing, we are nothing. For the creature, having issued from nothingness, is nothing, has nothing, and can do nothing of itself.

And as children of Adam and sinners, our condition is even more lamentable. St. John, who on this point as on so many others is in accord with all the writers of the French school, perhaps exaggerates the corruption of nature by original sin. At all events he speaks of it in very strong terms:

Our miserable conditions as children of Adam.

"As children of Adam and sinners," he writes, 'we are born in original sin, enemies of God and subjects of the devil. Thus we are held in abomination by heaven and earth, and are incapable of doing any good or of avoiding any evil by our own powers. Our only means of salvation is to renounce Adam and all that we derive from him, to renounce ourselves, our self-will and our own powers, so as to give ourselves to Jesus and to share His spirit and His power.... So it is that by the just judgment of God we bear all the load of iniquity that Scripture calls the kingdom of death, which hinders us from doing works of freedom and life, i.e. of the true freedom and life which is that of the sons of God; we can but do the works of death and captivity, works that are far removed from the grace of God, His justice and His holiness.(1) How great is our misery and worthlessness, since it has made it necessary for the Son of God to purchase for us with His blood the smallest thought of serving God, and even permission for us to present ourselves before Him!"

'These last words strikingly tone down whatever might seem exaggerated in the picture of our original downfall drawn by the author. Understood in this way, there is nothing in his words that could displease the most suspicious of theologians.

He goes on to add that "as children of Adam and sinners, we do not deserve to live or that the earth should support us, we do not deserve that God should think of us, or even that He should take the trouble of exercising His justice in regard to us. Well might the holy man job be astonished that God should deign to open His eyes to behold us and should take the trouble of judging us: 'Dignum ducis super hujusmodi aperire oculos tuos, et adducere eum tecum in judicium.' (1) He does us a favour in allowing us into His presence and in allowing the earth to support us. If He did not work a miracle everything would contribute to our ruin and perdition; for there is that in sin which, withdrawing us from obedience to God, deprives us of all our rights, from which it follows that our existence, our lives, our souls, our bodies and all our powers no longer belong to us. Thus the sun no longer owes us its light, the stars their help, nor the earth its support; the air is no longer bound to enable us to breathe, the other elements are not bound to give us their various qualities, nor the plants their fruits, nor animals their services. Rather in such conditions must all creatures make war on us and use all their strength against us, since we employ ours against God, that so creation may avenge the injury we inflict on its Creator. The revenge which at the end of time the whole world will take on sinners ought to be brought to bear on us every day that we commit new sins; and in punishment of a single sin God might justly deprive us of life and of all the temporal and spiritual graces He has given us, and visit us with the direst punishments."

Folly of pride.

After sketching this sombre picture, the Saint
(1). Job. xiv, 3.

186- THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

expresses his astonishment that any man can become proud. "How strange it is," he exclaims, "to see creatures so mean and miserable as are we, trying to exalt themselves and to enhance their dignity I Truly the Holy Spirit has good reason for telling us by the pen of the Wise Man that He holds in aversion and horror a poverty-stricken man who is proud. For if pride is insupportable when found in anyone, what must it be in one whom poverty calls to an extreme humility. And yet it is a vice that is common to all men, although, however great they may appear in the eyes of the world, they always bear with them the marks of their infamy, namely their sinfulness, which should lead them to the utmost self abasement before God and before all creatures. But, alas, sin makes us so vile and so infamous that we by no means desire to recognise our misery, thereby resembling Satan who, although by his slavery to sin he is the most worthless of creatures, is yet so proud as to refuse to accept his ignominy. This is what causes God to have such a horror of pride and vanity, for, knowing our baseness and worthlessness, it is utterly insupportable to Him to see so vile a creature trying to aggrandise himself. And it is particularly hateful to Him in view of the fact that He who is greatness itself humbled Himself down to nothingness. After that, it is more than insupportable to Him to see nothingness trying to magnify itself."

Yet the Saint hastens to add: "But although as a man and as a child of Adam and a sinner you are such one as I have just pictured, yet as a child of God and member of Jesus Christ, if you are in His grace, you have in you a most noble and sublime being and life, and you possess an infinitely rich and precious treasure. And although humility makes you know what you are in yourself and in Adam, yet it must not hide from you what you are in Christ and by Christ, and it does not compel you to ignore the graces that God gives you through His Son ... but rather to realise that all that you have of good comes to you from the pure mercy of God."

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

(b) Humility of the heart.

Humility of the mind would be useless without humility of the heart; it would be what St. John calls a "diabolical humility." For the demons full well know their own nothingness and worthlessness. True humility, that which Our Lord would have us learn from Him, is humility of the heart. In a few lines St. John points out how to practise this humility.

"Humility of the heart," he says, -consists in loving our baseness and abjection, in being content to be obscure and contemptible, in treating ourselves as such, in rejoicing at being treated as such by others, so that we do not excuse or justify ourselves save in cases of great necessity, and never complain of anyone, remembering that since we have in us the source of all evil we deserve every kind of blame and harsh treatment. Therefore with all our heart we must love and embrace contempt, humiliation, shame, and everything that can abase us."

In Le Royaume de Jésus, in Le Coeur admirable, and in the Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie the Saint recommends many acts of humility. However casually we glance at these, we perceive that they are in brief merely particular applications of rules laid down by the author in the few but pregnant lines that we have just quoted.

Elsewhere the Saint warns us that humility of heart consists not only in loving humiliations, but also in hating and fleeing from all display and vanity: "I say all display," he adds, "for it is not sufficient to despise temporal display and to have a horror of the vanity of human praise, but we must have an even greater horror of the vanity that proceeds from spiritual things, and we must fear and flee everything in our pious exercises that appears striking or extraordinary in the eyes of others; I refer to such things as visions, ecstasies, revelations, the gift of working miracles and the like. And not only must we on no account desire or ask God for these extraordinary graces; but even if the soul should be offered such things by God, we must shrink into the depths of our nothingness, consider ourselves utterly unworthy of such favours, and beg Him to give us some other grace instead, some grace less striking in the eyes of men, that will make the soul more in conformity with the hidden and despised life that He Himself led upon earth. For, just as Our Lord delights in heaping His ordinary and extraordinary graces upon us in the excess of His bounty, so also He is greatly pleased when He sees that, moved by a true feeling of our unworthiness and a desire to resemble Him in His humility, we flee everything that is great in the eyes of mankind. And if anyone has not got this disposition he will lay himself open to the deceptions and illusions of the spirit of vanity."(1)

(1). The Saint adds: "But notice that I here speak of extraordinary things, and not of actions that are common and usual with all true servants of God, such as communicating frequently, falling on our knees at least in the morning and evening to perform our duties to God (and this in any place or company in which we may happen to be), accompanying the Blessed Sacrament in the street when it is carried to the sick, mortifying the flesh by fasting, taking the discipline, or some other means. Other such common actions are saying our Rosary, praying in a church, or in a house, or by the wayside, serving and visiting prisoners and the sick, and many other works of piety. I say I do not refer to doing all these things, for we must take great care that in desiring to omit such actions under the pretext of a false humility, we do not omit them rather through a real cowardice."

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

"Furthermore," says St. John, "true humility of heart consists in being humble in the way that Jesus Christ was humble when upon earth, i.e., in always choosing in all things whatever is vilest and most humiliating and in being ready to be as much humiliated as was Jesus in His Incarnation, in His Passion, and in His Death.

The example set by Our Lord.

"In His Incarnation 'he emptied himself,' as St. Paul says, 'taking the form of a servant'; He chose to be born in a stable, He subjected Himself to the helplessness and insignificance of childhood, and underwent a thousand other humiliations. In His Passion He describes Himself as 'a worm and no man, the reproach of men and the outcast of the people.'<sup>2</sup> He bore the anger and the judgment of His Father the severity of which was so great that it caused Him to sweat blood so that the soil of the Garden of Olives was saturated with it, As He Himself assures us, He subjected Himself to the powers of darkness, the devils, who, acting through the Jews whom they possessed and through Pilate and Herod whom they influenced, made Him suffer every conceivable indignity. And so Uncreated Wisdom was treated by Herod and the soldiers as an imbecile; He was scourged and nailed to the cross like a slave or a robber; and the Father, who normally would be His support, deserted Him and looked on Him as though He had committed all the crimes in the world. And finally, to speak with the language of His Apostle, He was 'made a curse for us,'<sup>(1)</sup> and even (terrible degradation though it be!) He was made, as it were, to sin by the power and justice of God, for so St. Paul tells us: Deus eum pro nobis Peccatum fecit: 'Him, who knew no sin, he hath made sin for us' (2) which means that He bore not only the confusion and shame that sinners deserve, but also all the ignominies and infamies due to sin itself, which is the vilest and most ignominious state to which God can reduce even the greatest of His enemies. What a humiliation for a God, for the only Son of God, for the Sovereign Lord of the universe, to be reduced to such a state! O Lord Jesus is it possible that you so loved men that you went so far as this in your love for them? And you, man, how can it be that you still have any vanity, when you see your God thus abased for love of you? O my Saviour, let me be humbled with you, let me share your feelings of profound humility, and let me be ready to bear all the confusion and abasement that is fitting for the sinner and for sin itself!"

"Perfect Christian humility," the Saint concludes, consists in being disposed to desire to be treated, not only as a sinner deserves, but also to bear all the ignominies and degradations due to sin itself, since Jesus our Head, the Saint of saints, and holiness itself, has borne them, and since we thoroughly deserve this treatment, being of ourselves but sinfulness and malediction. If these truths were only thoroughly impressed upon our minds, we would realise that we have good cause to cry out ... with St. Gertrude: 'Lord, one of the greatest miracles you have ever wrought is that the earth is permitted to bear me up.' "

Humility, then, as preached by the Saint, is not a matter for common souls. It calls for generous souls who give themselves entirely to Jesus and to His Holy Spirit, and who do not shrink from any sacrifice in walking in His footsteps and becoming perfect in His likeness.

D. CONFIDENCE IN GOD

Confidence in God is one of the virtues of which souls stand most in need. St. John dwells lovingly on it in his Royaume de Jésus, and it may be said that this virtue is one of the dominant characteristics of his spirituality which resolves itself into love and confidence: a pure and generous love, and an unshakable confidence that leads the soul to abandon itself completely to God. This confidence that he strives to inculcate into souls goes so far that in his "preparation for death" he calls on his readers to celebrate in advance the happy day of their entry into Paradise.(1)

There is a close connection between confidence and humility, and this did not escape the Saint. For if humility is the mother of all the virtues, it is specially the mother of confidence in God. The sight of our incapacity for doing any good and of our inclination towards evil must, in fact, lead us to depart from ourselves so as to hide in Jesus and to seek strength

(1). It is clear that if the Saint, for the purpose of keeping us humble, paints a very dark picture of our original fall, he takes great care to raise us in our own eyes by reminding us of what we are in Christ, and he neglects no means of developing in us a true confidence in God. In short, his spirituality is extremely optimistic.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

and support in Him. He has been given to us by the Eternal Father to be our redemption, our virtue, our sanctification and treasure, our life and our all. He Himself invites us to come to Him with all confidence, saying: ---Cometo me, all you that labour and are burdened, and I will refresh you,"(1) and He assures us that He will not cast aside anyone who has recourse to Him: Eum qui venit ad me non ejiciam foras. (2)

The grounds for confidence in God.

St. John, indeed, extracts and groups together in Le Royaume de Jésus the promises made by God to those who put their trust in Him, and after quoting numerous Scriptural texts he adds: "I should never end if I were to reproduce here all the other passages of Scripture in which God commends to us the virtue of confidence. It would seem that He can never sufficiently assure us in a thousand parts of the Bible how dear and delightful to Him this virtue is, and how He loves and cherishes those who trust Him and abandon themselves entirely to the Fatherly care of His divine Providence."

And after thus giving the promises contained in Holy Scripture, the Saint then quotes several beautiful passages taken from the writings of St. Gertrude and St. Mechtilde: "We read," he says, "in the third book of St. Gertrude's Revelations that Our Blessed Lord one day told this great saint that the filial confidence shown in Him by a Christian soul is that eye of the Well-Beloved of which the Divine Spouse speaks in the Canticle of Canticles: 'Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse; thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes'; for He went on to say to her that 'He who has an assured confidence in me that I can and desire faithfully to assist him in everything, pierces my heart with an arrow of love; and so great an influence over me has this confidence that I can in no way absent myself from him."(1)

«And in St. Mechtilde's Book on Special Grace (2) we find that Jesus said to her: 'It is a special source of joy to me that men trust in my kindness and rely upon me. And consequently, I will specially succour in this life, and reward in the next life to an extent greater than he deserves, whoever greatly yet humbly trusts in me. The more anyone trusts in me and avails himself of my bounty, the more he will thereby profit, especially as it is impossible for a man not to obtain what he piously believes to have been promised him and hopes to obtain. And so, it is very useful for a man to hope for great things from me, and to put his trust completely in me.'

"And to this same saint, who asked God what was the chief thing that she should believe of His ineffable goodness, He replied: 'Believe with assurance that after death I will receive you even as the Father received His well-beloved Son, and that no father ever distributed all his means to his only son so completely and so affectionately as I shall make you a partaker in all that I have. He who firmly and with humble love believes that of my goodness, will be truly happy. (3)

"To strengthen us still more in this confidence,- continues the Saint, "our sweet and lovable Saviour adopts in regard to us the most gentle and loving titles and qualities that are possible; for He calls Himself and in fact is, our friend, advocate, healer, pastor brother, father, soul, mind, and the spouse of our souls,

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Similarly, He calls us His flock, His brethren, His children, His portion, His heritage, soul, and heart, and our souls He calls His spouses.-

Then to complete the task of convincing us of the love of Jesus for us, Père Eudes again has recourse to Holy Scripture and extracts there from certain texts which he later on introduced into his Office of the Sacred Heart:

The mercy and the love of God shown in Scripture.

"Jesus,- he says, -assures us in several parts of the Scriptures that He 'has care of all ... and does not give judgment unjustly,'(1) urging us to 'cast our care upon him, for he hath care of us ' (2)

'Hearken unto me ... who are carried by my bowels, are borne up by my womb. Even to your old age I am the same, and to your grey hairs I will carry you. I have made you, and I will bear; I will carry and will save.' (3) Not once or twice, but five times does he tell us in this same passage that he will bear us up. And elsewhere He asserts: 'Can a woman forget her infant, so as not to have pity on the son of her womb? And if she should forget, yet will not I forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee in my hands; thy walls are always before my eyes'; (4) 'he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of my eye.' (5) Moreover He tells us not to be solicitous of what is necessary for feeding or clothing us, for He knows we need these things, and He will take care of us; (6) He says that He has counted the hairs of our heads and that none of these shall perish; (7) that His Father loves us as He loves Himself, and that He

(Jesus) loves us as His Father loves Him; (1) that He desires us to be where He is, (2) i.e., that we should repose with Him in the bosom of His Father; that we shall sit with Him on His throne, (3) and that in a word we are all only one, being completely united with Him and with His Father. (4) If we have offended Him, He promises that if we return to Him with humility, sorrow, confidence in His goodness, and a resolution to shun sin henceforth, He will receive us, will embrace us, and forgetting all our sins will reclothe us in the robe of His grace and His love, which we have lost through our own fault. (5)

"In view of all that, who will not have confidence, and who will not abandon himself entirely to the care and the guidance of a friend, a brother, a father, a spouse, whose infinite wisdom knows what is most advantageous for us, foresees all that can happen to us, and guides us to the goal of our sovereign happiness? Does not His marvellous kindness wish us every good, and is He not sufficiently powerful to be able to deflect from us all evil that might happen to us, and to secure us the happiness that He desires to procure for us? "

And lest we should be tempted to see merely vain promises in all this, the Saint calls on us to reflect on what Jesus has done for us in His Incarnation, in His Passion, and in His death, and what He still does for us every day in the Holy Eucharist. And he concludes by inviting us to go to Jesus with all confidence:

"Let us," he says, "have a great desire firmly to acquire this divine virtue; let us have no fear, but courageously form ambitious plans for most perfectly serving and loving our adorable and loving Jesus, and for undertaking great things for His glory, according as He may give us the power and the grace. For, although we can do nothing of ourselves, we can do everything in Him, and His help will not be lacking if we have confidence in His generosity.

Completely abandon yourself to God.

"Let us put ourselves in His hands, entirely abandoning to the paternal care of His divine Providence all that concerns us in body and soul, temporally and spiritually, our health, our reputation, our goods, our affairs, those who are connected with us, and our past sins. Let us equally abandon to His care the advancement of our souls in virtue and in His love, our life and our death, our salvation even and our eternity, being assured that in His pure goodness He will take particular care of them, and that He will dispose all things in the best possible manner."

In these few words St. John contrives to say much, and fully illustrates what he means by confidence and by complete abandonment to the divine goodness. But he is always practical, and so he warns us that if confidence in God banishes all anxiety it does not dispense us from toil and effort:

"Let us take great care," he says, "not to depend on the power or favour of our friends, or on our wealth, our own ability, knowledge, or strength, nor to place our reliance on our good desires, our prayers and resolutions, or even on the confidence that we feel we have in God, nor yet on human means or on any created thing, but solely on the mercy of God. It is not that we should fail to make use of all these things and for our part do all that we can to conquer vice, to practise virtue, and to fulfil the duties that God has entrusted to us and the obligations that attach to our position; but we must renounce all dependence and confidence that we might have in these things, and depend solely on the pure goodness of Our Lord. Consequently we must for our part take as much pains and care as if we expected nothing on the part of God; and yet none the less we must put no more trust in our own efforts than if we had done nothing at all but expected everything solely from God's mercy.

"And the Holy Spirit exhorts us in this sense, through the mouth of the Prophet-King, saying: Revela Domino viam tuam, et spera in eo, et ipse faciet; (1) and in another place: jacta super Dominum curam tuam, et ipse te enutriet. (2) So, too, speaking through the Prince of the Apostles, He urges us to cast all our care upon God, for He will take care of us: Omnem sollicitudinem vestram Projicientes in eum, quoniam ipsi cura est de vobis. (3) It is but what Our Lord said to St. Catherine of Siena: 'My daughter, forget yourself and think of me, and I will continually think of you'. (4)

"Take this as being applied to yourself. Make it your chief care to avoid everything that could displease Our Lord, and to serve and love Him perfectly, and He will turn everything, even your faults, to your advantage. Finally, confidence is a gift of God that follows humility and love. Therefore, ask it of God, and He will give it to you; and strive to do all your actions in a spirit of humility and for the pure love of God. Then will you soon taste the sweetness and peace that accompanies the virtue of trust in God."

E. SUBMISSION TO THE DIVINE WILL

Submission to the Will of God is another of St. John's favourite themes. He constantly returns to it, and made it one of the foundations of his Congregation of priests. As a motto, he gave his spiritual sons these beautiful words from Holy Scripture: Colere Deum et facere voluntatem ejus corde magno et animo volenti; and he told them always to put at the head of their letters: May the divine will be our guide in everything. He also ordered them to keep the twenty-first Sunday after Pentecost in honour of the divine will.<sup>(1)</sup> For in truth the disposition that he most admired in the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary was their perfect submission to the will of God; and he even had painted for the seminary at Coutances a picture showing the reign of the divine will in the Sacred Hearts. <sup>(2)</sup> He looked upon the divine will as his good mother and exhorted his spiritual children to do the same, as we see from this letter which he wrote to one of them while preaching a mission at Gatteville in the diocese of Coutances, telling them that he could not go to assist them:

"The adorable will of God (our good mother) has ordained this separation. May that holy will ever be blessed! I call it 'our good mother' for it is from her that we have received our being and life, both that of nature and that of grace. It is she who must govern us, and we must obey her and give ourselves up to her guidance with great confidence, for she has a truly maternal love for us. That is why I beg you, my beloved brethren, to look upon her, to honour her, and to love her as our beloved mother, and that we make it our chief devotion to attach our minds and hearts firmly to her, to follow her faithfully in everything, and to obey all her orders corde magno et animo volenti. In so doing let us find our glory and our joy, and consider everything else as pure folly."<sup>(1)</sup>

In Le Royaume de Jésus (2) he observes that submission to God's will is the most universal of virtues, the use of which ought to be most habitual with us, "for," says he, "every hour there are occasions for renouncing our own will and submitting ourselves to that of God."

How God reveals

His will to us.

Elsewhere he remarks that the divine will is very easy to know and that God reveals it to us in five principal ways. These are: (1) by His commandments; (2) by the evangelic counsels (3) by the laws, rules and obligations of our state in life (4) by those in authority over us who are charged with our guidance; (5) by public or private events, whether great or small, with which we are connected, for nothing happens in this world save by the absolute will of God or by His permissive will. "And therefore,- says the Saint,---how ever little we open the eyes of faith it will be very easy for us always and everywhere to know the holy will of God, and this knowledge leads us to love that will and to submit ourselves to it."

So as to induce us to act in this way, St. John reminds us that the will of God, both His permissive will and His absolute will, is infinitely holy, just, adorable, and lovable, and that moreover, God wishes only what is conducive to His glory and the good of those who love Him: Diligentibus Deum omnia co-operantur in bonum. Finally he recalls to us that---Our Lord undertook from the first moment of His life and His entry into the world, never to do His own will, but always that of His Father, as St. Paul testifies when writing to the Hebrews 'Wherefore, when he cometh into the world he saith . "Behold I come. In the head of the book it is written of me that I should do thy will, O God. (1)' Similarly He Himself said: 'I came down from Heaven, not to do my own will but the will of Him that sent me.' (2) And to this He was true. Although His own will was holy and adorable, yet He gave it up completely in order to follow that of His Father, unceasingly protesting on all occasions (even as in the Garden of Olives on the eve of His death): 'Father, not my will, but thine be done.' (3)

Inducements to self-abandonment.

"Now if we reflect well on these truths we will have great facility in submitting ourselves in everything to the adorable will of God. For, if we remember that God orders and disposes everything that happens in the world, that He does so for His glory and our greater good, and that His dispositions are most just and loving, then we will not attribute the happenings of life to chance, to the malice of the devil, or to man, but rather to the will of God. And we will love and embrace that will tenderly, knowing with certainty that it is most holy and lovable, that it orders and permits nothing save for our greater good and the greater glory of our good God. And that glory we must love before everything else, since we are only in the world for the purpose of loving and advancing the glory of God.

"And if we attentively reflect that Jesus, our Head, abandoned and ignored a will so holy and divine as His own, so as to fulfil the rigorous and severe will of His Father in regard to Him, a will that involved His great sufferings and His cruel and shameful death; on behalf of His enemies; if we reflect on this, can we find any difficulty in giving up our own depraved will, corrupted as it is by sin, so that the holy, gentle, and lovable will of God may live and reign in its place?

"Therein," says the Saint, always faithful to his principles, -consists Christian submission and obedience; viz., in continuing that perfect submission and obedience that Jesus rendered, not only to the wishes that His Father revealed to Him by His own mouth, but also to those that He revealed to Him by His Holy Mother, by St. Joseph, by the angel that guided Him down into Egypt, by the Jews, by Herod, and by Pilate. For not only did He submit Himself to His Father, He also subjected Himself to all creatures for His Father's glory and for love of us."

An exhortation to practise this.

Then St. John exhorts us to submit lovingly to the divine will in whatever way it may, be manifested to us: «Have,» says he, "a continual resolution of dying and suffering every kind of torment rather than contravene the smallest of God's commandments, and have a general disposition of following His counsels according to the light and grace that He gives you, your condition in life, and the advice you receive from your director.

"Respect and honour those who are in authority over you, as holding on earth Jesus Christ's place in regard to you; and follow their will as the will of Christ, provided that they do not order what is manifestly contrary to what God orders or forbids.

"St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, goes much further than this, for he exhorts us to submit ourselves to every human creature, for love of God: Subjecti estote omni humanae creaturo, Propter Deum; ( 1 ) and St. Paul would have us consider all others our superiors: Superiores sibi invicem arbitrantur. ( 2 ) Following the divinely inspired teaching of these two great Apostles, we should respect and honour all kinds of people as our superiors, and be ready to renounce our own judgment and will in favour of theirs. For as Christians, who must live with the sentiments and dispositions of Christ, we must, with Him, be determined never to do our own will, but in everything to obey the will of God. And in case of doubt, i.e., when we are not certain what is the will of God in any given circumstances, we must do the will of someone else, considering all men our superiors and submitting to their will in whatever is possible and is not contrary to God's commands and the obligations of our state, but always giving the preference to those who have most authority and right over us.

Submit yourself in all things to God's good pleasure.

"Look upon the laws, rules, and obligations of your state, office or condition, as the infallible marks of what God asks of you. Jesus gave the most exact honour and obedience, and was most perfectly subject, not only to the rules which His Father gave Him and to the hours and minutes which the Father fixed for each of His actions, but also to human laws. So, too, do you subject yourself to the rules and obligations of your condition, to the hours and moments at which you should fulfil the duties of your office, and even to human and civil laws. And do all that for love of Him who, through love of you, has preceded you in this subjection.

"In all that happens, whether by the absolute will of God or by His permissive will, adore, bless, and love both the one and the other, and with His beloved Son, and as far as possible with the same love, submission, and humility, say to Him: Pater, non quod ego volo, sed quod tu; non mea voluntas, sed tua fiat'. (1) And again: Ita, Pater, quoniam sic fuit placitum ante te. ( 2 )

"Whenever you feel any inclination or desire for anything, at once cast it from you at the feet of Jesus; and should the inclination be a powerful one, do not cease to renounce it and to beg Jesus to take it from you, until you feel yourself ready to desire the contrary, if He would have it so.

"And whenever there comes to you the thought or fear of losing your health, or your reputation, or your goods, your parents, your children, your friends, or anything of the sort, renounce your will at the feet of Jesus, and adore, love and bless His, as though what you fear had come to pass; and address Him in this fashion:

" 'O Jesus, I renounce all my desires and inclinations at your feet. With all my heart I adore, love and praise your most holy and lovable will; and, despite all my repugnance and contrary feelings, I desire to love, bless and glorify you in all that it has pleased you to ordain, or shall please you to ordain henceforth for me and for those connected with me, in time and in eternity.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Blessed be your most holy will. Let my will be destroyed for ever, and may your will reign and be eternally fulfilled on earth as in heaven!'-

To practise submission to God's will in this manner is in itself a considerable accomplishment; but St. John exhorts us to rise yet higher and to find our joy in this submission:

"Not only," he says, "did Our Lord Jesus Christ do

And do so, not with resignation,

the whole will of His Father, and submit to Him in everything for love of Him, but furthermore He found all His contentment and happiness in doing so: Meus cibus est, ut faciam voluntatem ejus qui misit me', (1) i.e., I know of nothing more desirable or more delightful than to do the will of my Father. For in fact in everything He did He found infinite contentment since they were His Father's will. In His sufferings He found joy and happiness of the spirit, because they were the good pleasure of His Father. And therefore the Holy Spirit when speaking of the day of His passion and death calls it 'the day of the joy of his heart. (2) Similarly, He found peace and contentment of heart in everything that He saw happen in the world, since He saw in everything only the most lovable will of His Father.

"So also, as Christians bound to adopt the feelings and dispositions of their Head, we must not only submit ourselves to God and to every circumstance for love of God, but also find all our happiness and Paradise in doing so. This is the sovereign perfection of Christian submission, as expressed by the prayer that we say every day: Fiat voluntas tua, sicut in coelo et in terra.

(2). Cant. iii, 11.

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

Now, in heaven the Saints find such happiness in doing the will of God that many of them who see their fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, wives and children, in hell, rejoice in the results that the justice of God has worked upon them; for since the Saints are but one with God, they have only His own feelings and will. But God wishes His justice to be exercised on those wretches who have thoroughly deserved it, and He takes infinite pleasure in the effects of His justice, as well as in those of His mercy. And that is why the Saints also find pleasure therein: Laetabitur justus cum viderit vindictam; manus suas lavabit in sanguine peccatoris.' (1) It is thus, then, that we must find our joy in the effects of the divine will, since we must try to accomplish it on earth as in heaven.

"That," remarks our Saint, "is the way always to live happily and to have heaven on earth. Certainly we would be very difficult to please, if we were not content with what satisfies God, the Angels and the Saints who rejoice not so much in the great glory that is theirs as in the fulfilment of the will of God in them, i.e., in the fact that God finds pleasure in glorifying them. And we will have no ground for complaint at being in the Paradise of the Mother of God, of the Son of God, and of the Eternal Father."

necessarily felt, but it resides in the will.

But lest we should misunderstand his meaning in saying this, the Saint adds: «I do not say that you must experience a sensible contentment and joy in all that you do and suffer, and in all that happens in the world (that is the lot only of the Blessed); but I refer here to joy and contentment of the spirit and of the will which, with the Grace of God, you can easily have, since you have only to say: 'My God, I desire for love of you to find all my contentment in willing, doing, or suffering this or that, because it is your will.' By that means you will find happiness of spirit and will in everything. And furthermore, if this practice be repeated several times it will lessen and eventually destroy the difficulty and natural repugnance that you feel in many matters, and will cause you to find sweetness and happiness, even sensible sweetness and happiness, in those things in which hitherto you felt but bitterness and aversion."

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

And he tells us that in acting thus: "you will begin your Paradise while yet in this world, you will enjoy perpetual peace and happiness, and you will do your actions as God performs His actions and as Jesus performed His when He was on earth, i.e., in a spirit of joy and contentment, which is what He desired for us and asked for us from the Father on the eve of His death, saying: Ut habeant gaudium meum impletum in semetipsis. ( 1 )

"That is supremely perfect Christian submission and pure love of God; for the sovereign degree of divine love consists in doing, suffering, and accepting everything for the love of God, with joy and contentment. And a man who has this holy view of what happens in the world, who in this disposition suffers the hardships that befall Him, and who performs his actions in this way, will give more glory and pleasure to God, and will advance further in one day in the way of His love, than he would in the whole of his life if he were to act in any other way."

F. CHARITY FOR OUR NEIGHBOUR

Love of God and love of our neighbour are quite inseparable. "These are not two loves," writes St. John, "they make but one single love. We must love our neighbour with the same heart and love as that with which we love God, for we have to love him, not in himself, or for himself, but in God and for God; or rather, it is God Himself whom we must love in our neighbour.

"That is the way in which Jesus loves us: He loves us in His Father and for His Father, or rather He loves His Father in us, and He wishes us to love each other even as He loves us. 'This is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you.' (1)

The model of Christian charity.

"It is in this precisely," says Père Eudes, "that Christian charity consists: in loving each other as Jesus loves us. But He loves us so greatly that He gives us all His goods, His treasures, and Himself, and He uses all His powers and all the resources of His wisdom and goodness to benefit us. So great is His charity towards us that for a long time He endures our faithlessness with mildness and patience, and when we have fallen He is the first to seek us out, though thereby we have offended Him who has shown us nothing but kindness and seems in some sort even to prefer our happiness and interests to His own, since during His suffering life He underwent every kind of inconvenience, misery and torment to deliver us and to make us happy. In a word, so great is His love for us that He uses His whole life, His body and soul, His time and eternity, His divinity and His humanity, all that He is and has, for us, so that He is all charity and love for us in His thoughts, words, and deeds.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

"There we see the model of Christian charity, and also what He expects of us when He commands us to love each other as He loves us. That is how we should love each other, doing to each other what Christ has done for us according as He gives us the power."

How to think of others.

And then, to lead us to love our neighbour as we should, St. John invites us to see our neighbour in God and to see God in him: "See," he says, "your neighbour in God and God in him, i.e., regard him as having issued from the heart and the goodness of God, as a participation in God, as one created to return to God and to dwell one day in the bosom of God there to glorify Him eternally, one, in fact, in whom God will be glorified eternally, whether by His mercy or by His justice. Look upon him as one whom God loves, in whatever state he may be; for God loves all that He has created, even the very devils in so far as they are creatures, and he hates nothing that He has made. It is only sin, and He certainly did not make that, that He holds in horror. Look upon your neighbour as one who has issued from the same principle as you, as the child of the same Father, created for the same end, belonging to the same Lord, and bought at the same price: the precious blood of Jesus Christ. Remember that he is a member of the same Head, and of the same body, which is the Church of Christ; that he is nourished with the same food, the precious flesh and blood of Jesus; and that consequently you should have but one mind, one soul, and one heart with him.

Finally, look on him as one who is the Temple of the Living God, who bears in himself the image of the Most Holy Trinity and the character of Jesus Christ, who is, indeed, a portion of Jesus Christ, flesh of His flesh, bone of His bone. Reflect that it was for him that Christ so toiled and suffered, and that Our Lord recommends him to you as Himself, assuring you that 'what you do to the least of these (i.e. those who believe in Him), my brethren, you do it unto me.'"(1)

"If we truly weigh and consider the importance of these truths," cries the Saint, "what charity, what respect, and what honour we will show each other! Then would we really fear to offend Christian union and charity, either by thoughts, or words, or deeds, and would be ready to do and to suffer everything for others. With what charity and patience we would bear with and excuse the faults of others; and with what gentleness, modesty, and restraint we would converse with each other, remembering St. Paul's words: 'Let every one of you please his neighbour unto good, to edification' (2) May Jesus, the God of love and of charity, impress these truths and dispositions on our minds and hearts!"

St. Paul, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, briefly portrays true Christian charity: "Charity, - he says, "is patient, is kind; charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely, is not puffed up, is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never falleth away.» (3)

St. John Eudes loved to quote this text, and he

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

urges us to read it and frequently to meditate on it. In his Coeur admirable he dwells at rather greater length on the practice of charity.

Practical advice on charity.

"Let your chief care," he says, "be to banish from your mind, your heart, your mouth, your ears, your hands, and all the powers of your soul and body, every thing that is in the smallest degree contrary to holy charity. Never let your mind judge or condemn any one, so that you yourself may not be judged or condemned. Permit no animosity, aversion, or coldness towards your neighbour to enter your heart, and as soon as you perceive any such thing renounce it immediately and make interior acts of charity.... Take great care not to let yourself say anything harsh or ill-natured, anything cutting or injurious. Hold all slander in detestation, and make sure that you never say anything to the disadvantage of another, and that you close your ears to everything that could wound charity. Set about so thoroughly mortifying the passion of anger that henceforth it has no part in you; and never let your self be led into contentions and arguments, but rather willingly ignore your own views and leave the field free to those of others.

"Above all, have a horror of accursed envy and jealousy, the detestable sin of Lucifer and Cain. At the very first moment in which you feel it within you, humble yourself greatly in the utmost confusion at finding yourself amongst the followers of Cain. Utterly renounce those pernicious feelings, rejoice in the advantages that God gives your neighbour, whether in matters temporal or spiritual; thank the divine goodness for them and beg God to increase them more and more.

It must be not merely negative
but positive.

"It is not enough that you should refrain from doing evil to your neighbour; charity obliges you to do him all the good, that you can, and Our Lord Himself commands you to love others as He loves you.

Therefore be quick to help your neighbour in his needs and to do for him all the good that you can; but take great care not to do it for your own satisfaction or interest, nor with the intention of receiving a like service from him, but purely in order to please God.

"Bear, with patience and gentleness, your neighbour's faults, so far as you can without wounding charity. When he speaks to you angrily reply without emotion. Strive to satisfy him so far as would be reasonable; and sometimes inconvenience yourself for his sake and deprive yourself of some satisfaction so as to please him. Always keep before your mind Our Lord's commandment: 'Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, pray for them that calumniate and persecute you, bless those who speak evil of you, so that you may be children of my Heavenly Father who makes His sun to shine upon the evil as well as on the good.' And finally, try with all your heart to imitate Our Lord in the goodness, the kindness, the patience and the meekness that He continually shows you.» (1)

Sincerity.

In Le Royaume de Jésus the Saint recommends us to transform into acts of charity the marks of honour that we give our neighbour. "When addressing or complimenting him," he says, "never allow your tongue to utter pleasing (1). Oeuvres Complètes, VII, pp. 476 sq.

words that are not from your heart; for there is this difference between holy and Christian souls and those that are worldly, that while both use the same compliments and forms of speech in the ordinary intercourse of life, the former do so from the heart and in the spirit of charity and Christian truth, whereas the latter do so with the mouth only and in the spirit of lying and falseness."

And he elsewhere observes that to act in this Christian way a general intention suffices, without each time making a formal act of charity: "I do not say," he writes, "that it is always necessary to have your mind applied to making this intention every time that you address anyone or make a polite remark or do anyone a service, although it would be a very good thing to have this disposition; but, at least, have a general intention in the bottom of your soul to do everything in the spirit of the charity of Jesus, and try to renew it before God whenever He puts the thought of it into your mind. "

Readiness to forgive.

And then, not only does the Saint remind us of the law of forgiving, but he urges us to go ourselves to those who have offended us, without waiting for them to make excuses. "If anyone has offended you," he writes, "or if you have offended anyone, do not wait till he comes to you; but remember that Our Lord said: 'If therefore thou offer thy gift at the altar, and there thou remember that thy brother hath anything against thee, leave there thy offering before the altar and go first to be reconciled to thy brother.' the fact that He is the first to seek us out although in return for all the favours He bestows upon us He receives only every kind of offence from us, go you to seek out him who has offended you or whom you have offended, and be reconciled to him, being ready to speak with him with all kindness, peace, and humility."(1)

Zeal for the salvation of souls.

Connected with charity is zeal for the salvation of souls and indeed it is the most perfect exercise of charity. It is chiefly in his writings on the priesthood that St. John deals with this subject, and we shall see later on how lofty his views on it were. But he also touches on it in Le Royaume de Jésus, for zeal is in his eyes a virtue that must be practised by the laity also.

"Above all," he tells us, "have a very special charity for the souls of all men, but particularly the souls of those who are connected with you or dependent upon you, ensuring their salvation in every way that is open to you. For St. Paul tells us that 'if any man hath not care of his own and especially of those of his house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel.'(2) Remember that they cost the labours and sufferings of thirty-four years, the blood and life of a God, and also that the greatest, the divinest work and that most pleasing to Jesus of all that you can do in the world is to labour with Him for the salvation of the souls that are so dear and precious to Him. And therefore give yourself to Him to labour in every way that He asks of you. Consider yourself quite unworthy to be employed in so great a work; but when the opportunity arises of helping in the salvation of some poor soul (which will be frequently, if you are careful), never let it pass by. First ask the necessary grace from Our Lord, and then busy yourself according to your condition and the power that He gives you, using all the care and affection that is possible, realising that it is of more consequence than if it were a matter of temporal goods, or of the corporal life of all the people in the world. Do all this for the pure love of Jesus so that God may be eternally loved and glorified by those souls, knowing that you should look upon it as a great favour and blessing to be allowed to use all your time, all your health, all your life and the treasures of the whole world, if you had them, to help in the salvation of a single soul. For Jesus Christ gave all His blood and devoted all His time, His life, and His strength for that soul.

"O Jesus, lover of souls and zealous for the salvation of the human race, implant your ardent zeal and charity for souls in the hearts of all Christians.» (1)

G. LOVE OF THE CROSS

St. John's spiritual teaching is not meant for cowardly and nondescript souls who have a horror of hardship or of real effort. It is intended for generous souls who know how to deny themselves and do not shrink from sacrifice. Consequently we cannot be surprised to find that love of the cross finds an important place in his teaching. In L'Enfance admirable he warns us that "the cross of Jesus, which is the origin and source of Christian grace, is also its end, for grace is given us that we may crucify ourselves with Him." (2)

His Royaume de Jésus contains a profession of love of the cross which he invites us to renew frequently.(1) The crosses of life are numerous and varied, but the most difficult are those that we encounter in the spiritual life. St. John warns us that these will not be lacking to us:

Crosses are a great favour from God.

«The whole of the life of Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is our Father and our Head, was full of toil bitterness, and sufferings, both exterior and interior, and therefore it is not reasonable that His children and members should travel another road. And He gives us not a cause for complaint but a great grace when He sends us what He Himself accepted in life, and makes us worthy of drinking with Him the chalice which His Father so lovingly gave Him. He gives it to us with as much love as that with which His Father gave it to Him. This, indeed, is how he shows His love for us, and marks His pleasure in the small services that we do Him.

"And so," continues the Saint, "do not deceive yourself and imagine that the way to God is strewn with roses and delights. You will find many thorns and much labour on your journey; but despite all this always love Our Lord faithfully, and His love will change the gall into honey, and the bitterness into sweetness. Do more than this: take a resolution of finding all your happiness throughout life in the cross and in trials, because by these you can most glorify God and prove your love, and because Jesus your Father, your Spouse, and your Head, found in these His joy and His paradise while in the world. Did not the Holy Spirit call the day of His Passion 'the day of the joy of his heart'?

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Leaving on one side the other crosses that may be laid upon us, the Saint concentrates on showing us the use we must make of "interior spiritual afflictions, such as dryness, sadness, weariness, interior fears and troubles, disgust with the things of God, and all the other spiritual crosses met with by souls who serve God. For it is extremely important to know how to make good use of these things, and to remain faithful to God while enduring them.--- Here, then, is the advice that he gives to souls of good will:

«1. Adore Jesus in the sufferings, privations and humiliations, the troubles and sadness that His holy soul bore, as He Himself testifies in the words: 'My soul is filled with evils; Now is my soul troubled; My soul is sorrowful even unto death.' Adore the dispositions of His divine soul while in this state, and the good use He made of it for the glory of His Father. Give yourself to Him that you may share these dispositions and may make good use of your trials, which He has made His own. Offer them to Him in honour of His own, and beg Him to unite them to His, to bless and sanctify them, to supply for your failures, and to use your crosses for the glory of His Father even as He used His own.

«2. Do not occupy yourself in seeking the particular cause of the state in which you are, or in examining your sins, but humble yourself in face of all your faults and infidelities in general, and adore the justice of God, being ready in homage to His justice to bear all the trials it may please Him to send you, and yet considering yourself quite unworthy that His justice should take the trouble to notice you. For we have to realise that the smallest of our sins makes us deserve to be entirely forsaken by God. And when we are in a state of dryness and disgust with regard to the things of God, and can scarcely think of God or pray to Him save with a thousand distractions, we must remember that we are quite unworthy of any grace or consolation, that Our Lord does us a great favour in allowing the earth to support us, and that we have over and over again deserved to be with the damned who throughout all eternity can have only horrible and blasphemous thoughts of God. By such considerations we must profoundly humble ourselves before God when in this state of dryness.

«For that is God's plan for us,, when in that state, and that is what He expects of us. He would have us realise what we are when left to ourselves, and desires that we should become truly wise by a profound realisation of our nothingness, so that when He gives us some good thought, pious sentiment, or other grace, our pride and self-love shall not appropriate it, attributing it to our own carefulness and co-operation; but we shall refer it to Him, realising that it comes not from ourselves but solely from His mercy, and therefore putting all our trust in his pure goodness.

«3. Take great care not to let yourself be carried away by sadness and discouragement, but rejoice by reason of three things: Rejoice that Jesus is always Jesus, i.e., always God, always great and lovable, always in the same state of glory and of happiness, so that nothing can lessen His joy: Scitote quoniam Dominus ipse est Deus, and say to Him: 'It is enough for me to know that you are always Jesus. Be ever Jesus, and I shall be content whatever may befall me.'

"Rejoice also that Jesus is your God and is all yours, and that you belong to so good and kind a Lord, remembering the words of the Royal Prophet: Beatus populus, cujus Dominus Deus ejus!

Never relax your service because of aridities.

"And then rejoice in the knowledge that it is in these trials that you can most purely serve Him, and can show Him that you truly love Him simply for the love of Himself, and not for the consolations that He formerly gave you. And in order to show in practice the fidelity and purity of your love for Him, be careful to do all your ordinary actions with all the purity and perfection possible to you. So, too, the more coldness, cowardice, and weariness you feel in yourself, the greater recourse you must have to Him who is your strength and your all, the more completely you must give yourself to Him, and the more frequently you must raise your mind to Him. Do not cease to make frequent acts of love to Him, caring nought that you cannot make them with your previous fervour and consolation; for what does it matter whether you are happy or not, provided that Jesus is happy? Now very often what we do in this state of dryness and spiritual desolation pleases him more (provided that we try to do it with a pure intention of honouring Him) than that which we do with great fervour and sensible devotion; for the latter is generally accompanied by self-love, whereas the former is purified of this.

'Lastly, be in no way discouraged by the defects and cowardice of which you are guilty while in this state; but humble yourself before Our Lord, beg Him to repair them by His great mercy, and have confidence that in His bounty He will do it. Above all, always preserve a firm resolution, whatever may happen, to serve and love Him perfectly, and to be faithful to Him to your last breath, trusting always that He will give you this grace by His great loving-kindness despite all your infidelities."(1)

H. MARTYRDOM AND THE SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM

The grace of martyrdom is the most signal favour that Jesus can grant to His faithful servants; and these can give Him no greater mark of love than that of sacrificing their lives for Him. And so martyrdom is, as St. John says, the perfection and the consummation of the Christian life. But it is rare in our Christian countries, and for that reason spiritual writers do not generally discuss it. But in this St. John is an exception. He himself, in 1637, made a vow to endure martyrdom if the occasion should arise, and he thought that Christians should always be ready to suffer it for Christ. And so we get the chapters that are devoted to this topic in Le Royaume de Jésus. One hundred years after his death a violent persecution of the clergy broke out in France and many of his children had the honour of shedding their blood for Jesus Christ. Is it rash to suppose that meditation on the teachings of their Father had helped to prepare them for the heroic act that terminated their lives?

Leaving on one side the promises made to the martyrs, whom Our Lord, speaking through the Church, calls His saints, sancti mei, and the expositions given by St. John Eudes of the nature and conditions of martyrdom, we will confine ourselves here to the reasons which, should the occasion arise, oblige us to submit to it, and to the manner of preparing for it, or, which comes to the same thing, to the spirit of martyrdom.

Why we must accept martyrdom, should the occasion arise.

The reasons for undergoing martyrdom are numerous, and St. John indicates seven of them. The first one he mentions is that we belong to Jesus on many considerations, and that therefore we are obliged to live and to die for Him.

His second reason is that God created us for His glory and that we can do nothing better for His glory than to sacrifice our life to Him.

The third is that we are obliged to love God with our whole heart, with our whole soul, and with all our strength, and that the best means of doing this is to die for Him.

The fourth reason is that Jesus always had and still has a keen desire of suffering and dying for His Father's glory and for love of mankind, and since He can no longer do so Himself, He seeks souls in whom He can renew and continue His sacrifice.

The fifth flows from the profession we made at baptism "to cling to Jesus Christ, to follow and imitate Him, and consequently to be victims consecrated and sacrificed to His glory. Now this obliges us to follow and to imitate Him in His death as well as in His life, and to be always ready to sacrifice our lives for Him . . . in accordance with the holy words: 'For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.' "(1)

The sixth is derived from the fact that we are members of Jesus Christ. "Jesus being our Head and we His members,- says our Saint, "just as we must live with His life, so we are obliged to die with His death since it is quite evident that the members must live and die with the life and death of their head, in accordance with St. Paul's words: 'Always bearing about in our body the mortification of Jesus. . . . For we who live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake; that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our mortal flesh. ...(1)

The seventh is the most powerful reason, and it is the sanguinary martyrdom and most dolorous death suffered by Our Lord Jesus Christ for love of us on the cross. "For," says St. John, "this most loving Saviour was not content with using His life on our behalf, He also wished to die for love of us, and He died with the cruellest and most ignominious death that could possibly be. He laid down a life, a single moment of which was worth more than all the lives of men and angels, and, were it necessary, He would be ready to die again a thousand times. And, in fact, He is continually on our altars as a victim: there He is immolated every day and every hour, and will be until the day of judgment. The unbloody and no longer sorrowful Sacrifice of the altar will be offered up until the end of the world, to testify to us thereby that He is ready, if there be need, to be sacrificed just as often for love of us, with a sacrifice as bloody and dolorous as was that of the cross."

After these reflections St. John tells us that he is not surprised that so many Christians have rejoiced to suffer and to die for Jesus; and he adds: «But I am astonished to see that now our love of such a Saviour is so cold, so cowardly in suffering the smallest thing, so attached to such a miserable and mean life as is that of this world, and so far from being ready to sacrifice it for Him who gave up for us so worthy and so precious life. How can we call ourselves Christians and adore crucified God, a God agonising and dying on the Cross, a God who for love of us gives up so noble a life, and for the same purpose sacrifices Himself every day before our eyes upon our altars: how can we adore such an one and not be ready to sacrifice for Him all that is dearest to us in the world, even our very life which, moreover, belongs to Him for many reasons? Surely we are not truly Christians, if these are not our dispositions.-»

How to train our souls to be ready for it.

As for the spirit of martyrdom in which every Christian should try to live, the Saint describes it as follows: "It is a strong and constant spirit which can neither be shaken nor overcome by promises or by threats, by gentleness or by sharpness, and which fears nothing save God and sin. It is a spirit of profound humility, which has a horror of vanity and of worldly glory, and loves contempt and humiliations. It is a spirit that is distrustful of self and full of trust in Our Lord Jesus, as being our strength in virtue of which we can do everything. It is a spirit of perfect detachment from the world and from everything in the world. For those who are to sacrifice their life to God must also sacrifice everything else for Him. And it is a spirit of ardent love for our Lord Jesus Christ, a love that leads those animated with it to do and to suffer all things for love of Him who has done and suffered all things for them, and which so fires and intoxicates them that for love of Him they desire and seek out mortifications and sufferings as a joy, and flee with horror from the Pleasures and delights of this world, as from hell.

"That is the spirit of martyrdom, and do you pray Our Lord, the King of Martyrs, to fill you with this spirit. Pray the Queen of Martyrs and also all the Martyrs themselves to obtain this spirit for you from the Son of God by their prayers. Have a special devotion to all the holy Martyrs, and also be careful to pray to God on behalf of all those who must endure martyrdom, that He may give them the spirit and grace of martyrdom. But especially pray for those who will have to suffer in the time of the persecution by Antichrist, which will be the most cruel of all persecutions.

"Finally, try by imitating them to make your life a perfect resemblance of the life of the Martyrs, and which is more, of the life of Jesus and Mary, the King and the Queen of Martyrs, so that they may make you worthy of being like them in your death."(1)

M. Joly relates that when about to write the life of Père Eudes he went to see a priest in Paris whose lengthy sufferings and supernatural lights were well known, and asked him if he knew his hero. The Abbé Huvelin (for he, it would seem, was the priest in question) replied: "He was a harsh saint." Yes a harsh saint. Not that he was hard with anyone, whoever they might be; his biographer tells us on the contrary that he was a model of gentleness. But with souls of good will he never hesitated to put forward Christian doctrine in its loftiest and most austere aspect, and what he preached to others he was himself the first to put into practice.

CHAPTER VI

THE PRIESTHOOD

ST. JOHN'S teachings on the priesthood scarcely differ from those of Cardinal de Bérulle and Père de Condren, (1) but he puts them forward in his own distinctive style and pushes them to their furthest consequences. In this chapter we will see what he has to say on the dignity and holiness of the priest, as well as on zeal for the salvation of souls, and also his view of the Feast of the Priesthood which he instituted.

(1) In his book L'École française (pp. 8-9), M. Letourneau praises his teaching on the priesthood in these terms: «I have certainly no thought of declaring that other schools do not also give us most praiseworthy teachings on the priesthood, its functions and obligations; and I am not ignorant of what many of the followers of St. Ignatius and of St. Alphonsus have written on this great subject. None the less, I am inclined to think that we French priests will find in our own French school the works that are most suited to our piety. It would be difficult to find elsewhere the brilliant guidance that has been given to us by this school from the appearance of M. Olier's Traité des Saints Ordres to that of Père Giraud's Prêtre et Hostie. Even St. Francis de Sales, so excellent, so luminous, and so perfect in all his books on the Christian life, offers us nothing similar on the priesthood. St. Alphonsus knew none of the works of this school save Père de Condren's little book on the Sacrifice of the Mass, which he praised to a remarkable extent; and we may well believe that if he had known the other writings of our masters on the priesthood of Jesus Christ he would have shown the same admiration.» Cf. Pourrat: Le Sacerdoce, Doctrine de l'École française, Paris, 1931.

A. THE DIGNITY OF THE PRIEST

When he treats of the priesthood St. John first presents it to us as the greatest and most admirable of all orders in heaven and on earth.

At a time when nobility of blood still enjoyed all its old prestige, and when human dignities allured many by their glamour, the Saint took pains to point out that the priesthood is the highest nobility and the most sublime dignity of which we can possibly conceive. He delighted in proclaiming that priests, sprung from the royal and divine blood of Jesus Christ, are the first-born of the sons of God, the high dignitaries of His palace, the chief officials of His court, and the ministers of His omnipotence. He also called them sovereign judges whose sentences shall endure for eternity, and princes and even kings in the kingdom of the Great King, since Jesus deigned to associate them with His own royalty as well as His priesthood, as St. Luke declares with the words: Ego dispono vobis sicut disposuit mihi Pater meus regnum. (1).

state.

Though filled with veneration for the religious Orders which make the Church fragrant with the perfume of their virtues, and which at that time were renewing their fervour with admirable vigour, St. John would never expressly compare them with the priesthood. But his opinion on this point could never be doubted. However great and illustrious the religious Orders might be, their glory pales before that of the priesthood of which, as St. John (following Bérulle) often repeated, Jesus Christ is the "Founder" and the "Head," and which is, as he also said, the first and the most holy of all the Orders, and that which "Sanctifies all the others," But the priesthood and the religious state are not mutually exclusive. Often, on the contrary, they are superimposed on each other, so that the same men can have the honour of belonging at once to a religious Order and to the divine Order of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ. Possibly that is why Père Eudes always abstained from comparing the two.

Compared with the Angels,

But, on the other hand, he did not hesitate to compare the priesthood with the angelic hierarchies and to proclaim the priest to be superior to Angels and Archangels, not in nature, but in greatness and power. Has a single one of them, he asked, received, like the priest, the power of effacing sin and of communicating the life of grace, of causing Jesus to be born within souls and of immolating Him every day upon the altar?(1) Those are powers of an entirely divine order which markedly raise up the priest above all the Angels in heaven.

and with Our Lady.

He also loved to compare the priest with the Blessed Virgin. Not that he ever allowed himself to exalt the priest above the Mother of God in any respect whatever. On the contrary, every time that he places the priest above all the glories of earth or heaven, he expressly excepts the divine maternity.(2) But in the relationships of the priest with Jesus Christ and with souls, he saw a participation in the double maternity of Mary, and that is why he loved to call her the - Mother" (1) and sometimes the "Queen" and the "sister" of priests, (2) and to hail them as "images of the Blessed Virgin." (3)

The Holy Trinity and the priesthood.

But when he strove to grasp the greatness of the priesthood St. John went even higher, and ascended even to the adorable Trinity, contemplating therein the principle and end of the priesthood and of all its greatness. (4) He even went so far as to see in the

(From the Mass of the Priesthood.)

The expression "sister of priests- recalls that of "Virgin~priest" to be found in the hymn Quam pulchre graditur, sung at St. Sulpice on the Feast of the Presentation. One verse runs:

Pins IX makes use of this expression in a Brief dated August 25, 1873: «Adeo arete (Maria) se junxit divini Filii sui sacrificio, ut Virgo sacerdos appellata fuerit ab Ecclesiae Patribus."

"Imago Matris Virginis, Lucerna Christi corporis, Caput, sinus, cor, ubera Quis tanta laudet munera?" (From the hymn for Matins in the Office of the Priesthood.)

Père Eudes added a note: "Sacerdotes Virginis Matris imago dicuntur, quia sicut per eam, sic per ipsos, Christus formatur, datur fidelibus, et Deo immolatur." Cf. Mémorial, Part V. Meditation on devotion to Mary.

functions of the priest a sort of participation in the noblest operations of the three Divine Persons. For is not the priest's power of producing Our Blessed Lord in the Eucharist and of forming Him in the souls of the faithful, a striking image of the paternity of the Father? And in carrying out the sacerdotal functions does he not continue here below the work of the Incarnate Word? And similarly, does not his work of extending the kingdom of God in hearts, purifying them from the stain of sin, and infusing sanctifying grace into them: does not this closely associate him with the sanctifying action of the Holy Ghost? Such thoughts are often to be found in the Saint's writings. But nowhere has he set them out more precisely or with greater devotion than in this uplifting passage in his Manuel de piété:

"My God, Thou art the principle and source of all the dignity, power and holiness of the Christian priesthood, for from Thee proceeds all goodness. Thou art the end of all its functions, for they have no other end than the honour due to Thy divine Majesty. Thou art the consecration, the benediction, and the sanctification of all the priests of Thy Church. It is by the special election and vocation of Thy adorable will that they are chosen and called to such a lofty dignity. By a communication of Thy admirable Paternity, O Holy Father, they are made the fathers of the children of light. It is by participation in Thy divine priesthood, O Jesus, only Son of God, that they are the sacrificers of the Most High. It is by a special effusion of Thy divine holiness, O Holy Spirit, that they are the sanctifiers of souls. And it is in them and by them, O King of Heaven, that Thou makest Thyself visible upon earth and there dost perform works that belong only to infinite power and goodness. Finally, Thou art their portion, their treasure and their glory on earth and in heaven.' (1)

Jesus Christ the source of the priesthood.

Of all the relations of the priest with the three Divine Persons the most important to note for an understanding of the Saint's teaching on the priesthood is that which unites the priest to the Incarnate Word. Jesus Christ is the «Sovereign Priest» He has been chosen from all eternity to be the sole mediator between God and man (2), and it is by Him that mankind must render to God the worship of adoration and love, of praise and expiation, of supplication and thanksgiving to which He has a right. Moreover, God has chosen to communicate through Him alone the graces needed by men for their salvation. Accordingly Jesus Christ received the fullness of the grace of the priesthood, and by a unique sacrifice He consummated the work of salvation that it was His mission to accomplish. (3) He came upon earth in the fullness of time, as St. Paul says, (4) and all the priesthoods previous to His own were but its shadow and figure, and if they could produce certain fruits, that was only by an anticipated application of the sacrifice of the cross. And since His ascent into Heaven Jesus has not ceased to be the Priest of the Most High; His priesthood is eternal and can never be abrogated or super sedes. But, so that its functions upon earth may be continued, He has selected representatives, vicars, whom He associates in His dignity and clothes with His power, so that they can minister to divine worship in His name and in His place.

Unity of the Catholic priesthood with that of Christ.

The Catholic priesthood, therefore, is not distinct from that of Jesus Christ; it is but an extension of it and a partial participation in it. There are not two priesthoods; there is but one, and that exists originally and supremely in Jesus Christ, and from Him is communicated to His ministers.

And this unity of the priesthood is clearly revealed to us in the Gospels. In his Epistle to the Hebrews St. Paul has made it perfectly clear though he puts it in a different way. St. John Eudes frequently touches on the subject and, indeed, we might say that all his teaching on the priesthood flows from it.

"You are of the royal and divine blood of Jesus Christ," he says, addressing priests; "you have a place in His genealogy; you are indeed His brothers and His members in a more eminent degree than are other Christians, for you are clothed with His royal priesthood, your priesthood is one with His, and you make but one priest together with the Supreme Priest. So much is this the case that just as there is but one priesthood in the Christian religion—Unum est sacerdotium, (1) which is originally and supremely in Jesus Christ and by extension and communication in other priests, so also, strictly speaking, there is but one priest, and that is Jesus Christ, the Supreme Priest, all other priests being but one with Him." ## THE PRIESTHOOD

The priest is «alter Christus.»

The effect of the priesthood is, then, to unite the priest with Jesus Christ in a very special manner. Already, by the character and grace of baptism, the Christian has contracted a close union with the Divine Master; as a member of His mystical Body he is called to continue, here below amid trials, and above in glory, the divine life of Our Blessed Lord. But by baptism the Christian is associated with the life of the Saviour only for his personal advantage and, so to speak, by a private title. The priestly character perfects this union, for by ordination Jesus associates His ministers in the exercise of His mediation between God and man, and to His dignity as an official and as religious head of the human race. By this means the priest becomes, with Jesus and by Jesus, the sacrificer of the Most High, the teacher and light of the world, judge of consciences, shepherd and physician of souls, minister of the sacraments and saviour of his brethren. And so he finds himself associated with the most glorious prerogatives of the Incarnate Word Whose place he truly holds in the eyes of God and of man: Sacerdos alter Christus.

No other reflection is found so often as this in the writings of St. John: "You have," he tells priests, "a very special alliance with Jesus Christ, who is the institutor, founder, head and superior of your holy Order. Not only does the adorable Saviour associate you with Himself in the greatest works He performed while upon earth, and which He still performs now in heaven and upon earth, but He also makes you sharers in the highest perfections and noblest qualities that His Father has given to Him." (1) Le Bon Confesseur, ch. i.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

"You are," he says elsewhere,---the noblest portion of the mystical body of the Son of God. You are the eyes, the mouth, the tongue, the heart of His Church, or rather, you are the eyes, the mouth, the tongue, and the heart of Jesus Himself. You are His eyes, because it is by you that this Good Shepherd continually watches over His flock; it is by you that He guides it; it is by you that He saves those of His sheep that are within the claws of the infernal wolf, and that He weeps tears over the death of His beloved Lazarus, i.e., over souls that are dead through sin.

"You are His mouth and His tongue, for by you He speaks to men and continues to preach the same Gospel as He Himself preached while yet upon earth.

"You are His heart, for it is by you that He gives true life, the life of grace upon earth and the life of glory in heaven, to all true members of His body. What marvels, what favours are these What grandeur there is in the priestly dignity!"

And again he says "You are the oracles of the Eternal word, prophets of holy wisdom." (2) You are (1) Mémorial, Prelim. chapter. The same thought is also found in the first part wherein the author speaks of the qualities of a good shepherd. And we find it also expressed in verse in the hymn for Matins of the Office of the Priesthood:

"Imago Matris Virginis, Lucerna Christi corporis,
Caput, sinus, cor, ubera:
Quis tanta laudet munera?"

And in the hymn for the Second Vespers of the Feast we read

Pupilla vos charissima,
Os, lingua, cor, et viscera,
Manusque Regis gloriae:
Sponsi, patres Ecclesiae.

(2). Mémorial, dedicated to the holy priests of the Church Triumphant. The same idea is to be seen in these two strophes of the Hymn for Lauds:

"Vos sacra caeli buccina A Prole missa Virginis, Legatione caelica, Areana Jesu panditis.

"Vos Spiritus oracula, Tormenta Christi bellica; Per vos patent mysteria, Per vos fugantur crimina."

living and true images of Jesus Christ. (1) You are other Christs living and working in the world, for you bear the most noble of His names, which is that of Saviour, and represent His Person, taking His place, and being clothed with His royalty and His priesthood. So, too, you act in His name and on His behalf, you are employed in the greatest of all His works, and it is your lot to continue upon earth all the priestly functions which He once exercised thereon."(2)

Looked at in this light, the priesthood appears truly great. It has been very justly remarked that God's masterpiece is Jesus Christ, and that the greatest, the holiest, and the most august thing in Jesus Christ is His priesthood. What an honour for any man to be associated to that! And how greatly are the functions of a holy priest ennobled when it can be said that they are accomplished in the name of, and on behalf of Jesus Christ!

The wonderful powers of the priesthood.

And then, too, consider the marvellous powers that are given by the Supreme Priest to His ministers. He gives them the power of regenerating souls by delivering them from sin and clothing them with sanctifying grace, which, in certain respects, is a more excellent work than the creation of the world.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

But still more wonderful is the fact that He, the Creator of heaven and earth, submits Himself to the authority of priests, and they, at their pleasure, make Him descend upon the altar, carry Him wherever they please, distribute Him to the faithful, and, which is more, sacrifice Him to His Father as though they had supreme power over Him. "Is it not true," cries St. John when he considers such prodigies, "is it not true that priests can say with Jesus Christ, though in a different sense: 'All power is given to me in heaven, on earth, and under the earth'? In heaven, because they have the keys of heaven and can open or shut it to whomsoever they please; upon earth, for every day they produce thereon effects which require divine power: such effects as the remission of sins, the communication of grace, and the formation of Jesus in hearts and in the Blessed Sacrament; and beneath the earth, because they can trample hell under foot and expel all the powers of darkness from both bodies and souls"? (1)

The dignity of the priesthood.

From that it follows that the Catholic priest has something of the divine in him. His alliance with the three Persons of the Blessed Trinity, his close union with the Incarnate Word, the divine authority that he enjoys, the in some respects infinite power that he exercises over the real and the mystical Body of Jesus make him truly "a little God on earth." (2) The Fathers of the Church said as much long ago, and Père Eudes approvingly quotes them. Of all the descriptions of a priest that have been written, he especially liked that left us by St. Gregory of Nazianzen: Deus deos efficiens, and he loved to quote it to the priests of his Congregation. (1) To them, indeed, it was specially applicable for they were vowed to the work of training the clergy in seminaries. But it is also applicable to all priests. Deified, as it were, by their priesthood, they are called upon to deify all Christians by forming Jesus Christ in their hearts; and for that reason our Saint suggests to them this saying by St. Gregory of Nazianzen as summing-up his teaching on the greatness of the priesthood, and also as a programme of perfection that they have to realise in themselves and in the faithful committed to their charge.(2)

B. THE HOLINESS OF A PRIEST

Pope St. Leo in a famous sermon, after setting out the benefits bestowed upon us by the Saviour in delivering us from sin and initiating us into the divine life, called on his hearers to respect their dignity and not to lower it by conduct unworthy of that height to which they had the honour of being members: *Agnosce, O Christiane, dignitatem tuam, et, divinae consors factus naturae, noli in veterem vilitatem degeneri conversatione redire. ## THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

And St. John Eudes in exalting the priesthood reaches a similar conclusion. His object is to persuade priests that, if they are not to fall, they must lead an entirely holy life, for no other kind of life befits their dignity: - You are a holy race," he tells them, -for the Saint of saints set you in the holiest of positions; and it is to you that He primarily addresses these words: Secundum etiam qui vocavit vos sanctum, et ipsi in omni conversatione sancti sitis, quoniam scriptum est: Sancti eritis quoniam ego sanctus sum. ( 1 )

The obligation of sanctity.

"How culpable are we," he adds, "if, instead of honouring the sacerdotal dignity, we degrade it; if, instead of behaving worthily in holy surroundings and becomingly handling holy things, we sully them with sacrileges; and if, instead of seeking only the glory of our Master and the salvation of souls, we run after the glory of the world and our own particular interests. How greatly we should be ashamed if, instead of being clothed with the holiness, the purity, the mercy and the charity of God, we are the slaves of our avarice, our ambition, and our other passions; and if, instead of being animated by the spirit of Jesus Christ, we are filled with the spirit of the world. How disgraceful it is if, instead of following Jesus Christ as our Rule, we follow only our own perverse inclinations; and if, instead of governing our life by the maxims of the Gospel, we conform to the damnable maxims of a corrupt generation!" (2)

He who is raised in dignity above his fellow-men should also be distinguished by virtue above the common level. Noblesse oblige, runs the wise popular saying; and that is true of spiritual nobility as well as of nobility of birth. And so the priesthood imposes on the priest an obligation of excelling the faithful laity in virtue and holiness, even as he is above them in the dignity of his calling. Even Religious themselves, when they have not the honour of being clothed with the priesthood, are not bound to so eminent a degree of perfection as is he.

It is true that it is commonly taught that neither the priesthood nor the pastoral office suffices to place a priest in the state of perfection; this is only granted to the episcopate. "According to St. Thomas, (1) says M. Ribet, "the sacerdotal state is characterised by the powers received in it and the ministry for souls that is connected with it. The exercise of these powers supposes and demands interior perfection; but, since it is possible for a priest not to exercise them or to exercise them but rarely, the mere reception of these sacred powers does not bind by vow to perfection, and does not, strictly speaking, constitute a state of perfection.

"The same is true of the care of souls. Not being bound by vow to fulfil this ministry, and being able to release himself from it either with the consent of his bishop or even without that consent (if he intends to enter the religious life), a simple priest does not appear to fulfil by his circumstances the strict conditions of the state of perfection as laid down by theologians."(2)

These arguments seem to be correct. But, on the one hand, real perfection and the state of perfection are two very different things, and the same St. Thomas lays it down that the exercise of the priestly functions, and especially the offering of the holy sacrifice of the Mass, demands an interior perfection which, of itself, the religious state does not seem to claim.'(1) And, on the other hand, we might well ask whether a priest who (save in exceptional circumstances) did not exercise, or only rarely exercised his priestly functions, would fittingly correspond with his vocation. Would he not resemble that useless servant of whom we read in the Gospel, who buried his master's talents instead of trading with them? Such was the opinion of St. John Eudes who, as we shall later show, always strove to inspire the ministers of Jesus Christ with a love of all the priestly functions. (2)

Rightly, then, does M. Ribet add:

Compared with the religious state.

"Without in any way contradicting the traditional teaching on what constitutes, strictly speaking, a state which binds one permanently, we may affirm that, of its nature, the priesthood is a condition of life superior to every other condition, superior even to religious profession. And, as the Angelic Doctor observes, it is only when one opposes the case of a religious who is also a priest to that of a secular priest, that one can place the state of the former above that of the latter. And further he adds that because of the perils and difficulties of the pastoral office, parochial ministry demands of those who exercise it more perfection than that of religious. These last, no doubt, are subjected to the observance of their rule, but they find therein help and security which the others can only obtain by their own efforts seconded by the grace of God."(1)

This was precisely what the reformers of the French clergy in the seventeenth century never ceased to proclaim. Jealous to give all its rightful honour to the priesthood, as the Order of Jesus Christ, they strongly stressed the principle that no one is more strictly bound to perfection than is the priest, and, moreover, that no one is bound to a higher perfection, not even monks and nuns.

The reasons that oblige the priest to surpass in perfection the laity, including even religious, are numerous. In the front rank we must place his special union with God (whose minister he is), the complete consecration of his body and soul to God, the holiness of his duties, especially the adorable Sacrifice which he offers every morning. St. John mentions all these reasons, but there is yet another on which perhaps he insists even more strongly: it is the honour conferred on the priest by being associated by Our Blessed Lord to His position as religious head of the Christian people.

In his fine book, The Eternal Priesthood, in which the ideas of St. John Eudes can often be found, Cardinal Manning plainly states: "The priestly state is the most exalted by reason of the powers entrusted to it, the obligations it imposes, and the graces it receives, and it is the state of perfection instituted by Our Divine Master to be the light of the world and the salt of the earth." (ch. iv.)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

He must be a model of sanctity

We have elsewhere explained the part played by the Divine Master in regard to His mystical Body; and we remember that His position makes Him the example that the faithful must imitate, the principle of the divine life that they enjoy, and a supplement that supplies for the imperfection and insufficiency of their worship. There, then, is the rôle that falls to the priest by reason of his participation in the priesthood of Jesus Christ. Following the Saviour's example he must be a model for his people, by his virtues as well as by the exercise of his sacred ministry he must help to develop the supernatural life in souls, by his fervour he must supply for the negligence of his flock, and if necessary he must by penance make reparation for their sins. It is clear that no ordinary virtue will suffice for this rôle; if he is to fulfil it the priest requires to enjoy the fullness of the divine life.

And so St. John never wearied of repeating: "All Christians must be animated by the spirit of Jesus, but the clergy must possess its fullness so as to communicate it to others." (1) And elsewhere he says: "If a priest is adorned with a holiness proportioned to his dignity, he possesses the greatest holiness that can be found anywhere in the Church: a holiness that is a source and principle of grace and holiness, for the priest is the fountain of all Christian holiness."(2)

This metaphor of a fountain scattering its vivifying waters all around it admirably expresses the superabundance of supernatural life needed by the priest for the sanctification of others. P&E Eudes also made use of it elsewhere in his Mémorial: «The priest," he says, "has to purify, guide, and perfect other Christians; therefore he must be a fountain of benediction whose salutary waters flow abundantly over every part of the Lord's house.» (1)

(2). Mémorial, Part I: Qualities of a good Pastor.

Particular virtues
priest.

But the Saint is not satisfied with teaching in a general way that the priest must attain to a loftier sanctity than that of other Christians. He often applies this principle to a particular virtue, as, for example, when, speaking of poverty, and reminding the members of his Congregation (who are not bound by vow) of Our Lord's words: Omnis ex vobis qui non renuntiat omnibus quae possidet, non potest esse meus discipulus, he added that "no one, whatever his condition may be, is more strictly bound to this universal poverty and to the perfection of all the other Christian virtues, than are clerics."

Similarly, in connection with renunciation of self, he writes in his Mémorial: "All Christians are bound to this abnegation, but clerics have a very special obligation to it . . . for in this, as in every other Christian virtue, they are bound to be an example and a living rule for other Christians."

But not only is the priesthood the highest dignity on earth, it confers on the minister of Jesus Christ an authority and a power which raise him, in certain respects, above the Angels. Thence St. John concludes that, "if it were possible," a priest should lead a

(1). Mémorial, Part V, 2nd Meditation. Similarly he says in Le Coeur admirable (13k. IV, ch. iv): - - - Who should be holier than he who is obliged to be a fountain of graces and of blessings, and to have all the virtues in so high a degree as to be an example of perfection to all the faithful?"

life «purer and holier» than that of the Angels. He would have the minister of Jesus Christ to be --- an angel in purity of spirit and of body, a cherubim in light and in knowledge, and a seraphim in love and in charity." (1)

Above all he would have him become by the splendour of his virtues «a living image of Jesus Christ» (2) Since we have the honour of representing the Supreme Priest here below, of taking His place, of being clothed with His authority, of acting in His name and continuing His functions, is it not indeed fitting that our life should be the image or rather the continuation of His own? The Saint desired that---our bodies and souls should be a Gospel, a living book in which the interior and exterior life of Jesus can be seen perfectly imprinted. (3)

Sometimes Père Eudes also suggested the divine perfections themselves as models for priestly holiness; nor need we be surprised by that. The Fathers of the Church hold up the priest as one who is divine, indued with a power and authority that belong only to God; is it not right, then, that "so far as is possible" he should be 'full of charity, goodness, mercy, and purity': in short, "full of the spirit and holiness of God? (4)

But Père Eudes's mind was too practical to stop short at these general and somewhat idealistic expressions on sacerdotal perfection. No one knew better than he how important it is to come down to details when we are reflecting on our duties or reminding others of theirs. And in his Memorial principles are given a relatively small space; the book is devoted almost entirely to setting out in detail a priest's duties and how best to perform them.

Practical counsels for the priest.

The second part of that book (1) and the Meditations at the end of it give in great detail the various elements that go to make up priestly perfection. The salient characteristics, as set out by St. John, are a complete separation from sin (so that the priest is, as he puts it, "irreprehensible"), an absolute renunciation of the world which offers only perversity and folly, great fidelity in avoiding all familiarity with worldly people, especially with women, and complete detachment from self. He also mentions a lively faith that inspires our whole moral life, a great love for Jesus Christ, especially in the Holy Eucharist which is the mystery peculiar to the priest, a singular devotion to Mary, the queen and mother of the clergy, together with a special cult for the holy priests who, after the Sovereign Priest, are our patrons and models, as well as for the holy martyrs and virgins so as to obtain by their intercession the spirit of sacrifice and of inviolable purity which we need. To these qualities, the Saint adds unreserved devotion to the Church, zeal for the salvation of souls which does not shrink from any sacrifice, and, underlying all the virtues, a profound humility resting on a vivid realisation of our helplessness and unworthiness.

The necessity of constant prayer.

The means of attaining to this perfection is application to prayer. Remembering that the Saint declares that prayer is the soul of the Christian life, (2) we can understand that with much more reason it must be the soul of the priestly life. St. John, in fact, desires the priest "to have a great love of prayer, and to have recourse to it at all times and in everything," (1) so that his life becomes "a continual prayer." (2) At this price he will make progress in virtue and his ministry will be fruitful.

Similarly the chief object of his Memorial is to teach the priest to become a man of prayer, by teaching him not only to perform properly what St. Francis de Sales calls "complete and formed prayer," (3) but also to accomplish all his actions with that interior spirit which is simply one of the forms of prayer. The Saint liked to sum up all this by saying that a priest should be, like St. John the Baptist, «a burning, shining lamp: burning before God and shining before men; burning with love for God, shining with charity towards his neighbour; burning with the perfection of his interior life, shining with the holiness of his exterior life; burning with the fervour of his continual prayer, shining in his preaching of the divine word.» (4) It would be difficult to find a more gracious and truer imagery with which to portray the holiness of a priest.

C. THE ZEAL OF A PRIEST

One of the chief obligations of a priest is to labour for the salvation of souls, and St. John Eudes fully realised this. "After the incomparable Xavier," says Père Hérambourg, "perhaps no one, at least in the seventeenth century, carried zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls to greater lengths." (1) And St. John himself said: "I feel so strong a desire to work for the salvation of souls that I would voluntarily renounce all the glory of Paradise, together with that of the angels and even that of the Blessed Virgin, and I would without difficulty leave heaven and return to earth, to help in the salvation of a poor Soul." (2)

The Saint's zeal for souls.

During a pilgrimage that he made to the Abbey of Clairvaux in 1665, he was led to envy the fortunate lot of the religious who lived there in absolute separation from the world and in constant union with God. Greatly struck by the security of these happy solitaries and by the tremendous responsibilities entailed by the pastoral life which he had led for so many years, he thought of settling down with them and giving himself to the contemplation that he craved. But soon he thought of the souls who needed his ministry, and he banished this plan as a temptation. 'I am afraid,' he said,---of not making sufficiently holy use of the talents God has given me for labouring at the salvation of souls. If I were to give up everything to withdraw into solitude, would I not be burying my talent? If I were to give up the missions so as to retire into religion, would I be able to plead that I had feared to lose my soul? Was not that the reply made by the idle servant who was so severely punished by his lord, and would I not justly deserve the same treatment?" (1)

After that, we are not surprised to learn that the Saint insisted on the priest's obligation to labour for the salvation of souls. (2) He constantly returned to this point and expressed himself thereon with a loftiness and a force of conviction rarely to be found. It is in this, perhaps, that his books on the ecclesiastical life are most distinguishable from analogous works that appeared in the seventeenth century, many of which preach holiness rather than zeal. This, for example, is true of M. Olier's Traité des saints Ordres. Others, it is true, treat of zeal at some length; but, without seeking to depreciate their value, we believe we may say that in them one will look in vain for the impassioned language that love of souls inspired in Père Eudes.

souls is the raison d'être of the priesthood,

Convinced that the salvation of souls is the raison d'être of the priesthood, the Saint could not understand how anyone could enter it for the sake of his own salvation, as he heard some declare they had done: «Know this, brother,» he said, "when you enter the sacerdotal state your salvation should be a matter of the past, and you should enter the priesthood to labour for the salvation of others. For the prospects of your own salvation should be so promising, and you should be so holy, that you can, with the grace of God, save and sanctify others."(1)

St. John was also wont to remind priests of their office of saviours of the world communicated to them by Jesus Christ: "You," he tells them in his Mémorial, "are the saviours of the world whom the great Saviour has left here below in His place to continue and to fulfil the work of the redemption of the universe. Also He caused you to be given the title of saviours in the Scriptures, for it is to priests that He refers in the prophecy of Abdias: Ascendent salvatores in montem Sion; (2) and Clement of Alexandria has no scruple in calling them 'redeemers.' "(3)

all possible works.

In order to inflame zeal in the hearts of priests St. John went to considerable trouble to demonstrate the excellence of their work. This he did especially in a long chapter in Le Bon Confesseur, in which he shows that there is no work greater or holier than that of toiling for the salvation of souls. That, he says, is the great work of God, of Jesus Christ, of Mary, of the Church, and of the angels and saints. Indeed, was it not for that that God created the world? Was not that the reason for the Incarnation and the Redemption, for the life and the death of Jesus Christ? Is not that also why the Church was instituted and why she was given the mission to preach the doctrine of salvation, to administer the sacraments, and to perpetuate the Sacrifice of the Cross? And is not that the object of the ministry the angels exercise among mankind?

The Saint adds that we can do nothing that is more agreeable to God and more useful for our fellows. Fasting, alms-giving, prayer, even martyrdom itself, are of less value than efforts made to save a soul; and in support of this assertion he cites, amongst other proofs, the beautiful words of St.

Teresa: "O my Jesus, how admirable is Thy love for the children of men, since the greatest service that we can render Thee is to abandon Thee (i.e. to interrupt our prayer) for love of them and for their salvation! (1) And a little later he reminds us that this great saint envied those who spent themselves for the salvation of souls more than she envied the martyrs.(2)

The striking pages devoted to the development of these thoughts in Le Bon Confesseur should be read: they are certainly amongst the most notable that he ever wrote. And they are, moreover, a magnificent commentary on the saying by Denis the Areopagite (so often quoted by St. John): "The divinest of divine works is to co-operate with God in the salvation of souls: Omnium divinorum divinissimum est cooperari . Deo in salutem animarum. ( 3 )

Efforts of Satan to cause loss of souls.

To stimulate the zeal of priests the Saint would also point out to them the rage with which the devil strives to bring about the loss of souls: «Shall we,» he asks them, "have less love for the souls of our brethren, than this monster has hatred for them? Shall the fervour we show for their salvation be less than the fury with which he seeks their perdition? If his rage against them is such as to make him consider all too brief the thousands of years during which he is allowed to work for their destruction, with what ardour must we employ the fleeting moments of this life to help in saving those souls for the least of which the Son of God sacrificed a life of thirty-three years, each moment of which was worth more than ten thousand eternities of men and angels! (1)

And again he cries out: "Let us have pity on the multitude of souls that perish every day; they were created in the image of God and redeemed by the Precious Blood of His Son, and they are the souls of our brothers and sisters. Reflect on the innumerable labours undertaken by Our Saviour on their behalf, on the wounds He received, and the griefs He endured; consider the tears He shed and the blood that flowed from Him, and the shameful and cruel death that He suffered for their salvation; and think, too, of the tears of His Holy Mother and of the inconceivable anguish that filled her maternal Heart for the same reason. Let no day pass without helping some soul."

"O my Saviour," he added, "when shall be fulfilled those divine words of Thy Holy Mother: Esurientes implevit bonis et divites dimisit inanes? Most holy Mother of God, when shall we see thy great prophecy accomplished? Men shall we see the demons stripped of the immense riches which they possess and which they have stolen from thy beloved Son? When shall be satisfied the extreme hunger of thy children for souls? and on earth, might prostrate themselves with thee before the throne of the Divine Mercy to obtain this great grace!"(1)

Moved by such feelings, St. John could not understand how a priest could remain insensible to the loss of souls, when it was his mission to save them: "How guilty are we," he cried, "if instead of seeking only the glory of God and the salvation of souls, we pursue the glory of the world and our own particular interests!" (2)

Priests must be self-sacrificing in this work.

He would have the ministers of Jesus Christ bring to the labour of saving souls the generosity that was shown in this respect by the Divine Master: and many times, both in his Mémorial and in Le bon Confesseur, he urges them to devote themselves to this work without reserve:

"A good pastor," he says, "is another Christ who, imitating the Saviour, makes use of his whole mind, his heart, his affections, his strength, his time, and his belongings in this work, and is always ready to give his blood and to sacrifice his life for the salvation of the souls committed to him by God." (3) And he adds: «Such a one is a living image of Jesus Christ in the world, and of Jesus watching, praying, preaching, catechising, toiling, sweating, weeping, going from town to town and from village to village, suffering, agonising, dying and sacrificing himself for the salvation of souls.» (4)

"As the father of God's people," the priest should, he tells us, "labour unceasingly to feed them with the holy bread and the divine word," and to "clothe them with Jesus Christ" by administering the sacraments. "As the captain of God's army, he must always have arms in his hands and must perpetually fight his foes" to gain the souls which are as kingdoms to him. As the spouse of the Church of Christ, he must only think, day and night, of discovering every kind of means of embellishing and enriching the Church so as "to make it worthy of the heavenly Spouse." (1)

Idleness and frivolity to be avoided.

That is what St. John meant by being zealous. He could not bear that a priest, whose time is so precious, should lead a life of sterile idleness, or should waste his time in frivolous occupations. In the Constitutions that he gave his Congregation he took great care to forewarn his sons against those unfortunately too common failings: "Since the Congregation was founded to labour for the salvation of souls," he says, "all its sons will frequently remind themselves that they have not joined it in order to lead an idle life, or to seek in it their own interests and satisfaction, but in order to co-operate with God in that great work which is the work of works and the most divine of divine things." (2)

Elsewhere he urges priests to imitate the laborious lives of Jesus and Mary "by fleeing from idleness and frivolity, and by always occupying themselves with some exercise that is either useful for themselves or for their fellows." (3) And again he says: "They will shun idleness as the source of all evil, and for this reason, outside the times of conversation, no time will be wasted in useless chattering or in other amusements and frivolous occupations."(1)

And in his Mémorial the Saint gives the same advice to all priests: "Beware," he tells them, «lest the judgment pronounced upon the unprofitable servant (2) be also pronounced against you. And so that that may not happen flee from idleness as a pest and as the mother of all vices. And that you may not fall into it, regulate and occupy your time with prayer, study, works of charity or some other honest occupation, and remember that none are so bound to make good use of their time as are priests, for they are charged with the most important affairs of heaven and earth, namely the glory of God and the salvation of souls.» (3)

Study is not an end in itself.

So greatly did St. John love souls that sometimes he regretted to see so many priests devote to the study of the sciences time which might, he considered be more fruitfully employed in evangelising and converting the people. Not that he was an enemy of study

"It would be desirable," said Père de Bérulle,---to found a Congregation of clerics in which poverty would combat luxury, a vow of never seeking any benefice or dignity would combat ambition, and a vow of employing oneself in ecclesiastical functions would combat frivolity.- (Esquisse de l'Oratoire, MS quoted by Père Boulay in his Vie du P. Eudes, Vol. I, Appendix, p. 19.) And Père de Bérulle also wrote that "idleness must be most carefully banished (from the Oratory) as unworthy not only of a regular and cloistered cleric, but of a simple Christian. ((Oeuvres de Piété CXCI. Migne, col. 1274.) Similarly, M. Olier declared that, «There must be no idle or useless moments in the life of a priest, and he should not be occupied with himself nor should he seek sensible satisfaction in the sweetnesses of divine love." the books he has left show him to have had profound knowledge of the ecclesiastical sciences. In fact, some of them, for instance Le Coeur admirable, display considerable erudition and are evidently the results of long research; and the Saint expected priests to prepare themselves for the sacred ministry by serious and assiduous work. But he desired that study should be a means of preparing them for labouring for the salvation of souls, and he wanted them never to apply themselves to it from a pure love of knowledge. This was his meaning when, while preaching a mission at Vasteville(1) in 1659, saddened by the sight of so many penitents pressing around the confessionals and waiting for whole days without being able to confess, he wrote to one of his sons: "What are so many doctors and graduates doing in Paris, while souls perish in thousands for want of guides to lead them from perdition and to preserve them from everlasting fire? Assuredly, if I acted according to my convictions I would go to Paris, and would cry out in the Sorbonne and the other colleges: 'Come, you doctors and graduates; come, you priests and clerics; come and combat the fire of hell that embraces the whole universe; come, and help us to extinguish it!' (2)

It was especially in parish priests and missionaries that St. John wanted to stir up ardent zeal for souls. In his Mémorial, and also in Le bon Confesseur, he not let new priests leaving your seminaries escape thereby your zealous solicitude. We urge you with our whole soul to press them often to your hearts which must burn with a heavenly fire: enkindle them, inflame them, so that henceforth they aspire only to God and the conquest of souls. . . . It is not that we do not consider worthy of praise those young priests who devote themselves to useful studies in every branch of science, and so prepare themselves the better for defending the truth. . . . But we cannot conceal, and we even openly declare, that our preference is, and always will be, for those who, without neglecting ecclesiastical and profane science, devote themselves most particularly to the welfare of souls in the exercise of the various ministries which become a priest animated with zeal for the divine honour." Those are sentiments which scarcely differ from those of St. John Eudes.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

often reminds them that they will have to give an account at God's tribunal of all the souls entrusted to them and answer for those who will be lost on that day through their negligence and inactivity. St. Gregory the Great told the priests of his day that to leave souls to perish through cowardly silence is to kill them: Tot occidimus quot ad mortem ire lepidi et tacentes videmus.'(1) St. John frequently quoted these terrible words to rouse from their torpor pastors without zeal and courage.

Treatment of sinners.

But he also took care to show priests, and especially parish priests, the means by which they could exercise a fruitful zeal.

In his Mémorial and also in Le bon Confesseur he particularly insists on the good example they must set the faithful, and on the care they must take to know the souls entrusted to them, to watch over their needs, to instruct them and to exhort them to lead a good life, to repress abuses and vices, to have holy places respected, to visit schools, the poor and the sick, and finally to administer the sacraments.

The Saint had a very special tenderness for the spiritual and corporal miseries of humanity, and he never missed an opportunity of advising priests to show great compassion and limitless charity to sinners and to all the unfortunate: "You will remember," he says, "that in the Holy Scriptures God so strongly and so often commends to us the orphans, widows, strangers, and all the poor. For that reason we must strive to exercise charity to all these people in every way that is possible, associating more willingly with the poor than with the rich, being more prompt to visit them in their illnesses and afflictions, and to hear their confessions when they ask to be heard. On every occasion we must deal with them with a heart full of love and of respect for Our Lord whom we must see in them."(1)

D. THE FEAST OF THE PRIESTHOOD

St. John quickly realised that a solemn feast in honour of the priesthood of Jesus Christ and of all holy priests and levites would greatly help to develop the apostolic spirit in the members of his Institute and to instill it into the ordinands of whom he had charge; and at an early date he decided to establish it. In 1649 he submitted to the approval of Doctors Basire and Le Moussu an Office of the Priesthood written by himself, and this he published in 1652 in the first edition of the Proper of his Congregation. On December 29th of the same year Mgr. Auvry, Bishop of Coutances, authorised all the faithful of his diocese, and especially the priests and clerics of his seminary, to make use of the Saint's Offices. At this time the Feast of the Priesthood was allocated to November 15th, and accordingly it is morally certain that it was celebrated in the seminary of Coutances on November 15, 1653.

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Subsequently the Saint continued to perfect his Office, as is shown by the editions of the Proper published by him in 1668 and in 1672. In these the hymns are more rhythmic, an octave is added to the Office, and in order to make it possible to celebrate the Feast and its octave before the Feast of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin, the solemnity is advanced two days and so is kept on November 13th. St. John wanted the renewal of the promises of the clergy in his Society to take place on the Feast of the Presentation, and thus the Feast of the Priesthood served as a preparation for that great act which, in those circumstances, could not fail to be carried out with the greatest possible fervour.

The Office of the Feast of the Priesthood.

The Saint's Office in honour of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ and of all holy priests and levites is one of great beauty. It is at the same time a magnificent glorification of the heroes of the priesthood whose virtues and success it enthusiastically relates, a striking exposition of the dignity and the duties of a priest, and a fervent prayer that God should grant that His ministers should participate in the spirit and the virtues of their predecessors. In it the Saint was happy in his choice and arrangement of texts from Scripture and the Fathers; and those parts of the Mass and Office that are entirely his own (such as the hymns and the prose) are remarkable for their vigour and their loftiness of thought. He succeeded in introducing the whole of his beautiful teaching on the relations between the priest and the three Divine Persons, his union with Christ, his connection with the Blessed Virgin, his personal duties and his mission with regard to the laity. When chanted in a major seminary it could not fail to make a profound impression on the ordinands, and the same may be said of the Office as a whole.

Popularity of this FEAST.

This Feast of the Priesthood was also adopted by the Priests of St. Sulpice and by the Benedictines of the Blessed Sacrament. At St. Sulpice it was first fixed for October 30th, but later, with the consent of the Ordinary, it was celebrated on July 17th, or on another day towards the end of the scholastic year. We cannot say at what precise date the Feast was introduced at St. Sulpice, but apparently it was not established there by M. Olier, but by his disciples some years after his death, which occurred in 1657. According to M. Faillon the Feast began to be kept there about 1660, and he attributes to M. de Bretonvilliers the composition of the Office and Mass used in its celebration. But we believe, on the contrary, that the Fathers of St. Sulpice, being in touch with St. John Eudes, adopted his Office and Mass, retouching, perhaps, certain parts of it, especially the hymns.

Similarly, the Benedictines of the Blessed Sacrament also adopted the Feast of the Priesthood, which admirably suited their devotion towards the Holy Eucharist. For there is a close connection between the priesthood and the Eucharist, and in some respects the Feast of the Priesthood seemed to be a happy complement of the Feast of the Blessed Sacrament. That is why when the Benedictines adopted it they fixed its celebration for the Thursday after the Octave of Corpus Christi. (1)

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

On May 30, 1668, Cardinal de Vendôme, the Legate a latere of Pope Clement IX, authorised them to celebrate this Feast, using the Office written by St. John and accommodated to the Benedictine rite.

But this Feast did not remain restricted to the three Institutes that we have mentioned: it was adopted in several dioceses, amongst others in that of Rouen in which it is said to have been kept until the middle of the nineteenth century.

The Eudists were very attached to the Feast of the Priesthood, and St. John's immediate successor, Père Blouet de Camilly, "had it inserted in the letters of institution of several houses of the Congregation";(1) while the General Assembly of 1742 recommended that it be faithfully celebrated in all the houses of the Institute. (2) Nor did it cease to be celebrated till towards the middle of the nineteenth century, (3) when its abandonment was doubtless due to the return to the Roman Liturgy. The priests of St. Sulpice preserved it until the liturgy was reformed by Pope Pius X, when they had to give it up; but neither the Eudists nor the Sulpicians have relinquished hope of reviving some day a Feast that so happily harmonises with their spirit and their works.

CONCLUSION

St. John and the Oratory.

In the course of this work we have several times remarked that St. John Eudes belonged to the French School of the seventeenth century. Trained to the spiritual life by Bérulle and Condren, he always remained faithful to the principles he received from them, and not only did he himself live up to them, but he threw all the ardour of his zeal into propagating them by word and by pen. Accordingly, in all essentials his teaching is that of the Oratory; but, even during his sojourn at the Oratory, what he chiefly saw in Jesus and Mary was not their greatness but their love. Moreover his piety was more affective than was that of his masters. The virtue of religion had a prominent place in it, but its dominant element was charity, a charity that was sweet and gentle, confident and generous. And with the passage of time this tendency increased till it resulted in devotion to the Sacred Hearts, of which the Saint was the indefatigable apostle.

The practical nature of the Saint's writings.

For the rest, St. John was not a philosopher engrossed in theory: he was a practical man and a man full of zeal. And so, we must not seek in his works the lofty reflections of a Cardinal de Bérulle on the mystery of the Incarnation, or the no less exalted speculations of a Père de Condren on the priesthood and the sacrifice of

THE SPIRITUAL TEACHING OF ST. JOHN EUDES

Jesus Christ. There is no doubt that he had carefully nourished his personal piety on these reflections and speculations, but in his daily contact with the people he simplified the teaching of his masters and tried to bring home to them its practical side. If he is not the most profound writer of the French School, we believe that he is the most popular, and that he has contributed more than any other to the diffusion of its common teaching.

The practical bent and talent of the Saint is also shown in his zeal and in his facility for expressing in prayers the spiritual teaching that he was propagating. We have said that his rule of faith will be found in the official prayer of the Church: Lex orandi, lex credendi, and, reversing this principle, St. John sought to make his teaching become the rule of his prayer. Hence the numerous aspirations in Le Royaume de Jésus; hence the prayers with their varied subjects and attractions to be found in his Manuel de piété; and hence, too, the beautiful prayers in honour of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary that he bequeathed to his children.

Furthermore, we have seen that what the Saint expounded in his didactic books, and what he strove to express in prayers intended for current use, he tried to incorporate into the liturgical Offices. In this respect Cardinal de Bérulle had set him the example by instituting the Feast of Jesus and composing a proper Mass and Office for it. And after he had left the Oratory, the Saint could give free rein to his taste for the liturgy and to his poetic talents, so that, as already shown, he composed many Masses and Offices, some of which, still used in his institutes, rouse the admiration of all who read them. On this score he may be considered the liturgical precentor of the French School.

the clergy.

If we turn from teaching to institutions we shall find new manifestations in the Saint's work of his practical spirit and his zeal. He shared the views of Cardinal de Bérulle on the greatness of the priesthood and the necessity of its realisation; but he quickly realised that the only way to produce holy priests is to labour at the training of ecclesiastical students. Although this work formed part of the duties of the Oratory, it was not its principal end; and that is why St. John, after much prayer and consultation, believed it his duty to leave that Society for the purpose of founding the Congregation of Jesus and Mary specially vowed to this work of capital importance.

The Saint's work compared with that of Cardinal de Bérulle and Père de Condren.

In the organisation of his Congregation the Saint gave further proof of an eminently practical mind. In view of its principal end the Congregation of Jesus and Mary must, like the Oratory, be a purely sacerdotal society. Thus the two Societies have the same organisation and the same ideal; but in the Saints' Institute discipline is stricter than it is at the Oratory, and is more like that of the Congregations that take simple vows. The Oratory, it has been said, has never had more than a few rules: but St. John, on the other hand, gave very detailed, and sometimes minutely precise, constitutions to his priests.

Cardinal de Bérulle had succeeded by persistent efforts in introducing the Discalced Carmelites into France, and all his life he remained superior and visitor of these religious whose life is devoted to prayer and penance. St. John, for his part, also greatly revered the Carmelites and the other contemplative Orders, and, urged on by his zeal, he founded an apostolic Order vowed to the conversion of penitents and gave them constitutions perfectly suited to its end.

Finally the zeal and practical spirit of the Saint led him at an early date to found other societies for people in the world, and these he dedicated to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary and strove to inculcate a thoroughly apostolic spirit into them so as to make them helpers of the clergy in works of charity and zeal. It does not seem that Cardinal de Bérulle and Père de Condren attempted anything of this nature.

And so it is plain that if our Saint was influenced throughout his life by the teaching of the French School, he used it in a very personal and variegated way, and he pushed it to its furthest consequences by instituting the Feast of the Priesthood and by founding the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. Moreover he enriched it and made it yet more attractive by grafting on to it devotion to the Sacred Hearts, while he completed it by happy originalities of his own. It cannot be denied that the Saint was greatly indebted to Cardinal de Bérulle and to Père de Condren, but, while guided by their principles, he knew how to undertake original work and, if he had not their metaphysical genius, he deserves a place by their side because of his zeal, his practical bent, his oratorical and poetical gifts, and the variety of his works.

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown. (1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution. (2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world. (3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1). Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumer ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2) The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.
2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choisies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a savior of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre deBérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking. They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.

INTRODUCTION

THERE ARE only two philosophies of life: one begins with the fast and ends with the feast; the other begins with the feast and ends with the headache. The first is Christian, the second is pagan. Those who compromise and accept a little of each generally find that they have just enough religion to spoil the feast and still not enough religion to accept the headache.

Saints are made by the unreserved acceptance of the Christian philosophy: to save one's life one must lose it. Among these spiritual giants towers the figure of St. John Eudes who in 1637 wrote a spiritual treatise on "The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls," which is now so ably translated into English.

Although it was written just a little later than the Elizabethan era of history, it has the same timelessness as any classic, for eternal truths are not subject either to moods or calendars. There is a certain relevance of the spiritual doctrines of St. John Eudes for our times. First of all, he stresses the value of human nature for these days of de-humanization. It is human nature today that is under attack. The individualism of the last century distorted it by isolating man from his fellow-men, from history and from God. Totalitarianism in the twentieth century destroyed it by absorbing man into collectivities such as the state, race, nation and class. The result was that in war the least rationed and cheapest commodity was human life.

How shall man recover his dignity and become something other than a "hand" under Capitalism, an "ant" under Collectivism, or an "animal" in Psychology, except by the vision of our Pattern Man revealed to us in the Person of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? This is the method of St. John Eudes. The poet would hold the «mirror up to nature,» but this saint holds the "mirror up to Jesus." To the modern man who is lost, St. John Eudes gives him Jesus the Way of Life; to the modern man who is confused, the saint offers Jesus the Exemplar; and to the modern man who is frustrated, the saint offers Jesus the Prototype of the sons of God and the First-born of creatures.

But in this work of rehabilitation we hit upon the second great quality of John Eudes: he does not take man who would be re-born back 1900 years to Galilee, but he brings Jesus up to the modern man. The imitation of Christ is the essence of the spiritual life, but it does not mean slavish copying, nor repetition of the same actions under similar conditions. Otherwise we ought to be carpenters, because our Lord was a carpenter.

Much modern Christianity is of this type. It takes a purely emotional and sentimental outlook on Christ, as a humanitarian and nothing more. It bids us look back nineteen hundred years to Galilee; it repeats His words, interprets His actions, as it might those of Caesar or Aurellus-and because it does only this, it has lost its hold on the modern man. No reason so explains the decay of Christianity among sects, as this tendency to regard it only as a memory of a man who taught and lived. Indeed, if Christianity is only a memory of the teaching and example of a man, then it should die-and the sooner it dies the sooner we can welcome a religion which will put Divine Life into our veins.

Christianity, fortunately, is something more than a memory, because our Lord is something more than a man. He is true God and true man. Being God, He can perpetuate Himself not only by His teaching and His example, but also in a third way, which belongs to Him alone as God, namely by His continuing Life. Others may leave their titles, their wealth, their stocks and their bonds, their doctrines and their biographies, but only our Lord can make a last will and testament bequeathing to posterity that which no one else on dying could ever leave: His Life for the Life of the World. He brought Divine Life to earth at the crib, but He willed not that this Life should be only a temporary visitation of a score and ten years and a localized experience confined to a few hundred square miles. He willed to diffuse it in time until time should be no more, and in space until all the thirsty hearts of earth had drunk of its refreshing draughts.

God is too good to circumscribe the gift of Divine Life to a brief

human existence stretching between a crib and a Cross. Did He not explicitly state: "Behold I am with you all days even to the consummation of the world"? And Saint John, speaking of the Divine Life prolonged and diffused in all men, says: "Of whose fulness we have all received." It is the fulness of that Christ-Life, beating and throbbing at this very hour in millions of souls, which gives flesh and blood to His teaching and His example. Because He lives today, His teaching is not a cold record written only on the pages of history, but a teaching bound up with life in a living mind; His example is not something that has happened, but something that is happening, not an antiquated historical phenomenon, but a living force active before our very eyes.

If our Lord had remained on earth, He would have been only a model to be copied, but having left the earth and sent His Spirit, He made it possible to become a veritable life to be lived. Seizing upon this sublime truth, St. John Eudes makes the Christian life a fulfilment, in each and every one of us, of the life of Jesus.

The great tragedy of history is not that men should fall, but that they should fail to rise to the full realization of their vocation as children of God, in other words, that they should miss so much.

All about us we see vast multitudes of men and women of refinement and culture, endowed with intelligence and possessed of every natural virtue and every now and then swept by noble emotions and ideals, but who are living second-rate, superficial, unimportant and morally insignificant lives, because they have never had their nature enkindled into flame by the Spirit of Christ. They may do much for the world in the material order, they may build bridges, harness waterfalls, accomplish great pieces of research, but they never sound the depths of their souls which can be filled only by God. The world of the supernatural has no more appeal to them than heroism has appeal for a coward. They have become so used to the dense atmosphere of the material, that they stifle in the more rarefied atmosphere of the supernatural.

And in this lies the danger of our whole civilization, which is gradually turning away from God. Nothing great, nothing really good was ever done in this world by any human life that had not a baptism of God's Holy Spirit. There is no escape from the words of

Him who presided at Creation as the Word, and at the re-creation on the Cross as the Word-made flesh: "Without Me you can do nothing."

How differently do they live for whom our Lord is not just a figure in the past, but the very Spirit of their lives. The great facts of His earthly Life are re-lived not only in His Mystical Body which is the Church, but in every soul incorporated into that Body by Baptism of the Holy Ghost. The details of His earthly Life do not belong to distant history separated from us by nineteen hundred years. For the Catholic these centuries do not exist at all; the Gospel facts are perpetuated independently of their setting in time and space; His Life is not something which was lived; it is something which is being lived in us now.

Nor is it just a mere copy in us of something lived before; rather is the Gospel Life the model of the new Catholic life; it is not a repetition but rather a prolonged Incarnation, for did He not say, speaking of His new way of living in us by His Spirit: "I will not leave you orphans: I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more. But you see Me: because I live and you shall live. In that day you shall know that I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you" (John 14, 18-20).

The Incarnation, Passion, Death, Resurrection, Ascension, are not mere recorded events of history, they are acts in an enduring drama which is being acted socially in the Church and individually in every soul vivified by the Spirit of Christ. Christ is in us as the Spirit of our lives, and not outside us as an external example. Hence St. Paul recommends: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2, 5). Thanks to His possessing us by His Spirit we are sons of God. Bethlehem is not merely an historical event of a God "emptying Himself, taking the form of a servant"; it is also that great mystery by which we become by grace, what He is by nature, namely, the sons of God. The first filiation of a human nature in Christ is the beginning of a long line of progressive filiation which will endure until the end of time.

What Jesus did in His own human nature in Galilee He is doing today in other human natures in New York, London, Paris and every city and hamlet of the world where there are souls vivified by His

XX111- INTRODUCTION

Spirit. He is still being born in other Bethlehems of the world outcasts; still coming into His own and His own receive Him not; still instructing the learned doctors of the law and answering their questions; still labouring at a carpenter's bench; still "going about doing good"; still preaching, governing, sanctifying, climbing other Calvaries and entering into the glory of His Father.

There are poor people today in our bread queues, there are innocent men in our prisons, there are half-clothed families in our tenements who are as ragged and destitute on the outside as they are rich with the Spirit of Christ on the inside. Externally they appear to most of us like the ordinary poor who attack the rich, like the common captives who harangue against authority, like the selfishly needy who curse their lot, but the resemblance is only on the outside, and thus many are deceived. Some eyes are so filled with the dust of the world's traffic, that they cannot see the Divine grace in men's souls.

The world classifies them in its social surveys as the poor, the dependent, the captive, but in the eyes of the Father in heaven, they are other Christs in other deserts, thirsty at other wells of Jacob, suffering on other crosses and captive in other praetoriums. The world sees them as so many economic problems; the heavenly Father sees them as beloved sons in whom He is well pleased.

In this spiritual classic the reader will find the answer to the question: What does it mean to be a Christian? Christianity is not a system of ethics, it is a life. It is not good advice, it is Divine adoption. Being a Christian does not consist in being kind to the poor, going to church, reading the Bible, singing hymns, being generous to relief agencies, just to employees, gentle to cripples, serving on Church committees, though it includes all of these. It is first and foremost a love relationship, and as you can never become a member of a family by doing generous deeds but only by being born into it out of love, so you can never become a Christian by doing good things, but only by being born to it through Divine Love. Doing good things to a man does not make you his son, but being a son does make you do good things.

Christianity begins with being, not with doing, with life and not with action. If you have the life of a plant, you will bloom like a plant; if you have the life of a monkey, you will act like a monkey.

INTRODUCTION

If you have the life of a man, you will do the things a man does, but if you have the Life of Christ in you, you will act like a Christian. You are like your parents because you partake of their nature; you are like God if you partake of His Nature. What a man does is the externalization of what he is.

There is a world of difference between the two. Most people have their actions governed by their background: for instance, they think a certain way in order to defend their class or their wealth or their want of it; they even build a philosophy to suit the way they live; they do certain things because they are profitable or pleasant to them; they hate certain people because they are a reproach to their conscience or because they challenge their egotism. Their psycho-physical disposition is the center of their lives and therefore of their actions. They are, in a word, self-determined.

To be a Christian means to discard self as the supreme determinant of actions; it means to put on the mind of Christ so as to be governed by Christ's truths; to surrender the will to His Will, and to do all things that are pleasing to Him, not to self.

If we were forced to summarize the spiritual teaching of St. John Eudes in one sentence, it would be this: Cease to be self-determined; begin to be Jesus-determined.

DEDICATION
TO
JESUS AND MARY

O JESUS, my Lord and my God, reduced to the depths of my own nothingness, I fall on my face before Thy supreme Majesty. I cast at Thy feet my own will, my self love, everything that is mine; I surrender myself utterly to the power of Thy Divine Spirit and Thy holy love. In the infinite immensity of Thy Spirit, in the vast extent of Thy boundless love, in all the virtues and powers of Thy Divinity made man and Thy deified Humanity, in all Thy states and mysteries, in all Thy qualities and virtues, in everything that Thou art in the sight of the Eternal Father, Thy Divine Self, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Sacred Humanity, Thy most Blessed Mother, all the angels and all the saints, on earth and in heaven, and in the sight of all creatures in the universe, I adore Thee, I love Thee, and I give Thee glory!

But more especially do I revere and adore Thee as the One Who is Life, our only true Life, as the King of kings, the Saint of saints, as our Sanctifier, and, still more, our very Sanctification.

I adore Thy desire and Thy design, both ardent and great, of reigning in my soul and in all Christian souls. I most humbly implore Thy gracious pardon for all the hindrances I have, so far, put in Thy way, both in myself and in other men. In reparation for my faults, and henceforward to contribute in some small measure to the accomplishment of Thy desire, I give myself and I sacrifice myself to Thee, O most great Jesus, making the solemn avowal before heaven and earth that I no longer seek to live, except to work ceaselessly to form Thee, sanctify and make Thee live and reign in my soul, and in all the souls it shall please Thee to bring to me for that purpose. I beg Thee with my whole heart to cause all my cares, thoughts, words, works and labors to be directed and consecrated to that end.

Most particularly, however, do I beg Thee that all these things may be true of this little book, which I have composed, that it may help the souls who belong to Thee to establish, within themselves, the Life and the Kingdom of Thy Love. The book is written about Thee, O good Jesus, and Thou art its source and its true author, since, with all my might, I renounce everything in it that might be only mine, not Thine. I desire also, if it please Thee, that it may be all Thine, and that Thou mayest be its last and single end, just as Thou art its first and only principle, together with the Eternal Father and the Holy Spirit. That is why I give it back to Thee, in honor of and in union with the love by which it first came forth from Thee, and by which Thou hast given it to me. I put it into Thy hands, as an offering, a dedication, a consecration of homage to Thy adorable life, Thy love and all that Thou art. And, in the same way, in honor of and in union with the same love by which Thou didst give Thyself to us, Thou Who art the true Book of Life and of Love. I desire to give and dedicate this book to all the souls who wish to love Thee-especially to those of whom it is Thy holy will that I should have particular care in Thy sight.

And because I can not look upon Thee, O my Lord Jesus, without beholding her who sits at Thy right hand, who formed Thee, and sanctified and made Thee reign within herself in so admirable a manner, and in whom Thou hast always been living and reigning so perfectly, I salute her, and, after Thee, I honor her in every possible way, as Thy most honorable Mother, Mother of Life and Love, as well as my sovereign Lady, and my most dear Mother, to whom I belong by an infinite number of ties. To begin with, I was, born and brought up in a place that belongs especially to Our Lady (1) and it was by her intercession and by her prayers that Thou didst give me being and life. Because my mother, having been childless for a number of years,(2) made a vow to Thee in honor of Thy holy Mother. In consequence, knowing her prayer to have been heard, and beholding the accomplishment of her desire, in fulfilment of her vow she and my father brought me to the shrine of Thy most holy Mother (3) to thank her, and to consecrate me to her, and through her to Thee. Thou didst also give me being and life on the Feast of the Annunciation, the day on which Thou didst begin to be and to live in that Mother of Life. Thou didst give me the grace of making my vow of perpetual service to Thee and Thy most holy Mother on that blessed Feast and Thou hast given me several other signal favors on the same day. Thy bounty is full well acquainted with these special favors, and for them I will forever bless Thee.(4) It was also on the Feast of the Seven Dolours of Our Lady that, by Thy very great mercy, I put on Thy livery, the holy ecclesiastical habit which I now wear.(5) Yet more, by a signal favor of that same mercy, I celebrated for the first time, or rather for the first three times, the most august Sacrifice of Holy Mass, on the day on which the most Blessed Virgin and Mother brought Thee into the world: and this I offered upon an altar especially dedicated to her honor.(6) By reason of all this, not to mention numberless considerations which entirely consecrate me to Thee and to her, I have other most particular obligations to consecrate myself, and all that is mine, with all my will to Thee and to her.

That is why I implore Thee, O my Saviour, that, after having offered this my work to Thee, I may also consecrate it to Thy blessed Mother, in homage to the life of love Thou didst perfect in her, and she in Thee.

So I offer my book to Thee, O Mother of life and love, and I dedicate it to Thee with all the affections of my heart. O Mother of all blessings, may it please thee to bless both the work and the workman, and all who shall make use of it. Offer them to thy Son Jesus, the wellspring of all benediction. Implore Him to bless them and perfectly consecrate them to His own glory and pure love.

O good Jesus, this book is filled with various acts and exercises of praise, love, contrition, humility and other Christian virtues; engrave them deeply on my heart and on the hearts of those who are to read them. For my part, I offer Thee all these acts and exercises with the intention of actually making them for Thee without ceasing, in my heart and spirit, just as I do incessantly by this book, in which they shall always remain printed. And I beg this not only for myself, but for all the men in the world, especially for those over whom I have particular charge in Thy sight. Fulfil this my desire, O my dear Jesus, out of Thy great goodness, out of Thy love for Thy most lovable Mother, and hers for Thee. Graciously regard and accept, by virtue of my present intention granted by Thy holy grace, all these acts and exercises as if I were continually making them with an actual application of mind and heart, just as they remain ever printed upon this paper.

Finally, O God of all blessings, take this book under Thy holy protection. Defend it against Thine enemies and its own; bless it, sanctify it, fill it with Thy mighty spirit and Thy divine virtue. Do Thou Thyself abide within it, so that by it, or rather, by Thy own Self, Thou mayest be blessed, hallowed, loved and glorified in all those who shall read it. Destroy in it all that is mine, and let there remain nothing except what is Thine. Bless each word, so that each may be an act of benediction, love and praise to Thee, and for its readers an arrow and a holy fire, piercing their hearts, setting them ablaze sacredly and for ever, with heavenly wounds and divine ardor of Thy holy love.

EPISTLE DEDICATORY

To her Most Illustrious and Virtuous Ladyship

MADAME LAURENCE DE BUDOS

Abbess of the Royal Monastery of the Holy Trinity of Caen

My Lady:

I have cast myself at the feet of our Lord Jesus Christ and His most holy Mother, to consecrate this book to Them before all others, because to Them my whole being, all my life and my works belong by countless claims. I now take the liberty of appearing in your presence, in order to dedicate my book to your charitable zeal, to which it is due for several reasons.

First, because its author is bound to your service by obligations too numerous to be mentioned in this place.

Secondly, because its name conveys and expresses the principal employment and occupation of your life, which has been entirely spent, from childhood, in exercises of Christian and religious piety and devotion, of the kind designed to form and hallow Jesus in a Christian and religious soul.

In the third place, its purpose is to make Jesus live and reign in the souls of its readers and to establish His Spirit and His love in their hearts. Now this is the one end to which you also aspire, and it has been your principal work for several years, in the souls entrusted to your wise direction- and in this your progress has been so remarkable as to be seen at a glance. Besides, the divine Goodness of our Lord has chosen you in a special manner from among thousands, that He might be glorified particularly in you, and through you in many devout souls. His divine Spirit is singularly close to you, for your guidance and for the guidance of many others through you, along the paths of His grace and His love. Finally, His blessing rests upon you most abundantly, in the happy success of those religious projects you have undertaken for His glory.

May it therefore please you, My Lady, to receive this little book, as a small token of gratitude for the many obligations by which I am indebted to your bounty, as a testimony of the intense desire I cherish of seeing the Holy Ghost and the Divine Love of Jesus reign ever more and more in your soul, as well as in the souls of your pious daughters, to whom I likewise dedicate this work, at the same time as to their devout and esteemed Mother Abbess. I beg Jesus, with my whole heart, that He may bless both the mother and her daughters with the most holy treasures of His sacred love, and that He may transform them entirely into love and eternal benediction of Himself. Such is the desire and the prayer uttered each day at the altar by one who will always be, my Lady, in Jesus and Mary,

Your humble and obedient servant,

JOHN EUDES, Priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary

PREFACE

(To be read carefully to ensure a holy use of this book and a proper understanding of its name and purpose)

Jesus CHRIST, at the same time God and man, is all in all things, according to the inspired words of St. Paul: Omnia in omnibus Christus (Col. 3, 11). He must be in all Christians in a special manner, as the Head is in all the members and the spirit in its body; therefore your particular care and preoccupation must be to work at this formation and establishment of Christ within you, that He may live and reign there, so that He may be your life, your sanctification, your strength, your wealth, your glory and your all: Or rather, that He may live in you, and in you be hallowed and glorified, and establish the Kingdom of His Spirit, of His Love and of His other virtues.

Some years ago I published a small book called Exercises of Piety, devoted to this purpose. It was well received by many, who found it to their taste, and made a holy use of it. For this reason, being about to republish it, I have gone over it more carefully than before, changing the title, and making a few additions, no less useful than necessary to all true Christians who desire to serve God in spirit and in truth.

I repeat: to all Christians, for you must not think that this book is written only for members of Religious Institutes. It is intended for every person who desires to live a holy and Christian life. And this is something to which all Christians are bound, no matter what may be their state of life or their circumstances. After all, according to the words of Heaven, to be a Christian and to be a saint is but one and the same thing, since God has declared that it is His will that all Christians, and not Only those who have retired within cloisters, should labor for their sanctification (1 Thess. 4, 3); that they should pursue sanctity, without which no man shall ever see God (Heb. 12, 14); that they should serve in holiness and in justice before Him all the days of their life (Luke 1, 75); that they should be holy in all their conversation (1 Peter 1, 15), which is to say in all their acts and conduct; that they should be holy, unspotted and blameless before Him (Col. 1, 22); that they may be holy and perfect (Matt. 5, 48); that His Name be sanctified in them (Matt. 6, 9); and that they sanctify Jesus Christ in their hearts (1 Peter 3, 15).

PREFACE

The title I have given to this book embodies its two great subjects, namely: The Life and the Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls.

I have called it the Life of Jesus in Christian Souls because its first and principal aim is to show how Jesus Christ must live in all Christians, since Christians are on earth only to perpetuate the most holy life that Christ led here below. Likewise, the most important business and chief occupation of a Christian should be to endeavor to form Jesus within himself, according to the great Apostle's wish: Formetur Christus in vobis (Gal. 4, 19). This means that you are obliged to cause Him to live in your spirit and in your heart, and establish the sanctity of His life and behavior in your soul and body, which is what St. Paul calls carrying and glorifying "God in your body" (1 Cor. 6, 20), and St. Peter, sanctifying "the Lord Christ in your hearts" (1 Peter 3, 15). Jesus Christ is your Head and you are His members. By reason of this fact, everything that is His is yours, and everything that is yours is His. So it follows that, since He sanctified Himself for you-as He Himself says, speaking to His Father: "And for them do I sanctify myself that they also may be sanctified in truth" (John 17, 19), that is, "in Myself, Who am eternal Truth," as St. Augustine explains, and as He Himself is your sanctification (1 Cor. 1, 30), so also, when you sanctify yourself, you sanctify yourself for Him so that He may be sanctified in you. And your sanctification is the sanctification of Jesus within you, as You accomplish what St. Peter speaks of in these words: «Sanctify the Lord Christ in your hearts». (1 Peter 3, 15). Now the way to accomplish all this, is to develop the habit of seeing, loving and glorifying Jesus Christ in all things, and performing all your actions in His sanctity. This is what is taught in this book by a method and by means that are very easy, very pleasant and very effective.

In the second place I have called it The Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls

because the aim of the book is not only to explain certain very inspiring and efficacious means of forming Christ and making Him live within you, but also to make Him reign there, in full possession of your heart. Therefore, if you apply yourself with diligence and fidelity to the holy use of these exercises, you will learn the truth of the words of the Son of God when He said: "The Kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17, 21). YOU will possess what you ask every day when you say Adveniat regnum tuum: "Thy Kingdom come." And whereas the wretched Jews called Him king in mockery, and said of Him: Nolumus hunc regnare super nos, "We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19, 14), You will be able to call Him King in all truth and say to Him, in return, Volumus, Domine Jesu, te regnare super nos: "Lord Jesus, we do desire Thee to reign over us."

I have divided the book into seven parts, which include everything that should be done by a Christian and even a religious, to live a Christian and saintly life, as well as what is necessary to form and sanctify Jesus and make Him reign in the faithful soul.

Part One outlines what you should do during the whole course of your life to make Jesus live and reign within you.

Part Two contains a few devotional exercises most necessary to achieve this.

Part Three outlines what should be done each day. Here you will find a very satisfactory and easy method of performing all your actions with genuine holiness in the spirit of Jesus, which is the true spirit of Christianity and of all religious Orders which are in the Church Of Christ.

Part Four, what should be done each week.

Part Five, what should be done each month.

Part Six, what should be done each year.

Part Seven of the book contains the first and last duties of all Christians towards God, their Creator, in connection with the beginning and the end of their life, on the occasions of their birth, baptism, and death. In this part are given some exercises of piety to render to Almighty God the lawful veneration and homage you ought to have given Him at birth, if you had been endowed with the use of reason. Others aim at reviving and renewing in yourself the grace of holy Baptism. Finally, there are exercises to prepare yourself for a holy and Christian death.

Most of these exercises take the form of prayers, so that all types of persons may use them. For there are many worthy souls who, when they present themselves before God in prayer, have no facility in adapting to their own special needs the plain and unvarnished Christian truths they have learned by simple catechism. Yet this form of exercise will not prevent those who prefer these truths taught in terms of simple propositions, from drawing forth such points and truths as will give them material to occupy their minds concerning God and the various other subjects in this book, according as they are led by the grace of His spirit in themselves.

If at first you come upon certain exercises which impress you as to being too elevated and difficult to understand and to practise, do not be dismayed. If you will have the patience to read the whole book, if you approach it with a pure and sincere intention and a real desire to profit by it, I am confident that the Lord in His most great goodness will give you light to understand these things and the grace to put them into practice. I am sure that something you may not understand in one place will become clear to you in another, as you read on, and you will come to practise it with great facility and much consolation of soul.

I have said the same things over and over again in many places, but I have done so on purpose, both to give you a clearer understanding and to impress more deeply upon your soul certain fundamentals that are most important. Thus I hope to spare you the trouble of turning back to what has gone before: for this book contains a few important truths and practices that demand many explanations and exercises. For this reason I have seen fit to discuss them in several places, so that if you should happen to read or use one of the exercises or explanations to which they apply, and yet be unable or unwilling to read the others, you may not be deprived of the knowledge of these truths, nor the use of these practices. In any case you will thus be spared the trouble of looking for them in the other places where they are also found.

For the rest, if you desire to make holy use of this book, and glorify God by the exercises it sets forth, I would urge you to read it and use it, not hastily and cursorily, but with careful attention and intelligent application of your mind and heart to what you are reading, especially to the exercises of prayer. Take time to weigh, to savor and to assimilate the meaning and substance of the words which you will pronounce either vocally or silently in your heart, according to the dispositions our Lord will inspire in your soul, once you have given yourself to Him by opening this book with the intention of using what you are about to read in whatever way He may desire.

As a reward for my slight labors I ask you, in the name of the One who is all love for us, that as often as you open this book you may give yourself to Jesus with a renowned resolution to love Him perfectly. I ask you to make three acts of love to Him, on behalf of the one who has given you this book, who has received from His Heart and His Hand all the good there is in it. For my own part, I renew my supplications to our Lord Jesus Christ that He may impart His most holy blessings to this little book, and to you too, my dear reader, and I pray that through Him, it may accomplish in you all the work He desires it to do there; that He may give you grace to make such use of it, on all occasions, as He would have you do; that He may establish in you, forever, the kingdom of His glory and of His pure love; and that He may form and establish Himself in you, to live in you and reign there perfectly, to love and glorify Himself in you forever.

What Must Be Done in the Course of Your Whole Life to Live a Christian and Saintly Life and to Make Jesus Reign in Your Soul

Part One

WHAT MUST BE DONE IN THE COURSE OF YOUR WHOLE LIFE TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

NATURE OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

1. THE CHRISTIAN LIFE MUST BE A CONTINUATION OF THE MOST HOLY

LIFE WHICH JESUS LED ON EARTH.

Jesus, Son of God and Son of Man, King of angels and of men, is not only your God, your Saviour and your Sovereign Lord, but is also your head and you are "members of his body," as St. Paul says: "of his flesh and of his bones" (Eph. 5, 30). You are consequently united with Him in the most intimate union possible, that is, the union of members with their head. You are united with Him spiritually by faith and by the grace. He gave you in Holy Baptism. You are united with Him corporally in the union of His Most Sacred Body with yours in the Blessed Eucharist. It necessarily follows that, just as the members are animated by the spirit of the head, and live the same life, so you must also be animated by the spirit of Jesus, live His life, walk in His ways, be clothed with His sentiments and inclinations, and perform all your actions in the dispositions and intentions that actuated His. In a word, you must carry on and perpetuate the life, religion and devotion which He exercised upon earth,

This doctrine rests upon a very solid foundation, for it receives confirmation repeatedly from the sacred words of Him Who is Truth Itself. Do you not hear Him saying in several places in His Gospel: I am the Life" (John 14, 6); "I am come that they may have life" (John 10, 10)? "You will not come to Me that you may have life" (John 5, 40). "I live, and you shall live. In that day you shall know that I am in my Father: and you in me, and I in you" (John 14, 19-20). That is to say, just as Jesus is in His Father, living His life, which the Father communicates to Him, so also you are in Jesus, living by His life, and He is in you, giving you this same life. And thus He lives in you and you live in and with Him.

St. John, the beloved disciple, explains that God has given to man the gift of eternal life, which life is in His Son, and he who has in himself the Son of God has life; and, on the contrary, he who has not the Son has not life (1 John 5, 11-12). God sent His Only Begotten Son into the world that you may have life, and you are in this world even as Jesus is, that is, you have taken His place here, and ought to live as He lived (1 John 4, 9; 17).

Again in the Apocalypse he says that the well-beloved Spouse of your souls, Jesus Christ, cries out incessantly: "Come. And he that heareth, let him say: Come and he that thirsteth, let him come; and he that will, let him take the water of life freely" (Apoc. 22, 17), meaning, let him draw from Christ, the fountain-head, the waters of true life. Furthermore, it is written in the Holy Gospel that one day the Son of God stood up among a great multitude of people, and cried out with a loud voice: If any man thirst, let him come to me, and drink" (John 7, 37).

What does the holy Apostle St. Paul constantly preach to you, if not that "you are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God" (COL. 3, 3), and that the Eternal Father has given you life with Jesus Christ and in Jesus Christ (Eph. 2, 5)? This means that He makes you live not only with His Divine Son, but also in

His Son and by the life of His Son. Does he not also tell you that you must manifest and show forth the life of Jesus in your bodies (11 Cor. 4, 10-11), and that Jesus Christ is your life (COL. 3, 4), and that He is in you, and abides in you? I live," he says, "now not I; but Christ liveth in me" (Gal. 2, 20). For if you study well the rest of the chapter containing these words, you will find that St. Paul is speaking not only of himself, in his own name, but also in the person and in the name of every Christian. Finally, in another passage, addressing the followers of Christ, he says that he prays God to make them worthy of their calling, and to accomplish powerfully in them all the desires of His goodness and the work of faith, so that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in them and they in Him (11 Thess. 1, 11-12).

All these sacred texts show quite clearly that Jesus Christ must live in you; that you must not live except in Him; that His life must be your life, and your life must be a continuation and expression of His. Also you have no right to live on earth except in order to bear, show forth, sanctify, glorify and cause to live and reign in you the name, the life, the qualities and perfections, the dispositions and inclinations, the virtues and actions of Jesus.

11. CONFIRMATION OF THE FOREGOING TRUTH.

To understand more clearly this fundamental truth of Christian life, and to establish it more solidly in your soul, bear in mind that our Lord Jesus Christ has not simply one body and one life, but two. First, there is His own personal body, which He received from the Blessed Virgin, and the personal life which He lived in human form in this world. There is also His mystical body, namely, the Church, which St. Paul calls Corpus Christi, "the body of Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 12, 27). And His second life is the life by which He dwells in this mystical body, and in all true Christians who are the members of the Church. The passable and temporal life of His natural body was ended at the moment of His death. But the life of His mystical body He wills to continue until the end of time, in order to glorify His Father by the acts and sufferings of a mortal, suffering and laborious life, not only for the space of thirty-three years, but until the end of the world. Thus the passable and temporal life of Jesus in His mystical body, that is, in all Christians, has not yet reached its accomplishment, but develops itself from day to day in each true Christian and will not be perfectly complete until the end of time.

This is why St. Paul writes: «I fill up those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ, in my flesh, for his body, which is the church» (Col. 1, 24). And what the Apostle says of himself may be said of every true Christian, when he suffers anything in a spirit of love and submission to God. It may also be said of all the other actions performed by a Christian on earth. As St. Paul assures us that he fills up the sufferings of Jesus Christ, so also every true Christian, who is a member of Jesus Christ, and united to Him by grace, continues and accomplishes, by every act he does in the spirit of Jesus Christ, the actions which Christ Himself performed during His earthly life. Thus, when a Christian prays, he continues and accomplishes the prayers of Jesus Christ. When he works, he continues and accomplishes Christ's laborious life. When his relations with his neighbor are inspired by charity, he continues and accomplishes Christ's public life. When he takes his meals or his rest in a Christian fashion, he continues and accomplishes the subjection to these necessities that Christ willed to have in Himself. It is the same for all the other acts he performs in a Christian manner. For this reason St. Paul declares that the Church is the fulness of Christ (Eph. 1, 22-23), and that you are all tending to the perfection and the fulness of His maturity (Eph. 4, 11-13), that is, to His mystical age in His Church, which Will not be completed until the Day of judgment.

You can understand from this the nature of the Christian life. You see that it is a continuation and fulfilment of the life of Jesus, and that all your actions must be a continuation of the actions of Christ. You have to be so many other Christs upon the earth, in order to perpetuate here His life and works, and to do and suffer everything in a saintly and divine manner, in the Spirit of Christ, that is, with the holy and divine dispositions and intentions which Jesus Himself showed in all His acts and sufferings. As this divine Jesus is your head and you are His members, and as you are bound to Him by this union, incomparably closer, nobler and more elevated union than the union between the head and the members of the natural body, it necessarily follows that you must be animated by His spirit and live by His life more perfectly than the members of a natural body.

These truths are very great, very important, and call for intent consideration. They oblige you to do great things, and should be well thought out by those who desire to live a Christian life. Therefore, study them frequently and attentively, and so learn that Christian life, religion, devotion and piety truly and properly consist in continuing the life, religion and devotion Of Jesus on the earth. Consequently, not only religious but also all Christians are bound to live a completely holy and divine life and to perform all their actions in a holy and divine spirit. This is not impossible, nor is it even so difficult as many imagine. On the contrary, it is very pleasant and easy for those who remember to lift up their mind and heart frequently to Jesus, and to unite themselves to Him in all that they do, following the practices of the exercises which will be presented further on.

FOUNDATIONS OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY

Your only right to live on earth is to continue the holy and perfect life of your Head, Christ. Now there are four things which you must frequently consider and adore in Christ's earthly life, four things which you must try, as far as possible, with the help of His grace, to express and carry on in your life, because they are the four foundations of Christian piety and sanctity. Without them it is not possible to be a true Christian. Hence it becomes necessary to discuss, at this point, each one in particular.

III. FIRST FOUNDATION OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY: FAITH.

The first foundation of the Christian life is faith. St. Paul declares that if you would go to God and have access to His divine majesty, the first step you must take is to believe; for "without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11, 6). Faith is the substance and foundation of the things hoped for (Heb. 11, 1). It is the cornerstone of the Kingdom of Christ. It is a divine and celestial light, a participation in the eternal, inaccessible light, a beam radiating from the face of God. To speak in accordance with Scripture, faith is, as it were, a divine character by which the light of the countenance of God is imprinted upon the soul (Ps. 4, 7). It is a communication and a kind of projection of the divine light and knowledge which were infused into the holy soul of Jesus at the moment of His Incarnation. It is the science of salvation, the science of the saints, the science of God, which Jesus Christ drew forth from the bosom of His Father and brought down to you on earth, to dispel your shadows, to enlighten your heart, to give you the knowledge necessary for the perfect love and service of God, to submit and subject your mind to His truths which He still teaches you both through Himself and by Holy Mother Church. By faith you can express, continue and fulfil in yourself the submission, docility, the voluntary and undarkened subjection, with which His human mind regarded the lights imparted and the truths taught to Him by His Heavenly Father. Faith, then, being 8 given to you by God, is a continuation and fulfilment of the loving and most perfect submission of the human mind of Jesus Christ to the truths revealed to Him by His Eternal Father.

It is by this light and this divine science that you possess perfect knowledge, so far as it is possible in this life, of all things whether in God or not in God. Reason and human science often lead you into error because they are too weak and limited to penetrate to the knowledge of the things of God, which are infinite and incomprehensible. Human intelligence and knowledge also deceive you, because they are too full of the darkness and obscurity of sin to attain to a genuine knowledge even of things outside of God. But the light of faith, being a participation in the truth and light of God, can not possibly deceive you; indeed, it shows you things as God sees them, that is, in their truth, and just as they exist in the eyes of God.

Consequently, if you contemplate God with the eyes of faith, you will see Him just as He is and, in a certain manner, face to face. Although it is true that faith is accompanied by obscurity and permits you to behold God, not clearly as He is seen in heaven but as through a cloud, darkly, nevertheless, faith does not debase His supreme greatness to fit the capacity of your minds, as does science. Faith penetrates His shadows and His darkness, and goes straight to the infinity of His perfections, making you know Him as He is, infinite in His Being and in all His divine perfections. Faith lets you know that everything that is in God and in Jesus Christ, God and Man, is infinitely great and admirable, infinitely adorable and lovable, infinitely worthy of adoration, glory and love for His own sake. Faith shows you that God is true in His words and unfailing in His promises; that He is all goodness and gentleness and love towards those who seek Him and put their trust in Him, but that He is nothing but terror and severity towards those who abandon Him, and that it is frightful to fall into the hands of His justice. Faith gives a most certain knowledge that Divine Providence directs and guides all things that happen in the universe, with great holiness and wisdom, in fact, in the best way possible. His disposal of all things deserves to be infinitely adored and loved by all creatures that are subject to His order, whether in justice or in mercy, in heaven, on earth or in hell.

10- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

If you look at God's Church in the light of faith, you will see that as Jesus Christ is her Head and the Holy Ghost her Guide, it is not possible for her to wander from the truth in anything, nor to stray away into falsehoods. So too, all the ceremonies, customs and functions of the Church are instituted in a most holy manner, and everything she forbids or commands is legitimately forbidden or commanded. Also everything she teaches is infallibly true, and you must be ready to die a thousand times rather than to diverge, even in the slightest degree, from her inspired truth. Finally, you are obliged to pay singular homage and reverence to all the things that exist in the Church, as holy and sacred objects.

If you look at yourselves and all the things in the world by the light of faith, you will see most clearly that you are, of yourself, only nothingness, sin and abomination, and that everything in the world is nothing but smoke, vanity and illusion.

This is the way to look at everything: not in the vanity of the senses, nor with the eyes of flesh and blood, nor with the short-sighted and deceptive view of reason and human science, but in the truth of God add with the eyes of Jesus Christ, that is, with that divine light which He drew forth from His Father's bosom, by which He beholds and knows all things, the light He has communicated to you that you might see and know all things as He sees and knows them.

IV. FAITH SHOULD BE YOUR GUIDE IN ALL YOUR ACTIONS.

Just as you must consider all things in the light of faith if you would truly know them, so also you must perform all your acts under the guidance of that same light, if you would do them in a holy manner. As God is led by His divine wisdom, and the angels by their angelic intelligence, and men deprived of the light of faith by reason, and men of the world by worldly maxims, and voluptuaries by their senses, so Christians must direct themselves by the same light that directs their head, Jesus Christ, that is, by faith, which is a participation in the knowledge and the light of Christ.

So you must try, by every means, to study the divine science of faith and never to undertake anything except under its guidance. To that end, at the inception of your every act, especially your more im portant actions, place yourself at the feet of the Son of God and adore Him as the author of faith and its fulfilment, as the One who is the true light, enlightening every man that comes into this world.

Admit that of yourself you are but darkness, and that all the light of reason, science and even of human experience is often but obscurity and illusion, in which you can place no confidence. Renounce the prudence of the flesh and the wisdom of the world. Ask Jesus to destroy them in you, as His enemies, and not to let you obey their laws, their views or their maxims, but that He may enlighten you with His heavenly light and guide you by His divine wisdom. Beg Him to make known what is most pleasing to Him, and to give you grace and strength to cling firmly to His words and promises, and to close Your ears resolutely to all opinions and persuasions of human prudence; that you may courageously prefer the maxims of faith which He taught you by His Gospel and His Church, rather than the reasoning and arguments of men who base their conduct on the standards of the world.

To this end, it would be a very good thing to read each day on your knees, either in Latin or in English, a chapter of the life of Jesus Christ in the New Testament, so as to learn the life your Father led, and, through the consideration of His acts, His virtues, and His words, to become familiar with the rules and maxims upon which He based His conduct, and upon which He wishes you to base yours. Christian prudence consists in renouncing the maxims of the world, in calling upon the spirit of Christ to enlighten you, to guide you by His maxims, and to lead you in accordance with His truths, His actions and His virtues. This is what is meant by basing one's conduct upon the spirit of faith.

V. SECOND FOUNDATION OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY: HATRED OF SIN.

Since you are under obligation to continue on earth the holy and divine life of Jesus, you must be animated by the sentiments and inclinations of Christ Himself, according to St. Paul the Apostle, who says: Hoc sentite in vobis, quod et in Christo Jesu: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2, 5). Now Jesus

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

Christ entertained in Himself two widely opposed sentiments: one of infinite love for His Father and for you, the other of extreme hatred for everything opposed to His Father's glory and our salvation, namely, for sin. Since He loves His Father and you with an infinite love, He hates sin with an infinite hatred. He so loved His Father, and so loves you, that He performed great miracles, suffered sorrowful torments, and gave up a precious life for His Father's glory and your love. On the other hand, He holds sin in so great horror that He came down from heaven, taking the form of a servant, and for thirty-three years He lived on earth a life of labor, of humiliation and of suffering; He shed His Blood even to the last drop; He died the most shameful and most cruel of all deaths, all for His hatred of sin, because of His intense desire to destroy all sin in you.

Now you must see to it that these same sentiments of Christ with regard to His Father and to sin continue in yourself. You have to carry on the war He waged against sin while He was on earth. You are obliged to love God perfectly and with all your might, and you are also bound to hate sin infinitely with all your strength.

In order to dispose yourself to do this, you should henceforth look at sin, not as it is seen by men, with their carnal and blinded vision, but as God sees it, with eyes enlightened by His divine light; in other words, you should see it with the eyes of faith.

By this light you will see that sin, in so far as it is in a certain sense infinitely contrary and opposed to God, and is a privation of an infinite good, which is God, contains in itself a malice, madness, ugliness and horror that are just as great, in their own way, as God's infinite goodness, wisdom, beauty and holiness (St. Thomas, Summa, 3 a. Q. i, a. 2, ad 2um). Consequently sin deserves to be hated and fought to the same degree in which God deserves to be sought and loved. You will see that sin is so horrible a thing that it can be obliterated only by the blood of a God, so detestable that it can be destroyed only by the death of a God-Man, so abominable that it can be worthily repaired only by the labors, agonies and death, and infinite merits of a God.

You will see that sin is a cruel murder, a frightful act of deicide, a ghastly annihilation of all things. It is murder because it is the only cause of death, both of the body and of the soul of man. It is deicide, because sin and the sinner caused Christ to die on the Cross and the sinner continues this crucifixion of Jesus, day by day, within himself. Then it is an annihilation of nature, of grace, of glory and of all things. Since, as far as it can, it destroys their divine Author, it consequently destroys nature, grace and glory.'

Again you will see that sin is so detestable before God that when the first, most noble and dearest of His creatures, namely, the angels, fell into one single sin, a sin of thought only, a sin of no more than a moment, He cast them down from the height of heaven into the depths of hell, without allowing them even a moment to do penance, since they were unworthy and even incapable of this (St. Thomas, Ibid., a. Q. 64, a. 2). When God finds one mortal sin upon a soul, at the hour of death, even though He is all goodness and love for His creature, and has an extreme desire to save all mankind, and even though He has shed His blood and given His life in order to save humanity, He is nevertheless forced by His justice to pass a sentence of eternal damnation upon that wretched soul. Another thing, even more surprising than this, is that when the Eternal Father saw His own Son, His only well-beloved Son, most holy and most innocent, laden with the sins of others, He did not spare Him, as St. Paul says, but delivered Him up for us to the Cross and to death (Rom. 8, 32), so abominable and execrable is sin in His sight.

You will also see that sin is so full of malignity that it transforms the servants of God into slaves of the devil, the members of Jesus Christ into the members of Satan, and even changes men who are by grace and participation gods, into devils by likeness and imitation, according to the words of Christ Himself who, speaking of Judas, called him a devil: Unus ex vobis diabolus est (John 6, 71).

And you will finally come to know that sin is the evil of evils, and the greatest of all misfortunes. It is the source of all the evils and all the misfortunes that cover the earth and fill hell to overflowing. Indeed, this evil is the only one in the world that really deserves to be called an evil. Of all the frightful and appalling things that exist, sin is the most frightful and the most appalling. It is more to be dreaded than death, more fearsome than the devil, and more terrifying than hell, because all that is horrible, appalling and terrifying about death, the devil and hell proceeds from sin. O Sin, how detestable thou art! Oh, if men only knew thee! Yes, sin, there is something in thee infinitely more horrible than anything that may be spoken or conceived, since the soul that is befouled with thy rottenness can not be cleaned nor purged except by the blood of God Himself, and thou canst not be destroyed and annihilated save only by the death and annihilation of a God-Man!

O God, no wonder Thou dost hate this hellish monster so, and that Thou dost pursue it with so hard a punishment! Let those be astonished by this who know Thee not, and who know not what an insult is offered to Thee by sin. Indeed, O my God, Thou wouldst not be God, if Thou didst not hate iniquity with an infinite hatred. As it is Thy joy to be bound by necessity to love Thyself infinitely, since Thou art infinite goodness, so also art Thou bound by a holy obligation, to hold in infinite abhorrence that which is, in some sense, infinitely contrary to Thee. O you, Christians who read these words, all of which are based upon the utterance of eternal Truth, if there remain in you some little spark of love and zeal for the God whom you adore, learn to have horror for what He so abhors, and for what is so contrary to Him. Fear sin, and fly from it more than from pestilence, or from death, or from all the other evils that can be imagined. Keep always alive within you the unshakable resolution to suffer a thousand deaths, together with every kind of torture, rather than ever to become separated from God by a mortal sin.

And that God may preserve you from this misfortune, be careful also to avoid venial sin, as far as possible. For you must keep in mind that the shedding of Our Lord's blood and the sacrifice of His life were just as necessary to wipe out venial sin as to deliver you from mortal sin. Remember that anyone who attaches little importance to venial sin will soon fall into mortal sin. If you do not find these resolutions in your own soul, pray to Our Lord to put them there, and do not rest until you possess these dispositions. For you ought to know that as long as you do not have the will to die or suffer every kind of disgrace and torture rather than commit any sin, you are not a true Christian. But if by some misfortune you should happen to fall into sin, be sure to rise up again at once by means of contrition and confession, and return to your previous dispositions.

VI. THIRD FOUNDATION OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY: DETACHMENT FROM THE WORLD AND FROM WORLDLY THINGS.

It is not enough for a Christian to be free from vice and to abhor every kind of sin. Beyond that, it is necessary to work with diligence and resolution at the task of becoming perfectly detached from the world and from the things of the world. When I say "the world," I mean the corrupt and disordered life led in the world, the damnable spirit that reigns over the world, the perverse sentiments and inclinations which men of the world follow, and the pernicious laws and maxims by which they govern their behavior. By the things of the world I mean everything that the world so highly values and loves and strives after, namely, the honors and praises of men, vain pleasures and satisfactions, wealth and temporal comforts, friendships and affections based on flesh and blood, on self-love and selfish interests.

Consider the life of our Lord Jesus Christ, and you will see that He lived on earth in most perfect detachment, stripped of all things. Read His holy Gospel, listen to His words, and you will learn that "everyone of you that doth not renounce all that he possesseth, cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14, 33). So, if you really desire to be a Christian and a disciple of Jesus Christ, and if you wish to continue and express in yourself His holy life of detachment from everything, you must strive to achieve an absolute and universal detachment from the world and from worldly things.

To do this, you should frequently reflect how the world always has been and always will be opposed to Christ, whom it has persecuted and crucified, and will persecute and crucify, even to the end of time. Consider that the sentiments and inclinations, the rules and maxims, the life and spirit of the world are so opposed to the sentiments and inclinations, the rules and maxims, the life and spirit of Jesus that it is impossible for them to subsist together. Christ's sentiments and inclinations lead entirely to the glory of His Father and our sanctification, while those of the world lead only to sin and perdition.

16- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

The laws and maxims of Jesus are very mild and holy and reasonable. The standards of the world are laws and maxims of hell, and are diabolical, tyrannical and finally unbearable.

The life of Jesus is a holy life made beautiful by all kinds of virtues; the life of the world is a depraved life, full of disorder and of all sorts of vice.

The spirit of Jesus is a spirit of light, of truth, of piety, of love, confidence, zeal and reverence for God and for all that belongs to God; the spirit of the world is a spirit of error, of unbelief, of darkness, of suspicion, of dissatisfaction, of impiety, of irreverence and hardness of heart towards God and all the things of God.

The spirit of Jesus is a spirit of humility, of modesty, of self-distrust, of mortification and abnegation, of constancy and of firmness. But the spirit of the world is, by contrast, a spirit of pride, presumption, disordered self-love, fickleness and inconstancy.

The spirit of Jesus is a spirit of mercy, charity, patience, gentleness and of unity with others. But the spirit of the world is a spirit of vengeance, envy, impatience, anger, slander and disunion.

Finally, the spirit of Jesus is the spirit of God, a holy and divine spirit, filled with every grace, virtue, and blessing. It is a spirit of peace and tranquillity, which seeks nothing but the interests of God and of His greater glory. The spirit of the world, on the contrary, is the spirit of Satan, for it necessarily follows that, since Satan is the prince of this world, the world is animated and governed by his spirit—an earthly, carnal and animal Spirit; a spirit motivating all kinds of sin and accursedness; a spirit of unrest and anxiety, of storms and tempests—spiritus procellarum (Ps. 10, 7), a spirit seeking only its own convenience, satisfaction and interests. Judge then, if it be possible for the life and spirit of the world to be reconciled with the life and spirit of Christianity, which is none other than the life and spirit of Christ.

If, therefore, you desire to be a true Christian, that is, if you desire to belong perfectly to Jesus Christ, to live His life, to be animated by His spirit and conduct yourself according to His maxims, it is absolutely necessary for you to make up your mind to renounce the world entirely and bid it farewell forever. I do not mean that it is necessary for you to leave the world and shut yourself up between four walls, unless God calls you to do so. But I do say that you must try to live in the world as though you were not of the world, that is, you must make a public, generous and unwavering profession of living otherwise than as the world lives, and of rejecting its laws and maxims. And I tell you not to be ashamed but to enjoy holy pride in being a Christian, in belonging to Jesus Christ, in preferring the saintly maxims and truths that He left you in His holy Gospel, to the pernicious maxims and falsehoods by which the world deceives its disciples.

I urge you at least to have enough courage and resolution to make a clean break with the standards, sentiments and inclinations of the world, and to despise all its empty speeches and deceptive opinions, just as the world makes a show of impious temerity in despising the laws and maxims of Christianity. It is in this alone that true courage and perfect generosity consist: for what the world calls courage and power of character are nothing but cowardice and pusillanimity. This, then, is what I mean by detachment from the world: renouncing the world, and living in the world as though not of it.

VII. CONTINUATION OF THE SAME SUBJECT.

If you would more firmly establish this detachment from the world in your soul, it is not only necessary for you to strive to break away from the world, but you should even develop a horror for it, like the repugnance in which Christ held it. Now Christ had such a horror of the world that He not only exhorted you through His beloved Disciple: "Love not the world, nor the things which are in the world" (1 John 2, 15), but He also tells us, through His Apostle St. James, "that the friendship of this world is the enemy of God" (James 4, 4), that is, He considers as His enemies all those who love the world. He assures you that His Kingdom is not of this world (John 18, 36) any more than He is of this world, and that those whom His Father has given Him are not of this world, just as He is not of it (John 17, 12-16). And another thing~more terrifying still~is that He solemnly protested, on the very day when He wrought the greatest miracle of His goodness, namely, the eve of

18 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

His death, when He was about to pour forth His Precious Blood and give up His life for the salvation of men, I pray not for the world" (John 17, 9). And in these words He thundered a most frightful anathema, a curse and an excommunication upon the world, declaring it to be unworthy of any share in His prayers or in His mercy.

Finally, He assures us that "now is the judgment of the world" and "now shall the prince of this world be cast out" (John 12, 31). And, in fact, the very moment the world fell into the corruption of sin, it was judged by divine justice and condemned to be burnt and consumed by fire. And although the effect of the sentence was deferred, it will none the less be carried out at the end of time. Consequently, Christ looks upon the world as the object of His hatred and His curse, and as something He plans and desires to burn in the day of His wrath.

Enter, then, into the feelings of Christ towards the world, and towards all things that are in the world. From now on, view the world as Jesus Christ does, that is, as the object of His hatred and malediction. Look upon it as something He forbids you to love, under pain of incurring His enmity. See it as a thing He has excommunicated and cursed with His own lips, with which you may not, consequently, communicate without participating in the same malediction. See the world as something He desires to burn and reduce to ashes. Look at all those things which the world most values and loves, like pleasures, honors, riches, worldly friendship and affections, and all other things of this kind, as things which simply pass away, according to this divine utterance: Mundus transit, et concupiscentia ejus (1 John 2, 17). See all these things as nothing but smoke, deceit and illusion, as vanity and affliction of spirit. Read these truths and reflect upon them often, and each day pray Our Lord to impress them upon your mind.

To arrive at these dispositions, take a little time each day to adore Jesus in His perfect detachment from the world, begging Him to detach you from it entirely and to impress upon your heart hatred, horror and abomination for the things of the world. For your own part, see that you do not indulge in the useless visits and conversation that are customary in the world. If you are taken up with these idle occupations, in the name of God leave them at all costs and fly as you would from a plague, from all the places and persons and from any company where the talk is only of the world and worldly things. Since such things are discussed with esteem and affection, it is very difficult to avoid carrying away some harmful impression from these conversations. Besides, you will gain nothing from them but a dangerous loss of time; you will find in them nothing but unhappy dissipation of mind and affliction of spirit, and all you will bring away will be bitterness of heart, coldness in piety, separation from God, and a thousand faults that you may have committed.

As long as you seek out and love the company of men of the world, Jesus Christ whose delight it is to be with the children of men will not take His delight in you and will not give you any taste of the consolations with which He refreshes those who find all their joy in conversing with Him. Fly then, from the world, I say to you again, fly from it, abhor its life, its spirit and its maxims. Do not make friends with any persons except those whom you can help, or those who can help you and animate you, by word and example, to love Jesus and live in His spirit.

VIII. SELF-DETACHMENT.

It is no small accomplishment to renounce the world in the manner just described. Yet even this is not enough to give you that perfect detachment which is one of the primary foundations of Christian life. Our Lord cries out to us in a loud voice: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. 16, 24). So, then, if you want to be among the followers of Christ and belong to Him, you have to renounce yourself, that is, your own mind, your own ideas, your own will, desires, inclinations and your self-love, because it is your self-love that leads you to hate and avoid anything that might cause pain or mortification to your spirit or your flesh and makes you love and seek out everything that may give them pleasure and contentment.

Two reasons oblige you to practise self-abnegation.

First, everything in you is so disordered and depraved, as a result of the corruption of sin, that there is nothing in you that is not contrary to God, and that does not put some obstacle in the way of His plans, or oppose itself to the love and glory you owe Him. Therefore, if you desire to belong to God, you must necessarily renounce yourself and forget and hate and persecute and destroy and annihilate your own self.

Secondly, Jesus Christ, your head and your model, in whom there is nothing that is not all holy and divine, nevertheless lived in so great detachment from Himself and kept His human spirit, His own will and love of Himself so subordinated that He never did anything according to His own human light or spirit, but all according to His Father's spirit. He behaved like a person having no love for Himself of infinite glory and felicity in this world, and of all human pleasures and satisfactions, and sought out and welcomed everything that might cause Him to suffer in His body or in His soul. Now if you are truly His members, you ought, therefore, to share His sentiments and dispositions, and make a firm resolution to live in future in complete detachment, forgetfulness, and hatred of your own selves.

To do this, make sure that you often adore Jesus in this detachment from Himself and give yourself to Him, begging Him to detach you entirely from yourself, from your Own spirit, your own will and your self-love so that He may unite you perfectly to Himself, and govern you in all things according to His spirit, His love and His pure will.

Lift up your heart to Him, at the beginning of every action, somewhat like this: "O Jesus, with all my power I renounce myself, my own mind, my own will and my self-love and I give myself all to Thee and to Thy holy spirit and Thy divine love. Draw me out of myself and direct me in this action according to Thy holy will."

how sure you may be that you are right, be glad to give up your own opinion and yield to that of someone else, provided the glory of God be not concerned in the matter.

When you feel some desire or inclination for one thing or another, lay it at once at the feet of Jesus, assuring Him that you do not wish to have any other will or inclination but His.

The moment you perceive yourself to have some sensible weakness or affection for any earthly object, immediately turn your heart and affections to Christ, in this way: "O dear Jesus, I give Thee all my heart and my affections. O Thou only object of my love, make me never love anything except in Thee and for Thee."

When someone gives you a word of praise, refer it to Him who is alone worthy of all honor saying: "O my glory, I desire no other glory but Thine forever. To Thee alone is due all praise, honor and glory, and to me all abjection, shame and humiliation."

When something occurs that mortifies your body or spirit, or when you see an occasion to deprive yourself of some satisfaction (such occasions present themselves hourly), accept it with a ready welcome, for the love of Our Lord, and bless Him for giving you an opportunity to mortify your self-love, in honor of His mortifications and privations on earth.

Whenever you feel any joy or consolation, refer it to the sublime Source of all consolation, and say to Him: "O Jesus, I desire never to have any contentment but Thine. Ah, my Lord, it is joy enough for me to know that Thou art God, and that Thou art my God! O Jesus, be always Jesus, that is, always full of glory, greatness and joy, and I shall always be satisfied. O my Jesus, never permit me to find my contentment in anything in the world, but in Thee alone. But rather grant that I may say like Queen Esther of old: "Thou knowest, O Lord, that thy handmaid hath never rejoiced, but in thee" (Esth. 14, 18).

IX. PERFECTION OF CHRISTIAN DETACHMENT.

The perfection of Christian detachment does not consist only in being detached from the world and from oneself. It obliges the soul to be, in a certain sense, detached even from God. Do you not know that when Our Lord was still on earth, He assured His apostles that it was expedient for Him to depart from them to go to the Father and send them His Holy Spirit? Why was this, if not because they were attached to the sensible consolation of the visible presence of His sacred humanity? Now this was an obstacle to the coming of the Holy Spirit, so necessary is it to be detached from all things, no matter how holy and divine they may be, if you would be animated by the spirit of Jesus, which is the spirit of Christianity.

That is why I say you must be detached, in a certain sense, even from God, that is, from the delights and consolation that ordinarily accompany God's grace and His love. You must be detached from the pious plans you have made for God's glory, from the desires you have for greater perfection and love for God, and even from the desire to be delivered from the prison of this body, to see God and to be united with Him perfectly, and to love Him purely, without interruption. When God allows you to feel the sweetness of His kindness in your devotions, you must be careful not to become attached to this consolation. You must humble yourself at once, considering yourself most unworthy of any consolation, and ready to be stripped of it, to assure Him that you desire to serve and love Him, not for the consolation that He gives, either in this world or in the next, but for love of Himself and merely to please Him.

When you have undertaken a holy task or are doing some good work for the glory of God, you must exert every effort to ensure its accomplishment. Nevertheless, you must take care not to become attached to it, so that if, by accident, you are obliged to interrupt this good work, or even leave it altogether, you will not lose your peace and repose of spirit, but remain content in view of the will and permission Of God, who directs all things and is to be equally loved in all.

Similarly, although you must exert all your energy in trying to conquer your passions, vices and imperfections, and to become master of every kind of virtue, you must, nevertheless, work at this without being carried away by your zeal. So that when you do not perceive in yourself as many virtues, or as much love of God as you would like to see, you may remain at peace and undisturbed, humiliating 'yourself because of the obstacles you yourself have placed in the path Of virtue. You must try to love your own abjection, remaining satisfied with what it pleases God to give you, ever persevering in your desire to make progress, having confidence that Our Lord, in His goodness, will give you the graces you need to serve Him with the perfection He requires of you.

So, also, however much you ought to be always eager for the happy hour which will entirely take you away from the earth, from sin and from imperfection, and unite you perfectly with God and His pure love, and however much you ought to exert all your power to accomplish God's work in you so that, His work being finished, He may quickly call you back to Him. you must, nevertheless, desire this without attachment and without anxiety. If it be Our Lord's good pleasure for you to remain several more years separated from the most sweet vision of His divine face, you must remain satisfied with His most adorable will, even if He were to make you bear this bitter privation until the Day of Judgment.

This is what is called detachment from God. In this consists the perfect detachment from the world, from themselves, and from all things which all Christians should possess. Oh, how sweet it is to be thus free and detached from all things!

Some may think that it is very difficult to arrive at such perfection. But it would be easy for you if you gave yourself entirely and unreservedly to the Son of God, and if you placed your reliance and confidence, not in your own powers and resolutions, but in the greatness of His goodness and in the power of His grace and of His love. For wherever this divine love is to be found, all is done with extreme sweetness. True, you must do violence to yourself in certain things, and go through many trials and sufferings, much darkness and mortification; nevertheless, in the ways of holy love, there is more honey than gall, and more sweetness than rigor.

Ah, my Saviour, what glory Thou hast, what joy Thou takest and what great things dost Thou accomplish in one who walks bravely in these ways, abandoning everything, becoming detached from everything, even in a way from Thee, to give himself more perfectly to Thee! How strongly dost Thou then unite the soul with Thee! With what power dost Thou gain possession of it! How divinely dost Thou plunge it into the abyss of Thy love! How admirably dost Thou transform it into Thyself, clothing it with Thy qualities, Thy spirit, and Thy love!

What eminent satisfaction, what delightful sweetness it is for a soul to be able to say with truth: "My God, here I am free and detached from everything! Who will stop me now from loving Thee perfectly? Now I no longer cling to anything. Draw me after Thee, O Jesus. Trahe me post te, curremus in odorem unguentorum tuorum (Cant. 1, 3). What a consolation it is for a soul to be able to say with the holy Spouse: "My beloved to me, and I to him" (Cant. 2, 16), and with Jesus, Omnia mea tua sunt, et tua mea sunt, "All my things are thine, and thine are mine" (John 17, 10).

Cultivate an earnest desire for this holy detachment. Give yourself entirely and unreservedly to Jesus. Beg Him to break your bonds with the strength of His all-powerful arm, to detach you completely from the world, from yourself, and from all things, so that He may work in you, without any obstacle, all that He desires to accomplish for His glory.

X. FOURTH FOUNDATION OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY: PRAYER.

The holy exercise of prayer must be considered one of the chief foundations of Christian life and sanctity, since the whole life of Jesus Christ was nothing but a perpetual prayer, which you must continue and express in your life. This is so necessary that the earth on which you live, the air you breathe, the bread that sustains you, the heart that beats in your breast, are none of them so necessary to man for his bodily life as prayer is to a Christian if he is to live as a Christian. This is because:

(1) The Christian life, called by the Son of God eternal life, consists in knowing and loving God. This divine knowledge is acquired by praying.

(2) Of yourself you are nothing, can do nothing and possess nothing but poverty and nothingness. Hence, you have a very great need of going to God for help, at all hours, by means of prayer, so that you may obtain and receive from Him all that you lack.

Prayer is a respectful and loving elevation of your mind and heart to God. It is a joyous meeting, a holy communication, a divine conversation between God and the Christian. In it the soul considers and contemplates its Creator in His divine perfections, in His mysteries and in His works; it adores and blesses Him, loves and glorifies Him, gives itself to Him, is abased before Him at the sight of its sins and ingratitude. It implores Him to be merciful, and learns to become like Him by imitating His divine virtues and perfections, and finally asks for all the things necessary to serve and love Him.

Prayer is a participation in the life of the angels and saints, in the life of Jesus Christ and of His most holy Mother, even of the life of God and of the Three Divine Persons. For the life of the angels and saints, of Christ, and of His most holy Mother is nothing else but a continual practice of prayer and contemplation, in which their uninterrupted occupation is to look upon God, to praise and love Him, to ask Him, on your behalf, for the things you need. And the existence of the Three Divine Persons is a perpetual contemplation, praise and love of one another, which is accomplished first and foremost by prayer.

Prayer is perfect delight, supreme happiness, a true earthly paradise. It is by this divine exercise of prayer that the Christian soul is united to God, who is the centre of its being, its goal and its supreme good. It is in prayer that God belongs to the soul and the soul to God. It is by praying that the soul pays Him rightful service, homage, adoration and love, and receives from Him His lights, His blessings and a thousand tokens of His exceeding great love. It is during your prayers that God takes His delight in you, according to this word of His: "My delights are to be with the children of men" (Prov. 8, 31), and gives us an experimental knowledge of the fact that our true joy and perfect satisfaction are to be found in God, and that a hundred, or even a thousand years of the false pleasures of this world are not worth one moment of the true delights which God allows those souls to taste, who seek all their contentment only in conversing with Him in holy prayer.

Finally, prayer is the most worthy, the noblest, the loftiest, greatest and most important act in which you can engage your efforts, for it is the ceaseless occupation of the angels and saints, of the Blessed Virgin, of Jesus and of the Most Holy Trinity throughout all the vastness of eternity. It is also destined to be our own unending activity in heaven. Indeed, this is the one true and proper function of a man and of a

Christian, since man is created for God and to be with

26- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

God, and the Christian is on earth only for the purpose of continuing what Jesus Christ did during His life.

Therefore, with all my power, I urge every one of you who read these words, and in God's name I adjure you, since our Dear Jesus condescends to take His delight in being with you and speaking to you through prayer, do not deprive Him of His satisfaction, but learn by your own experience that like holy wisdom His conversation has no bitterness, nor His company any tediousness, but joy and gladness (Wis. 8, 16). Look upon prayer as the first, the principal, most necessary, most urgent and most important business of your life, and as far as possible, free yourself from all less necessary duties, to give as much time as you can to prayer, especially in the morning and evening, and a little before dinner, and in one or another of the ways I shall set forth.

XI. VARIOUS KINDS OF PRAYER.

There are several ways of praying and I shall here set down the five most important methods of prayer.

1. Mental Prayer: The first is called mental or interior prayer, in which the soul communes with God, taking as the subject of conversation one of His divine perfections, or some mystery, virtue or word of His Divine Son, whether something He accomplished in the past, or is doing now, in the order of glory, grace or nature, in His Mother, His saints, His Church or in the world.

You begin the conversation of prayer by applying your understanding to consider with a determined, yet unstrained, attention and effort the truths to be found in the subjects chosen, truths which can arouse the soul to love God and hate sin. Then make your heart and will produce a few fervent acts of adoration, praise, love, humility, contrition and oblation, with the resolution to avoid evil and do good, according to the prompting of the Spirit of God.

This kind of prayer is more holy, more useful and more filled with blessings than words can convey. For this reason, if God draws you to mental prayer and gives you the grace to practise it, you should indeed thank Him for this very great gift. If He has not yet given you this grace, pray that He may do so, and for your own part exert all your efforts to correspond with His grace and cultivate this holy practice. God Himself will instruct you in the ways of this prayer better than all the books and all the teachers in the world, if you cast yourself down at His feet with humility, confidence and purity of heart, in the way I am about to explain.

2. Vocal Prayer: The second method of prayer is called vocal prayer. It consists in speaking to God, either by the recitation of the Divine Office, or the rosary or any other vocal prayer. This is almost as valuable as mental prayer, provided that when you speak to God with your lips you also speak to Him with your heart and with an attentive mind. In this way your prayer will be both vocal and mental. If, however, you get into the habit of reciting many vocal prayers mechanically and inattentively, you will leave God's presence more distracted, colder and less generous in His love than you were when you entered. For this reason I advise you to confine yourself to relatively few vocal prayers, apart from those you are obliged to say, and to develop the habit of saying them devoutly, with great attention and application of the mind to God. During vocal prayers you should occupy your mind and heart with holy thoughts while your tongue is uttering the words, remembering constantly that you are supposed to continue the prayers which Christ said on earth. Give yourself to, Him for this purpose. Unite yourself with the love, humility, purity, holiness and most perfect attention characteristic of His prayers, and beg Him to impress upon your soul the holy and divine dispositions and intentions with which He used to pray.

You may also offer your prayers in union with all the holy prayers and divine supplications that have ever been, in heaven and on earth, by the most Holy Virgin, the angels and the saints, uniting yourself with the love and devotion and attention with which they perform this holy function.

3. Spirit of Prayer: The third method of prayer is to perform all your acts, even the smallest, in a Christian and holy spirit, offering them to Our Lord as you begin, and then, from time to time, lifting up your heart to Him while you perform them, in the way that will be once more set forth in more detail in "Part Three" of this book. To do your actions thus is to perform them with a spirit of prayer and to practise prayer continually, in accordance with the commandment of Our Lord, who desires that you should always pray without ceasing. This prayer by action is a most excellent, as well as a very easy way to remain always in the presence of God.

4. Spiritual Reading: The fourth method of prayer is to read good books, reading them, however, not in haste, but taking your time, and applying your mind to what you are reading, stopping to consider and turning over in your thoughts the truths that strike you most forcefully, in order to impress them on your mind so as to derive specific acts of virtue and profitable resolutions. Therefore, one thing I recommend to you with singular insistence is that you never let a day go by without reading some spiritual book for half an hour.

The books best suited for spiritual reading are the New Testament, the Imitation of Christ, the Lives of the Saints, the works of Luis de Granada, especially his great Guide for Sinners and the Memorial of the Christian Life, the writings of St. Francis de Sales and of Cardinal de Bérulle, founder of the Oratory of France, and Father Quarre's Spiritual Treasure.<sup>(1)</sup> But remember, at the beginning of your reading, to give your mind and heart to Our Lord and to beg Him to give you the grace to derive the fruit He chooses for you, and that by this He may work His holy will in your soul for His glory.

5. Conversing About God: It is also a most useful and devout practice, which usually enflames hearts with divine love, to speak and converse with one another about God and holy things. Christians should indeed spend part of their time this way. God should be the principal subject of their conversation, and it is in this that they ought to seek their recreation and their delight.

You are encouraged to do this by the Apostle St. Peter saying, If any man speak, let him speak as the words of God (I Pet. 4, 11) .

After all, you are God's children, so you ought to enjoy speaking the language of your Father, a language that is all holy, celestial and divine. And since you are made for Heaven, you ought to begin, even on earth, to speak a heavenly language. Oh, how sweet it is, to a soul who loves God above all things, to speak of what is most lovable in the world and to hear sweet words about Him! How pleasing are these holy conversations to the One who has said: "Where there are two or three gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18, 20)! Oh, how different are such precious words from the ordinary chatter of this world!

(1). Father John Hugh Quarré entered the Oratory of France in 1618 and later became provincial of the Belgium Oratory.

What a holy and profitable way to spend your time, provided you do it in the proper dispositions!

For this end you should follow the rule laid down by St. Paul on this subject: Sicut ex Deo, coram Deo, in Christo loquimur. "From God, before God, in Christ we speak" (11 Cor. 2, 17). These words indicate the three things you must observe, if you are to speak of God devoutly and inspiringly.

First, you must speak from God, that is, you must draw upon God for your topics and your words, offering yourself to the Son of God at the beginning of your spiritual conversation, in order that He may inspire your mind and place on your lips the words and things you are to say, and that you may thus say what He said to His Father: "The words which Thou gavest me, I have given to them" (John 17, 8).

Secondly, you must speak in the presence of God, in a spirit of prayer and recollection, remembering attentively that God is everywhere present, and giving yourself to God, so, that He may cause to fructify in you the things that you may say or hear said, and that you may make use of them according to His holy will.

Thirdly, you must speak in Jesus Christ, that is, with the intentions and dispositions of Christ, even as He spoke so nobly and beautifully on earth, or else as He would speak if He were in your place. To do this, you should give yourself to Him, uniting yourself with His intentions as He discoursed in the world, having no other aim but the glory of His Father alone. You should also share His dispositions of humility, of gentleness and charity towards those to whom He spoke, and of love and attention towards His Father. If you do this, your conversations will be most pleasing to Him. He will be in the midst of you, to take His delight among you and the time spent in these spiritual conversations will be time spent in prayer.

XII. QUALITIES OF PRAYER.

The holy Apostle St. Paul teaches that if you would perform all your actions devoutly, you must act in the name of Jesus Christ. And Christ Himself assures you that whatever you ask His Father, in His name, He will grant you. Therefore, to pray worthily and to obtain from God all that you ask, you must pray in the name of Jesus Christ. But what does it mean, to pray in the name of Christ? I have already mentioned what it means, but it is a point that can not be stressed too often, a truth which must become well impressed upon your minds as of great importance and most useful in everything you do. To pray in the name of Christ means to continue the prayers which Christ said while on earth.

Since all Christians are members of Jesus Christ and constitute His Mystical Body, as St. Paul says, they represent His Person, and must consequently do everything in His name, that is, in His spirit, with His dispositions and intentions, just as He Himself did on earth, and just as He would do now, in their place. In the same way, an ambassador, who represents the ruler of a country, is obliged to act and speak in his name, that is, in his spirit, just as the ruler himself would act and speak if he were present. Therefore, I repeat that to pray in the name of Christ is to continue Christ's own prayers and supplications, to pray in His spirit, with the feelings, thoughts and sacred intentions that animated His Heart as He prayed. All Christians ought to pray as He did, in His name.

To this end, when you begin your prayers, remember that you are going to continue the prayers of Jesus Christ, and that you must also continue to pray as He would, namely, with the dispositions of His earthly petitions as well as His eternal prayer now in heaven and upon our altars, where He is present in a ceaseless act of supplication to His Heavenly Father. Unite yourself with the love, humility, purity, holiness, attention, and with all the holy dispositions and intentions of His infinite prayer.

Now, among these dispositions there are four in particular, with which you should pray if you desire to give God glory by your prayers, and to obtain from Him what you ask.

1. Humility: The first disposition for prayer is that you should present yourself before God with deep humility, recognizing that you are most unworthy to appear in His august presence to contemplate Him, or to be heard by Him. Of yourself, you cannot entertain a single holy thought, nor perform a single act that is pleasing to Him. Therefore, you must annihilate yourself at His feet, offering yourself to our Lord Jesus Christ, that He may establish Himself in you, that it may be He Himself who prays within you, since He alone is worthy to appear before God's face to glorify and love Him, and to obtain from Him the answer to all petitions. Then, you may approach in full confidence to ask of the Eternal Father all that you ask of Him in the name of His Son, by the merits of His Divine Son, Jesus Christ, who dwells within you.

2. Confidence: The second disposition is a loving and respectful confidence, believing most firmly that everything you ask, if it is for God's glory and your salvation, will infallibly be granted, and often with a generosity surpassing your request, provided that you do not ask it relying upon your merits, or upon the virtue of your prayer, but in the name of Jesus Christ, by His merits and prayers, and for Christ Himself, trusting purely in His goodness and His sacred promise: "Ask and it shall be given you" (Luke 11, 9). If you ask the Father any thing in my name, He will give it you" (John 16, 23); and, "whatsoever you ask when ye pray, believe that you shall receive; and they shall come unto you" (Mark 11, 24). If God treated you according to your merits, He would drive you out of His sight, and destroy you when you presented yourself before Him. Therefore, when He gives you grace, you must not think that He gives it to you in answer to your prayers, but rather that He gives it to His Son Jesus Christ by virtue of His Prayers and merits.

3. Purity of Intention: The third disposition of prayer is purity of intention, assuring Our Lord that you renounce all curiosity of mind, all self-love, and that you wish to pray not for your own satisfaction and consolation, but purely for His glory and to please Him alone. He deigns to take delight in your company and converse with you in prayer. So ask Him to grant that you may pray solely for His glory and contentment.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

4. Perseverance: The fourth disposition to accompany prayer should be perseverance. If you desire to glorify God in prayer, and to obtain from His goodness the favors you ask, you must faithfully persevere in this divine exercise. There are some favors that Almighty God does not grant either the first, or the second, or the third time you ask Him, because He wishes you to pray for a long time and often He wills this delay to keep you in a state of humility and self-contempt and to make you realize the value of His graces. He sometimes takes pleasure in putting you off for some time, in matters which oblige you to come frequently to Him, so that, by this means, you may often be with Him, and He with you; so great is His love for you, and so true it is that He delights in being with you.

Finally, to make all the other holy dispositions complete, at the beginning of your prayer, fervently give your mind and heart to Jesus and to His divine spirit, praying Him to inspire in your heart such thoughts and affections as He may desire. Abandon yourself entirely to His holy guidance, that He may guide you as He pleases in this divine activity. Trust in His great goodness to lead you in the most fitting manner, and to give you all that you shall ask, not perhaps in the way that you wish, but in some other way much better for you.

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

ONCE you have laid down in your soul the chief foundations of Christian life and sanctity, which are faith, hatred of sin, detachment from all things, and, finally, prayer, if you would live a Christian life and make Jesus Christ live and reign in your heart, it is necessary also to work diligently at the practice of the Christian virtues which Our Lord exercised on earth. Since you must continue to fulfil Christ's holy life on earth, you must also continue to cultivate His virtues. Therefore, I urge you to fervent imitation of His virtues by first setting down, at this point, some general remarks on the excellence of the Christian virtues most important and necessary to the perfection and sanctity of Christian life.

XIII. EXCELLENCE OF THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES.

There are many people who appreciate virtue, who desire it, seek it and spend much diligence and time to acquire it, yet you see very few who can claim your respect by their true and solid Christian virtues. One of the main reasons is that they follow the paths of virtue not so much in the spirit of Christianity as in the spirit of the pagan philosophers, of heretics, or of those who cultivate virtue for human and social ends. In other words, they act not so much in the spirit of Jesus Christ and His divine grace, purchased for us by His blood, as in the spirit of nature and of human reason.

Would you like to know the difference between these two spirits in this matter of practising virtue? You may detect it in the following way:

1. Those who seek virtue in the fashion of the pagans, the agnostic philosophers, or the politically-minded, look at it through the eyes of human reason alone, and value it as a thing most excellent in itself, most reasonable and necessary for the perfection of man, to distinguish him from animals guided by sense alone. Their desire and quest for virtue is based on humanitarian considerations, not on Christian ideas.

2. They are also persuaded that they can acquire virtue by their own efforts, by dint of care, vigilance and self-analysis with resolutions and exercises. In this they are very much mistaken, because without divine grace it is impossible for us to perform even the smallest act of Christian virtue.

3. They love virtue, and strive after it, not for the glory of God, but for themselves, for their own interest and satisfaction, to render themselves more excellent and accomplished and also to avoid unpleasantness and embarrassment. This is the way pagan philosophers, heretics or sociologists desire virtue and seek it. Indeed, the very devils themselves desire virtue this way because, being full of pride, they want anything that may make them more excellent, and advance their status. They are interested in the cultivation of virtue, because it is a most noble and excellent thing for themselves; they strive after it not to become more pleasing to God, but out of a spirit of pride and self-perfection.

On the other hand, there are those who follow the spirit and grace of Jesus Christ in the exercise of virtue.

1. They look upon virtue not only in itself, but in its principle and source, namely, in Christ, the source of all grace, who eminently and sovereignly embodies every virtue, and in whom virtue attains infinite excellence. Since all that is in Jesus is holy, divine and adorable, virtue is sanctified and divinely exalted in Him, and is consequently made worthy of infinite honor and adoration. Therefore, if you consider virtue as in Christ, your view of it will be infinitely more efficacious in leading you to esteem and love and seek it, much more so than if you regarded it merely because of its own excellence, or because of the esteem accorded to it by reason and the human mind.

2. Those who are led by the spirit of Christianity in the practice of virtue know full well that they can not perform the smallest act of virtue by themselves. They realize that if God were to withdraw Himself from them, they would, at that very moment, fall into the abyss of vice; they know, too, that virtue is purely and simply a gift of God's infinite mercy; therefore, it is necessary to ask Him for it, with confidence and perseverance. Earnest Christians persistently and continually ask God for the virtues they need, without ever growing weary of asking Him for them, and at the same time they are careful not to rely in any way on their own efforts and vigilance, or on their own exercises and practices, desires and resolutions, but instead they look to God's goodness alone for everything, and do not grow anxious when they do not find in themselves the virtues they desire. Instead of becoming disturbed and discouraged they remain at peace in humility before God, recognizing that this is due to their own infidelity; and that, if He were to treat them as they deserve, He would not only give them nothing that they ask for, but would strip them of all the graces He ever granted. And He would still be showing them too great a favor if He did not then cast them out and abandon them entirely. This enkindles in Christian souls a fresh flame of love and new confidence, in the presence of this infinite goodness, and inspires a most ardent desire to pursue, by every possible means, the virtues they need to serve and glorify Him.

3. They desire virtue, and make a point of frequently performing exterior and interior acts of love of God, of charity, of patience, obedience, humility, mortification and the other Christian virtues, not for themselves, or for their own satisfaction or reward, but for the good pleasure and interests of God, in order to model their lives after the pattern of their Divine Head, Jesus Christ, to glorify Him and to continue the exercise of the virtues He practised on earth.

It is in this that Christian virtue properly consists. As Christian life is nothing but a continuation of the life of Christ, so also the Christian virtues are a continuation and fulfilment of the virtues of Christ. To practise the virtues like Christians, you must practise them in the very spirit of Christ as He practised them, that is, with the same motives and intentions that inspired His admirable and majestic virtues. In this way then, Christian humility is a continuation of Christ's humility, Christian charity a continuation of Christ's charity, and so on with all the other virtues.

Thus you may easily see how far the Christian and supernatural virtues exceed, in holiness and excellence, those we call natural virtues, the virtues proper to pagans, heretics and false Catholics. For such persons natural virtues are nothing more than human virtues, feigned virtues, with only the appearance, having no depth and no solidity, since they rest upon the frailty of the human mind and reason, and upon the shifting sands of self-love and vanity. But the Christian virtues are true and solid virtues, being divine and supernatural. In a word, they are Christ's own virtues, with which you yourself have to be clothed, which He imparts to those who adhere to Him, and who ask Him for them with humility and confidence, and strive to practise them as He did.

XIV. MANNER OF PRACTISING THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES.

From what has just been said, you may see how devoutly you must practise Christian virtues, since you are to practise them as Christ did. When you desire to advance in the perfection of some virtue, make use of the following acts:

1. Adore in Christ the virtue you have chosen and reflect how eminent He was in it, and how perfectly He practised it during His whole life.

2. Humble yourself before Him, when you see yourself so very far from this perfection. Beg His forgiveness for all the faults you have ever committed against this virtue, recognizing that, of yourself, you are powerless to perform the least act of it, and that you are most unworthy of the grace to do so. Yet implore Him, nonetheless, that in His great mercy He may give you this grace, that you may practise this virtue, whenever the opportunity offers itself.

3. Frequently give yourself to Jesus, with a great desire to practise this virtue with all the perfection He asks of you. Beg Him to destroy in you all that is opposed to this virtue, that He may imprint and establish it within you, purely for His glory.

4. Be faithful in putting the virtue into practice by inward acts and outward results, uniting yourself with the dispositions and intentions of Christ, the perfect example of this virtue.

5. When you happen to commit some fault against the virtue, do not be upset or discouraged, but humble yourself before God, asking his forgiveness and offering Him all the honor rendered Him by His Beloved Son and His most holy Mother, in their exercise of this Virtue, as satisfaction for your fault.

Then give yourself again to Jesus, with a renewed desire to be faithful to him in future, in the practice of this virtue. Beg Him by His great mercy to repair the damage caused by your faults, and to give you fresh grace to be more faithful and effective when similar occasions next present themselves.

XV. AN EXAMPLE: PRACTICE OF MEEKNESS AND HUMILITY OF HEART.

In order that my readers may acquire some facility in the use of the preceding exercise, and to make it accessible to persons of every type, I should like to show you its complete practical application to a particular virtue. Take, for example, meekness and humility, which were so strongly emphasized by Jesus. If you wish to become well established in these two virtues, take a little time every day, to place yourself at the feet of our Blessed Lord and put yourself in the dispositions Outlined in the following prayer:

O Most Meek and Humble Jesus, I adore in Thee Thy most divine and adorable meekness and humility. I glorify Thee in all Thy many acts and exercises of meekness and humility, both inward and outward. How admirable art Thou in these two virtues, as well as in all the others! When I consider the whole span of Thy life upon earth, O Good Jesus, I see that it was one continuous exercise of meekness and humility in Thy thoughts, words, actions and sufferings. Oh, > what glory Thou didst give Thy Father! But also, how He exalted Thee, after Thou hadst so humbled Thyself for His glory and our love! May this Heavenly Father be forever blessed, and Thou also, O, Good Jesus! May He be blessed because He so glorified Thee after Thy humiliations; mayest Thou be blessed because Thou didst so honor Him by Thy meekness and humility!

O Jesus, Thou art my Head and I am one of Thy members; Thou art my Father and I am one of Thy children; Thou art my Master and Teacher and I am one of Thy disciples. I must, therefore, strive to imitate and resemble Thee. And yet, how far I am from doing so! On the contrary, how full I am of pride and vanity, bad temper and impatience! How often have I offended, in my whole life, against meekness and humility, by thoughts and sentiments, words and actions! Forgive me, O my Saviour, forgive me; I long to imitate Thee in Thy meekness and humility. But alas, I admit that I have no strength of myself to perform the least act of humility, and that I am most unworthy that Thou shouldst give me the grace to do so. Nevertheless, I beg Thee, by Thy great mercy, to grant this precious grace.

O Jesus, I adore Thee as Thou sayest these divine words: "Learn of me because I am meek, and humble of heart: and you shall find rest to your souls" (Matt. 11, 29). I adore the thoughts, the plans and the love Thou didst have for me because when Thou didst utter these sacred words, O Good Jesus, Thou wast thinking of me, in particular; Thou didst utter them with exceeding great love for me, with special designs in mind concerning me. O my Most Amiable Jesus, I give myself all to Thee for the accomplishment of Thy will and the fulfilment of Thy words. Never permit me again to place obstacles in their way. Destroy in me all that is opposed to meekness and humility. Establish and glorify in me Thy meekness and humility for love of Thyself!

When some opportunity of being meek or humble offers itself, lift up your heart to Jesus as follows:

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee to practise meekness, patience and humility in honor of Thy meekness, patience and humility, and in union with Thy blessed dispositions and intentions.

When you lapse into some fault against these virtues, strive to make up for it at once, casting yourself at the feet of the Son of God, and addressing Him thus:

O Most Merciful Jesus, with my whole heart I beg Thy forgiveness for the offense I have committed against Thy divine majesty. O Father of Jesus, I offer Thee all the honor which Thy well-beloved Son and His most holy Mother ever gave Thee by their meekness and humility, to atone for the dishonor I have afforded Thee by the fault I have committed against these virtues. O Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, may it please you to repair my defect, offering your sweet meekness and infinite humility to the Eternal Father, in reparation for my pride and impatience. O Good Jesus, I give myself to Thee with a renewed desire to be more meek and humble in future; destroy arrogance and impatience, and give me the grace to practise patience and humility faithfully at all opportunities, for Thy glory and good pleasure.

You can apply these same practices to charity, to obedience, and to the other virtues.

XVI. DIGNITY, NECESSITY AND IMPORTANCE OF CHRISTIAN HUMILITY.

If you truly and fully intend to live in a Christian and holy manner, one of your foremost endeavors ought to be to gain a thorough and conscious mastery of Christian humility, which is the most necessary and important virtue. Our Lord most emphatically and insistently recommended it to us in these divine and lovable words of His, which you should, keep always in your minds and on your lips with love and respect for Him: "Learn of Me because I am meek, and humble of heart: and you shall find rest to your souls" (Matt. 11, 29). This is the virtue which St. Paul says is the most characteristic of Christ. It is the proper and specific virtue of Christians, without which it is impossible to be a true Christian. It is the foundation of all Christian life and sanctity, the guardian of every other grace and virtue. It is one which draws down upon our souls all blessings, for it is in humble souls that the most great and most humble Jesus takes His repose and His delight, according to His words: "To whom shall I have respect but to him that is poor and little... ?" (Isa. 66, 2).

This virtue, together with burning love, makes saints and great saints. For the true measure of sanctity is humility. Give me a truly humble person and I shall say that he is truly saintly; if that person is humble in great things, I shall pronounce him saintly in great things; and if he is very humble indeed, I shall avow that he is very saintly and adorned with all kinds of virtues. I shall say that God is greatly glorified in such a soul, wherein Jesus Christ dwells and finds in it His treasure and His paradise of delights. That soul will be very great and occupy a most exalted position in the Kingdom of God, since Eternal Truth has said: "He that shall humble himself shall be exalted" (Matt. 23, 12). On the other hand, a soul without humility is a soul without virtue; it is a hell of pride, the abode of arrogant demons, an abyss of conceit and vice.

40 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

One may finally say that humility, in a sense, is the Mother of Jesus, because it was by humility that the Blessed Virgin Mary was made worthy to bear Him within herself. It is by this virtue, also, that you will be made worthy to form Him in your souls, and to make Him live and reign in Your hearts. So you ought, then, to love and seek this virtue with all your might. For this reason I shall devote somewhat more space to this subject than to the others.

XVII. Humility OF Mind.

There are two kinds of humility, namely, humility of mind and humility of heart. When the two are united, they make up the perfection of Christian humility.

Humility of mind is a profound knowledge of what we really are in the sight of God. If we are to know ourselves well, we must see ourselves, not as we appear in the esteem and deceptive judgments of men, not in the vanity and presumption of our own opinion, but as we are in the eyes and in the judgment of God. To do this, we should view ourselves in the light and truth of God, through the medium of faith.

Now, if we consider ourselves in this heavenly light, with divine insight, we shall see that:

1. As men we are nothing but dust, corruption and nothingness. We are nothing and can do nothing of ourselves. Every creature has come forth from nothingness, therefore it is nothing, has nothing, and can do nothing of itself, without the sustaining power of its Creator.

2. As children of Adam we were born in original sin, enemies of God, subjects of the devil, powerless to do any good or avoid any evil by our Own virtue. We have no other way of being saved except to renounce Adam and our fallen heritage, to surrender our own mind and our own powers to Christ and enter into His spirit and His power. We shall also see how true it is that we cannot be free from the servitude of sin if He does not deliver us, that without Him we can do nothing and that, even when we have done many things, we can and must say with truth that we are but useless servants. Add to that what St. Paul says: "We are not sufficient to think anything of Ourselves, as of ourselves: but our sufficiency is from God (11 Cor.

3, 5), and that we would be unable to pronounce the Holy Name of Jesus without the help of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. 12, 3).

All this results not only from the nothingness of creatures, which are nothing, and can do nothing of themselves, but also from the subjection to sin, because we are born of Adam, who truly begot us in his own condemnation. He transmitted to us our nature and our life, but only under the domination and captivity of sin. He was not even able to beget us as free men, being, himself a slave, nor to give us the grace and friendship of God which he had lost. So that, by a most equitable judgment of God, we all bear this yoke of iniquity which Holy Scripture calls the kingdom of death; this yoke does not allow us to perform the works of true freedom and true life, which belong to the children of God, but only the works of death and captivity, works too degraded for God's grace, justice and sanctity. Oh, how great is our wretchedness and indignity, since it was necessary that the Son of God should purchase for us, by His blood, our very slightest thought of serving God, indeed, the very permission to, present ourselves before Him! Yet this is not all.

If we look at ourselves in the light of God, we shall see that as children of Adam and as sinners we do not deserve to exist, nor to walk on the earth, nor that God should think of us, nor even that He should take the trouble to exercise His justice upon us. Job had, therefore, good reason to be surprised that God should deign to open His eyes to look at him, or be concerned enough to judge him: Et dignum ducis huiusmodi aperire oculos tuos, et adducere eum tecum in iudicium (Job 14, 3). He does us too great a favor, tolerating us in His presence, and allowing the earth to bear our weight, and but for a miracle on His part, all things would contribute to our ruin and perdition. We see, too, that sin deprives us of all our rights by withdrawing us from obedience to God. Consequently our being, our life, our bodies, our souls and all their faculties, no longer belong to us under the yoke of sin. The sun no longer owes us its light, nor the stars their shining guidance, nor the earth its support, nor fire its warmth, nor water its refreshment, nor the plants their fruits, nor the animals their services. But all creatures ought rather to wage war against us, and turn all their powers against us, when we turn ours against God, so that they might thus avenge our insult against their Creator. The vengeance which the whole world will visit upon sinners at the end of time ought to be visited upon us every day, when we continue to commit fresh sins; and it would be most just, if God were to punish a single sin by stripping us of life and of all the temporal and spiritual graces which He has given us, letting fall upon us every kind of punishment.

We also see that of ourselves, in so far as we are sinners, we are all so many incarnate demons, Lucifers, antichrists, since everything in us is contrary to Christ. We carry about, within ourselves, a devil, a Lucifer, and an antichrist, which is our own will, pride and self love; and they, indeed, are worse than all the demons, than Lucifer and antichrist, for all the malice of the demons, Lucifer and antichrist is derived from self-will, pride, and self-love. Of ourselves we are a hell full of horror, accursedness, sin and abomination. We have, within us, the principle, and seeds of all the sins of earth and hell, for the corruption left in us by original sin is the root and spring of every kind of sin, according to the words of David, the prophet king: "Behold I was conceived in iniquities; and in sins did my mother conceive me" (Ps. 50, 7). As a result of this, if God did not continually hold us up in the arms of His mercy, and if He did not work, as it were, a perpetual miracle to keep us from falling into, sin, we should plunge at every moment into a chasm of every kind of sin.

Finally, we see that we are so horrible and repulsive that, if we were able to see ourselves as God sees us, we would find the sight impossible to bear. And in this connection, it is said that a saint once asked God to give her full knowledge of herself. When God answered her prayer, she saw such a horrible sight that she cried out: "Lord, not so much! Otherwise I shall lose courage!" And that master of the spiritual life, Father Avila, says that he knew a person who made this same request of God and beheld himself to be so loathsome, that he began to cry out in a loud voice: "Lord, I adjure Thee by Thy mercy, take away this mirror out of my sight; I am no longer curious to see my image."

After this, how can one have a high opinion of himself, or think that he is important or possesses any merit? How can anyone love fame or seek to satisfy vanity, or enjoy the esteem or praise of men? Oh, how strange it is to see trivial and insignificant creatures like ourselves trying to be important and proud of themselves! Oh, how right is the Holy Spirit in avowing to us in the Ecclesiasticus, that he detests and abhors a poor man who is proud (ECCli. 25, 3-4). If pride is unbearable no matter in what subject it may be found, what must it be in one upon whom poverty imposes an extreme humility? This is a vice common to all men who, no matter how great their worth may appear to be in the eyes of the world, bear upon themselves the marks of their infamy, namely, the quality of sinners, which ought to keep them in a state of great abjection before God and all creatures. Yet, what a terrible disaster is ours! Sin has made us so vile and infamous that we refuse to recognize our misery. This refusal renders us comparable to Satan who, by reason of the sin that holds sway over him, is the lowest of all creatures, but is so proud that he will not acknowledge his ignominy. That is what gives God such a horror of pride and vanity. As He knows our lowliness and worthlessness, it is unbearable to Him to see so low and unworthy a thing trying to exalt itself, especially when He remembers that He, who is greatness itself, abased Himself even to nothingness. But even after His infinite example of humility, nothingness still wants to be exalted, and then, indeed, He finds this more than unendurable.

So, then, if you want to please God and serve Him perfectly, make a deep and thorough study of this divine science of self-knowledge. Firmly implant in your mind the truths I have just outlined and frequently consider them in God's presence; and each day ask Our Lord to root them deeply in your soul.

Take note, however, that although as a man, a child of Adam, and a sinner you are what I have just described, nevertheless as a child of God and a member of Christ, if you are in the state of grace, you bear within you a most noble and sublime life and you possess an infinitely rich and precious treasure. Notice also that, while humility of spirit ought to show you what you are of yourself and in Adam, yet it should not hide from you what you are in Christ and by His merits. Nor does it oblige you to ignore the graces God has given you through His Divine Son; otherwise it would be false humility.

4 4 - KINGDOM OF JESUS

Rather, it obliges you to admit that all the good in you comes purely from God's mercy, without merit on your part. This, then, is what constitutes humility of spirit.

XVIII. Humilty OF HEART.

It is not enough to have humility of mind, which shows you your wretchedness and unworthiness. Humility of mind without humility of heart is diabolical. After all, the devils, who have no humility of heart, possess humility of spirit because they are well aware of their disgrace and accursedness. Hence you must learn from Jesus, the divine teacher, to be humble not only in mind but also in heart.

Humility of heart consists in loving your lowliness and abject state, in being content that you are little and abject and insignificant. When you are alone with yourself, you must love to treat yourself as insignificant and rejoice in being judged and belittled by others. Nor must you excuse or justify yourself, except when there is a grave necessity. You should not complain of anybody, remembering that since you have in yourself the source of all evil, you deserve all kinds of condemnation and harsh treatment. You must love to be despised and humiliated and you should even seek opportunity of being reviled and belittled in every way. There are two reasons for this:

1. Every kind of scorn and contempt is merely your due, and all creatures would be justified in persecuting and trampling you under foot. In fact, you are not even important enough for them to take the trouble of doing so.

2. You ought to love what was loved by the Son of God, seeking to base your, whole life and find all your joy in the things He chose to give glory to His Father-namely, the contempt and humiliation with which His whole life was filled.

Furthermore, humility of heart is a matter not only of loving humiliations, but of hating and detesting all greatness and vanity, according to the maxim uttered by the sacred lips of the Son of God, which I beg you to consider well and deeply engrave upon your mind: "that which is high to men, is an abomination before God" (Luke 16, 15). I say all greatness, because it is not enough to despise temporal eminence and to abhor the vanity of human respect and praise. You must also have an even greater horror of the vanity that may spring from spiritual things. You should fear and avoid everything that attracts attention and appears extraordinary in your exercises of Piety, such as visions, ecstasies, revelations, the gift of miracles and other such manifestations. You should not desire them nor ask God to give you these extraordinary graces. Even if a soul were to realize that God was offering one or another of these singular favors, it should draw back into the depths of its nothingness, considering itself far too unworthy, and implore Him to grant some other grace 'instead, something less striking, less conspicuous, something which would be more conformable with the hidden and despised life of Christ on earth. Since Our Lord takes pleasure in heaping upon you His graces, both ordinary and extraordinary, out of the excess of His goodness, He also derives extreme joy from seeing that you fly from all greatness in the eyes of men, out of a true sense of your unworthiness and the desire to resemble Him in His humility. And whoever is not thus disposed will lay himself open to many deceptions and illusions of the spirit of vanity.

CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

Notice, however, that I am here referring to extraordinary things, and not to acts that are common and usual to all true servants of God, such as frequent communion, or kneeling down at least once each night and morning to perform your duties to God, no matter where one may be; or accompanying the Blessed Sacrament when it is being taken to the sick; or mortifying our flesh with fasting, discipline and penance; or reciting the Rosary, or praying in a church, or at home, or serving and visiting the poor, or doing some other good work. Be on your guard lest, wishing to omit the practice of such acts under pretext of false humility, you actually give them up Out of real cowardice! If human respect and shame before the world stand in the way of your duty to God, they must be overcome. Remember that you are not to be ashamed, but to take great pride in being a Christian and acting as a Christian, and serving and glorifying God before men, in the face of the whole world.

But if fears, arising from vanity and the vain show of humility that 'is donned for the benefit of an audience, would seem to prevent you from doing what has been outlined, you must thrust those fears aside, protesting before Our Lord that you want to do nothing except for His glory alone. Realize then, that all these works are so common to God's true servants, and should be so frequently practised by all Christians, that they offer no cause for vanity, being things done by many good persons.

I fully realize that our Lord Jesus Christ teaches you to fast, give alms and pray in secret. But the great St. Gregory asserts that this refers to the intention and not to the act itself. That is, Our Lord does not mean that you should not perform these or similar actions, in public, or before men, for He says, in another place: "Let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven" (Matt. 5, 16). But He wants your intention to be secret and hidden: that is, in the public acts that you perform, He desires you to have, in your heart, the intention of doing them not to please men or to win their empty applause, but to please God and gain His glory.

Finally, the true humility of heart that our Lord Jesus Christ wants you to learn from Him, which is perfect Christian humility, consists in being humble as Christ was on earth. That means, to be horrified by any spirit of notoriety or vanity, to love contempt and obscurity, to choose always, in all things, whatever is more cheapening and humiliating, and to be ready to be humbled even to the point to which Jesus Christ was humbled in His Incarnation, His life, His passion and His death.

In His Incarnation, as St. Paul says, "He emptied himself, taking the form of a servant" (Phil. 2, 7). He willed to be born in a stable. He subjected Himself to the weakness and dependence of childhood, and in a thousand other ways He made Himself lowly. In His passion, He Himself says that He is a worm and no man, the opprobrium of men and the outcast of the people. He bore the anger and judgment of His Father, and so severe were they that they made Him sweat blood so plentifully, in the garden of Olives, that the ground was soaked with it. He gave Himself in subjection to the powers of darkness, that is, to the devils, who through the Jews, Pilate, Herod and their instruments, took possession of Him and made Him suffer every indignity in the world. Uncreated Wisdom was treated like a vagabond by Herod and the soldiers. He was whipped and nailed to a Cross like a slave and a thief. God, who should be His infinite refuge, abandoned Him and regarded Him as if He alone had committed all the crimes in the world. And finally, to use the words of His Apostle, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us" (Gal. 3, 13). Indeed, He even became the embodiment of sin through the power and justice of God. For St. Paul says: Deus eum pro nobis peccatum fecit--~'Him he bath made sin for us" (II Cor. 5, 21). In other words, He bore not only the confusion and abasement deserved by sinners, but also all the ignominy and infamies due to sin itself, and that is the vilest and most ignominious state to which God could ever reduce the greatest of His enemies. O God, what humiliation for a God, the Only Son of God, Sovereign Lord of the universe, to be brought down to such a level! O Lord Jesus, is it possible that Thou dost love man so much as to annihilate Thyself so completely for his love? O man, how is it possible for you still to retain any vanity, seeing how your God is brought so low for love of you? O my Saviour, let me be humiliated and destroyed with Thee, let me enter into the sentiments of Thy most profound humility, and let me be ready to bear all the shame and humiliation which are deserved by the sinner and even by sin itself!

1 It is in this, then, that perfect Christian humility consists; in being ready, not only to desire the treatment deserved by a sinner, but to bear all the ignominies and degradations which are the just due of sin itself, since our Head, Jesus, the Saint of saints, and Sanctity Itself, bore them, while you, at the same time, fully deserve them since of yourself you are nothing but sin and accursedness. If these truths were only deeply engraved upon your minds, you would find that you had very good reason to cry out and often say, with St. Gertrude: "Lord, one of the greatest miracles Thou dost accomplish in the world is-to allow the earth to bear me."

XIX PRACTICE OF CHRISTIAN HUMILITY.

Since, as has been said, Christian humility is so important and so necessary, you must seek out every means to give yourself a solid foundation in this virtue.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

For this purpose, I repeat my advice that you frequently read and reread, consider and intently ponder the truths I have set forth relating to humility of mind and of heart, as well as those which I am about to set down here. I urge you to pray to Our Lord to impress them upon your mind, and make you ever carry with you, in heart and soul, the sentiments and effects proceeding from them. It is not enough for you to know superficially and vaguely that you are nothing, that you are powerless to do good or avoid evil, that all good is from on high, from the Father of lights, and that every good work comes to you from God through His Son. You must also become firmly rooted in a profound realization of your imprisonment under the law of sin, of your uselessness, incapacity and unworthiness in God's service, of your deficiency in all good things, of your nothingness, your extreme poverty and urgent need of Jesus Christ and of His grace.

This ought to make you cry out unceasingly to your liberator, and at all times fly to His grace, never relying upon anything except His omnipotent and infinite goodness.

God sometimes permits you to work for a long time to conquer a passion and become established in a virtue, and to advance very slowly towards your goal, so that the experience may teach you what you are, and how little you can do of yourself, thus obliging you to seek outside yourself, in Jesus Christ our Lord, the power to serve God. God did not will to give His Son to mankind until the world had longed for Him for four thousand years, and had learned by the experience of two thousand years that it was incapable of keeping the Law, and freeing itself from sin, and that it needed a new spirit and a new power to resist evil and do good. By this He showed you that He wants you to recognize your wretchedness very clearly before He gives you His grace.

This truth should lead you to recognize once every day, before God, your wretchedness as it is in His eyes, and to renounce Adam and yourself, since Adam and you yourself have sinned and surrendered your nature to the devil. Renounce yourself, then, altogether. Renounce your own judgment and every power and ability you may be conscious of in yourself. For all the power left by Adam, in human nature is powerless, and any sense of power you may have is mere illusion, presumption and a mistaken estimate. Nor will you ever have any real power or perfect freedom to do good, except by renouncing yourself, and emerging from- yourself and all that belongs to you, in order to live in the spirit and virtue of Jesus Christ.

Following this renunciation, adore Christ Jesus; give yourself entirely to Him, and ask Him to take over Adam's rights as well as your own, since by His Precious Blood and death He acquired the rights of all sinners. Beg Him to dwell in you to dispossess your nature, to appropriate and make free use of all that you are in His hands, and protest to Him that you desire to depart from your own way of looking at things, which is a spirit of pride and vanity, and from all your intentions, tendencies and dispositions, so that you may no longer live save in His spirit, His divine and adorable dispositions.

Implore Him by His great mercy to draw you out of yourself as from a hell and to establish you in Himself, in His spirit of humility. Ask this favor not for your benefit or satisfaction, but for His pleasure, and His glory, pure and simple. And again, pray that He may make use of His divine power to destroy your pride, and that He may no longer wait upon your weakness to establish His glory in you by means of perfect humility. Remember that, of yourself as a sinner you are, as has been said, a potential demon, a Lucifer and an antichrist, because of the sin, the pride and self-love which always remain in each one of us. Frequently, and especially at the beginning of the day, place yourself at the feet of Jesus and of His holy Mother, and say to them.

"O Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, keep this wretched demon well under foot, crush this snake, exterminate this antichrist with Your precious breath; bind this Lucifer, that he may do nothing today against Your holy glory.

Now I do not intend that you should, every day, repeat before God all these prayers in the exact form in which I have set them down, but in whatever way it shall please Our Lord to make them appeal to you.

When you make resolutions to be humble, do so by giving yourself to the Son of God, that He may fulfil your desires, and say to Him:

50 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

I give myself to Thee, my Lord Jesus, that I may enter into Thy spirit of humility. I wish to spend all the days of my life with Thee, in this holy virtue. I call down upon myself the power of Thy spirit of humility in order to annihilate my pride and bind me close to Thee in humility. I offer up to Thee all the opportunities for humility that shall present themselves in my life. Deign, I beseech Thee, to bless them. I renounce myself and all things which may prevent me from sharing in the grace of Thy humility!

But after this do not place your confidence in your own resolutions, nor in this practice, but rely solely upon the bounty of our Lord Jesus Christ.

You can follow a similar course with each of the other virtues or pious intentions you wish to present to God. In this way, they will be based not on you yourself, but on our Lord Jesus Christ and on the grace and mercy of God which are upon you.

When you present to God your desires and intentions to serve Him, it should be with a profound belief that you can neither fulfil these, nor deserve to do so yourself. If God treated you as you deserved, He would not even suffer you to think of such resolves, and it is because of His very goodness and because of the merits of the Precious Blood of His Son that He tolerates you in His presence, and allows you to hope for the grace to serve Him.

You must not be surprised when you fail in your good resolutions. We are all sinners, and God is not obliged to give us His grace. "I know," says St. Paul, "that there dwelleth not in me, that is to say, in my flesh, that which is good. For to will, is present to me; but to accomplish that which is good, I find not" (Rom. 7, 18).

So great is our weakness that it is not sufficient for God to inspire us with a good thought; it is also necessary for Him to grant us the will and resolve to put it into effect. Nothing will come of a good resolution if God does not grant the grace to accomplish and perfect the act. Finally each one of us needs also the special grace to persevere until the end of his life.

You ought, therefore, to submit yourself to God in your search for virtue. You should desire His grace and ask Him for it, but you should be surprised when He grants it. When you fall, you should adore His judgment of you, yet not become discouraged, but rather humble yourself and constantly persevere in giving yourself to Him, that you may enter with more virtue into His grace. You should live constantly in great gratitude and thanksgiving towards Him, because He tolerates you in His presence and inspires you with the desire to serve Him. And even though, after much effort on your part, God should give you no more than one good thought, you should recognize that you do not deserve even this one, and prize it so highly that you should consider it well worth all your trouble. If, after a thousand years of hell, the damned could form even one good thought of God, they would consider it much honor and great gain, and the devil is ever in a rage because he knows that he will never have a holy thought, for he looks upon goodness as a perfection which his pride desires, yet beholds himself deprived of it by the curse that is upon him. We, like the demons, are sinners and the only thing that sets us apart from them is the mercy of God, a mercy which should lead us to value His gifts and be satisfied with them. For, however little they may be, they are always more than we deserve. Enter, then, reflectively and deeply into this spirit of humble admission of your unworthiness, and by so doing you will draw down upon your soul a thousand blessings from God and He will be greatly glorified in you.

When God has granted you some favor, either for yourself or for someone dear to you, do not ascribe this to the power of your prayers but to His mercy alone.

If in the good works God gives you the grace to accomplish, you feel any complacency or spirit of gratification, humble yourself, remember that all good comes to you from God alone, and that, from yourself nothing can come but evil. Bear in mind that you have much stronger reasons for being afraid and humbling yourself in view of the many faults and imperfections with which you perform your actions, than for puffing yourself up and feeling pleased when you see the slight good you are doing, a good, moreover, that does not proceed from you.

If men censure and sneer at you, accept it as being fully deserved, in honor of the contempt and calumnies suffered by the Son of God. If you are accorded any honor or receive thanks, refer all such praises to God, and see that you do not appropriate them to yourself, nor rest on your laurels, because these may prove to be the only reward of your good actions. You may thus come to feel the effect of these words of the Son of God: "Woe to you when men shall bless you: for according to these things did their fathers to the false prophets" (Luke 6, 26). These words teach you to consider and fear the praise and applause of the world not only as mere wind and smoke and illusion, but also as a danger and a curse.

Perform with a ready will lowly and menial acts that involve abjection, so as to mortify your pride. But see that you act in a spirit of humility, with inward sentiments and dispositions corresponding to the things done.

At the beginning of everything you do, always humble yourself before God, remembering that you are not worthy to exist or to do anything, and that you have no power to please Him, unless He gives you grace for that purpose.

In a word, engrave deep in your heart these words of the Holy Ghost, and systematically put them into practice: Humiliate in omnibus, et coram Deo invenies gratiam, quoniam magna potentia Dei solius, et ab humilibus honoratur. "Humble thyself in all things, and thou shalt find grace before God: for great is the power of God alone. and he is honored by the humble" (Eccli. 3, 20-21).

XX. CONFIDENCE AND SELF-ABANDONMENT IN THE HANDS OF GOD.

Humility is the mother of confidence. When you realize that you are destitute of all good and of every virtue, and of all power and capacity to serve God, and that you are a true hell full of all kinds of evil, you can no longer rely in any way upon yourself, or upon what is yours. You are obliged to emerge from yourself, as you would go out of hell, to enter into Jesus as into Paradise, where you find in great abundance all that is lacking in yourself. You must place your reliance and trust in Him, as in the One given to you by your Eternal Father to be your redemption, your justice, your virtue, your sanctification, your treasure, your strength, your life and your all. It is to this that He would draw you when He lovingly and compellingly urges you to come to Him with confidence, saying: "Come to me, all you who labor, and are burdened, and I will refresh you" (Matt. 11, 28), and will relieve you of the weight of your sorrows. Our Lord assures us that He will reject no one who will come to Him: Eum qui Venit ad me non eiiciam foras (John 6, 37).

In order to compel us to become confident, He tells us in various texts of Holy Scripture (1) that accursed and wretched are they who place their trust in any other thing but Him; but happy and blessed are they who entrust themselves to Him (Jer. 17, 5-7); they shall abound in all kinds of graces and blessings, and shall lack nothing (PS. 22, 1-2). His eyes are fixed upon those who hope in His mercy (Ps. 32, 18). He is good to those who, hope in Him (Lam. 3, 25). His mercy shall compass them about (Ps. 31, 10) and He Himself will always be by their side (Prov. 3, 26). He is the shield of all that trust in Him (II Kings, 22, 31); He is their protector and helper (Ps. 113, 11). He will protect them in His tabernacle and He will hide them in the secret of His face, or, as another version has it, "in the apple of his eye" (PS. 30, 21). He will be their defense in the day of trial, and will help them and deliver them from the hands of sinners because they have put their trust in Him (Ps. 90, 14-15); He will let them taste in its perfection the great multitude of His sweetness (PS. 30, 20); they will always be full of joy, and He will abide in them (Ps. 5, 12). He lavishes upon them His graces and the effects of His mercy, in proportion to the hope and confidence they have in Him (Ps. 32, 22); those who trust in Him will know truth (Wis. 3, 9), that is, He the Sovereign Truth will manifest Himself to those who trust in Him; they will not sin, or, according to the Hebrew version, they will not be condemned and will not perish, that is, He will not allow them to fall into sins that would separate them from Him and reduce them to perdition (PS. 33, 23); those who place their hope in Him will sanctify themselves as He is sanctified (I John 3, 3). Never has anyone who entrusted himself to Him been disappointed or defrauded of his expectations (Eccli. 2, 11). God grants to them everything that they confidently ask of Him (Matt. 21, 22). Finally, nothing is impossible to those who have faith and confidence in Him, but they can accomplish all things, relying on His goodness and power (Mark 9, 22).

(1). St. John Eudes weaves into this passage several scriptural texts on confidence. We have not attempted to quote the exact words from the Douay version but have merely inserted the biblical references. (Editors' note-English translation.)

I could go on for ever, if I began to quote here all the texts from Holy Scripture in which God commends to you the virtue of trust. It seems as if He were not satisfied even with the thousand instances in Holy Scripture by which He proves how dear and delightful this holy virtue is to Him, and how much He loves and favors those who place their trust in His goodness and abandon themselves entirely to the fatherly care of His Divine Providence.

You may read in the third book of Intimations of Divine Piety, by St. Gertrude, that Jesus once told her that the filial confidence of a Christian soul is the eye of the holy spouse, of which the Divine Bridegroom says in the Canticle of Canticles: Vulnerasti cor meum, soror mea, sponsa: vulnerasti cor meum in uno oculorum tuorum. "Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse: thou hast wounded my heart by one of thine eyes" (Cant. 4, 9). In other words, the soul that has firm confidence in Christ, and trusts that He can and desires to help it faithfully in all things, pierces His heart right through with an arrow of love; and such confidence does such violence to the piety of Jesus that He can in no way absent Himself from it.

St. Mechtilde's Book of Special Grace tells us that Jesus said to her also: "It is a special delight to Me when men trust in My goodness and rely upon Me. And so, whoever shall have great trust in Me, yet always with humility, shall be favored by Me in this life, and in the next receive more than he deserves. The more anyone trusts in Me and avails himself of My goodness, the greater will be his gain, since it is impossible for a man not to obtain what he believes with holy conviction, and hopes to gain because it has been promised him. And so it is most advantageous to a man to have firm trust in Me, when he hopes for great things from Me! And again, when St. Mechtilde asked God what was the main thing she should believe of His ineffable goodness, He replied: "Firmly believe that after death I will receive you as a father receives a dear son, and that no father ever so faithfully and lovingly gave all his possessions to an only son, as I will make you a sharer in all that is Mine. Whoever shall believe this of My goodness, firmly and with humble charity, will be happy indeed."

XXI. ADDITIONAL POINTS ON CONFIDENCE.

To strengthen you further in holy confidence, our most gentle and amiable Saviour gives Himself all the most sweet and loving names and qualities imaginable, to describe His relationship with you. He calls Himself your friend, your advocate, your physician, your shepherd, your brother, your father, your soul, your spirit and the bridegroom of your soul. He calls you His sheep, His brethren, His ch'ldren, His portion, His heritage, His soul, His heart. Your souls He regards as His cherished spouses.

At various places in Sacred Scripture He assures you that He exercises continual care and watchfulness over you (1 Peter 5, 7); He carries you, and will always carry you in His heart and in His bosom (Isa. 46, 3-4). Nor is He satisfied with saying once or twice that He bears you so tenderly; He repeats this beautiful thought as many as five times in a single passage. And elsewhere He says that even if a mother were to forget the child she bore in her womb, He would never forget you, and that He has written you in His hands, that He might always have you before His eyes (Isa. 49, 15-17); whoever touches you touches the apple of His eye (Zach. 2, 8); you should have no care for the things that are necessary to you to sustain life and clothe yourself; He well knows that you need such things, and He takes care of them on your behalf (Matt. 6, 31-33); He has numbered every hair of your head (Matt. 10, 30), and of these, not one shall perish (Luke 21, 18); His Father loves you as He loves the Son Himself and the Son loves you as He is loved by His Father (John 15, 9); He wants you to be where He is, that is, to be at rest with Him in the bosom and heart of His Father (John 17, 24), to sit with Him upon His throne (Apoc. 3, 21), and in a word, He wants you to be one with Him, and, indeed, to be consummated in unity with Him and with the Father of Heaven (John 17, 21-23). If you have offended Him, He promises, provided you come back to Him with humility, repentance, confidence in His goodness, and the resolution to make a clean break with sin, that He will receive you, He will embrace you,

56 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

He will forget all your sins, and clothe you with the garment of His grace and His love, of which you had been stripped by your sins (Ezech. 18, 21; Luke 15, 22).

Who, after all this, will not have confidence? Who will not become entirely abandoned to the care and guidance of a brother, a father, a bridegroom, endowed with infinite wisdom to know what is most advantageous for you and to foresee everything that could possibly happen to you, and to select the most appropriate means to bring you to the goal of your supreme happiness? Not only this, but He is also filled with extreme goodness with which He wills all kinds of good for you, together with immense power to turn aside any evil which might befall you, and to pour forth upon you the complete wealth of benefits He wills to grant you.

Lest you think His words and promises ineffectual, look for a moment at all He did and suffered for you in His Incarnation, His life, His Passion and His death, as well as the wonderful graces He still brings to us daily in the Blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist. Consider how He came down from heaven to earth, out of love for you, how He humbled Himself to the extent of willing to become a little child, to be born in a stable and embrace all the woes and needs of a human and mortal life. See how He devoted all His hours, all His thoughts, words and actions to you; how He delivered up His holy body to Pilate, to the executioners and to the Cross; how He laid down His life and shed His blood even to the last drop; how He gives you every day, in the Holy Eucharist, His body, His blood, His soul, His divinity, all His riches, all that He is, all that is most dear and most precious to Him.

O Thou who art goodness! O Love! O Most Great and Amiable Jesus! Let them trust in thee, who know Thy Name (Ps. 9, 11), which is none other than love and goodness, for Thou art all love, all goodness and all mercy. Yet I am not surprised that there should be so few who trust in Thee perfectly, since there are so few who study themselves to find out and observe the effects of Thy infinite goodness. O my Saviour, surely I am most worthless if I do not have confidence in Thy goodness, after Thou hast displayed so very many proofs of Thy love for me! If Thou hast done and suffered so much, and if Thou hast given us such great things, what wouldst Thou not do yet again, what wouldst Thou not add now to, these gifts, if only I came to Thee with humility and confidence?

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

Cultivate a great desire to be firmly rooted in the sublime virtue of confidence. Do not fear, but be courageous in serving and loving Our Most Adorable and Amiable Jesus, with great perfection and holiness. Undertake courageously great tasks for His glory, in proportion to the power and grace He will give you for this end. Even though you can do nothing of yourself, you can do all things in Him and His help will never fail you, if you have confidence in His goodness.

Place your entire physical and spiritual welfare in His hands. Abandon to the paternal solicitude of His Divine Providence every care for your health, reputation, property and business, for those near to you, for your past sins, for your soul's progress in virtue and love of Him, for your life, death and especially for your salvation and eternity, in a word, all your cares. Rest in the assurance that, in His pure goodness, He will watch with particular tenderness over all your responsibilities and cares and dispose all things for the greatest good.

Do not rely on the power or influence of friends, on your own money, on your intellect, knowledge or strength, on your good desires and resolutions, or on human means, or on any created thing, but on God's mercy alone. You may, of course, use all these things and take advantage of every aid that you can marshal on your side to conquer vice, to practise virtue, to direct and conclude all the business that God has placed in your hands, and acquit yourself of the obligations of your state in life. But you must renounce all dependence or confidence you may have in these things, to rely upon Our Lord's goodness alone. You ought to take as much pains and work as hard for your own part, as if you expected nothing from God: nevertheless, you should no more rely upon your own resources and labor than if you had done nothing at all, but had looked to God's mercy alone for all things.

To this we are exhorted by the Holy Ghost, saying, by the mouth of David, the royal prophet: Revela Domini viam tuam, et spera in eo, et ipse jacet. "Commit thy way to the Lord, and trust in him, and he will do it" (Ps. 36,5). And in another place jacta super Dominum

curam tuam et ipse te enutriet. "Cast thy care upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee" (Ps. 54, 23). And, speaking through St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, He advises us to cast all our cares and worries upon God, since He watches over us: Omnem sollicitudinem vestram projicientes in eum, quoniam ipsi cura est de vobis (I Peter 5, 7). This is what Our Lord said to St. Catherine of Sienna: "Daughter, forget thyself and think of me, and I will ever think of thee."

Accept this teaching as if addressed to you personally and to no one else. Let your chief care be to avoid everything that displeases Our Lord, trying to serve and love Him perfectly, and He will turn everything, even your faults, to your advantage.

Acquire the habit of making frequent acts of trust in God, but especially when you happen to be assailed by thoughts or feelings of fear and mistrust, either with regard to your past sins, or for any other reason. At such times lift up your heart at once to Jesus, and say to Him, with the Royal Prophet: Ad te, Domine, levavi animam meam: Deus meus in te confido, non erubescam. "To thee, O Lord, have I lifted up my soul. In thee, O my God, I put my trust; let me not be ashamed" (PS. 24, 1-2).

In te, Domine, speravi, non confundar in aeternum. "In thee, O Lord, have I hoped, let me never be Confounded" (Ps. 30, 1). Deus meus sperabo in eum. "My God, in him will I trust" (Ps. 90, 2). Dominus tui adiutor, non timebo quid faciat tui homo. "The Lord is my helper: I will not fear what man can do unto me" (Ps. 117, 6). Dominus mihi adiutor, et ego despiciam inimicos meos: "The Lord is my helper and I will look over my enemies" (PS. 117, 7). Bonum est confidere in Domino, quam confidere in homine. "It is good to confide in the Lord, rather than to have confidence in man" (Ps. 117, 8). Et si ambulavero in medio umbrae mortis, non timebo mala quoniam tu mecum es: "For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me" (PS. 22, 4).

Or else join the prophet Isaias, saying: Ecce Deus salvator meus fiducialiter agam et non timebo. "Behold, God is my saviour, I will deal confidently and will not fear" (Isa. 12, 2). Or say with holy Job: Etiamsi occiderit me, in ipso sperabo. "Although he should kill me,

I will trust in him" (Job 13, 15). Or, repeat the words of the poor man in the Gospel: Credo, Domine, adjuva incredulitatem meam. I do believe, Lord: help my unbelief" (Mark 9, 23).

At other times, say with the holy apostles: Domine, adauge nobis fidem: "Lord, increase our faith" (Luke 17, 5).

Or else speak to Him thus: "O Good Jesus, it is in Thee alone that I have placed all my trust. O Thou my strength and only refuge, I give and abandon myself entirely to Thee; do with me whatever Thou dost please."

"Oh my sweet love, O my dear hope, I place my whole being in Thy hands and sacrifice it to Thee, with my life, my soul and all that belongs to me, that Thou mayest dispose of them in time and in eternity howsoever it pleases Thee, for Thy glory!"

In conclusion, confidence is a gift of God that follows in the wake of humility and love. Therefore, ask it of God, and He will give it to you. Strive to perform your every action in a spirit of humility for the pure love of God, and you will soon taste the sweetness and peace that accompany the virtue of confidence.

XXII. SUBMISSION AND CHRISTIAN OBEDIENCE.

Continual submission to the holy will of God is the most universal of all virtues and its practice should be most familiar to you, since at every moment there arise opportunities of renouncing your own will and submitting to the will of God. His will is always easy to recognize. God has willed that all things that are extremely necessary should also be very easy to obtain. The sun, for instance, and air and water, and the other elements are most necessary for man's natural life; so, also, these things are common and freely available to everyone.

In the same way, since God has placed you in this world only to do His holy will, and your salvation depends upon this, it is, therefore, extremely necessary that you should easily know God's will in all that must be done. So, He has made it easily recognizable, manifesting His holy will in five chief ways which are very certain and evident: 1. by His commandments; 2. by His counsels; 3. by the laws, rules and obligations of our state in life; 4. by the authority of those placed over you or directing You; 5. by events, since every hap pening in an infallible sign that God so wills, either by absolute or by permissive will. So, if you would but open the eyes of faith even a little, you could easily, at all times and in every situation, recognize God's most holy will, and this knowledge would lead you to love Him and to submit yourself to Him.

But if you are to become really and truly submissive, you must store away in the deepest recesses of your souls these four truths taught us by faith:

1. Faith, which tells us there is but one God who created all things, also obliges us to believe that this great God orders and governs all things without exception, either by absolute or by permissive will; and that there is nothing accomplished in the world that does not come under the ordering of His divine guidance, or pass through the hands of His absolute will, or His permission, which are like the two arms of His Providence, by which He controls all things: Tua, Pater, Providentia gubernat (WIS. 14, 3).

2. God neither wills nor permits anything except for His greater glory, and, in fact, He does draw forth greater glory from all things. Since God is the Creator and Governor of the world, He has made all things for Himself and is imbued with infinite zeal for His glory and is infinitely wise and powerful in knowingly and effectively directing all things to that end. It is, therefore, very certain that He neither wills nor permits anything whatever to happen, in the world, that does not contribute to His greater glory and to the good of those who love God. If, then, we would only desire to love God and adore His holy will in everything that happens, all things would work out for our greater profit. And this result depends upon us alone.

3. God's will, whether absolute or permissive, is infinitely holy, just, adorable and worthy of love, and deserves to be infinitely and equally adored, loved and glorified in all things just as they are.

4. Our Lord Jesus Christ, from the very first moment of His life, made it His whole purpose in existing to execute, not His own, but His Father's will, according to the authentic testimony of St. Paul writing to the Hebrews: "When he (Jesus) cometh into the world, he saith (speaking to His Eternal Father): Behold I come; in the head of the book it is written of me: that I should do thy will, O God (Heb. 10, 5-7); and according to what Christ afterwards said Himself: I came down from heaven, not to do my own will but the will of him that sent me" (John 6, 38). In fact, He never followed His own will, although it was holy, divine and adorable. He renounced and, as it were, annihilated it, in order to follow His Father's will, saying incessantly to Him in all things, the words He uttered on the eve of His death, in the Garden of Olives: "Father, not my will, but thine be done" (Luke 22, 42).

If you ponder these truths, you will acquire considerable facility in submitting yourself in all things to God's most adorable will. If you reflect that God orders and disposes everything for His glory and your greater good, and that His disposition is most just and deserving of love, you will not ascribe things that happen to you to luck or chance, nor to the malice of devils or of men, but to God's ordaining, which you shall then love and tenderly embrace, knowing for certain that it is most holy and worthy to be loved, and that it neither orders nor permits anything except for your greater good and for the greater glory of God. You should love this glory above all things, since you are only in the world to live and procure the glory of God.

If you give attentive consideration to the fact that Jesus Christ, our Head, abandoned so holy and divine a will as His, to follow the most rigorous and strict will of His Father in His regard—a will that demanded that He suffer so many extraordinary things and die so cruel and shameful a death for the salvation of His enemies, will you, after this, have any trouble in renouncing a will that is so depraved and corrupted by sin as yours, in order to set up in its place the reign of most holy and sweet and amiable will of God?

Submission and Christian obedience consist then in continuing Christ's most perfect obedience not only to the desires expressed directly by His Father, but also to those communicated to Him through His most holy Mother, through St. Joseph, through the angel who led Him into Egypt, through the Jews, Herod and Pilate. For He not only submitted to His Father, but became subject to all creatures. for His Father's glory and for love of you.

XXIII. PRACTICE OF SUBMISSION AND CHRISTIAN OBEDIENCE.

To put into practice the truths that have just been explained, it is necessary to adore in Jesus the divine submission which He exercised so perfectly. Frequently shatter at His feet all your own will, assuring Him that you desire none other but His desires and inclinations, praying Him to make His will reign perfectly in you.

Live in the continual resolution to suffer all kinds of tortures, even to die, rather than transgress the least of God's commandments, and be ever disposed to follow His counsels, according to the light and grace He gives you, in harmony with your state in life and under the guidance of your spiritual director.

Respect those who have authority over you and honor them as representatives of Christ on earth. Obey their will as if it were the will of Jesus Christ, provided their orders are not manifestly contrary to what is commanded or forbidden by God.

St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, goes much farther than this. He exhorts us to submit to every human being for the love of God: Subjecti estote omni humanae creaturae, propter Deum (I Peter 2, 13). And St. Paul would have us regard one another as superiors: Superiores sibi invicem arbitantes (Phil. 2, 3). Following the divine teachings of these two great apostles, you ought to consider and honor persons of every kind as your superiors, and be ready to give up your own judgment and will in deference to others. In your capacity as a Christian bound to live with the same sentiments and dispositions as Jesus Christ, you ought to make it —your professed aim in life, with Jesus Christ, never to follow your own will, and thus to obey the will of God in all its manifestations. In doubtful cases, that is, in cases where you cannot tell with certainty what is the will of God, you should obey the will of another person, no matter who he may be, looking upon all men as your superiors, and submitting to their will as far as possible in all that is not contrary to God and to the duties of your state in life. You should, however, always give preference to those who have fuller authority and more right over you.

Consider and observe all the laws, rules and obligations of your state, position or condition as unmistakable indications of what God asks of you. In honor of the most exact obedience and perfect subjection rendered by Jesus, not only to the rulings of His Father, and to the hours and minutes prescribed and determined for the performance of all His actions, but even to human laws, place yourself in subjection to the rules and obligations of your condition, to the hours and minutes prescribed for the fulfilment of the duties and functions of your occupation, and also to human and civil laws. Do all this for the love of Him who, for love of you, showed you the way by first entering into such subjection Himself.

In every event that happens, whether by God's absolute or His permissive will, adore and bless and love both these wills, and declare to Him, in union with His Beloved Son and as far as possible, with the same spirit, and with the same love, submission and humility of His Most Obedient Son: Pater, non quod ego volo, sed quod tu; non mea voluntas, sed tua fiat; "Father, not what I will, but what thou wilt. Not my will, but thine be done" (Mark 14, 36; Luke 22, 42). Yea Pater, quia sic fuit placitum ante te, "Yea, Father; for so hath it seemed good in thy sight" (Matt. 11, 26).

When you become aware of some inclination or desire for any object, instantly cast it down at the feet of Jesus. If the attraction is powerful, continue to renounce it, and to dash it down and implore Jesus Himself to eliminate it, until you feel yourself disposed to want the very contrary to that desire, if He were to have you make the choice.

When some thought or fear enters your mind, concerning the loss of your health, your reputation, your property, your parents or your children or your friends, surrender your will to Jesus, adore and bless and love His will, just as if you had already sustained the loss or else anticipate, at this time, the moment when it will occur, and say: «O Jesus, I annihilate all my will and inclinations at Thy feet. With my whole heart, I adore and praise Thy most holy and lovable will. In spite of all my repugnances and contrary feelings, I desire to love, bless and glorify Thee in everything it may please Thee to ordain for me and all that concerns me in time and in eternity. Live Jesus! Live the most holy will of my Jesus! May my own will be annihilated and destroyed forever, and may His reign be accomplished eternally on earth as it is in heaven!"

XXIV. PERFECTION OF SUBMISSION AND CHRISTIAN OBEDIENCE.

Not only did our Lord Jesus Christ do everything His Father willed, and submit to Him and to all things for love of Him, but He also found all His contentment, His happiness, His paradise in doing so: Meus cibus est, ut faciam voluntatem ejus qui misit me: "My meat," He said, "is to do the will of him that sent me" (John 4, 34). In other words, I find nothing more desirable, nor more delightful than to do the will of my Father." In the performance of everything that He did, He took infinite satisfaction, because it was His Father's will. He found His joy and happiness according to the spirit in the sufferings He bore, because they were His Father's good pleasure. And so, speaking of the day of His passion and death, the Holy Ghost calls it the "day of the joy of his heart" (Cant. 3, 11). He likewise found peace and satisfaction of soul in all the things He saw happen and destined to happen in the world, since in all things He considered nothing but His Father's most adorable will.

So also, in so far as you are Christians, who ought to be invested with the sentiments and dispositions of your Head, you should not only submit to God and to all things for love of God, but you should also find all your satisfaction and your paradise in so doing. It is in this that the highest perfection of Christian submission consists. This is our prayer each day to God as we say: Fiat voluntas tua, sicut in coelo, et in terra: "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6, 10). For the saints in heaven, the accomplishment of the will of God is so completely adequate to give them felicity and heavenly bliss, that many of them, even beholding their dearest loved ones punished in hell, must rejoice in the manifestation of God's eternal justice. This is possible because the saints are completely one with God and have no choice or understanding of things other than His Holy will. God, however, wills that His justice be carried out upon these wretches who have fully deserved it, and He finds infinite satisfaction in the effects of His justice, just as He does in the works of His mercy. Therefore, the saints also find satisfaction in them:

THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

Laetabitur justus cum viderit vindictam; manus suas lavabit in sanguine peccatoris: "The just shall rejoice when he shall see the revenge; he shall wash his hands in the blood of the sinner" (Ps. 57, 11). Thus you must seek all your joy in the effects of the divine will, since you ought to strive to do that will on earth as it is done in heaven.

There are two reasons why you are bound to do this:

1. Since you are created only to glorify God, and God's glory is your last end, it follows that all your joy should spring from God's glory, and, therefore, from all the effects of His divine will, because they all operate for His greater glory.

2. Since Our Lord has told you that it is His divine wish for you to be one with Him and with His Father, it follows that you should be of but one mind and sentiment with Him, just as are the blessed in heaven. You must, consequently, find all your joy, your blessedness and your heaven in that very same thing which is the heaven and blessedness of the saints, the most Blessed Virgin, the Son of God and the Eternal Father.

Now the saints, the most Blessed Virgin, the Son of God and the Eternal Father take pleasure and find heaven in all things, because they see God's will in all things. God takes infinite satisfaction and joy in all that He wills or permits, and in all His works: Laetabitur Dominus in operibus suis (Ps. 103, 31). He would not be God if He were not infinitely satisfied with everything that He does. So true is this, that He is just as much pleased with the enforcement of divine justice He inflicted upon the damned, as with the effects of providential goodness lavished upon the blessed. Holy Scripture says: "As the Lord rejoiced upon you before doing good to you, so he shall rejoice destroying and bringing you to nought" (Deut. 28, 63). Hence also, you must find all your joy and your heaven in all that is willed, or permitted or worked by God, and in all things in general, excepting in sin, which you must detest and abhor; yet you must adore and bless God's permission and the ordering of His justice, which by a just judgment permits that, as punishment for one sin, the sinner may fall into another.

Thus, by Our Lord's grace, you have a means of being always satisfied in life and of possessing heaven on earth. You would indeed be very hard to please, if you were not satisfied with what satisfies God, the angels and the saints, who rejoice, not so much in their own great glory as in the accomplishment of God's will in them—that is, in the fact that God derives pleasure and contentment from glorifying His faithful servants. Nor do you have any cause for complaint if you are in the paradise of the Mother of God, the Son of God and the Eternal Father.

XXV. PRACTICE OF PERFECT CHRISTIAN SUBMISSION.

If, then, you desire to possess a real heaven on earth, pray that Jesus may fill you with these holy dispositions of perfect submission to all that He divinely wills. In order to do your own share and cooperate with Him, try not only to submit to God in all things, but also to submit to Him with joy and satisfaction.

When performing any action, try to perform it not only for love of Our Lord, but out of so much love for Him that all your satisfaction, your joy and your heaven consist in performing it, simply because it is an act of love of Him, and because it is His will and His good pleasure that you should do it.

When anything happens to you against your will and contrary to your hopes, take satisfaction in it, because it is God's will. If anything is favorable to your will or your plans, be glad, not because your wish has come true, but God's will has been accomplished.

In all that happens in the world, see only God's will and permission. In view of the fact that He takes pleasure in all that He wills, whether absolutely or permissively, and that all things ever accrue to His gain, and that He ever draws forth greater glory from everything, you must detest the sins committed against Him, in the events of daily life and be pleased with the things in which He takes His good pleasure.

I do not say that you should derive sensible pleasure and joy from all that you do or suffer, or from all that happens in the world, for that is possible only to the blessed. But I am here speaking of joy and satisfaction of the spirit and of the will, which you may easily obtain, with the help of Our Lord's grace, since all you have to do is to say: "My God, if it be pleasing to Thee, I desire for Thy love to take all my pleasure in willing, doing or suffering this or that, because it is Thy will and pleases Thee." Thus you will obtain satisfaction of your mind and will in all things. Furthermore, a frequent repetition of this practice will diminish and destroy whatever pain and natural distaste you may happen to feel, in various situations, and will help you to enjoy sweetness and satisfaction, even of the senses, in cases where you found bitterness and pain before.

To familiarize yourself with this practice, acquire the habit of lifting up your heart to Jesus, on the occasion of everything you see happen in the world and say to Him:

"O Jesus, it is Thee Who dost ordain, or permit these things, and Thou dost will all things with an infinite satisfaction. O my God, I give myself to Thee; may it please Thee to make me one with Thee in spirit, will and disposition. Make me will all that Thou dost will and make me will it as Thou dost, contentedly. May I find all my joy and heavenly bliss in all that Thou dost will or do."

With regard to things that arouse repugnance and distaste in you, say:

"O Jesus, in spite of all my repugnance and the contrariness of my self-will and self-love, I desire to suffer this pain or affliction for love of Thee. I desire to suffer it with so much love for Thee, as to find in it all my joy and heavenly bliss, because it is Thy holy will."

Concerning things which give you consolation and satisfaction, say:

"O Jesus, I am glad this has turned out as it has (or else, I desire to do this act) not merely because it has turned out in a way that is pleasing to me (or because it gives me satisfaction to perform this act), but because it is Thy will and Thy pleasure that it should happen thus (or that I should do what I am about to do)."

In so doing, you will begin to enjoy heaven even in this world. You will taste perpetual peace and contentment. You will perform your actions as God performs His own, even as Jesus Christ our Lord performed His, when He was on earth, in a spirit of joy and contentment. This is the true joy He asked of His Father for you on the eve of His death, in these words: Ut habeant gaudium meum impletum in semetipsis. "That they may have my joy filled in themselves" (John 17, 13).

Here, then, is the supreme perfection of Christian submissiveness and of pure love of God, for the highest degree of divine love consists in doing, suffering and accepting all things for the love of God, with joy and contentedness. Anyone who makes a holy use of all the things that occur in the world, who will suffer with these dispositions all the trials that come upon him and perform his actions in this spirit of submission, will give God more glory and satisfaction, will make more progress, in one day, in the paths of His love, than he would do in his whole life by following any other course.

XXVI. CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

When the Son of God tells you, in His Gospel, that the first and greatest commandment is to love God with your whole heart and your whole soul and with all your strength, it is with good reason that He went on to declare that the second commandment, by which you are obliged to love your neighbor as yourself, is like unto the first. For the love of God and of your neighbor cannot be separated. These are not two different loves, but a single, uniform love. And you are bound to love your neighbor with the same affection and with the same love with which you love God, because you should love your fellow men not in and for themselves, but in and for God. Briefly, it is God Himself that you should love in your neighbor.

Jesus loves you in this way. He loves you in and for His Heavenly Father, or rather He loves His Father in you, and He wants you to love one another as He loves you. "This," He says, "is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you (John 15, 12).

This, then, is what constitutes Christian charity: to love one another as Jesus loves you. So great is His love for you that He gives you all that He has, His riches, His own self; and He devotes all the powers of His wisdom and goodness to doing good to you. So exceedingly great is His charity toward you that, for a great length of time and with very much gentleness and patience, He tolerates your defects. He is the first to seek you out when you have offended Him. He seems almost to prefer your comforts, pleasures and interests to His own, since, during His earthly life, He subjected Himself to every form of trouble, sorrow and suffering to deliver you from affliction and make you happy. He has, in a word, so much love for you that He devotes to you His whole life, His soul, His time, His eternity, His divinity and His humanity—all that He is, all that He has and all that He can do. In His thoughts, His words, and His actions He is all charity and love for you.

This is the standard and model of Christian charity. This is what He asks of you, when He commands you to love One another as He loves you. This is how you ought to love one another, acting towards your neighbor as Jesus did to you, according to the power He gives you.

To excite and urge yourself to love your fellow men with true charity consider your neighbor as existing in God and God in him. I mean, look upon him as a being who has come forth from God's Heart and His goodness; as a being participating in God, created to return to God, to be one day ensconced in the bosom of God to glorify God eternally, and as a creature in which God will, indeed, be eternally glorified, either through mercy or through justice. Consider your neighbor as the object of the love of God, no matter what his condition may be: for God loves everything He has created, even the devils, in so far as they are His creatures and He does not hate anything that He has made. Sin alone He holds in abhorrence and sin was not made by Him. Your neighbor is an individual who has sprung from the same principle as yourself, a child of the same Father, created for the same end, belonging to the same Lord, redeemed at the same price, the infinitely Precious Blood of Jesus Christ. See in him a member of the same Head, Christ, and of the same body, the Church of Christ, nourished by the same food, the precious body and blood of Jesus Christ. Consequently you should be of one mind, one soul, and one heart with him.

You must also regard your neighbor as the temple of the living God, bearing in himself the image of the Blessed Trinity and the character of Jesus Christ. He is part of Jesus Christ, bone of His bone, flesh of His flesh. See him as one for whom Jesus labored and suffered so much, spent so much precious effort and time, and gave His blood and His life. Finally, consider him as one recommended to you, by Jesus, as His own equal: for He said that whatsoever you should do to the least of His little ones, that is, of those who believe in Him, He would consider it as done to Himself (Matt. 25, 40). Oh, if you only pondered and thoroughly thought out the importance of these truths, what charity, what respect, what honor you would entertain for one another! How you would fear to offend against unity and Christian charity, whether in thoughts, words or deeds! What would you not do, what would you not suffer for one another! How charitably and patiently would you bear with the faults of others, and excuse them! With what gentleness, modesty and restraint would you converse one with another! How careful would you be to "please your neighbor unto good, to edification" as St. Paul says (Rom. 15, 2). O Jesus, God of love and charity, impress these truths and these dispositions upon our minds and our hearts.

XXVII. PRACTICE OF CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

If you desire to live in the spirit of Christian charity, which is nothing else but a continuation and fulfilment of the charity of Jesus, you must frequently exercise yourself in the following practices.

Adore Jesus, who is all charity. Bless Him for all the glory He gave to His Father by His continual acts of charity. Ask Him to forgive all the failings of which you have ever been guilty, with respect to this virtue, praying Him to offer His charity to His Father for you, as reparation for these failings. Give yourself to Him, begging Him to destroy all that is contrary to charity, in your thoughts, words and actions, and to cause His own most perfect charity to live and reign in you.

Often ponder these beautiful words of St. Paul: "Charity is patient, is kind: charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely; is not puffed up; is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never falleth away" (1 Cor. 13, 4-8).

Adore Jesus who pronounces these words by the lips of St. Paul. Offer yourself to Him, with the firm purpose of making this living charity a real part of your life. Beg the All-loving Christ to give you grace for that purpose.

Whenever you render a service to another person, and in all the actions you perform for others, whether as a duty or out of charity, lift up your heart to Jesus and say to Him:

"O Jesus, I desire to perform this action, if it please Thee, in honor of and together with Thy charity towards this person, and for love of Thyself, Whom I desire to see and serve in him."

When necessity demands that you give your body some rest, nourishment or refreshments, do so with this same intention, looking upon your health, your life and your body not as belonging to yourself but as one of Christ's members, according to St. Paul, as something pertaining to Jesus, Corpus autem Domino, "The body for the Lord" (I Cor. 6, 13), which you must, consequently, protect and nourish not for yourself but for Jesus, in so far as your body is necessary for His service. And imitate St. Gertrude in remembering, in this connection, the fact that Our Lord said whatever was done to the least of His little ones, would be done to Him (Matt. 25, 40).

When you greet someone, or show him respect, greet and respect him. as the temple and image of God and as a member of Jesus Christ.

Where an occasion presents itself for polite conversation, or an exchange of compliments, do not allow your lips to utter friendly words that do not come from your heart. There exists the following difference between Christian souls and worldly souls, namely, that, while they both make use of the same compliments and polite phrases that are customary when one meets a friend or goes visiting, the Christian utters them from his heart, while the worldling has them only on his lips, and speaks them in a spirit of falsehood and simulated friendliness.

I do not say that it is necessary for your mind to be always alert and busy at the task of forming these thoughts and intentions every time you meet somebody, or say a word or two in courteous greeting, or lend a helping hand even though that would be a good thing. But at least have the general intention of doing all things, always, in this spirit of Christ's charity; and try to renew the intention before God, when He brings the thought to your mind.

Whenever another person arouses in you any distaste or aversion, or feelings of envy, be sure to renounce them vigorously, at once, and dash them down at the feet of Our Lord, asking Him to eliminate these sensations and fill you with His divine charity. Be sure to make interior acts of charity towards that person, in the following terms:

"O Jesus, I desire to love this person for love of Thee. Yes, my Saviour, I want to love him with my whole heart, together with and in honor of Thy charity towards Him. And I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer whatever Thou dost please, for that person."

Moreover, make the effort to speak to him and to perform some external acts of charity towards him, and do not stop until you have utterly wiped out, within yourself, this feeling of aversion and antipathy.

If you have been offended, or have offended another, do not wait for him to seek you out, but remember that our Lord said: If therefore thou offer thy gift at the altar, and there thou remember that thy brother hath anything against thee; leave there thy offering before the altar, and go first to be reconciled to thy brother" (Matt. 5, 23- 24). So, to do honor to the fact that He was the first to seek you out, He Who is so bountiful and generous in favors to you, Who receives from you nothing but hurts and offenses, and to obey these words of His, go and find the one you have offended or who has offended you, and be reconciled with him, disposing yourself to talk to him in a spirit of forgiveness, gentleness, peace and humility.

If unfavorable remarks about someone else are made in your presence, disregard them; change the subject if possible, in a prudent and tactful way trying to manage it so that nothing further will be said; if the conversation goes on, it would be better to keep quiet and evince no awareness of or interest in the subject.

Pray to Our Lord, especially, to implant in your heart charity and warm affection for the poor, strangers, widows and orphans. Consider such as these to be persons recommended to you by your greatest friend, Jesus Christ, who in Holy Scripture very Often and very emphatically recommends them to you as deserving all the attention you would give to Him in person. With this in mind, then, be kind in speaking to them, treat them charitably and give them all the help you can.

XXVIII. CHARITY AND ZEAL FOR THE SALVATION OF SOULS.

Above all, have a particular charity for the souls of all men, especially of those who are related to you or depend upon you, and do everything you possibly can to effect their salvation. For St. Paul tells us that "if any man have not care of his own, and especially, those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (I Tim. 5, 8). Remember that these souls were bought at the price of the labors of God made Man, of His thirty-three years of suffering, of His blood and His life, and that the greatest and most Godlike work, the task most pleasing to Jesus that you could do on earth, is to labor with Him for the salvation of souls, so dear and precious in His sight.

And so, offer yourself to Him to share the work for souls in every way He asks. Consider yourself most unworthy to be employed in so great a work. Yet, whenever you see a chance to help in the salvation of some poor soul (and if you are alert, such chances will occur most frequently), do not let it slip by, but first ask grace of Our Lord and then apply yourself, according to your condition and to the means He puts at your disposal, with all the care, diligence and love you can muster, just as you would in the case of some business of the highest importance, or if all temporal goods and the lives of all the men in the world were at stake. Do this purely for the love of Jesus, so that God may be eternally loved and glorified in souls. knowing that you should consider it a great favor and blessing to employ all your time, your health, your life and all the money in the world, if they were in your possession, to help in the salvation of a single soul for whom Jesus Christ shed all His Precious Blood, spent all His time, His strength and His life.

O Jesus, zealous lover of souls, and lover of the salvation of men, may it please Thee to implant in the hearts of all Christians the sentiments and dispositions of Thy zeal, and of Thy most ardent charity for souls.

TRUE CHRISTIAN DEVOTION AND THE FORMING OF JESUS WITHIN YOU

XXIX. TRUE CHRISTIAN DEVOTION.

After what has been said so far about Christian virtues, it is easy to see what true Christian devotion is, and in what it consists. Since all the Christian virtues are nothing else but the virtues which our Lord Jesus Christ practised on earth, which must be continued by us while we are in this world, it necessarily follows that true Christian devotion is simply Jesus Christ's holy and divine devotion, that we are bound to perpetuate and fulfil in ourselves.

Now, for our Lord Jesus Christ devotion was a matter of accomplishing, with the greatest perfection, everything that His Father willed, and of taking all His pleasure in this alone. His devotion consisted in serving His Heavenly Father, and in serving even men for the love of His Father, since He willed to take the form and lowly condition of a servant, in order to pay more honor and homage to the supreme greatness of His Father by His own abasement. His devotion consisted in loving and glorifying His Father and in causing His Father to be loved and glorified in the world; of doing all that He did purely for the glory and love of His Father, with most holy, most pure and most divine dispositions—namely, with the most profound humility, the most burning charity for men, the most perfect detachment from self and from all created things, the closest union with His Heavenly Father, the most rigorous submission to His Father's will and with all joy and satisfaction. Finally, His devotion consisted in being altogether immolated and sacrificed purely for the glory of His Father, since He willed to take upon Himself the role of victim, and in this capacity to undergo every sort of contempt, humiliation, privation, interior and exterior mortification and, finally, a cruel and shameful death. for the everlasting glory of His Divine Father.

These were three solemn professions, three vows, as it were, pronounced

TRUE CHRISTIAN DEVOTION

by Jesus from the moment of the Incarnation. And these He carried out most perfectly in His life and in His death.

1. At the moment of His Incarnation, He vowed obedience to His Father, that is, He made profession never to do His own will, but to obey most perfectly everything willed by His Father, and to find in so doing all His bliss and joy.

2. He professed servitude to His Father. This is the character given to Him by His Father, speaking through a prophet: Servus meus es tu, Israel, quia in te gloriabor (Isa. 49, 3). And this is the character which He Himself adopts: Formam servi accipiens. (Phil. 2, 7), lowering Himself to the state and condition of a humble and servile life with respect to His creatures, even to the cruel shame and servile death of the Cross, for love of us and for His Father's glory.

3. He professed to become a host and victim entirely consecrated and immolated to His Father's glory from the first moment of His life to the very last.

Such was the devotion of Jesus. Since Christian devotion is simply Jesus Christ's devotion, our own devotion must, therefore, consist of similar vows of submission. In order to make it so, we should enter into the closest and most intimate contact and union with Jesus, and adhere to Him most closely, concentrating upon Him all our attention, throughout our whole life, in all our functions and acts.

This is the solemn vow, the first and most important public profession, which is made at baptism in the presence of the entire >Church. At that time, to use the terms of St. Augustine, St. Thomas' Summa, and the Catechism of the Council of Trent, we made a solemn vow and profession to renounce Satan with all his works and to be united with Jesus Christ as members are one with their head, to deliver and consecrate ourselves entirely to Him and to dwell in Him. A Christian who professes to adhere to Christ and dwell in Him, professes to adhere to His devotion, His dispositions, His intentions, His laws and rules of conduct, His spirit and His behavior, His life, His qualities, and His virtues, and all that He did and suffered.

Thus, when we vow to adhere to Jesus Christ and dwell in Him-and this is "the greatest of all our vows," says St. Augustine, votum maximum nostrum-we make three great professions, which are very sacred and sublime, deserving frequent consideration.

1. We profess, with Jesus Christ, never to do our Own will but to submit to everything willed by God, to obey persons of all kinds, in whatever is not contrary to God, and to seek all our satisfaction and heavenly bliss in acting so.

2. We profess servitude to God and His Son Jesus Christ, and to all the members of Jesus Christ, according to the words of St. Paul: Nos servos vestros per Jesum (II Cor. 4, 5). In consequence of this avowal, no Christian can call anything his own, any more than a slave can. Nor has a Christian the right to make any use of the faculties of his soul, or of his life, or his daily time, or his temporal goods, except for Jesus Christ and the members of Jesus Christ-that is, all who believe in Him.

3. We profess to become victims continually sacrificed to God's glory-Spirituales hostias (1 Pet. 2, 5), as St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, expresses it. Obsecro, vos, fratres, per misericordiam Dei, ut exhibeatis corpora vestra hostiam viventem, sanctam, Deo placentem says St. Paul: I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercy of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, pleasing to God (Rom. 12, 1). What is here said of our bodies must also be said of our souls. So we are obliged to glorify and love God, in proportion to all the powers of our body and soul, to do everything possible that He may be glorified and loved, and in all our acts and in all things to seek nothing but His glory alone, His love alone,, and to live in such a way that each Christian life may be a ceaseless sacrifice of praise and love. And we should be ready to be completely immolated and consumed for His glory.

In a word: Christianismus est professio vitae Christi: "Christianity is the profession of the life of Christ," says St. Gregory of Nyssa. St. Bernard assures us that Our Lord does not admit to the ranks of those professed in his religion, anyone who does not live His life: Non inter suos deputat professores, quos vitae suae cernit desertores. That is why we profess Jesus Christ at Holy Baptism. We profess the life of Christ, Christ's devotion, His dispositions and intentions, His virtues and His perfect detachment from all things. We profess to believe firmly everything that He teaches, either by His own words and example or through His Church, and to choose death before swerving, however little, from this belief. We profess to join Him in a fight to the finish with sin; to live, as He lived, in a spirit of uninterrupted prayer; to carry His Cross with Him, as well as to bear His mortification in our bodies and souls; to continue the practice of His humility, His trust in God, His submissiveness and obedience, His charity and zeal for the glory of His Father and the salvation of souls. We profess to live, on earth and in heaven, only in order to belong to Jesus and to love and honor Him in all the states and mysteries of His life, in all that He is, in Himself and in the universe. Finally, we profess to be ever ready to undergo every form of torture and to die a thousand deaths, if i t were possible, purely for His love and for His glory.

Such are the vow and profession made by all Christians at their baptism. This is what constitutes true Christian devotion. Any other devotion, if it be possible for any other to exist, is mere deception and perdition.

XXX. PRACTICE OF CHRISTIAN DEVOTION.

If you would enter upon the path of this holy devotion, adore Jesus in His most perfect devotedness, and in the profession He made to His Father at the instant of His Incarnation, which He observed most perfectly throughout His whole life. Bless Him for the glory rendered to His Father by consecration. Beg Him to pardon your faults against the vow you made at baptism, and to atone for them in His most great mercy. Consider in the presence Of God what great obligations go with this vow and profession. Frequently renew your desire to live up to these obligations, pray that Jesus Christ will give you the grace to do so and implant His ~devotion within you. Make all your devotions consist in the practices described above, the essentials that comprised the devotion of Jesus Christ. In all that you do Or suffer, make a point of uniting yourself with Christ's devotion as follows:

"O Jesus, I give myself to Thee, to do this action, or bear this affliction, in union with the most perfect devotion with which Thou didst perform all actions and suffer all afflictions."

78- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

In so doing, you will live in true and perfect devotion, by means of which Christ will be shaped within your own souls, according to the Apostle's wish: Donec formetur Christus in vobis (Gal. 4, 19). You will be transformed into Jesus; in eandem imaginem transformamur (II Cor. 3, 18). This means that you will cause Jesus to live and reign in you; you will become one with Him, and He will be all in you, according to Holy Writ: Consummati in unum, et omnia in omnibus (John 17, 23). This is the goal toward which all Christian life, piety and devotion must tend. Hence it is necessary to show you how important is this work of forming Jesus in your souls, and what needs to be done in order to form Him there.

XXX1. FORMATION OF JESUS WITHIN YOU.

The mystery of mysteries, and work of works, is the formation of Jesus, indicated in these words of St. Paul: Filioli, quos iterum parturio, donec formetur Christus in vobis, "My little children, of whom I am again in labor until Christ be formed in you" (Gal. 4, 19). It is the greatest mystery and the greatest work that is ever accomplished, either in heaven or on earth by the most excellent Beings in existence, namely, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, the Blessed Virgin, and Holy Mother Church.

This is the greatest act performed by the Eternal Father, in all that eternity during which He is continually occupied in producing His Son within Himself. Nor did He accomplish anything more astounding outside of Himself, in forming the human nature of His Divine Son, at the moment of the Incarnation. It excels all works effected by the Son of God on earth, forming Himself within His holy Mother, and in His Eucharist. It is the noblest of all the works of the Holy Ghost, Who formed Him in the sacred womb of the Virgin Mary. Neither did she ever, nor will she ever do anything more perfect, than when she cooperated in this divine and wonderful formation of Jesus in herself. It is the greatest and holiest of all the works of Holy Church, who exercises no function more exalted, even when she brings Him forth, in a sure and wondrous way, by the lips of her priests, in the Holy Eucharist, than when she brings Him to life in the hearts of her children. For, in all that she does, she has no other aim than that of forming Jesus in the souls of all Christians.

So it should be your desire, your care and your chief occupation to form Jesus in you, to make Him live and reign in you together with His spirit, His devotion, His virtues, His sentiments, His inclinations and dispositions. This should be the aim of all your goodworks. God places this task in your hands, for you to work at it without interruption.

Two most compelling reasons should stir you up to work energetically for the completion of this task:

1. You should desire the accomplishment of the Eternal Father's plan and of His great yearning to behold His Son living and reigning in you. Since His Beloved Son destroyed Himself for His glory and your love, He wants to repay Him, for His annihilation, by establishing Him in all things and making Him reign over all creatures. He loves His Most Amiable Son so much that He desires to see nothing but Him in all things, nor does He wish any other object to contemplate, delight in, or love. Thus He wants Him to be in all things omnia in omnibus (I Cor. 15, 28), so as to see and love nothing but Him in all things.

2. You should desire that Jesus, once established in your hearts should there give His Eternal Father and Himself the love and glory they deserve, according to the words of St. Peter: ut in omnibus honorificetur Deus, per Jesum Christum (I Peter 4, 11), since He alone is capable of glorifying His Eternal Father and Himself worthily or adequately.

These two reasons ought to enkindle in you a most ardent desire to form and establish Jesus within yourself and to seek out every possible means of achieving this end. A few of these methods will now be proposed for your consideration.

XXXII. MANNER OF FORMING JESUS WITHIN YOU.

There are four things to be done, in order to form Jesus within you.

1. You must make it your practice to see Him in everything, in your devotions and in all your acts, to have no other objective than Him and all His states, mysteries, virtues and actions. He is in all things. He is the being of things that exist, the life of things that live, the beauty of things beautiful, the power of the strong, the wisdom of the wise, the virtue of the virtuous, and the sanctity of the saints. There is hardly any action of your ordinary lives that does not find some counterpart in the actions He performed during His time on earth, so you must keep your eyes on every similar act of His, and imitate it in performing your own. By this means you shall fill up your understanding with Jesus, and shall form and establish Him in your mind, by thus frequently thinking of Jesus, and seeing Him in all things.

2. You ought to form Jesus, not only in your mind, by thinking of Him, seeing Him in everything, but you must also keep Him alive in your hearts by the frequent practice of His divine love. To do this, you should become accustomed to lifting up your hearts frequently to Him in love, after the manner of the various exercises in this book, and to do everything purely for love of Him and to consecrate every affection of your heart to Him.

3. You ought to form Jesus in yourself by a complete annihilation of yourself and of all things within you. If you want Jesus to live and reign in you perfectly, you must destroy all creatures in your minds and hearts. You must no longer look at them or love them in themselves, but only in Jesus, seeing and loving Jesus in them. You must see to it that the world and all that is in the world, so far as you are concerned, is put to death, and that nothing remains for you but Jesus, and that you no longer seek to please, contemplate or love anyone but Him.

You must also labor to destroy yourself, your own opinion, your own will, self-love, pride and vanity, all your perverse inclinations and habits, all the desires and instincts of a depraved nature, and everything that comes from yourself. Everything in you is depraved and corrupted by sin and, by that fact, is contrary to Jesus Christ and opposed to His glory and love, therefore it is necessary for all to be destroyed and consumed in order that Jesus Christ may live and reign perfectly in you.

Here you have the main foundation, the first principle and the first step in Christian living. It is what is called, in Holy Scripture and in the lives of the saints, being lost to self, dying to self and self renunciation. It is one of the chief cares incumbent upon you, one of your principal tasks to practise abnegation, humiliation and mortification, both inward and outward: and this development of self-denial is one of the most effective means to form and establish Jesus in you.

TRUE CHRISTIAN DEVOTION

4. This great work of forming Jesus in you is incomparably beyond your own achievement, so the fourth and most important means is to have recourse to the power of divine grace, and to the prayers of the most Blessed Virgin and of the saints.

Pray often and fervently to the most Blessed Virgin and all the angels and saints, asking them to help you in this task by their prayers. Surrender yourself to the omnipotent power of the Eternal Father and to His most burning love and zeal for His Divine Son, begging Him to annihilate you altogether, in order to make His Son live and reign in you.

Offer yourself with the same intention, and address the same prayer to the Holy Spirit.

Abandon yourself, and all your possessions at the feet of Jesus, begging Him, by the very great love in which He did annihilate Himself, to come with His divine power to destroy you and establish Himself in you, saying to Him, to this end:

"O Good Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy divine annihilation which the Apostle describes in the words: Exinanivit semetipsum (Phil. 2, 7). I adore Thy most great and strong love for Thy Father and Thyself, which did so annihilate Thee. I give and abandon myself altogether to the power of that divine love, that it may destroy me completely. O Most Powerful and Most Good Jesus, do Thou employ Thine own power and infinite goodness to annihilate me and establish Thyself in me. to destroy in me my self-love, my own will, my own mind, my pride, and all my passions, sentiments and inclinations, in Order to establish Thy holy love and make it reign in me, together with Thy divine spirit, Thy most deep humility and all Thy blessed virtues.

"And also annihilate in me all attachments to creatures, and erase me from the minds and hearts of all creatures. Establish Thyself in their place and in mine, so that men may no longer see, esteem, desire, seek or love anything else but Thee, and that men may speak of Thee only, and do nothing except for Thee. Thus mayest Thou be all and do all in all things, to love and glorify Thy Father and Thyself in us and for us, with a love and glory such as He and Thou deserve."

PROPER USE OF CONSOLATIONS AND AFFLICTIONS

XXX111. PROPER USE OF SPIRITUAL CONSOLATIONS.

The life of the Son of God on earth included two contrasting states: a state of consolation and joy, and a state of affliction and suffering. In the sublime heights of His divine soul He rejoiced in all eternal delight and contentment, but in the depths of His human soul and in His body, He endured all kinds of bitterness and pain. So also the life of His servants and members, being a continuation and imitation of His own, is ever a mixture of joy and sadness, of consolation and affliction. The Son of God imparted divine accomplishment to both these opposing states and glorified His Eternal Father just as much in one as in the other; therefore, you must likewise study how to make a holy use of them, so as to give God all the glory He requires of you, that you may be able to say with David, the holy king: I will bless the Lord at all times, his praise shall be always in my mouth" (Ps. 32,2).

It is for this reason that I discuss, at this point, the use you should make of sorrow and consolation, if you are to be faithful to God and glorify Him in times of joy and affliction.

Every saintly writer who has treated of the matter teaches that you should not set much store by consolations, whatever they may be, whether interior or exterior. You should not desire them, nor ask for them when they are wanting in you, nor fear to lose them when they are present, nor consider yourself better than other souls on account of your fine thoughts, your great lights, your various sensible feelings of devotion, your inner sweetness or tears or other such manifestations; for you are not in this world to enjoy yourself but to suffer. The state of bliss is reserved for heaven and the state of suffering is assigned to this earth, out of homage to the sufferings borne here below by the God of earth and heaven.

'Nevertheless, when God is pleased to grant you consolations, you must not reject or despise them, lest you become guilty of pride or presumption. Indeed, your sole concern should be to use them profitably and to direct all things to the service of God as follows:

1. You must fully humiliate yourself before God, recognizing that you are most unworthy of any grace or consolation. You must remember that He is treating you as weak and imperfect creatures, as little children not yet able to eat solid food, or to stand on their own feet, but needing to be fed with milk and carried in protecting arms, without which care they would perish.

2. Your self-love must not be allowed to feast on these spiritual tastes and feelings, nor is your mind to relax and rest in them at ease. Rather, you must trace these joys to their source, and give them back to Him who favored you with them; that is, refer them entirely to God, since He is the principle of all consolation, and He alone is worthy to be enjoyed. Protest before Him that you desire no pleasure but His pleasure and that, with the help of His grace, you are ready to serve Him forever for love of Him, without seeking or claiming any consolation or reward.

3. You should place all your good thoughts, sentiments and consolations in the hands of Jesus Christ, and beg Him to turn them to whatever use He designs for His glory. You should direct them to the advantage of God, using them as means to spur you on to a more ardent love, and a more courageous and loyal service of One who treats you with such gentleness and love, after you have so often deserved to be stripped of all His graces and utterly abandoned by Him.

XXXIV. HOLY USE OF SPIRITUAL DRYNESS AND AFFLICTIONS.

Since the whole life of our Father and Head, our Lord Jesus Christ, was filled with labors, bitterness and pain, both inward and outward, it is scarcely reasonable that His children and members should travel by any other road but His. He is giving you a great grace, so you cannot murmur in complaint when He gives you what He took for Himself and makes you worthy to drink with Him from the chalice, that chalice of suffering given Him by the Eternal Father with so much love, which He presents to you with equal love. This is His way of showing you more love and giving you unmistakable indications that your trifling services are pleasing in His sight. Do you not hear His Apostle exclaim that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (1 Tim. 3, 12); and the Angel Raphael saying to holy Tobias: "Because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary (note well this word) that temptation should prove thee" (Tob. 12, 13); and the Holy Ghost speaking to us as follows, in Ecclesiasticus: "Son, when thou comest to the service of God, stand in justice and in fear, and prepare thy soul for temptation. Humble thy heart, and endure: incline thy ear, and receive the words of understanding: and make not haste in the time of clouds. Wait on God with patience: join thyself to God, and endure, that thy life may be increased in the latter end. Take all that shall be brought upon thee: and in thy Sorrow endure, and in thy humiliation keep patience. For gold and silver are tried in the fire, but acceptable men in the furnace of humiliation" (Eccli. 2, 1-6). These words are divinely inspired and teach you that real piety and devotion are always accompanied by, some trial Or afflictions, either from the world, or the devil, or else from God Himself, who sometimes seems to withdraw from souls who love Him, in order to test and prove their fidelity.

Therefore, do not be deceived into imagining that the paths of God are nothing but roses and delights. You will find there many thorns and labors. But whatever happens, always faithfully love Our Lord, and His love will turn the gall into honey and the bitterness into sweetness. Do better still: resolve to seek all your joy and satisfaction, as long as you are in this life, in crosses and sufferings. They are the means by which you may give God more glory and prove that you love Him, and in which your Father and Bridegroom, your Head, Jesus Christ, took all His joy and pleasure while in this world, since the Holy Ghost calls the day of His Passion, "the day of the joy of his heart" (Cant. 3, 11).

Such is the use you should make of every kind of bodily or spiritual affliction. It is not my intention, however, to speak in this place of outward and bodily afflictions, since I am reserving that for the sixth part of this book, where you will find an exercise that will help you to bear those trials with true Christian spirit. For the moment, I should like to set before you the way to make use of inward and spiritual afflictions, such as dryness, sorrows, annoyances, fears and troubles within yourself, feelings of distaste for the things of God, and all the other sufferings of the spirit that come upon souls devoted to the service of God. It is a matter of great importance to know how to use these things well and so remain faithful to God. Here is the way to set about doing so:

1. Adore Jesus in the sufferings, privations, humiliations, anxieties, sorrows and desolations which He bore in His holy soul, according to His own words: "My soul is filled with evils" (Ps. 87, 4); "now is my soul troubled" (John 12, 27); "my soul is sorrowful even unto death" (Matt. 26, 38). Adore the dispositions of His divine soul in this state of trial and the good use He made of it for the glory of His Father. Give yourself to Him to enter into the same dispositions and to employ your sufferings with merit even as He did. Offer them to Him in honor of His sufferings. Beg Him to unite your afflictions with His own, to bless and sanctify them by His own and to supply for your defects, and on your behalf, employ them as He made use of His own sufferings for His Father's glory.

2. Do not waste energy trying to discover, in detail, the reason for the state in which you find yourself, or in scrutinizing your sins. Humble yourself in face of all your faults and infidelities as a whole, and adore God's justice, offering yourself to Him to suffer all the pains ordained by His holy will, in homage to His justice, and considering yourself most unworthy that this divine justice should be exercised upon you. You must admit that the least of your sins deserves that you should be utterly forsaken by God. When you are in the state of dryness and distaste with respect to the things of God, and you can scarcely think of God or pray except with a thousand distractions, you ought to remember that you are most unworthy of any grace or consolation, and that Our Lord is indeed doing you a great favor when He permits you to live. You have most often deserved to share the lot of the damned, who will not be able for all eternity to entertain any thoughts but those of blasphemy and horror for God. So you must deeply humble yourself before God.

As a matter of fact, that is the intention God has in mind for you at such moments, and that is what He expects. He wants you to recognize what you are of yourself and to develop a vivid, immediate and profound knowledge and consciousness of your own nothingness, so that, when He gives you some helpful thought or pious inspiration or some other grace, your pride and self-love may not claim it as your own, ascribed to your own effort, vigilance and cooperation but rather refer it to Him, recognizing that the inspiration comes, not from yourself, but from His mercy alone. Thus you may place all your trust in His goodness alone.

3. Above all, never let yourself be carried away by sorrow and discouragement. Instead rejoice in three special considerations:

(1) That Jesus is always Jesus, always God, always great and worthy of love, always in the same unchanging state of glory, joy and contentment, and there is nothing capable of lessening His joy and bliss. "Scitote quoniam Dominus ipse est Deus" (Ps. 99, 3). Say to Him: "O Jesus, it is enough for me, merely to know that Thou art ever Jesus! O Jesus, be Jesus forever, and I will always be happy, no matter what happens to me!"

(2) Be glad that Jesus is your God, that He is all yours and that you belong to so good and so lovable a Lord, remembering what the prophet David says: Beatus populus cuius Dominus ejus, "Happy is that people whose God is the Lord" (Ps. 143, 15).

(3) Be glad in the knowledge that now you can serve Our Lord with more purity of intention and show Him that you love Him in truth, for love of Himself alone and not for the consolations He has given already. As an effective demonstration of the fidelity and purity of your love for Him, take care to perform your every activity with all possible purity and perfection. The more coldness, tepidity and weakness you feel in yourself, the more should you have recourse to Him Who is your strength and your all, giving yourself to Him yet more earnestly and lifting up your mind to Him more frequently. Continue to make constant acts of love for Him, paying no attention to the fact that you may be making them with less than your usual consolation and fervor. After all, what difference does it make whether you are satisfied or not, provided your Jesus is satisfied? As a matter of fact, it often happens that the acts we make while in a state of dryness and spiritual desolation are more pleasing and agreeable to Him, provided we strive to make them with a pure intention of honoring Him, than the things we do with much fervor and sensible devotion. For the latter are generally accompanied by self-love, while the former are more purified. Finally, do not become discouraged over the failings and weaknesses of which you may be guilty in this state; humble yourself before Our Lord, begging Him to repair your faults in His great mercy, and have great confidence that He will do so in His goodness. Above all, keep constantly alive in yourself an intent purpose and powerful resolution to serve and love Him perfectly and to be faithful to Him, no matter what happens, until your life's last breath, ever trusting in Him to give you that grace in His great kindness, regardless of all your infidelities.

SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM

XXXV. MARTYRDOM, THE PERFECTION AND FULFILMENT OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SANCTITY.

The culmination and perfection of Christian life is holy martyrdom. The grace of martyrdom is the most powerful miracle that God can possibly work in Christian souls, and to suffer martyrdom for His sake is the greatest and most magnificent thing a Christian can achieve for God.

This immeasurable favor, conferred by Jesus Christ on chosen souls by perfecting their resemblance to Him not only in life but in their very death, and making them worthy to die for Him even as He died for His Father and for them, is the most excellent favor He can grant to those whom He loves with the most special love. Nowhere is the astounding power of His divine love more evident than in the lives of the holy martyrs. Among all the saints, the blessed martyrs command the greatest admiration in the presence of God. So you see that all the greatest saints of Paradise, such as St. John the Baptist and the Apostles, are martyrs. They are Christ's own saints. He Himself calls them that, speaking through the oracle of His Church, Sancti mei, "My saints" (Brev. Rom. Corn, mart. 8 resp.). Although each and everyone of the saints belongs to Jesus, the holy martyrs belong to Him in an entirely unique and special manner, because they lived and died for Him. For that reason, He shows them extraordinary love and promises them the greatest and most beneficent rewards.

1. Speaking by the voice of Holy Church, He promises that He will give them a special, prominent place in His Father's Kingdom: Dabo Sanctis meis locum nominatum in regno. Patris mei (Brev. Rom., Com. mart. 2 noct., 1 ant.).

2. He says that He will give them to eat of the tree of life which is in the Paradise of His God, namely, Himself, as the learned doctors explain. This is equivalent to saying: You have lost a human and temporal life for Me, I will give you being that is eternal and divine. For I will make you live by my life, and I myself will be your life in eternity.

3. He declares that He will give them hidden manna: Vincenti dabo manna absconditum (APOC. 2, 17). What else is this hidden manna but the divine love which reigns perfectly in the hearts of the holy martyrs? What is it but the surpassing love that, even on earth, transforms the bitterness of tortures and the hell of torments into a paradise of incredible sweetness and delight, and in heaven heaps upon them eternal and unspeakable joys, in exchange for the brief sufferings they have withstood on this earth?

4. He assures them that He will give them power over all nations, just as He received it from His Father, and such great power that they will be able to shatter the nations as the potter breaks the vessel he has made (Apoc. 2, 26-28). In other words, He will make them reign and dominate over the whole universe; He will set them up at His right hand as judges of the whole world: judicabunt nationes et dominabuntur populis (Wis. 3, 8). With Him, they shall judge and condemn the wicked on the day of reckoning.

5. He promises to invest them with His colors, namely, white and red, the colors of the King of martyrs, according to the words of the divine spouse: "My beloved is both white and ruddy" (Cant. 5, 10). These are also the colors of the martyrs, for they wear their Master's livery, and are garbed in white. "They have washed their robes and have made them white in the blood of the Lamb," says Holy Scripture (Apoc. 7, 14). "They shall walk with Me in white," says the Son of God, and "he that shall overcome, shall thus be clothed in white garments" (Apoc. 3, 4-5), because martyrdom is a fiery baptism that purges every kind of sin and clothes the souls of the martyrs in undying light and glory. They are also clad in red (rubri sanguine fluido, sings Holy Church), which signifies their flowing blood as well as the burning love with which they shed it.

6. Christ tells the martyrs that He will write upon them the name of His God, and of His Father, and the name of the city of His God (Apoc. 3, 12), which means, as the pious and learned Rupert explains, that they shall be Christ's father and mother; He shall look upon them and treat them as such. For he said: "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father, he is . . . my mother" (Matt. 12, 50). Martyrdom represents the most perfect operation and fulfilment of the will of God. Therefore, the Son of God, speaking of His Father and the holy martyrs, says that He has marvelously wrought all that He willed in them: Sanctis qui sunt in terra ejus, mirificavit omnes voluntates meas in eis. (Ps. 15, 3). He says, moreover, that "He will write also upon them a new name" (Apoc. 3, 12), which is Jesus. The holy martyrs imitated Jesus most perfectly in His life and in His death, while they were on earth, therefore they shall so admirably resemble Him in heaven as to be called Jesus, and even actually to be Jesus, in a certain and wonderful manner, through a perfect resemblance and a wondrous transformation.

7. He gives them His word: I will give to sit with me in my throne, as I . . . am set down with my Father in His throne" (Apoc. 3, 21). And Holy Church, on the feast of every martyr, shows Him to us speaking thus to His Father: Volo, Pater, ut ubi ego sum, illic sit et minister meus. I will, O My Father, that where I am My servant should also be" (Brev. Rom., Corn. mart., 5 ant. ad Laudes), that is, he should dwell and rest with Me in Thy bosom and Thy fatherly heart. I am well aware that most of those promises made to the martyrs are also addressed to the other ut they are nevertheless addressed to the martyrs in token of a most special recompense, because they are Christ's own saints, who bear His stamp and Godly character, saints whom He loves with a particular love, and to whom He gives extraordinary privileges.

O bounty! O love! O excessive love and goodness of Jesus for His holy martyrs! O Bountiful Jesus, how blessed are they whom Thou dost love and who love Thee in return! O how blessed are they who bear, in themselves a perfect image of Thy holy life and of Thy most loving death! How blessed are they who are called the wedding feast Of the Lamb: Beati qui ad coenam nuptiarum Agni Vocati sunt (Apoc. 19, 9). How blessed are they who wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb: Beati qui lavant stolas suas in sanguine Agni (Apoc. 22, 14). How blessed are they who want no life on earth, except to spend it all for the glory, and sacrifice it for the love of this most sweet Lamb, so worthy to be loved! And all the more so, because, to borrow the words of the Holy Ghost, this is the end of all fulfilment and perfection, the final and perfect consummation of all sanctity (John 15, 13); because man can do nothing greater for His God than to sacrifice to Him what he holds most dear, that is, his blood and his life, and to die for Him (St. Thomas, Summa, 2<sup>a</sup> ae, Q. 124, a. 3).

There are, however, various kinds of martyrs and martyrdoms. Those who are truly disposed and willing to die for our Saviour are martyrs before God in a certain sense, even though they may not actually die for Him. St. Cyprian affirms that those who are ready to die rather than offend Almighty God are also martyrs in a certain sense. St. Isidore says, furthermore, that to mortify the flesh and the passions, to resist unruly appetites and to persevere to the end in self-abandonment for love of Our Lord is likewise a kind of martyrdom. And, according to St. Gregory the Great, if, for pure and sacrificing love of Christ, one patiently suffers the privations and miseries of poverty, starvation, deformity or any other sore affliction; or else meekly endures insults, calumny and persecution, not returning evil for evil, but blessing those who harm him by hurtful words, and loving those who hate him, this also is a species of martyrdom.

But true martyrdom consists not only in suffering, but in loss of life. Consequently, death belongs to the essence and nature of full and perfect martyrdom. This means that it is necessary to die, and to die for Jesus Christ, if one is to be a real martyr, in the sense in which the word martyr is taken by Holy Church.

It is true that one may perform some action for love of Our Lord, or suffer for Him some pain which should in the ordinary course of events, cause death; yet he is miraculously preserved by the power of God. In this case, God, who delivered Him from the death he was ready to suffer, will not deprive him of a martyr's crown, even though he may live long and die a natural death, provided he persevere until the end in the grace and love of the God of martyrs. Witness St. John the Evangelist, St. Thecla, the first of her sex to suffer martyrdom for Christ, St. Felix of Nola, and others honored by the Church as true martyrs, although they did not die in the clutches of the tyrants, or in the torments they underwent for Our Lord. In fact, they lived for many years afterwards and died ordinary deaths, having been preserved by a divine and extraordinary power from the death they were ready to endure for Jesus Christ.

But apart from such miraculous intervention preventing the occurrence of death, if one is to be a true martyr, he must die, and die for Our Lord Himself, or for the honor of His mysteries and sacraments, in defense of the Church, or in support of an article of Faith or a point of morals, or to avoid yielding to sin because it offends Him, or by the fact of loving Him so ardently that the sacred violence of His divine love actually causes death.

St. Thomas Aquinas, the angelic doctor, assures us that any act whatsoever, even if it be merely human and natural, can make us martyrs if referred to the glory of God and done for His love, and actually does so, if it happens to bring about our death (Summa, 2<sup>a</sup> 2<sup>ae</sup>, Q. 124, a. 5, ad 3).

For this reason, I advise and urge you to make a point of lifting up your heart to Jesus at the commencement of your actions, offering them to Him and affirming that you desire to do these things for His love and His glory. If the spiritual or bodily help you give to the sick, for instance, causes you to contract a mortal illness, and if you really gave your services or performed your duty to the sick out of love for Our Lord, you will share in the glory of the holy martyrs who are in heaven. And much more will this be true if you love Him with such strong and burning love that the intensity and power of holy love end by consuming your bodily life. This kind of death is a super-martyrdom, the noblest and holiest of all martyrdom. This is the martyrdom of the Mother of Fair Love, the most holy Virgin, Mother of God. This is the martyrdom of great St. Joseph, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Theresa, St. Catherine of Genoa, and many other saints. It is even the martyrdom of Jesus, for He died not only in love and for love, but also from the excess and power of His love.

XXXVI. SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM.

All Christians, irrespective of their state in life, ought always to be prepared to suffer martyrdom for our Lord Jesus Christ. Several reasons oblige them to live in the dispositions and spirit of martyrdom.

1. They belong to Jesus Christ by an infinite number of bonds. They are bound to live for Him alone; therefore, they are bound also to die for Him, according to the words of St. Paul: "None of us liveth to himself; and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord. Therefore, whether we live, or whether we die, we are the Lord's. For to this end Christ died and rose again; that he might be Lord of the dead and of the living" (Rom. 14, 7-10).

2. Since God gave us life and being for His glory only, we are bound to glorify Him as perfectly as possible, by sacrificing to Him our being and our life in homage to His life and His supreme being, and by proclaiming thus that He alone is worthy to be and to live, and that every other life should be immolated at the feet of His sovereign and undying life.

3. God commands us to love Him with our whole heart, our whole soul and our whole strength, that is, with the most perfect love possible to us. Now if we are to love Him so, we must love Him to the extent of shedding our blood and laying down our life for Him. This is the highest degree of love, as the Son of God tells us: "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15, 13).

4. From the very moment of His Incarnation, Our Lord had a most intense desire to shed His blood and to die for His Father's glory and our love; yet He was unable, at that time, to fulfil His desire by Himself, because the time appointed by His Father's ordinance had not yet come. SO He chose the Holy Innocents as martyrs, and accomplished, through them, His own desire, and, in a certain manner, died in them. So also ever since He rose from the dead and ascended into Heaven, He has always kept the infinite desire to suffer and die for His Father's glory and our love. He can no longer suffer nor can He die a second death; nevertheless, He still desires to suffer and die in His members, and seeks everywhere for souls in whom He can accomplish this desire. Hence, if we have any zeal at all for the accomplishment of His divine plans, we ought to offer ourselves to Him as candidates for His renewed martyrdom that He may find in us a means to quench that burning thirst in the fulfilment once more of His yearning to shed His blood and die for love of His Father.

5. As I have said, every Christian made a solemn promise at baptism to adhere to Jesus Christ, to follow and imitate Him and consequently to be victims consecrated and sacrificed to His glory. This pledge obliges us to follow and imitate Him in His death as well as in His life, and to be ever prepared to sacrifice our lives and all that we have, according to these holy words: "Because for thy sake we are killed all the day long: we are counted as sheep for the slaughter" (PS. 43, 22).

6. Jesus Christ is our Head and we are His members. We must live by His life, so, too, we are also obliged to die His death, since it is evident that the members must necessarily live and die by the life and death of their head, as St. Paul says: "Always bearing about in our body the mortification of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our bodies~that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our mortal flesh" (11 Cor. 4, 10-11).

7. But, above all, the most valid and compelling reason that imposes upon us the obligation to become martyrs is the most agonizing martyrdom suffered by our Lord Jesus Christ on the Cross, for love of us.

Our most lovable Saviour was not content merely to spend His whole life for our sake, but also willed to die for our love the cruellest and most ignominious death in the history of the world. He laid down an infinitely precious life, one moment of which was worth more than all the lives of angels and men. He would be ready, if necessary, to die over again a thousand times. He remains continually present > upon our altars both as host and victim, and there He is and will be immolated every day and every hour, until the Day of Judgment, as often as the divine sacrifice of the altar, bloodless and without pain, shall be celebrated until the end of time.

96- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

O what goodness, what love! I am not surprised that three hundred thousand martyrs shed their blood and gave up their life for Jesus Christ. Christ Himself died for all men; surely, therefore, all men should die for Him. No wonder the holy martyrs, and all those to whom Christ has given to know and feel the holy fire of that divine love, which nailed Him to the Cross, possessed so burning a thirst and so flaming a desire to suffer and to die for love of Him. No wonder that so many glorious saints have actually suffered such frightful torments, with so much happiness and joy that the executioners grew weary of inflicting tortures before they wearied of enduring them, while their cruellest torments were nothing to them in the face of their insatiable desire to suffer for Jesus Christ. What does make me wonder is the coldness of our love for so lovable a Saviour, and what cowards we are in the presence of the least of sufferings! How strong is our attachment to so wretched and trivial a thing as earthly life, and how far we are from desiring to sacrifice it for Him Who sacrificed so noble and precious a life for us!

What truth can there be in the claim that we are Christians and adore a crucified God, a God agonizing and dying upon a Cross, a God who for love of us gives up so noble and excellent a life, a God who sacrifices Himself every day, before our eyes upon our altars for our salvation, if we are not ready to sacrifice to Him all that we hold dearest in the world, and even life itself, which in any case belongs to Him by all rights? Surely we are not Christians if we are not in these dispositions. Therefore I say, and this will immediately be clear to anyone who gives a little thought to the truths I have outlined, that all Christians ought to be martyrs, if not in actual fact, at least in intention and in will. So true is this, that if they are not martyrs of Jesus Christ, they will be martyrs of Satan.

Choose whichever of the two you love more. If you live under the tyranny of sin, you will be a martyr to your self-love and your passions, and consequently a martyr of the devil. But if you desire to be a martyr of Jesus Christ, you must strive to live in the spirit of martyrdom.

What is the spirit of martyrdom? It is a spirit that has five excellent attributes:

SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM

1. It is the spirit of strength and constancy which fears only God and sin, and cannot be shaken or overthrown, either by promises or threats, by persuasion or violence.

2. It is the spirit of deepest humility, which feels only horror for the vain glory and publicity of the world, and loves contempt and humiliations.

3. It is the spirit of self-mistrust and of most firm confidence in Jesus Christ our Lord, our Strength, in whom all things can be done.

4. It is the spirit of perfect detachment from the world and everything that is in the world. Those who are to sacrifice their lives to God must also sacrifice to Him all else besides.

5. It is the spirit of most burning love for our Lord Jesus Christ, who leads those animated by this spirit to do all and suffer all for love of Him, who did and suffered all for them. It so inflames them that, for love of Him, they consider mortification and suffering to be a paradise of joys, to be sought and desired while they avoid and detest the pleasures of this world as much as they would hell itself.

That is the spirit of martyrdom. Implore Our Lord, who is the King of Martyrs, to fill you with this spirit. Pray to the Queen of Martyrs, and all the martyrs, too, that they may obtain this spirit for you from the Son of God, by their holy prayers. Cultivate a particular devotion to the saintly martyrs. Make a point, also, of praying for all those who will have to suffer martyrdom, in order that God may grant them the spirit and grace of martyrdom. Pray especially for those who will have to suffer the persecution of antichrist at the end of the world, for it will be the most cruel and horrible of all persecutions.

Finally, strive to develop within yourself, by imitation, a perfect image of the lives of the holy martyrs and, what is more, the life of the King and the Queen of martyrs, Jesus and Mary, so that they may make you worthy to resemble them in death.

XXXVII. PRAYER TO JESUS, KING OF MARTYRS.

O Jesus, most worthy to be loved, prostrate at Thy feet in the very depth of my nothingness and in union with all the humility, devotion and love in heaven and on earth, I adore, glorify and bless Thee as the first and sovereign martyr of Thy Eternal Father, and King of all the martyrs. I adore and bless Thee in the consummate martyrdom Thou didst suffer in Thy Passion on the Cross. I honor and reverence Thee in the most dolorous martyrdom Thy most holy Mother sustained at the foot of Thy Cross, where her pure soul was pierced with the sword of anguish, where she suffered, in her mother's heart, the same martyrdom Thou didst endure in Thy sacred body. So, also, do I praise and magnify Thee in the various forms of martyrdom suffered by Thy saints, who endured so many and so great torments for love of Thee.

98 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

I give Thee a thousand thanks for the great glory which Thou didst give to the Heavenly Father and to Thyself by these martyrdoms which Thou didst undergo in Thyself, in Thy most Blessed Mother and in Thy saints. I offer Thee all the love, glory and praises which were rendered unto Thee by Thy most holy Mother and Thy saints in their martyrdom. What joy for our hearts to contemplate the infinite glory accorded to the Omnipotent Father by Thy sufferings and death, and the glory Thy Heavenly Father didst give to Thee because of the death and torments Thou didst suffer for Him and for us! What consolation to behold Thee so loved and glorified by Thy holy martyrs, and to see them so glorified and so loved by Thee and in Thee!

O Jesus, object of all desires, Thou art no longer able to suffer or to die in Thyself; yet Thou dost still possess a most great desire to suffer until the end of the world in Thy members, to glorify Thy Father by the way of suffering and death, even until the end of time. Thou dost everywhere seek for souls in whom Thou mayest accomplish Thy designs. Behold us, O good Jesus, who now offer ourselves to Thee with all Our heart, indeed, with a thousand hearts and a thousand wills, that Thou mayest design to make use of us for that end. Behold my body is ready, with Thy grace, to suffer all kinds of tortures for the accomplishment of Thy desire, so that Thy most burning thirst to suffer and to die in Thy members, for love of Thy Father, may be somewhat slaked in us.

O Most Adorable Jesus, since Thou hast created us for Thy glory

SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM

alone, grant that we may glorify Thee in the most perfect manner possible to us, by dying for Thy honor.

O sole object of all our love, Thou dost command us to love Thee with our whole heart, our whole soul and our whole strength. This is what we desire, O Lord, and to that end, we long to shed our blood and sacrifice our life for Thy love. But this will never be more than a wish, unless Thou, in Thy great mercy, dost fulfil the desire Thou hast been pleased to impart to us.

O Most Benign Jesus, since in an excess of admirable goodness Thou art pleased to be our Head, and to let us be Thy members, grant by that same goodness that we may live by the life of our Head and die by His death.

Such is our obligation, since Thou hast made us one body with Thyself by holy Baptism, in which Thou didst make us solemnly promise to adhere unto Thee and to follow Thee everywhere, and consequently, to imitate Thee by being victims destined to sacrifice for Thy glory. Give us, then, the grace to fulfil perfectly this holy, sacred promise and profession. Grant that we may follow Thee in Thy life and in Thy death, and that we may be immolated, like Thee, for Thy love and for Thy Father's glory.

O Thou, the well-beloved of our souls, when we contemplate Thee on the Cross, we see Thy most holy body all torn with wounds and anguish and drenched with blood from head to foot. Alas, O my Saviour, behold how Thou art in the utmost extremity of pain, anguish and agony. Behold Thee dying the most cruel and shameful of all deaths. Not satisfied with that, behold Thee again, as victim upon our altars, where Thou art sacrificed every day and every hour, to prove that Thou art yet ready to suffer and die a thousand times for love of us, most wretched and unworthy creatures.

Good Jesus, what return shall we make to Thee, what shall we suffer for love of Thee? It is not enough, no, not enough to have but one body to immolate for One who immolated so holy and noble a body for us. It is not enough to have but one life to lose for One who surrendered, on our behalf, a life of which one single moment was worth more than all the lives of men and angels. It is not enough to die but once for Him who died a death of infinite merit for love of us. Surely, dear Jesus, if we had all the human bodies that ever were or shall be, we would most willingly, with Thy grace, deliver them up and abandon them to every kind of torment for Thy sake. And if we had all the lives of men and angels, with how glad a heart would we not offer them to be sacrificed to Thy glory? Would it were possible to die as often, for Thy love, as there are moments of time in all past, present and future centuries! How happy would we then esteem ourselves!

Thou one and only love of our hearts, who will grant us to behold ourselves redeemed with our own blood and filled with wounds and suffering for love of Thee, as Thou wast Once for love of us? If only we might one day see ourselves in this enviable state, how we would then praise and bless Thee! Oh! blessed be that day, yes, a thousand times blessed, in which Thou shalt accomplish the extreme desire to be sacrificed for Thy pure love! Come fires, flames, Swords, guns, gibbets, gehennas! Come all things that confound us, come all contempt and shame! Come all your torments, all rage and cruelty of men and devils, earth and hell, come upon us! We defy you, if only we may ever love our most lovable Jesus; if only we may love Him by our death, and die for His love, in order to love and bless Him forever in eternity!

Well we know, O Good Jesus, that of ourselves we do not have the power to endure the least suffering in the world. Yet we have the greatest confidence that in Thy infinite goodness Thou wilt be our strength and enable us to accomplish all things. We know that we are most unworthy of such great things. Since Thou hast died for us, Thou art most worthy that we should die for Thee, and Thou hast infinite goodness and power to make us worthy of this high achievement.

This, then, is what we beg of Thee most humbly and most urgently, O Most Kind Jesus, by the burning love that compelled Thee to die for us On the Cross, by that Precious Blood which Thou didst shed, by that most painful death which Thou didst suffer, by the very great love which Thou hast for all Thy holy martyrs, and by their abounding love for Thee, in a word, by everything that Thou dost treasure in heaven and on earth.

SPIRIT OF MARTYRDOM

Make us worthy of this mercy, by Thy great goodness, for love of Thyself and for the glory of Thy Holy Name. To that end grant us now, we beseech Thee, the spirit of martyrdom with the grace and dispositions required for it. Make us strong and firm to do and suffer all things with courage for Thy love, fearless of all the world except Thee and Thy displeasure. Let us have no reliance on our strength, nor on anything that is of ourselves; but let all our trust be in Thy goodness only. Make us abhor worldly glory, ambitions and delights, as we abhor hell; and let us seek all our happiness in contempt, abjection, labors and persecutions. Make us live in complete unawareness and oblivion of the world and in detachment from ourselves and all worldly things. Above all, may we be so consumed by the fire of Thy holy love that it may be our very life's breath, and that we may continually burn with a flaming desire to love Thee ever more and more, and to, do and suffer yet greater things, for Thy pure love. May our life be consumed at last in the flames of that divine love!

O Good Jesus, deeply implant in us these divine characteristics of the spirit Of martyrdom, and imprint them also upon all whom Thou hast chosen from all eternity to be numbered among the ranks of the holy martyrs, especially those who will have to suffer and die for Thee in the last, terrible persecution of antichrist.

O Mother of Jesus, Queen of martyrs, and O you holy martyrs of Jesus, we implore you to pray that, in His infinite goodness, He may fulfil these things in us; for His glory alone and for purest love of Him.

Finally, O Jesus Christ, most worthy of all love, grant, we beseech Thee, that we may live a life of perfect imitation of Thy most holy life, of Thy Blessed Mother and of the glorious martyrs, so that we may deserve to resemble Thee and them in death as well as in life, and to sing forever in their company with Thee the most sweet canticle of Thy holy praise and Thy divine love.

XXXVIII. PRAYER IN HONOR OF ALL THE MARTYRS.

PART TWO

Some Devotional Exercises Necessary to, Live a Christian and Saintly Life and to Make Jesus Reign in Your Soul

Part Two

SOME DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES NECESSARY TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

MORNING EXERCISE

1. EVERYTHING THAT You Do SHOULD BEGIN AND END WITH JESUS.

Jesus, the Only Son of God and the Only Son of Mary, is, to use the words of St. Paul, "the author and finisher of faith" (Heb. 12, 2), and of Christian piety. He is, to quote His own words, "Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end" (APOC. 223 13) of all things. It is, therefore, most just that He should be the beginning and the end of your whole life, of every year, of every month, of every week, and of every day of your life and of every one of your devotional exercises. For this reason you ought to have consecrated the beginning of your life to Him, if you had been gifted with the use of reason at that time; and you earnestly seek to end it in His grace and in the exercise of His love. So, if you wish to obtain this favor from His goodness, you should take care to consecrate to Him by some special exercise of piety and love the beginning and end of each year, of each month, of each week, and especially of each day.

Consequently, it is a matter of great importance to begin and to end each day well; but especially to begin it well by fitting your mind first thing in the morning with good thoughts and by offering up your first actions to Our Lord, because on this depends the blessing of the Test of the day.

11. WHAT YOU SHOULD DO UPON WAKING UP IN THE MORNING.

As soon as you awake in the morning, raise your eyes to heaven and your heart to Jesus, thus consecrating to Him the first use that you make of your sense and the first thoughts and affections of your mind and your heart.

Let your first words be the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary: Jesus, Maria. "O Jesus! O Mary, Mother of Jesus! O Good Jesus, I give Thee my heart forever. O Mary, Mother of Jesus, I give thee my heart; give it, I beseech thee, to thy Son. 7---Veni, Domine Jesu. "Come, Lord Jesus, come into my mind and my heart to possess and fill me entirely. O Jesus, be Jesus to me!"

Let your first exterior action be the Sign of the Cross: "In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," at the same time giving yourself with your whole heart to the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost in order that they may possess you entirely.

When the time to rise has come, recall to mind the very great love with which at the moment of His Incarnation the Son of God came forth from the bosom of His Father—a place (if one may use the word) full of delights, of repose and of glory. He came down to earth to become subject to our miseries and to take upon Himself our sorrows and afflictions. In honor of this same love and in union with it, get up promptly and courageously saying: Surgam et quaerum quem diligit anima mea. I will arise and seek him whom my soul loveth" (Cant. 3, 2). As you pronounce these words: quem diligit anima mea, "whom my soul loveth," have the desire of pronouncing them, as far as possible, with all the love that is offered to, Jesus both in heaven and on earth.

Then kneel down and adore our Lord Jesus Christ, saying: Adoramus te, Domine Jesu, et benedicimus tibi, et diligimus te ex toto corde nostro, ex tota anima nostra, ex totis viribus nostris. "We adore Thee, Lord Jesus; we bless Thee and we love Thee with our whole heart, with our whole soul, and with all our strength." And in saying these words, desire to say them with all the humility, devotion, and love in heaven and on earth, and on behalf of all the creatures in the universe.

111. WHAT YOU SHOULD Do WHILE DRESSING.

While you are putting On your clothes, to prevent the devil from filling your mind with useless or bad thoughts, fill it with good ones. Remember that by His Incarnation our Lord Jesus Christ put on, like garments, our humanity, our mortality, and all the human miseries and needs to which we are subject; and that He lowered Himself to a condition in which, like you, He had need of clothing; and that He did this all for love of you. Then lift up your heart and speak to Him as follows:

"O Lord Jesus, mayest Thou be blessed and exalted forever, because Thou didst so humble Thyself for love of me. O my Jesus, I offer Thee the action I am now performing, in honor of the action Thou didst perform when Thou didst clothe Thy Divinity in our humanity, and also when Thou didst clothe Thy humanity in garments like these which we put on. I desire to dress myself in the same dispositions and with the same intentions with which Thou didst perform this human act."

Think also of the many poor people who have only rags to cover themselves. They have offended God less than you have. Yet Our Lord, by an excess of His goodness, has given clothing to you rather than to them. With this thought in mind raise your heart and speak to Him thus:

'O my God, I bless Thee a thousand times for all the mercies Thou hast shown in my regard. I beg Thee to provide for all the needs of the poor. And I also beg that, just as Thou hast given me clothing for my body, Thou mayest also clothe my soul with Thy own self, that is, with Thy spirit and Thy love, Thy charity, humility, meekness, patience, obedience, and all Thy other virtues."

1V. YOUR WHOLE LIFE BELONGS TO JESUS AND OUGHT TO BE CONSECRATED To His GLORY AND EMPLOYED FOR IT ALONE.

Your whole life, with everything that pertains to it and depends upon it, belongs to Jesus by reason of five general claims which include a countless number of special ones.

1. Jesus is your Creator, who gives you life, who impresses His image and likeness upon your soul. Because of this, your life belongs to Him absolutely and universally no matter what you do, and must be continually referred to Him as the image of its prototype.

2. He is your Preserver, who sustains you each moment in your being, and carries you incessantly in His arms with more care and love than a mother carrying her tiny child.

3. He is the Son Of the Heavenly Father, who has given Him from all eternity, and still gives Him all things as a whole, and likewise each person individually.

4. He is your Redeemer, who has delivered you from the slavery of Satan and sin and bought you at the price of His Precious Blood. He has, therefore, purchased everything that is in you, your entire life, your time, your thoughts, words, and deeds, all the powers of your body and soul, as well as all external things that surround you in the world. By His death on the Cross He has acquired for you not only the graces necessary for the sanctification of your souls but also the things needed for the conservation of your bodies. Because of your sins you should have no right to walk upon the earth, to breathe the air, to eat a morsel of bread, to drink a drop of water, nor to use anything in this world, unless Jesus had acquired that right for you by His blood and His death. All that is in you, therefore, and all your use of things outside of you, belong to Jesus and must be employed only for Him, as beings which He has acquired at the price of His blood and His life.

5. Jesus Christ has given you all that He has and all that He is. He has given you His Father as your Father, by making you sons of His own Father. He has given you His Holy Spirit to teach you, to direct you and to lead you in all things. He has given you His holy Mother to be your Mother. He has given you His angels and saints to be your protectors and intercessors. He has given you all the other countless beings that exist in heaven and on earth for your use and to fill your needs. He has given you His own Person in the Incarnation. He has given you His whole life, of which He spent not a single moment that was not for your benefit. Nor did He have a single thought, utter a single word, perform one action or even take a single step that was not devoted to your salvation. Finally, He gives you His body and blood in the Blessed Eucharist, as well as His soul and His divinity and all the infinite treasures that are enclosed in His divinity and humanity. He does this every day for all men; and for you as often as you dispose yourself to receive Him.

MORNING EXERCISE

Considering all these countless gifts, you must realize how important it is to give yourself entirely to Him, and to offer and consecrate to Him all the functions and exercises of your life. Indeed, if you had the lives of all the angels and of all the men who have ever existed, now exist and will exist, you would be obliged to spend them in His service, even if He had devoted but one moment of His life to you, since a single moment of His life is worth more than a thousand eternities, if I may use such words, of lives of angels and of men. How great, then, is your obligation to consecrate and expend in His service and for His glory, the short life and the brief time you have on earth!

The first and most important thing to do is to keep yourself with all care in His grace and friendship, fearing and flying from all that might make you lose Him, that is, from every kind of sin. Fly from sin more than the most terrifying things in the world, even death itself. But if by some unhappy chance you fall into sin, rise immediately by means of confession and contrition, of which I shall speak later on. For just as the branches, leaves, flowers, and fruit of a tree belong to the one who owns the trunk of the tree, so also, as long as you belong to Jesus Christ and are united to Him by His grace, all your life, with all that comes from it, and all the acts you may perform that are not evil in themselves, will belong to Him. But in addition, I am going to set before you three other methods, which are very satisfying and very easy to use, by which your whole life may be employed in a far more perfect and holy manner for the love and glory Of Jesus.

V. THREE METHODS BY WHICH YOUR WHOLE LIFE CAN BECOME A CONTINUAL EXERCISE OF PRAISE AND Love.

Over and above what has been said, there are three others things to, be done, if you are to spend your whole life for the glory of Jesus. These things are contained in the morning prayer that follows.

1. Once you are dressed, before you go out of the house or do any other action, go down on your knees and take at least five minutes to adore Jesus, to thank Him and to offer yourself to Him, together with all the acts that you will do during the day, having the intention of performing them all for His glory. The writings of St. Gertrude tell us that Our Lord assured her that he took considerable pleasure in her offering up to Him all her very smallest acts, even every breath she took and every beat of her heart. By virtue of this oblation, every step that you take, every breath that you draw, every beat of your heart, every use that you make of your interior or exterior senses and in general all the actions that you may perform, which are not in themselves evil, will belong to Jesus Christ, and will all be so many acts redounding to His greater glory.

Note that, when I urge you to kneel down each morning in your home to adore our Lord Jesus Christ, to thank Him and offer yourself to Him, I do not mean that these acts are to be made only in the sight of the Son of God and no other. but also in the sight of the Most Holy Trinity, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. This infallibly happens even when you do not expressly intend it. Since Jesus Christ is one with the Father and the Holy Ghost and since the entire Holy Trinity, or, as St. Paul says, the plenitude of the divinity dwells in Christ (Col. 2, 9), it must necessarily follow that to adore and glorify the Father and the Holy Ghost and to offer Jesus all the glory that is given Him in heaven and on earth is to offer that same glory to Father and the Holy Spirit. And when you beg the Father and the Holy Spirit to glorify Jesus, you are supplicating Them to glorify Themselves. This brings me to the second thing that you should do in the morning, if you want your whole life to be an exercise of glorification and love of Jesus, and consequently of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost.

2. Offer up to Our Lord all the love and glory that will be given Him this day in heaven and on earth and unite yourself with all the praises that will be given to Him by His Eternal Father, by Himself, by His Holy Spirit, by His Blessed Mother, by all His angels and saints and by all His creatures. Thus you will be associated with the love and the praise that will continually ascend to Him during that particular day.

3. Pray to the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, the Blessed Virgin Mary, all the angels and saints to glorify and love Jesus for you during this day. They will surely do so, because this is the most agreeable petition you could possibly make to them and the one which they most willingly hear and grant. Thus you will have a special share in the love and glory that Jesus continually receives from those Holy and Divine Persons. And He will receive this glory and love as being rendered, in a certain manner, by you, since it is rendered at your request and insistence.

If you make faithful use of these three practices every morning, then every day of your life and your life as a whole will be a perpetual act of love and glorification of Jesus Christ. If it were possible to find in the world a man so detestable, that he would want all his actions and his every breath to be so many blasphemies against God, and if he also had the intention of uniting himself with all the blasphemies committed on earth and in hell: and if, not satisfied with that, he were to excite and urge all the demons and wicked men to blaspheme for him, is it not true that by reason of his abominable intention, all his acts and his every breath would be blasphemies and all the blasphemies on earth and in hell could be imputed to him? So then, on the other hand, if you use the three practices I have proposed above, it is most certain that by virtue of your holy intention all the acts of your life will be as many acts of praise to God and you will be associated in a special manner in all the honor that is incessantly given to Him on earth and in heaven.

It would also be a good thing, over and above all this, if you were to make, every morning, out of love for Our Lord, an act of acceptance of all the afflictions you may have to bear during the day and also an act of renunciation of all the temptations of the devil and all the feelings of self-love and other passions which may come upon you during the day. These two acts have considerable importance, because a thousand little annoyances occur in the course of the day, and they pass on and you often do not take thought and offer them to God. In the same way many temptations and impulses of self-love creep into your acts without your taking notice of them. By virtue of the first act, however, God will be glorified by all the pains, both of body and soul, which will make themselves felt during the day, if you accept them first thing in the morning out of love for Him. Then, by virtue of the second act, He will give you strength to resist more easily all evil temptations and to destroy more easily all effects of self-love and other vices.

These two acts, together with the three practices that precede them, are all embodied in the following prayer.

VI. MORNING PRAYER TO JESUS.

O Most Lovable Jesus, I fall at Thy feet in the utmost depths of my nothingness. I adore and glorify Thee in the immense extent of Thy spirit, the infinite greatness of Thy love and all the virtues and powers of Thy divinity and humanity. I bless Thee and love Thee in all that Thou art universally, both in Thyself and in all things. I give Thee infinite thanks for Thy care and watchfulness over me during this night. I offer Thee all the honor that has been given Thee during this night in heaven and on earth.

O my Saviour, I offer and consecrate myself entirely and forever to Thee and through Thee to Thy Eternal Father. I offer Thee my body, my soul, my mind, my heart, my life, all the parts of my body, all the powers of my soul, every breath I draw, every throb of my heart and veins, every step I take, every look, every use I make of my senses and in general everything that has been, is and shall be in me. It is my desire that all these things may be consecrated to Thy glory and become so many acts of praise, adoration and love of Thee. Then may it please Thee, O my God, in Thy great power and mercy, to make this be so, in order that everything in me may render to Thee continual honor and homage.

I likewise offer up to Thee, O Most Lovable Jesus, and through Thee to the Blessed Trinity, all the love and glory that will be given Thee today and for all eternity in heaven and on earth. I unite myself to all the praise that ever has been, is now, and ever shall be given to the Father by the Son and the Holy Ghost, to the Son and the Holy Ghost by the Father, and to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost by the Blessed Virgin, by all the angels, all the saints and by all creatures.

O Jesus, adore and love the Father and the Holy Spirit for me.

O Father of Jesus, love and glorify Thy Son Jesus for me.

O Holy Spirit of Jesus, love and glorify Jesus for me.

O Mother of Jesus, bless and love thy Son Jesus for me.

O blessed St. Joseph, O angels of Christ and His saints, adore and love my Saviour for me.

And besides this, I now accept for the love of Thee, O my Lord Jesus, all the annoyances, contradictions, and afflictions, whether of body or of spirit, which may befall me today and during my whole life, offering myself to Thee to suffer everything Thou art pleased that I should suffer for Thy pure glory and good pleasure.

Furthermore, I declare that from now on I shall renounce all the suggestions and temptations of the devil and I disavow and detest all the motions, feelings and effects of pride, of self-love and of all other passions and evil inclinations that are in me.

And I beg Thee, O my Saviour, to imprint in my heart the hatred and horror and fear of sin, which is greater than all the evils in the world. Grant that I may die rather than offend Thee wilfully. Give me the grace to serve Thee today and all the rest of my life, with fidelity and love, meekness, patience, obedience and humility.

VII. ANOTHER MORNING PRAYER TO SANCTIFY ALL YOUR ACTIONS AND TO MAKE THEM PLEASING TO GOD.

O my God, my Creator and Sovereign Lord, since I belong entirely to Thee, so also everything that proceeds from me should belong to Thee. Thou hast created me for Thyself; therefore, it is fitting that I should offer Thee myself and all my acts, which can have no value unless they be referred to Thee. And so do I, Thy truly insignificant creature, now and for all the moments of my life offer Thee myself and all my works, especially those that I am to do today, the good as well as the indifferent, the free as well as the natural acts. In order that they may be more pleasing to Thee, my God, I unite them to all the works of Our Lord and of His most holy Mother, as well as to those of all the souls of the blessed and of just men in heaven and on earth. I consecrate to Thee every step I take, every word, every breath, in short, all my actions, with the intention and the desire of giving Thee infinite glory and of losing Thee with an infinite love.

I offer Thee my heart, my will, my understanding and myself not only in the manner most agreeable to Thee (for this is my intention in each one of my acts), but also with these acts, I refer to Thee the actions of all other creatures, especially those actions that are not offered to Thee. I offer Thee the perfection of all the angels, the virtue of the patriarchs, of the prophets and of all the apostles, the sufferings of the martyrs, the penance of the confessors, the purity of the virgins, the sanctity of all the blessed and finally Thy very Self. All this I do, not to obtain favors from Thee, not even paradise, but only to please Thee more and give Thee greater glory.

Moreover, I mean to offer Thee from this moment on in my present state of freedom, all the acts of love by which I shall love Thee necessarily in the blissfulness of eternity, as I hope to do by Thy bounty. In like manner, I offer Thee all the virtuous acts that I shall ever perform and all the perfect acts to be done by the blessed in the homeland of glory. Since all things are excellent in proportion as they are pleasing to Thee and in conformity with Thy divine will, I desire not only to conform my will to Thine in everything, but I also long to accomplish nothing but what is pleasing to Thee, desiring that Thy holy will and not my own may be done in all things. And I would do this, saying always with my lips and with my heart and by all the actions of my life: Fiat, Domine, voluntas tua sicut in caelo et in terra. "Lord, may Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

May it please Thee, O my God, to grant me this grace, in order that I may always love Thee more ardently, serve Thee more perfectly and act more purely for Thy glory, that I may become so transformed into Thee as to live in Thee alone, for Thee alone, and to find my paradise both in time and eternity in giving pleasure to Thee.

Prayer to the Most Blessed Virgin Mary

O Mother of Jesus, Queen of heaven and earth, I hail thee and honor thee as my sovereign Lady, to whom I belong by right and upon whom I depend after God. I pay thee all the honor that I can and must, according to God's will and thy own greatness. I give myself all to thee; may it please thee to give me thy Son. Grant that by thy prayers all that is in me may be consecrated to His glory and to thine and that I may die rather than lose His grace.

MORNING EXERCISE

Prayer to St. Joseph

O blessed St. Joseph, foster father of Jesus and worthy spouse of Mary, be my father, my protector and my guide today and all my life.

Prayer to Your Guardian Angel

O my holy guardian Angel, I give myself to thee: offer me to Jesus and His most holy Mother and ask them to give me the grace to honor and love them with all the perfection they demand of me.

Prayer to all the Angels and Saints

O holy angels, O blessed saints, I offer myself to you; offer me to Jesus and beg Him to give me His holy blessing, that I may faithfully employ this day in His service and that I may die rather than offend Him.

Prayer to beg a blessing from Jesus and Mary

O Jesus, O Mary, Mother of Jesus, I beseech you to give me your holy blessing. Nos cum prole pia, benedicat Virgo Maria. "May the Virgin Mary with her Divine Child bless us. Amen."

EXERCISE DURING THE DAY*VIII. JESUS IS THE CENTER OF YOUR BEING AND SHOULD BE THE SOLE OBJECT OF YOUR LIFE.

The first, most important, and, indeed, the only object of the contemplation, love, and delight of the Eternal Father is His Son, Jesus. I repeat: the only object. The Divine Father has willed that His Son Jesus should be "all in all things" (Eph. 1, 23), and that "He is before all, and by Him all things consist" (Col. 1, 17), according to the words of St. Paul. This is why God the Father beholds and loves all things in His Son and sees nothing but Him in all things. The same Apostle also teaches that God made all things in Jesus and by Jesus (Col. 1, 16), and that likewise He made all things for Jesus (Heb. 2, 10). He has embodied in His Son "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Col. 2, 3), of His goodness and beauty, of His glory and joy, and of all His other divine perfections. He tells us most clearly, and on several occasions, that He has placed all His complacency and delight in this Only and Well-beloved Son. This does not, of course, exclude the Holy Spirit, since He is the Spirit of Jesus and is one with Jesus.

After the example of the Heavenly Father, whom you are obliged to follow and imitate as your own Father, you must make Jesus Christ the sole object of your mind and heart. You must see and love all things in Him; you must not see nor love anything except Him in all things. You must perform all your actions in Him and for Him. You must seek all your happiness and your paradise in Him; as He is the paradise of the Eternal Father, and as the Father takes all His pleasure in Him, so also this Holy Father has given Him to you to be your paradise. Therefore, He commands you to dwell in Him: Manete in me, "Abide in me" (John 15, 4). And His beloved disciple twice repeats this commandment to us. "Abide in him" he says, "And now little children, abide in him" (1 John 2, 27-28). And St. Paul would lead you to do this by assuring you that "there is ... no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8, 1). You may truly say even further that outside of Him there is nothing but perdition, malediction and hell.

Yet notice once more at this point, that when I say that Jesus Christ must be the only object of your life I do, not exclude the Father and the Holy Ghost. As Jesus Himself assures you that "he that seeth me seeth the Father also" (John 14, 9), it follows that whoever speaks of HIM also speaks of His Father and of His Holy Spirit; whoever honors and loves Him likewise honors and loves His Father and His Holy Spirit; and whoever makes Him the only object Of his life, includes the Father and the Holy Ghost.

Make our most amiable Saviour the sole object of your thoughts, desires and affections, the single end of all your actions, the centre of your being, your paradise, and your all. Wherever you may be, have recourse to Him, as to a place of refuge, by lifting up your mind and heart to Him. Remain always in Him, that is, let your mind and your heart, all your thoughts, desires and affections be His. Let all your actions be done in Him and for Him, in the manner that will be explained in 'Tart Three' of this book.

Meditate often His own words: Unum est necessarium, "but one thing is necessary" (Luke 10, 42), namely to serve, love and glorify Jesus.

Consider that apart from Him all is but madness, deceit, illusion, loss of time, affliction of body and spirit, nothingness, vanity of vanities; that you are on earth for this one thing alone, the principal, the most necessary, the most urgent, in fact, the only business you have in this world. It must be your chief and only care. All your thoughts, words, and actions must be directed to this one end. So you must be most careful, at the beginning of all your actions, especially the most important ones, to offer them to Our Lord, protesting that you wish to do them for His glory.

If you should fall Into some sin, do not be discouraged-not even if you fall many times-but profoundly humble yourself before God in spirit and retire sometimes, if circumstances permit, into some secluded place where you may kneel down and ask His pardon, making an act of contrition and begging our Lord Jesus Christ to repair your fault and to give you fresh grace and strength to keep you from falling again. Ask Him to implant within you, once again, your resolution to die rather than to offend Him.

Remember from time to time that you are before God, in fact, in God Himself (Act. 17, 28); that our Lord Jesus Christ, in His divinity, surrounds you on all sides, and so completely penetrates and fills you that He is more intimately in you than you are in yourself; and that He is constantly thinking of you and keeps His eyes and heart ever turned toward you. May this arouse you in turn if not to think always of Him, at least never to allow a full hour to go by without lifting up your mind and heart to Him by one or another of the following aspirations or other prayers, it may please His divine spirit to inspire in you.

IX. ASPIRATIONS TO BE SAID DURING THE COURSE OF THE DAY.

O Jesus! O Good Jesus! O Possessor of my heart! O Beloved of my Soul!

O Object of all my love, when shall I love Thee perfectly?

O Divine Son, fill with light the shadows of my mind, set fire to the coldness of my heart!

O Light of my eyes, let me know Thee and know myself, that I may love Thee and hate myself!

O my sweet light, make me clearly see that all that is not Thee is nothingness, deceit and vanity!

O my God and my All, take away all that is not Thee, to unite me all with Thee!

O my beloved All, be all to me, and may all else be nothing to me!

O my Jesus, be Jesus to me!

O Life of my soul, O King of my love, live and reign in me perfectly!

Live, Jesus, live, King of my heart, live, Life of my life. Glory and love to Thee forever, in all and from all things!

O divine Fire, immense Fire, who art everywhere, consuming and devouring Fire, why dost Thou not consume me altogether in Thy sacred flames?

EXERCISE DURING THE DAY

O Fire, O celestial Flame, come, transform me into a pure flame of love for my Jesus!

O Jesus, Thou art all fire and all flame of love for me! Oh, why am I not all flame and fire of love for Thee?

O Jesus, Thou art all mine; may I be all Thine forever!

Ah, God of my heart! Ah, my soul's only heritage! What is there for me to desire on earth or in heaven save Thee?

O Unum Necessarium! Unum quaero, unum desidero, unum volo, unum mihi est necessarium, Jesus meus et omnia! O Thou only Necessary One! It is Thou whom I seek, it is Thou whom I desire, it is Thou whom I long for, it is Thou whom I need, my Jesus, who art in all things and beyond whom all is nothing!

Veni Domine Jesu! Come, Lord Jesus, come into my heart, into my soul, there to love Thyself in all perfection!

Alas, Jesus, when will there be nothing left in me to oppose Thy love ?

O Mother of Jesus, show me that thou art the Mother of Jesus by forming Him and making Him live in my soul!

O Mother of Love, love thy Son for me!

O Good Jesus, give back to Thyself a hundredfold all the love I ought to have given Thee in all my life, and the love of all creatures ought to have given Thee!

O Jesus, I offer Thee all the love in heaven and earth!

O Jesus, I give Thee my heart; fill it with holy love!

O Jesus, may all my steps pay homage to the steps that Thou didst take on earth!

O Jesus, may all my thoughts be consecrated to the honor of Thy holy thoughts!

O Jesus, may all my words give homage to Thy holy words!

O Jesus, may all my acts give glory to Thy divine actions!

O my Glory, may I be wholly sacrificed to Thy glory forever!

O my All, I give up all that is not Thee and give myself to Thee forever!

Jesus, without whom all is nothing, is my all.

Thus I want all things, though I want not one!

For, having nothing, then will I have all,
If you take all, and leave me Him alone!

EVENING EXERCISE

IT IS just as important to end as it is to begin the day well and to make a special consecration to God of the last actions of each day as well as the first. To this end, before taking your rest in the evening, make a point of going on your knees for a quarter of an hour to thank God for the graces He has given you during the day, to examine your conscience and to renew the offering of yourself to Him by the following exercises and practices.

X. ACT OF THANKSGIVING.

O Jesus, my Lord, I adore Thee as the One who, together with Thy Father and Thy Holy Spirit, art the source of all that is good and holy and perfect in heaven and on earth, in the orders of nature, of grace, and of glory. To Thee do I refer all the gifts and benefits, both earthly and heavenly, temporal and eternal, which ever came forth from Thee, but especially this day, both on earth and in heaven.

I give Thee infinite praise and thanks for all that Thou art in Thyself, and for all the effects of Thy goodness that Thou hast ever brought about, especially during this day, for the benefit of all Thy creatures. But I thank Thee more especially for those Thou hast accomplished for me, the most insignificant of Thy creatures, as well as for all the benefits Thou hast designed on my behalf from all eternity.

I offer Thee all the love and all the praises that have ever been given Thee, especially all those that have been given Thee today in heaven and on earth. May all the angels, all the saints, all creatures and all powers of Thy divinity and Thy humanity bless Thee forever.

XI. EXAMINATION OF CONSCIENCE.

O Lord Jesus, I adore Thee as my sovereign judge. Most willingly do I submit to Thy power of judging me and I rejoice that Thou hast this power over me. May it please Thee to let me share a little of that light by which Thou wilt show me my sins, when I shall appear before Thy judgment seat at the hour of death, so that, in the brightness of that light, I may know the sins I have committed against Thy divine majesty. Let me share in the zeal of Thy divine justice and in Thy hatred for sin, so that I may hate my sins as Thou dost hate them.

Having said this prayer, make a brief examination of the whole day to see whether you have offended God. When you have recalled your sins, accuse yourself before Him and ask pardon of Him, making use of the following acts of contrition.

XII. ACT OF CONTRITION BEFORE RETIRING.

O my Saviour, I accuse myself before Thee and before all Thy angels and saints, of all the sins that I have committed in my whole life, especially today, against Thy divine majesty. I implore Thee, my Lord, by Thy great mercy, by the Precious Blood which Thou didst shed for me and by the prayers and merits of Thy most holy Mother and of all Thy angels and saints, to give me grace, at this time, to conceive true contrition and repentance for my sins.

O my God, I detest my sins with my whole heart and with all the power of my will. I detest them because of the offense, injury and dishonor which I have given Thee by means of them. I hate them because Thou dost hate them and because they are infinitely displeasing to Thee. O Good Jesus, these sins of mine have been the reason for which Thou didst suffer the most frightful tortures that have ever been suffered, and Thou didst die the most cruel of all deaths. That is why I hold them in abhorrence, O my good Saviour, and renounce them forever. Oh, who will give me all the anguish of St. Peter or St. Mary Magdalen and all the penitent saints, that I may weep for the offenses I have committed against my God with all the feeling and all the regret with which they wept for theirs! Oh, who will bring me to hate all my iniquities as much as the angels and saints hate them!

Oh, my God, if it were only possible for me to have as great a horror for my sins as Thou hast Thyself! Lord, let me detest them, let me hold them in abhorrence even as Thou dost and let me abominate all that is not pleasing to Thee!

O my sweet Lord, let me die a thousand times rather than offend Thee mortally again, or, indeed, rather than offend Thee in any way at all, by a deliberate act of will. I promise, with the help Of Thy grace, that I will accuse myself of all my sins at my next confession and I assure Thee of my firm resolution to avoid them in the future for love of Thee. Yes, my God, with my whole heart, I renounce every sort of sin forever and I offer myself to Thee to do and to suffer all Thou dost please, in satisfaction for my sins. In homage to Thy divine justice, I now willingly accept all the sufferings and penances it shall please Thee to inflict upon me, whether in this world or in the next, in expiation of my faults, to satisfy for the dishonor I have given Thee today by Thyself, Thy holy Mother, by Thy angels and saints and by all the holy souls there are on earth.

O Good Jesus, I give myself all to Thee. Destroy in me all that does not please Thee. Make reparation, on my behalf, for all the offenses I have committed before Thy Eternal Father, Thyself, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, Thy angels, Thy saints and all Thy creatures. Give me the strength and grace to offend Thee no more.

O angels of Jesus, saints of Jesus, Mother of Jesus, make up for my defects, I beg you; atone on my behalf for the dishonor I have given God by my sins, and return to Him a hundredfold all the honor and glory I should have given Him today and in my whole life.

O Mother of Jesus, Mother of Mercy, ask thy Beloved Son to show me His mercy. Mother of Grace, implore thy Son to give me grace never to offend Him again and to serve and love Him faithfully.

O blessed St. Joseph, O my Guardian Angel, O blessed St. John and blessed St. Mary Magdalen, intercede for me that I may obtain mercy and grace to be more faithful to God.

XIII. ACT OF OBLATION.

O Jesus, I offer Thee the rest I am about to take, in honor of the eternal rest Thou dost enjoy in the bosom of Thy Father, and in honor of the sleep and temporal rest Thou didst take in the bosom of Thy Mother, as well as during Thy whole life on earth.

I offer Thee every breath I shall draw during this night, every pulse of my heart and my veins, desiring that they may be so many acts of praise and adoration of Thee. I unite myself with all the praises which will be offered up to Thee, this night and forever, in heaven and on earth. I beg all Thy angels and saints, Thy Blessed Mother and Thy very Self to love and glorify Thee for me this night and for all eternity.

When you have said this and are lying down, you should make the sign of the Cross. Then say the last prayer that Jesus said to His Father at the last moment of His life: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum. 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit' (Luke 23, 46). You should say this prayer with your life's last hour in view, and try to say it with just as much devotion as you would wish if you were indeed in that last hour. To do this, you must desire to make the offering, as far as possible, with the love, the humility, the confidence and all the divine and holy dispositions with which Jesus said these words Himself. At the same time unite yourself, as of that moment, with the final disposition in which Jesus ended His life, saying this prayer and imploring Him to impress those dispositions deeply within you and to keep them there for you in your last hour, so that, by this means, you may die in Christ, that is, in the holy and divine dispositions in which He died, and thus you may be one of those of whom it is written: Beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord" (Apoc. 14, 13).

Finally, take care that your last action before falling asleep is the sign of the Cross; and that your last thought is of Jesus, that your last inward act is an act of love for Jesus and Mary. Thus you may merit the grace that the last words you say in your life will be these: Jesus! Maria! Live Jesus and Mary! O Good Jesus, be Jesus to me! O Mary, Mother of Jesus, be the Mother of my soul!

CONFESSION

XIV. PREPARATION FOR CONFESSION.

The frequent use of the Sacrament of Penance is a very useful, holy and necessary means for the glory of God and the sanctification of souls.

But it is a deplorable thing to see what a strange abuse many souls make of this Sacrament in our own day, when they come to, the feet of the priest to receive absolution for their sins, but get up and bear away their own condemnation because they have come without the dispositions necessary for true and solid repentance. This is a matter to be feared extremely, even by those who confess frequently, because there is a real danger of their going to confession more as a matter of routine than in a real spirit of penance, especially when they can detect no change in their life and no progress in Christian virtues. Therefore, the more you frequent this Sacrament, the more you should see that you make the proper preparation for receiving it. There are three things that will enable you to do, so.

1. You must fall on your knees before Our Lord, in some quiet place, if possible, to consider Him and adore Him in the rigorous penances, in the contrition and humiliation which He had to bear for your sins all through His life, especially in the Garden of Olives. And you should beg Him with great insistence to let you share in His spirit of penance, and to give you the grace to know your sins, to hate and detest them as much as He would wish, to confess them clearly, and to give them up absolutely and to be converted perfectly to Him, flying from all occasions of sin, while making use of the remedies necessary for the healing of the wounds of your soul.

To do this, you may use the following prayer:

O my dear Jesus, as I contemplate Thee in the Garden of Olives when Thou didst enter upon Thy Sacred Passion, I behold Thee prostrate upon the ground before Thy Father's face in the name of all sinners, since Thou hast taken upon Thyself all the sins of the world and, especially, my own. I see that by Thy divine light Thou dost place all those sins before Thy own gaze, to confess them to Thy Father in the name of all sinners, taking upon Thyself all the humiliation and contrition for them in His sight, and offering Thyself to Him to make whatever satisfaction and perform whatever penance is pleasing to Him.

O my Good Jesus, I behold Thee, as a result of this spectacle of the horror of my crimes and of the dishonor they give to Thy Father, reduced to an astounding agony, a frightful sorrow and to such an extremity of anguish and contrition, that the violence of the suffering makes Thy soul sorrowful unto death and causes Thee even to sweat blood, so terribly as to stain the ground about Thee.

O my Saviour, I adore, love and glorify Thee in Thy holy agony and in this spirit of penance to which Thou hast been reduced by Thy love and my offenses. I give myself to Thee now, that I may enter with Thee into this spirit. May it please Thee to give me some little share of the light that gave Thee cognizance Of my faults, that I may know them and confess them humbly. Give me some small share of the humiliation and contrition Thou didst bear before the Eternal Father, as well as some measure of the love with which Thou didst offer Thyself to Him in atonement and some fraction of Thy hatred and horror for sin. Give me the grace, I beseech Thee, to make this confession with perfect humility, sincerity and repentance and with a firm and strong resolution never to offend Thee again.

O Mother of Jesus, I implore thee to obtain for me those graces from thy Son.

O my holy guardian Angel, pray to Our Lord for me, to give me the grace to know my sins and confess them well, and to have true contrition for them and to be perfectly converted from them.

2. When you have said this prayer, you should examine your conscience with care and try to remember the sins you have committed since your last confession. Once you have recognized them, try to form in your heart real regret, perfect repentance and contrition for having offended so good a God, asking Him pardon for your faults, detesting them and renouncing them because they displease Him. making a firm resolution to avoid them in the future, with the help of His grace, flying from all occasions of sin, and making use of the proper and efficacious means to bring about a genuine conversion: for contrition is composed of all these elements.

Since, however, contrition is extremely necessary and important, not only in confession but in several other matters as well, I should like to show you in more detail the nature of contrition, and when and how you ought to make acts of contrition. This will be done after I have told you the third thing necessary for a perfect confession and what to do after you have confessed.

3. The third thing you must do, if you want to make a perfect confession, is to kneel before the priest as before one who represents the Person of Jesus Christ and takes His place. Present yourself to him as a criminal who has outraged the majesty of God, with the full intention of humiliating and confounding yourself, taking God's side against yourself, as against His enemy which you are in so far as you are a sinner, and being ready to arm yourself with His zeal for justice against sin and His infinite hatred for it. Do, not fail to bring with you the firm resolve to confess your sins humbly, completely and clearly, without disguises, without excuses, and without trying to shift the blame on to somebody else. But rather accuse yourself as though you were on the point of death. For it would be well to reflect that it is far better to state your sins in the ear of the priest than to bear the shame of them on the day of judgment, before the entire world, and then be damned forever.

Remember that you ought to be willing to accept with cheerfulness and courage the pain and confusion that go with the confession of sins, out of homage for the confusion and torments suffered by our Lord Jesus Christ upon the Cross for those very same sins, as well as to glorify Our Lord by your humiliations, remembering that the more you abase yourself, the more He is exalted in you.

XV. THANKSGIVING AFTER CONFESSION.

After you have confessed your sins and received pardon for them through the Sacrament of Penance, do not forget to thank Our Lord for having given you so great a grace. When He delivers you from some great sin, either by preventing you from falling into it, or by pardoning you after your fall, even if it is only the smallest venial sin in the world, He is giving you a greater grace, for which You Owe Him more thanks, than if He had preserved you from all the plagues, diseases and other afflictions of the body that might beset you. Therefore, thank Him in such words as these, praying Him to preserve you from sin in the future.

Be Thou blessed, O Good Jesus, be Thou blessed a thousand times! May all Thy angels and Thy saints and Thy holy Mother bless Thee now and forever, for having established in Thy Church the holy Sacrament of Penance and for having given us so accessible, so easy and so efficacious a means of wiping out our sins and becoming reconciled with Thee! Be Thou blessed for all the glory that has been and will be given Thee by this sacrament until the end of the world! Blessed be Thou, also, for all the glory Thou hast Thyself rendered to Thy Father by the confession, if one may say such a thing, which Thou didst make to Him of our sins, in the Garden of Olives and by the humiliation, contrition and penance Thou didst bear for them! O my Saviour, engrave deep within me a great hatred, abhorrence and fear of sin, greater than all the other evils on earth and in hell and let me die a thousand deaths rather than offend Thee again.

XVI. NATURE OF CONTRITION.

Contrition is so powerful, so holy and so desirable that a single act of true contrition is capable of wiping out a thousand mortal sins, if they were to be found in the soul.

Contrition is an act of hatred and abhorrence, of sorrow and repentance at the sight of a sin you have committed, because this sin offends God. It is an act of the will, by which you tell God that you desire to hate and detest your sins, that you are filled with shame for having committed them, and that you renounce them earnestly, not for your own interests but because of His. By this I mean, not so much because of the evil, injury and harm you have done to yourself, as because of the dishonor, great sufferings and most cruel death you have caused Our Lord to suffer by your sins.

It is true that the very slightest offense- against the infinite goodness of God is so detestable that even if you were to weep until the day of judgment, or even if you were to die of grief over the smallest of your faults, it would not be enough. Nevertheless, in order to have contrition it is not absolutely necessary to shed tears, nor to conceive a pain that can be felt, nor a sensible feeling of anguish over our sins. Contrition is an interior and spiritual act of the will which is a spiritual power and not a faculty of sense; therefore, you may make an act of contrition without any sensible pain. It is enough to assure Our Lord, with the real will to carry out what you promise, that you want to hate and detest your sins and to avoid them in future, because they displease Him, and that you shall confess them at your next confession.

It should also be remembered that contrition is a gift of God and an effect of grace. Even if you had perfect knowledge of its essence and applied all the strength Of your mind and will to make an act of contrition, you would never be able to do so if the Holy Spirit did not give you grace. But you may console yourself with the thought that this grace will never be refused if you ask for it with humility, confidence and perseverance, and if you do not wait until the hour of your death to ask for it. For grace is ordinarily refused, in that last hour, to those who have neglected it during their lifetime.

Notice, also, that four things are necessary for true contrition. The first of these is to make restitution, at the earliest possible opportunity of things belonging to others, if you have anything that it is possible to return; also to restore the good name of another when you have robbed him of it by calumny or backbiting.

The second thing is to do everything in your power to bring about reconciliation with those with whom you are at odds.

The third is to have a firm and constant will, not only to confess your sins and renounce them, but also to use the necessary remedies and means to overcome evil habits, and to begin to live a truly Christian life.

The fourth thing is effectively to give up all active and passive occasions of sin-that is, the occasions you give others to offend God, as well as those by which you yourself are led into sin.

Such occasions are, for instance: for the promiscuously impure and the adulterous, their partners in evil; for drunkards, their taverns; for gamblers and blasphemers, their games, when they have the habit of swearing and blaspheming or losing very much time and money at these pastimes; women and girls should avoid the least thing that tends to immodesty in dress, as well as excessive novelty and vanity in the matter of fashions; others should give up bad books, improper pictures, the wrong kind of parties and shows, and avoid certain groups, or certain individuals, as well as certain occupations which lead them into sin.

The Son of God Himself says: "If thy hand, or thy foot scandalize thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee. It is better for thee to go into life maimed or lame, than having two hands or two feet, to be cast into hell fire. And if thy eye scandalize thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee. It is better for thee having one eye to enter into life, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire" (Matt. 18, 8-9). He is giving you here an absolute commandment under pain of eternal damnation (as the holy Fathers explain these words of Sacred Scripture), to cut off from yourself and entirely renounce all things that are occasions of ruin for yourself and others, even those which are not in themselves evil, even occupations and professions, if you cannot follow them without sinning, as well as things that are most close and dear and precious to you, if these things might occasion the loss of your soul.

Acts of contrition may be made at all times and in every situation, but they should be made particularly at such times as:

1. When you go to confession, for perfect contrition or at the very least attrition, which is imperfect contrition, is a necessary part of Penance. That is why I said above and here repeat, that, before you go to confession and after your examination of conscience, you should ask God for contrition and then try to make genuine acts of sorrow for sin.

2. When you have fallen into sin, so that you may instantly rise again by means of contrition.

3. In the morning and evening, so that if you have committed any sins during the night or in the day, they may be wiped out by contrition, and so you may always keep in God's grace. For this cause

130- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

I have set down various acts of contrition in the evening exercise, following the examination of conscience.

But over and above this, to give you readier access to the means and method of practising so necessary and important a virtue, which you need at every moment of your life, I have also added several varied acts of contrition which you may use, taking now one, now another, according to the promptings and guidance of the Spirit of God.

But do not make the mistake of imagining that, in order to have contrition for your sins, it is sufficient to read and pronounce with attention the acts set down in this book, or Others like them. True contrition must be accompanied by the conditions described above, but you must also remember in particular that you can not make a single act of contrition without a special grace from God. Therefore, when you want to have true repentance and contrition for your faults, be sure to pray Our Lord to give you grace to do so.

XVII. PRAYER TO BEG GOD FOR CONTRITION.

O Good Jesus, I desire to have all the contrition and repentance for my faults that Thou desirest me to have. Yet Thou dost know that I can not have this unless Thou dost give it to me. Grant me contrition, I beg Thee, O my Saviour, in Thy great mercy. I know that I am unworthy that Thou shouldst look upon me and hear my prayer, but I trust in Thy infinite bounty, believing that Thou wilt give me what I ask of Thee most fervently, through the merits of Thy holy passion, of Thy holy Mother and of all Thy angels and saints.

O Mother of Jesus, O holy angels and blessed saints, pray to Jesus for me that He may give me perfect repentance for my sins.

After this prayer strive to make earnest acts of pure contrition:

XVIII. ACTS OF CONTRITION.

O my Most Amiable Jesus, I hate and detest my sins for love of Thee.

O my Saviour, I renounce all sin forever because it offends Thee.

O my Jesus, I abhor my offenses because of the insult and dishonor I have given Thee by them.

CONFESSION    131 -

O my God, would that I had never offended Thee, for Thou art so worthy of honor and love.

O my Lord, I desire to have all the contrition Thou dost will me to have for my sins.

O my God, would that I had in my heart all the sorrow and contrition possessed by all the penitent saints.

O Good Jesus, make me share the sorrow which Thou Thyself didst bear for my sins. I desire to have the greatest possible measure of the same contrition that Thou didst bear.

O Father of Jesus, I offer up to Thee and unite myself with the contrition and penance that Thy Well-beloved Son did feel for my Sins.

O Most Amiable Jesus, may I hate and detest my sins because they were the cause of Thy torments and Thy dreadful death on the Cross.

O my God, I want to hate my sins as vehemently as Thy angels and saints hate them.

O my God, I desire to hate and detest my sins with the same hatred with which Thou dost hate and detest them Thyself.

You might also make an act of contrition by striking your breast like the poor publican in the Gospel and saying with him. Deus, propitius esto mihi peccatori: "O God, be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18, 13). But you must desire to do and say this with the same contrition that the publican had, by virtue of which he went down to his house justified, as we are told by the Son of God Himself. -

These are a few acts of contrition, which are capable of wiping out all sorts of sins, provided only that they be uttered, either with the lips or in the heart, with a real will prompted by the workings of grace, and with a firm resolve to abandon sin and the occasions of sin, and to confess it, and carry out [at the earliest possible opportunity] all the other conditions mentioned above.

HOLY COMMUNION

XIX. PREPARATION FOR HOLY COMMUNION.

Our Lord Jesus Christ comes to you in the Blessed Eucharist, with the greatest humility, abasing Himself so far as to take the form and appearance of bread, to give Himself to you, and with the most ardent love that impels Him to give you, in this Sacrament, all the greatest, most dear, and most precious things He has. You also should receive Him in this same Sacrament with the deepest humility and the greatest love. These are the two principal dispositions you should have when you go to Holy Communion.

XX. PRAYER BEFORE HOLY COMMUNION.

O Jesus, my light and my sanctification, open the eyes of my spirit and fill my soul with Thy grace, so that I may realize the importance of the action I am about to perform, and do it in a holy and worthy manner for Thy glory.

O my soul, I pray thee, consider attentively how great and marvelous is the action thou art about to perform and how great is the holiness and dignity of Him whom thou art about to receive. Thou art about to partake of the greatest, most important, holiest and most divine action thou couldst ever perform. Thou art about to receive on thy tongue, in thy breast and in the most intimate recesses of thyself, thy God, thy Sovereign Lord and thy Saviour. Yes, thou art about to receive, really and actually, Jesus Himself in His own Person, who lives for all eternity in the bosom of His Father; Jesus Himself, who is the Life, the glory, the riches, the love and the delight of the Eternal Father; the very same Jesus whom so many patriarchs, prophets and just men of the Old Testament desired to see; the same Jesus who dwelt nine months in the womb of the Blessed Virgin whom she nursed and carried so often in her arms; the same Jesus who was seen walking and living on the earth, eating and drinking with sinners; the same Jesus who was nailed to the Cross.

Thou art about to receive the same body that was bruised and torn and shattered for love of thee; the same blood that was shed upon the ground. Thou art about to receive next to thy own heart the very Heart which was pierced by a lance. Thou art about to receive in thy soul the soul of Jesus, which, when dying on the Cross, He commended into the hands of His Father. What a miracle of wonder! To think that I should receive into myself the very same Saviour who ascended in glory and triumph into heaven, who sits at God's right hand, and will come in power and majesty at the end of time to judge the universe.

O Most Great, Most Admirable Jesus, the angels purer than the sun do not esteem themselves worthy to look upon Thee, to praise Thee and to adore Thee; and today Thou dost not only allow me to contemplate Thee, Thou dost even desire me to take Thee into my heart and soul so that I may then have within myself all divinity, all of the most Holy Trinity and all Paradise. Ah, my Lord, what goodness is this! Whence comes this happiness to me, that the Sovereign King of heaven and earth should desire to take up his abode in me, who am a hell of wretchedness and sin, in order to change me into a paradise of graces and blessings? O my God, how unworthy I am of such a favor! For I do indeed avow, in the presence of heaven and earth, that I far rather deserve to be cast into the bottom most depths of hell, than to receive Thee into my soul, so full of vices and imperfections.

Yet since it pleases Thee, O my Saviour, thus to give Thyself to me, I desire to receive Thee with all possible purity and love and devotion. With this intention, O Good Jesus, I give Thee my soul. Do Thou Thyself prepare me as Thou Thyself dost desire. Destroy in me everything that is contrary to Thee, fill me with Thy divine love and with all the other graces and dispositions with which Thou dost will me to receive Thee.

O Father of Jesus; annihilate in me everything that is displeasing to Thy Son and impart to me a share of Thy love for Him, with which Thou didst receive Him into Thy paternal bosom on the Day of the Ascension.

134- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

O Holy Spirit of Jesus, I offer Thee my soul; adorn it with all the graces and virtues necessary to receive our Saviour.

O Mother of my God, may it please thee to let me share the faith and devotion, love and humility, the purity and sanctity with which thou didst so often receive Communion after thy Son's Ascension.

O holy angels and blessed saints, to you also, do I offer my soul. Offer it to my Jesus and pray Him to make it ready Himself, and that He may allow me to share in your purity and holiness, and in the very great love you bear for Him.

O my Dear Jesus, I offer Thee all the humility and devotion, all the purity and sanctity, all the love and all the preparation with which Thou hast ever been received by the holy souls that are, and ever have been, on the earth. Would that I had in myself the holy fervor, the divine love of all the angels, of all the seraphim, of all the saints on earth and in heaven, in order the more worthily to receive Thee. O my sweet Love, Thou art all love for me in the Sacrament of love and Thou dost come to me with an infinite love. Alas, why am I not also all love for Thee, that I might receive Thee into a soul entirely transformed into love for Thee.

And yet, O my Lord, nothing is worthy of Thee but Thine own Self, and there is no love by which Thou couldst be worthily received, except thine own divine love. Therefore, in order to receive Thee, not into myself, as being too unworthy of such a thing, but into Thy own Self, with the love which Thou hast for Thyself, I reduce to nothingness before Thee both myself and all that is mine. I give myself to Thee; I beg Thee to take up Thy abode in me, and to establish in me Thy divine love, so that when Thou dost come to me in Holy Communion, Thou mayest be received not into me, but into Thyself, with all the love with which Thou lovest Thyself

Take special note of the last part of this prayer, for in it is to be found the true disposition with which we are to receive the Son of God in Holy Communion. I have placed it here at the end for the benefit of more spiritual and more advanced souls.

Notice also that it is by no means useless to desire to have in you all the devotion and love of all holy souls, because Our Lord revealed to St. Mechtilde, a nun of the holy Order of St. Benedict, that if, when she went to Communion, she did not feel any devotion in herself, she should desire to have the devotion and the love of all the holy souls who had ever received Communion and He would consider her as if she did indeed possess it.

We also read of St. Gertrude, a contemporary of St. Mechtilde, a member of the same order and of the same monastery, that one day, when she was about to receive Communion, and did not feel herself to be as well prepared or as full of devotion as she desired, she turned to Our Lord and offered Him all the preparation and devotion of all the saints and of the Blessed Virgin. The result of this was that He appeared to her and spoke to her the following words: "Now indeed thou dost appear in my sight, and in the sight of my saints, clad in just those garments and ornaments that thou hast desired!"

Ah, Lord, how good Thou art thus to accept our good desires as real effects!

XXI. THANKSGIVING AFTER HOLY COMMUNION.

There are three things you should do after Holy Communion:

1. You should prostrate yourself in spirit at the feet of the Son of God abiding within you, to adore Him and ask His pardon for all your sins and ingratitude and for having received Him into so unworthy a place, with so little love and so poorly disposed.
2. YOU must thank Him for having given Himself to you, and in Invite all things in heaven and on the earth to bless Him with you.
3. Since He has given Himself all to you, you should give yourself all to Him, and beg Him to destroy in you everything that is contrary to Him and to establish in you forever the empire of His love and glory.

XXII. PRAYER AFTER HOLY COMMUNION.

O Jesus, O my God and my Creator, my Sovereign Lord, what marvel is this? That I should truly, at this very moment, possess in my heart the One who resides eternally in the bosom Of the Father! That I should indeed bear within me the same Jesus whom the most holy Virgin bore within her pure womb! That the most amiable Heart of Jesus, upon which the well-beloved disciple rested, which was pierced by the lance upon the Cross, should truly rest in me, so close to my heart! That His most holy soul should be living in my own soul! That the divinity, the Most Holy Trinity, all that is most admirable in God and in heaven should have become merged in me, a most insignificant and most unworthy creature! O God, what mercies, what favors are these! What can I say, what can I do when I behold such great and astonishing marvels?

Ah, my Lord Jesus, let all the powers of my soul and body prostrate themselves before Thy divine majesty to adore Thee and render Thee fitting homage! May heaven and earth, and all the creatures that are in heaven and on earth come now and cast themselves at Thy feet that, with me, they may render to Thee a thousand acts of homage and adoration! But, O my God, how great is my boldness, that I should receive Thee, the Saint of saints, into so vile an abode, with so little love, so little preparation! Forgive me, my Saviour; with all my heart I beg forgiveness for this as well as for all the other sins and acts of ingratitude during my past life.

O Most Gentle and Amiable Jesus, O Thou the only One of my heart, O well-beloved of my soul, O object of all my affections, O my sweet life, my dear soul, my one and only love, my treasure and my glory, my joy and my only hope! My Jesus, what am I to think of Thy bounties, so exceeding great to me? What am I to do for Thy love, when Thou hast wrought so many wonders for me? What thanks can I give Thee? My Saviour, I offer Thee all the blessings that ever have been and ever will be given Thee for all eternity by Thy Father, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy holy Mother, by all Thy angels and by all the holy souls who have ever received Thee in Holy Communion.

My God, may all that is in me be transformed into love and praise of Thee! May Thy Father, Thy Holy Spirit, all Thy angels, Thy saints, and all Thy creatures bless Thee eternally for me! Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, Mother of Jesus, angels of Jesus, saints of Jesus, bless Jesus for me!

O Good Jesus, Thou hast given Thyself to me with a love most great. In this same love I give myself to Thee. I give Thee my body, my soul, my life, my thoughts, my words and my deeds, and all that depends upon me. I give myself all to Thee, that Thou mayest dispose of me and of all that belongs to me, in time and in eternity, according to Thy most adorable will. O my Lord and my God, do Thou Thyself make use of the power of Thy own hand to ravish me from myself, from the world and from all that is not Thyself, that Thou mayest entirely possess me. Destroy all my self-love, my own will and all my vices and unruly desires. Establish in my soul the kingdom of Thy pure love, of Thy holy glory and of Thy divine will, so that I may henceforth love Thee perfectly. And let me love nothing, except in Thee and for Thee.

HOLY COMMUNION

May all my pleasure be in pleasing Thee, all my glory in glorifying Thee and in leading others to give Thee glory. May my most perfect happiness consist in carrying out Thy holy desires. O Good Jesus, establish in me the reign of Thy humility, Thy charity, Thy gentleness and patience, Thy obedience, Thy modesty, Thy chastity and all Thy other virtues. Clothe me in Thy spirit, Thy thoughts and inclinations, so that I may no longer have any thoughts, desires, or inclinations except Thy own. Finally, annihilate everything in me that is opposed to Thee, and so in me love and glorify Thyself in all the ways Thou dost desire.

O my Saviour, I offer Thee all the persons for whom I am bound to pray, and especially N.N. . . . Destroy in them all that is displeasing to Thee. Fill them with Thy divine love. Accomplish all the plans Of Thy divine goodness for their souls, and give to them everything that I have asked for myself.

XXIII. THREE OTHER ACTS OF ADORATION, OF OBLATION AND OF LOVE.

Since you are On earth only for the purpose of honoring and loving Jesus, and you belong to Him by an infinite number of ties, your chief preoccupation and business in life should be to adore and love Him, and to give and unite yourself without ceasing to Him. Thus, it would be a good thing to add to the preceding morning and evening exercises another quarter of an hour, either before or after noon, to make the three following acts. They are easy to make and take but little time; nevertheless they are most useful, for they gradually and imperceptibly establish those who persevere in their practice, in a very close union and submission, and in a spirit of love and trust for Jesus. They should be made, not with haste or excitement, but in repose and tranquillity of mind. You should dwell upon the one you find most attractive or appropriate. Here is the way to make these acts.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

1. Act of Adoration:

O Great and Admirable Jesus, I adore and honor Thee as my God and Sovereign Lord, upon whom I depend and to whom I belong. I adore and honor Thee with all my power, and in every way possible to me. I offer up to Thee all the adoration and all the honor that ever has been, is now, or ever shall be offered to Thee in heaven or on earth.

Oh, would that I were entirely transformed into adoration and praise of Thee! May heaven and earth adore Thee now with me, and may all that is in heaven and on earth be transformed into adoration and glorification of Thee.

2. Act of Oblation:

O Jesus, my Lord, I belong of necessity to Thee by a thousand ties, but I also desire to belong to Thee of my own free will. I, therefore, entirely offer, give and consecrate to Thee my body, my soul, my life, my heart and my mind, all my thoughts and my acts, everything that goes with or belongs to my being and my life. I desire that all that ever has been, is now, or ever shall be in me may belong totally, absolutely, exclusively and eternally to Thee. And I make to Thee this oblation and gift of myself, not only with all my strength and power, but also I give myself to Thee in all the virtue of Thy grace, in all the power of Thy spirit, and in all the strength of Thy divine love, which is mine since all that is in Thee is mine. I beg Thee, O my Saviour, do Thou in Thy great mercy Thyself make use of the strength of Thine arm and the power of Thy spirit and love to tear me away from myself and from all that is not of Thee and to possess me perfectly and forever for the glory of Thy Holy Name.

3. Act of Love:

O Most Amiable Jesus, Thou art all goodness and all love, and all infinitely worthy of love. Thou hast created me to love Thee, and dost ask no other thing of me except that I should love Thee. I desire to love Thee, O my Dearest Jesus, I desire to love Thee with my whole heart, my whole soul and all my strength. I desire, besides, to love Thee to the full extent of Thy divine will, with all the strength of Thy heart, and in all the virtues and all the powers of Thy love. For all these things are mine, and I can make use of them as of things belonging to me, since in giving Thyself to me Thou hast given me all that is Thine. O my Saviour, I desire to annihilate, at any cost, whatever in me is opposed to Thy love. O Good Jesus, I give myself to Thee to love Thee in all the perfection Thou dost ask of me.

HOLY COMMUNION

Do, Thou Thyself remove in me every Obstacle in the path of Thy love, and do Thou love Thyself in me in all the ways Thou dost desire, since I give myself to Thee to do and suffer all it may please Thee, purely for Thy love.

O Jesus, I offer Thee all the love that ever has been, is now, and ever shall be borne for Thee in heaven and on earth. Oh, may the whole earth love Thee now with me, and may everything that is in the world be transformed into a pure flame of love for Thee! O Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit O Jesus, Mother of Jesus, Blessed St. Joseph, Blessed St. Gabriel, angels and saints of Jesus, love Jesus for me and repay Him a hundred times over, all the love I should have given Him in my whole life, as well as the debt of love owed to Him by all the wicked angels and all ungrateful men.

XXIV. PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY, MOTHER OF GOD.

O Blessed Virgin, Mother of God, Queen of Men and Angels, Wonder of Heaven and Earth, I pay thee all possible reverence, according to God's word, according to the desires of thy Only Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. I offer thee my soul and my life, and desire to belong to thee forever and to render thee particular homage and service, in time and in eternity. Mother of Grace and Mercy, I choose thee as Mother of my soul because it pleased God Himself to choose thee for His Mother. Queen of Men and Angels, I accept and recognize thee as my sovereign, in honor of the dependence upon thee, as His Mother, that the Son of my God, my Saviour and my God, willed to have. I give thee, as my sovereign, all possible power, in accordance with God's holy will, over my soul and my life. O Holy Virgin, look upon me as thy very own, and in thy goodness treat me as the subject of thy power, and as the object of thy mercies.

O Fount of Life and Grace, Refuge of Sinners, I have recourse to thee to be delivered from sin and saved from everlasting death. Let me remain under thy patronage and share in thy privileges. May I obtain through Thy powers and privileges, and through my right as thy bondsman, the graces I do not merit to Obtain, because of my sins. Let my life's last hour, that hour which will determine my eternity, be in thy hands, in honor of that happy moment of the Incarnation in which God became man and thou didst become the Mother of God.

Virgin and Mother, Holy Temple of the Godhead, Marvel of Heaven and Earth, all thy glories entitle thee to make me thine own. But I desire to belong to thee by my own choice and free will. Therefore, I give myself to thee and to thy Only Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord, and I wish to let no day go by without rendering to Him and to thee some particular homage and some token of my dependence and servitude, in which I desire to die and to live forever. Amen.

PROFESSIONS OF CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

CHRISTIAN LIFE and sanctity are founded upon eight principal bases, which have been explained in 'Part One' of this book. The eight foundations of Christian holiness are faith, hatred of sin, humility, self-denial, renunciation of the world and of all things, the abandonment and submission of oneself to the divine will, the love of Jesus and His most holy Mother, the love of the Cross, and charity to our neighbor. These are the principles of heavenly theology, of Christian philosophy, of the science of the saints, which our Lord Jesus Christ taught by His words and still more by His example. You are obliged to follow these teachings if you wish to be true Christians. You are bound by the solemn profession you made at Baptism.

It is, therefore, very important to renew each day this profession, which is included in the eight following prayers. But be especially careful not to make them in haste, cursorily; take plenty of time, weighing what you say and letting it make a deep impression on your mind. If time does not permit, select one profession, or two, each day, and leave the others until a later hour or even another day. If you have few leisure moments, it would be better to employ only one prayer each day, with firm attention, rather than to use them all in a rush, without the application of mind demanded by the importance of these matters.

XXV. PROFESSION OF FAITH.

O Jesus, I adore Thee as the author and consummation of faith, as eternal light and the source of all light. I give Thee infinite thanks that it hath pleased Thee, in Thy very great mercy, to call me forth from the shadows of sin and of hell into Thy admirable light, the light of faith. I beg pardon a thousand times over, because in the past I have not acted in accordance with this divine light, and I realize that I have often deserved to be deprived of that light. I protest that I wish to live in future only in accordance with the word of Thy holy Apostle, St. Paul, who tells us that "the just man liveth by faith" (Rom. 1, 17).

To this end I give myself to the spirit of Thy holy faith and, in the power of that spirit as well as in union with the most lively and perfect faith of Thy Blessed Mother, the holy apostles and of all Thy holy Church, I make my profession before heaven and earth. And I am prepared, with the help of Thy grace, to make it also before all the enemies of that same faith. I profess entire and firm belief in all that Thou dost teach us both by Thyself and by Thy holy Church; I desire to give my blood and my life and to suffer all kinds of tortures, rather than to abandon one single item of that faith and adhere in the smallest degree to the errors opposed to it: I desire to live and conduct myself no longer according to the senses, as do the animals, or merely according to human reason like the scientists, but according to the light of faith like true Christians, and according to, the maxims of faith, which Thou hast left us in Thy holy Gospel. Preserve these holy resolutions in me, O my Saviour; make them grow and give me the grace to carry them out perfectly for the-glory of Thy Holy Name.

XXVI. PROFESSION OF HATRED AND DETESTATION OF SIN.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy incomprehensible sanctity and in Thy infinite hatred for sin. From the bottom of my heart I beg Thee to forgive all the sins I have committed in my whole life. I give myself to Thy spirit of sanctity and to Thy spirit of hatred for sin. In this spirit, I make profession of a hatred and detestation of sin more than of death, or of the devil, or hell, and more than of all the most detestable things imaginable; of hatred for sin alone: I profess that I will never grieve over anything but the offenses committed against Thy divine majesty, since there is nothing in the world which deserves to be the object of our enmity and the subject of our sorrows, save only this hellish monster. I profess to hate it so much that, with the help of Thy grace, if I were to behold on one hand all the tortures of earth and of hell, and on the other sin, I would choose the former sooner than the latter. O my God, preserve and increase more and more this hatred in my heart.

XXVII. PROFESSION OF HUMILITY.

O Most Adorable and Most Humble Jesus, I adore and bless Thee in Thy profound humility. I reduce myself to nothingness and confusion before Thee, when I consider my pride and vanity, and I most humbly beg Thee to forgive me. I give myself with all my heart to Thy spirit of humility. In this spirit, as well as in all the humility in heaven and on earth, plunging down into the depths of my own nothingness, I recognize before the whole world that I am nothing, have nothing, can do nothing, know nothing, and have no value whatsoever, and, therefore, of myself I have no power to resist even the slightest evil, or to do even the smallest good act; that, left to myself, I am capable of all the crimes of Judas, Pilate, Herod, Lucifer, and antichrist, and, in general, of all the sins of earth and of hell, and that, if thou didst not uphold me with Thy very great goodness, I should fall into a hell of all kinds of abominations; that I have deserved the wrath of God, and of all God's creatures, and merit only everlasting punishment. Such is my heritage. This is all I have to boast about-this, and not one thing more.

Therefore, I make profession of the desire to abase myself below all other creatures, considering and esteeming myself, and desiring to be considered and esteemed in all things and in every place, as the least of all men. I profess horror for all praise, honor, and glory, as of a curse and a poison, according to Thy words, O my Saviour, "Woe to you when men shall bless you" (Luke 6, 26). I profess the desire to embrace and love all scorn and humiliation as something that is due to a wretched reprobate such as I am, because I am a sinner and a child of Adam, which makes me, as I learn from Thy Apostle, natura filii irae (Eph. 2, 3), a child of wrath and malediction by my own natural condition. I profess the desire to be totally reduced to nothing in my own estimation and in that of others, so that I may no longer have any regard for esteem of, or preoccupation with myself; and also so that no one may see me or esteem me any more than they would something that does not exist, but rather that all may see and esteem Thee only. O Good Jesus, eternal Truth, deeply impress upon me these truths and sentiments, and grant that they may manifest their effects in me by Thy great mercy, for Thy holy glory.

XXVIII. PROFESSION OF ABNEGATION.

O Jesus my Lord and my God, I adore Thee uttering these words: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me," and also, "Every one of you that doth not renounce all that he possesseth, cannot be my disciple" (Matt. 16, 24; Luke 14, 33). I give myself to the spirit of light and grace with which Thou didst speak these words, so that I may recognize their importance and show their effects. In this spirit, I recognize three great truths, which exercise upon me a powerful compulsion to renounce myself and all things.

I see that Thou alone art worthy to be, to live, to act, and, therefore, that every other being must be reduced to nothing before Thee. If I am to exist and live in Thee, as it is Thy very great desire that I should do, it is necessary that I emerge from myself and all things, by reason of the corruption which sin has put into me and into all things. And I see that, by my sins, I have deserved to be stripped of all things, even of my own being and of my own life.

Therefore, I make the following profession, in the power of Thy grace, and in union with that same love by which Thou didst desire to live stripped of all worldly things, as well as in the power of the divine spirit by which Thou didst utter these terrible words: "I pray not for the world" (John 17, 9), and these also, in speaking of Thy followers: "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John 17, 16). In public, and most solemnly do I now profess that I desire henceforth to view the world and abhor it as being excommunicated, damned and another hell, and to renounce entirely and forever all the fame, money and enjoyment the world can offer; that I desire to take no voluntary satisfaction, pleasure or repose of spirit in any of these things, but to employ them as if I used them not, making no account of them, and not attaching myself to them in the least, but only using them through necessity, to obey Thy holy will in all things, and only for Thy pure glory.

I will try to live in this world of the old Adam as though I were not in it, and as one belonging to the other world, that of the new Adam, which is heaven. I resolve to live in this world as if it were a hell, that is, not only with detachment from it, but hatred, opposition and horror towards all that is in it. And I will live in love, desire and longing for the world to come, with patience towards this world, suffering it as Thou dost suffer it, my Saviour, in spite of Thy great hatred of it, and Thy infinite desire to destroy it and reduce it to ashes, as Thou wilt do in the day of Thy wrath.

PROFESSIONS OF CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

May I live in the same manner, in the midst of this world, as a truly Christian soul would live if such a soul had been placed in the midst of hell by Thy command. May I remain on earth as one who is not on earth; and let my mind and heart and my conversation be in heaven, that is, in Thyself, for Thou art my heaven, my paradise, my world and my all.

And yet, my Lord, I do desire to progress further, even beyond this. I want to follow Thy word in which Thou dost declare to me that if I wish to come after Thee I must not only renounce all things, but my own self as well. To this end, I give myself to the power of the divine love by which Thou didst reduce Thyself to nothingness, and in union with that same love I profess to renounce entirely and forever everything belonging to myself and to the old Adam; to annihilate at Thy feet, as far as possible, my mind, my self-love, my own will, my life and my being. I most humbly beg Thee to exert Thy divine power to annihilate me, in order to establish Thy kingdom in my heart, that Thou mayest live and reign and work in me in accordance with Thy designs.

I desire no longer to exist, or live, or act, or speak in and by myself, but in Thee and by Thee. I make this profession not only for now, but for all the moments, all the actions of my life, and I beg Thee with my whole heart to look upon my resolution and accept it as if I were making it every minute, and in every one of my acts, and to bring about that I may put this profession into practice for Thy glory, through Thy great goodness and power, so that I may say, together with Thy holy Apostle: "I live, now not I; but Christ liveth in me" (Gal. 2, 20).

XXIX. PROFESSION OF SUBMISSION AND ABANDONMENT OF SELF TO THE DIVINE WILL.

O my Saviour, I adore Thee speaking these divine words: I came down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me" (John 6, 38). I adore Thee in the most perfect submission rendered by Thee to all the desires of Thy Father. I implore pardon for all the obstacles I have placed in the way of Thy holy desires. I yield myself to Thy spirit in Order to follow Thee, from now on, in the practice of this virtue of submission. In the light of this divine spirit, I recognize that Thy holy will governs and disposes all things, whether by absolute command, or by permission. I also recognize that Thou hast placed me upon the earth only that I may here do Thy divine will. Consequently, this is my end, my centre, my element and my sovereign good.

And so, in union with the most perfect submission which Thou and Thy most holy Mother and all Thy saints render to the divine will, I profess to renounce entirely and forever all my wishes and inclinations. I desire never to have any other will but Thine, and to fix my eyes always upon it, and follow it wheresoever it leads, as perfectly as possible, in time and in eternity. I prefer to die, and to suffer a thousand hells, rather than to do anything against Thy most lovable will; and I wish in life and in death, in this world or the next, no other treasure, no other glory of joy or satisfaction, no other paradise but Thy most adorable will. O most dear will of my God, Thou art henceforth my heart, my soul, my life, my strength, my riches, my delight, my honor, my crown, my empire and my sovereign good. Live and reign in me perfectly and forever.

XXX. PROFESSION OF LOVE FOR JESUS AND MARY.

O Most Amiable Jesus, and dearest Mary, Mother of Jesus, I honor you in all your perfections and in the intensity of your great mutual love. I beg a thousand pardons for having loved you so little up to, now, and for having so often offended you. I surrender myself totally to your divine love. And in this same love, as well as in all the love in heaven and earth, recognizing that I am on earth only that

I may love and glorify you, that I am obliged to do so for an infinite number of reasons. I profess my constant desire to employ myself with all my strength in loving and serving you; to desire to do all that I shall ever do, as perfectly as I can, for love of you; to desire rather to be annihilated than to give away, to anything whatever, the slightest spark of the love I owe to you; to place all my happiness and delight in honoring, serving and loving you; to desire to cause you to be loved and glorified by as many souls as I can and in all the different ways that lie in my power.

XXXI. PROFESSION OF LOVE FOR THE CROSS.

O Jesus, my dear crucified Love, I adore Thee in all Thy sufferings. I beg Thy forgiveness for all the failings of which I have been guilty in the afflictions it has pleased Thee to send me. I give myself to the spirit of Thy holy Cross, and in this spirit, as well as in all the love in heaven and on earth, I embrace, with my whole heart and for love of Thee, all the crosses of body and of spirit that shall come to me. I profess to seek all my glory, my riches and my satisfaction in the Cross, that is, in humiliations, privations and sufferings, saying with St. Paul: Mihi acutè absit gloriari, nisi in cruce Domini nostri Jesu Christi (Gal. 6, 14). "God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." "For my part, I solemnly profess that I desire no other paradise in this world but the Cross of my Lord Jesus Christ."

XXXII. PROFESSION OF CHARITY TOWARDS YOUR NEIGHBOR.

O Jesus, God of love and of charity, I adore Thee in all the excesses of Thy divine charity. I beg Thy forgiveness for my failings in this virtue, which is the queen of all virtues. I surrender myself to Thy spirit of charity. And in this spirit, as well in all the charity of Thy holy Mother and of all the saints, I profess never to hate anything, except sin; to desire to love all men, for love of Thee; never to think or do any evil to anybody, but always to think and judge and say and do what is good, in regard to everybody; to excuse and bear the faults of others; to put a favorable interpretation upon things; to have compassion for the spiritual and bodily woes of my neighbor and to conduct myself towards each and every one with all gentleness, benignity and charity. O Eternal Charity, I give myself to Thee. Annihilate everything in me that is opposed to Thee, and establish Thy kingdom in my heart and in the hearts of all Christians.

Part Three

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES TO BE DONE EACH DAY TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

SANCTIFICATION OF YOUR DAILY ACTIONS

I. OBLIGATION AND METHOD TO PERFORM YOUR ACTIONS DEVOUTLY.

I have already explained to you, in 'Part Two of this book, the way to begin and end each day well. My present purpose is to offer you a few practices by which it will be very easy, with the grace of Our Lord, to sanctify every one Of the actions which you are obliged to do not only as a religious but also as a Christian. For I cannot repeat too often that it is most important for everyone to understand that not only religious but all Christians no matter what their state in life, are obliged, as members of Jesus Christ, to live the life of their Head, that is, a thoroughly holy life, and to perform all their actions, whether great or small, in a Christian manner. What do I mean when I say in a Christian manner? I mean in a divine and holy manner, in the manner which characterized Jesus Christ in everything that He did. I mean with the spirit of Jesus Christ, with His holy and divine dispositions.

You are obliged by countless reasons to act in this way, and in the first part of this book I presented some of the most compelling of these reasons. But in addition, I beg you to return often to the consideration of the fact that Jesus Christ is our Head and all of us are His members, and that our union with Him is much more perfect and intimate than that of the members of a natural body with their head, because the principle of this union is His grace. Hence you are obliged to do everything in Him and for Him; for Him because the members belong to Him, because everything in the members belongs to the

Head; in Him, that is, in His spirit, dispositions and intentions, because the members must follow and imitate their Head, and must be animated only by His spirit, with no other dispositions and intentions but His.

This is a matter of the highest importance, because the greater part of your life is taken up with a succession of repeated little acts such as drinking, eating, sleeping, reading, writing, conversing with one another and so on. Now by all these little actions, if you would only set your mind on doing them well, you might give great glory to God and make rapid progress along the road of His love. By your neglect of these little things God is deprived of the glory you owe Him, and you lose the graces He would otherwise give you.

For this reason St. Paul exhorts you to do everything, whether you eat or drink or do any other thing, no matter how insignificant or trifling, for the glory of God in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ (COL. 3, 17). What does it mean, to do what you do in the name of Jesus Christ? It means to do it in the spirit of Jesus Christ, with the dispositions and intentions with which Jesus Christ performed the same actions that you perform, while He was on earth, with which He would yet again perform them, were He in your place now. Whoever acts in the name of another has to act, as far as possible, in the spirit of the person represented, that is, with his dispositions and intentions, just as he himself would act, if he were present.

You may object: Who is able to know the dispositions and intentions with which Jesus Christ performed His actions? By way of answer, let me tell you two things:

1. The light of faith reveals to us that His dispositions were humility, meekness, patience, charity towards others, recollection - of God and all kinds of virtue: His intentions were to love His Eternal Father, to glorify Him, to give Him pleasure and to carry out His divine will.

2. It is not even necessary to know them; it is sufficient to have the desire and intention of performing your actions in the spirit of Jesus Christ, with His dispositions and intentions. And so it is really easy, with the help of God's grace, to do all that you do in a Christian and holy manner.

Make a point, then, of lifting up your heart to Jesus when you begin any action or at least any of your most important acts, and of assuring Him: (1) that you renounce yourself, your self-love and your own mind, that is, all your own personal dispositions and intentions; (2) that you surrender yourself to Him, to His holy love and to His holy spirit, in your desire to perform your various acts with the dispositions and intentions with which He performed His. By this means, you will give Him very much glory in everything that you do, and you will make great progress, in a short time, along the road of His grace.

Now turn to the practice of this holy exercise, as set forth in divers ways in the following prayers. These may be uttered with the lips or with the heart alone, now in one way, now in another. You do not have to follow the exact words given here, but need only to keep to the meaning and substance of the words.

11. PRAYERS TO SANCTIFY THE PERFORMANCE OF ALL YOUR ACTIONS.

1. O Jesus, I renounce myself, my own mind, my self-love and all that pertains to me. I give myself to Thee, to Thy holy spirit and Thy divine love, in order to carry out what I am about to do through Thee, under the guidance of Thy spirit and Thy pure love.

2. O Jesus, as far as it is possible to me, I cast at Thy feet my own mind, my own self-love, my own dispositions and intentions, everything that is mine. I give myself entirely to Thee; destroy me Thyself and take up Thy abode in me, so that it may be Thou that speakest and workest in me, according to Thy spirit and Thy dispositions and intentions.

3. O Good Jesus, I surrender myself totally to Thy divine power and Thy holy love. Draw me out entirely, if it please Thee, from myself, hide me in Thyself and absorb me into Thyself that I may no longer live or speak or act save in Thee and by Thee and for Thee.

4. O Good Jesus, I offer Thee this action in honor of the action Thou didst perform in the world. I desire, if it be pleasing to Thee, to do this in union with the same dispositions and intentions as those with which Thou didst perform all Thy holy actions.

5. O my God, since it is true that Thou art always with us, and that Thou dost operate in all our works, grant, I beseech thee, that I may also be always with Thee, and perform each action with the same intentions as Thou, in union with the same love, perfections, and sanctity with which Thou dost now perform it with me.

6. O Good Jesus, let there be nothing for me, nothing for self-love, nothing for the world; but all for Thee, O my Saviour, all for Thy glory, and all for Thy pure love.

111. How To SANCTIFY A PROLONGED ACTIVITY, OR ONE REQUIRING THE FULL ATTENTION OF THE MIND.

When you have to perform some action which by its long duration or its demands upon your concentration threatens to distract you from God's presence, make a point of turning to your good angel, to the other angels and saints, and to the most Holy Virgin, before you begin and say to them: "Angels of Jesus and His saints, Mother of Jesus;" and say this with the intention of asking them to love and glorify Jesus on your behalf as long as you are engaged in the performance of this action.

IV. PRAYER BEFORE CONVERSATION.

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee. Inspire my lips with things Thou dost wish me to speak and grant that all my words pay homage to Thy holy words.

O Jesus, may all my conversations be consecrated to the honor of Thy divine converse with men on earth. Grant me, if it please Thee, a share in the humility, meekness, modesty, and charity which marked Thy friendly discourse with persons of every type.

V. PRAYER BEFORE MEALS.

O my God, there are many people who have nothing to eat, and yet they have not offended Thee as much as I. But by an excess of charity, Thou dost give this meal to me rather than to them. My dearest Lord, I desire to eat it for love of Thee, because it is Thy holy will. I wish to partake of this food in union with the same love with which Thou dost give it to me; and I desire, if it please Thee, that all the motions

I shall make, taking each bite, may be so many acts of praise and love for Thee.

O Jesus, I offer Thee this repast in honor of the meals Thou didst take on earth. I renounce all self-love, and I desire to eat now in union with the love which subjected Thee to the need of eating and drinking, and in union with all the holy dispositions and intentions with which Thou didst partake of earthly nourishment.

VI. PRAYER BEFORE RECREATION.

O Jesus, I offer Thee this recreation in honor of and in union with the holy recreation and divine rejoicings of Thy mortal life in company with the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother and the angels and saints. Referring to Thyself, Thou didst say: Delectabar per singulos dies, ludens coram eo omni tempore, ludens in orbe terrarum; et deliciae meae esse cum filiis hominum. "I was delighted every day, playing before him at all times; playing in the world. And my delights were to be with the children of men" (Prov. 8, 30-31). The holy Gospel tells us that Thou didst rejoice in the Holy Spirit, and didst command the apostles to rest after work.

VII. PRAYER FOR A JOURNEY.

O Jesus, may all my journeys, my travels, my goings and comings, and my every step, give glory to the various journeys, the travels up and down, the goings and comings and every step of Thy blessed feet on earth.

O Jesus, may every movement of my eyes, lips, feet and of all my exterior and interior senses pay homage to the divine use of Thy deific eyes, Thy sacred lips, Thy blessed hands, Thy holy feet, and all Thy outward and inward senses.

VIII. PRAYER TO BE SAID WHILE AT WORK.

O Jesus, may this work I am doing give honor to Thy holy labors in the world. Please impart Thy blessing to my activity.

IX. PRAYER BEFORE HEARING A SERMON.

O Jesus, I offer this sermon in honor of Thy sublime preaching upon earth. I desire to take part in this function in honor of and in union with the profound devotion of Thy holy Mother as she listened to Thy divine teachings.

O Good Jesus, grant that I may share in the love, attention and devotion with which Thou dost hear the pronouncements of the Father. He is ever speaking to Thee, and Thou dost listen most attentively to Him, and dost most faithfully carry out all His counsels and instructions.

X.. PRAYER BEFORE SPIRITUAL READING.

There are many holy activities which can help souls to maintain their position and to make progress in divine love, but one of the most excellent is spiritual reading, of which I have already spoken in 'Part One.' Hence, with all the earnestness I can muster, I renew my advice and exhortation to you never to let a day go by without reading, for at least half an hour, from some good book. Now in order to do this reading in the right way, in addition to following suggestions already made, you should also call to mind what is related of the Son of God in the fourth chapter of St. Luke's Gospel, namely that having entered into the synagogue upon the Sabbath day, He took up a book and read (Luke 4, 16). Offer Him your reading in honor of His, as follows:

O Jesus, I offer Thee this reading in honor of Thy holy reading; I wish to read in union with the same love, and the same dispositions and intentions with which Thou didst read. I give myself to Thee. By means of this reading, work in me all that Thou desirest to operate for Thy glory.

XI. PRAYER BEFORE WRITING.

You should recall that several Doctors of the Church tell us that Our Lord wrote letters to Abagar, King of Edessa. You should offer Him your action in writing, in honor of His, thus:

O good Jesus, I offer Thee this action in honor of Thy holy writing. I desire to do this in union with the charity and other dispositions and intentions with which Thou didst write. May all the words and letters that I write be so many praises and blessings of Thee.

O my Dear Jesus, guide my spirit and my pen, that I may write nothing except what is of Thee, by Thee and for Thee. During the time I am writing upon this paper, do Thou please write upon my heart the law of Thy divine love and the virtues of Thy holy life.

XII. PRAYER BEFORE GIVING ALMS.

O Jesus, it is for Thy pure love, in honor of and in union with Thy charity towards the poor, that I desire to make this donation.

XIII. PRAYER To BE SAID WHEN VISITING THE POOR, THE SICK OR THE AFFLICTED.

O Jesus, I offer Thee this action in honor of and in union with Thy great love as Thou didst come from heaven to earth, to visit the poor and to console the sorrowful. I give myself to Thee to console and assist the afflicted and the poor as much as Thou dost will me to do. Grant that I may share Thy exceeding great charity towards afflicted mankind.

XIV. PRAYER WHEN FASTING, OR DOING PENANCE OR MORTIFICATION.

O Good Jesus, I offer Thee this act in honor of Thy divine justice and Thy holy Passion. I desire to suffer this privation, this penance and mortification purely for Thy love in union with that same love with which Thou didst bear so many and such extraordinary privations and mortifications on earth, as well as in satisfaction for my sins, and to accomplish Thy divine design for my soul.

O Most Humble Jesus, I Offer Thee this act with all similar acts that ever were or ever shall be performed in honor of Thy holy humiliations and those of Thy Blessed Mother. O Good Jesus, destroy all pride and vanity in me, and cause Thy divine humility to reign in their stead.

XVI. PRAYER BEFORE DOING A CHARITABLE ACT.

O Most Charitable Jesus, I offer Thee this action, with all the others like it that ever were, are now, or ever shall be performed, in honor of and in union with Thy infinite charity. Destroy all self-love and self interest in me, and establish in me the kingdom of Thy divine charity.

XVII. PRAYER BEFORE DOING AN ACT OF OBEDIENCE.

O Most Obedient Jesus, I offer Thee this act of obedience to my superior, to my father or mother, or this act of submission to the rules and obligations of my state in life, in honor of Thy most perfect obedience, and in honor of the subjection which Thou didst will to undergo not only to the rules and laws of Thy Father, but also of men, and even of Thy enemies. Eliminate my own judgment and my own will, and cause me to have no longer any other will but thine and the will Of those who represent Thee in my regard.

XVIII. PRAYER FOR ALL OTHER ACTIONS.

In all other actions, of every sort, you may follow the method indicated in the foregoing prayers, for there is hardly any act or virtuous practice possible in human and Christian daily life that does not find its counterpart among the actions of our Lord Jesus Christ on earth. And if you wish to sanctify your actions, you should offer them to Him in honor of and in union with His own.

I have suggested these little practices to point out the way you must follow in order to walk ever before God and live in the spirit of Jesus. This spirit will inspire many other methods in your heart if you make a point of giving yourself to our Blessed Lord at the beginning of everything you do. For I beg you to note carefully that the one essential practice, the secret of secrets, the devotion of devotions, is to be attached to no one practice or exercise of devotion in particular, but to take care, in all your exercises and activities, to surrender yourself to the holy spirit of Jesus, with humility, confidence and detachment from all things.

When you are thus free from attachment to your own way of looking at things, or to your own devotions and tastes, He will have complete power and freedom to act in you according to His holy will and to arouse in your soul whatever dispositions and devout sentiments He desires, and to lead you by whatever paths He may choose. After you have given yourself to Him, you should progress and be faithful in cultivating the good sentiments and dispositions He will arouse in you, and in following His impulsions, inspirations, and guidance. If He inspires you to make use of the above and the following exercises, and if they prove to be a source of grace and blessings to you, well and good! If He attracts you to other more perfect ways, or methods in which you find more grace and devotion, follow His attractions with simplicity and humility.

XIX. THE PRACTICE OF OFFERING ALL ACTIONS TO JESUS IS THE REAL WAY TO REMAIN CONSTANTLY IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

By means of the practice I have explained, and by frequent lifting of your mind and heart to God, your whole life will belong to Jesus; all your acts will give Him glory, you will walk ever before Him and will be always in His presence. For this is the true secret and the easiest way of keeping always in the presence of God and of living a life that is a single uninterrupted act of love for Him.

Of course I know that if a person is in God's grace, and offers Him in the morning everything that he may do in the course of the day, all his actions (so long as they are not evil in themselves), will give glory to God even if he should not think of God at all for the rest of that day. But Our Lord offered up for you to His Father all the acts He performed on earth, and never allowed a moment to go by in which He did not think of you and love you; consequently it would show very little gratitude and love for Him if you were to think of Him only once or twice a day. Indeed, if you really loved our most amiable Saviour, you should find all your happiness in thinking of Him, and in frequently lifting up your mind and heart to Him. This may be done without the least trouble or mental strain, with great ease and most pleasantly. With His precious grace, which He will never fail to give you, together with the exercise of a little care and fidelity on your part, you can soon develop this holy practice into a habit so strong that it becomes almost second nature to you.

160 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

I can prove it by telling you in all truth that I know a certain ecclesiastic (May his name be written in the Book of Life!) who by frequent use of this exercise has reached the point where it is easy for him, even when at table, actually to make nearly as many acts of love for Jesus as he takes mouthfuls of food. He accomplishes this not only without mental strain or any injury or inconvenience to his health, but even with so much ease and so readily that it does not prevent him from conversing, enjoying fitting recreation, and being specially charitable towards other persons. I am not telling you this in order to make you do as much yourself, for some would meet this suggestion with loud complaints that I was asking them something far too difficult. I only mention it to show you how strong a holy habit can become, and how wrong the world is in imagining a thousand difficulties and repellent obstacles where there is really nothing but pleasantness and delight.

XX. EMPLOYING THE ACTIONS AND SUFFERINGS OF OTHERS FOR THE GLORY OF GOD.

Not only is it possible, but it is necessary to make a holy use of every personal occurrence for the glory of Our Lord, but also of everything that ever has happened, is happening now, or ever shall happen in the world. You can do this because it is within your power to make use of what is your own. Now, as has been said, St. Paul assures you that all things without a single exception, past, present or to come, belong to you (1 Cor. 3, 22). You must make use of them because you are bound to utilize and employ everything that is yours for the glory of Him Who gave you everything.

Hence, when you perform some act, the love and zeal you are bound to have for the glory of Our Lord ought to incite you not only to offer Him this action, but also to unite it with all other actions, past, present and future, similar to the one being performed, to offer and consecrate them to His glory together with your own act.

For instance, when you are at work, consider how many people there have been, are now, and shall be in the world who did, are doing, and will do the same work as you, only they neglect to offer it to God. Unite all that work with your own and offer it up to Jesus as belonging to you, in honor of His labors. Do the same thing whenever a trial or affliction, whether of body or mind, comes upon you, as well as whenever you engage in any mental or physical activity.

This is the way you ought to take holy advantage of all things for God's glory. This is the way you ought to carry on and express in yourself Christ's exceeding great zeal for the glory of His Father, making use of all things to glorify Him. His zeal for His Father's glory was infinitely great, and every action that ever was, or is, or shall be done on earth was just as present to Him as what He was doing then, and He looked upon them all as His own, given to Him by the Omnipotent Father. Therefore, you can not doubt that He consecrated all the acts of mankind together with His own, to the glory of His Father. He compensated for the deficiencies of men and made use of every gift to glorify His Father. What I have said of actions may also be applied to sorrow and suffering, since the Son of God left nothing on earth unemployed for the glory of His Father. Let us enter into His sentiments and dispositions, and unite ourselves with Him in His sacred employment of all things to honor His Father; allow nothing to slip by, whether good or evil, in yourself or in others, but take advantage of everything to lift up your heart to Jesus, and to make everything that occurs a means of glorifying Him, just as He Himself makes all things cooperate for your good and utilizes everything for the advantage of your soul.

XXI. IN TIME OF AFFLICTION.

As soon as any affliction of body or spirit visits you, go at once and cast yourself down at the feet of our Blessed Lord Who said: "Him that cometh to me I will not cast out" (John 6, 37), and "Come to me, all you that labor and are burdened: and I will refresh you" (Matt. 11, 28). Adore His divine will. Humble yourself before Him at the sight of your sins, which are the cause of all your trials; offer Him your affliction; ask Him for the grace to bear it in a holy manner, and reconcile yourself with Him by means of Confession and Holy Communion. For if you are not in His grace and love, even though you were to suffer martyrdom, it would be useless both for God's glory and your own sanctification. You are robbing God of the very great honor you might give Him in time of tribulation, if you were only in fit condition, and you yourself suffer the loss of incalculable riches of grace and glory.

XXII. PRAYER TO JESUS IN TIME OF AFFLICTION.

O Jesus, my Lord, I cast myself down at Thy feet, adoring, blessing and loving Thy Divine Providence with my whole heart, in all that it ordains and permits now and ever in regard to me and my affairs. For what Thou dost ordain and dost permit, O great God, are to be equally adored and loved. Yes, my Saviour, may Thy holy will be done in all things, everywhere, in spite of the weakness of my own will. May Thy divine ordinances and permissions be forever adored and glorified.

I admit, O my God, and I confess before heaven and earth, that Thou art just and that I fully deserve this suffering a hundredfold for the least of my sins. And so, in spite of the reluctance of my own mind, I desire to embrace this affliction to the full extent of my will, in homage to Thy divine justice, in submission to Thy holy will, in honor of Thy extreme sufferings on earth, in satisfaction for my sins, to accomplish Thy designs for me, and as something which comes from Thy beloved hand and from Thy Heart overflowing with love for me.

Blessed be Thou, Good Jesus, because Thou art pleased to give me the opportunity to suffer something for love of Thee. Grant that I may share in the love, humility, patience, meekness and charity of Thy Passion; and give me grace to endure all things for Thy glory and for Thy pure love.

XXIII. PRAYER AGAINST TEMPTATIONS.

When some bad thought or other kind of temptation comes to you, do not become upset, but turn with confidence of mind and heart to Jesus. Humble yourself deeply before Him and ask for strength.

"O my Saviour, I confess that my sins fully deserve that Thou shouldst permit me to be harassed by all sorts of temptations, nay even vanquished and overwhelmed by them. I admit that, of myself,

I have no strength to resist the slightest temptation, and that if Thou didst not sustain me now and always, I should fall into a terrifying hell of sin. Alas, my Jesus, what frightful danger confronts me now! I behold myself on the edge of the abyss and the jaws of the lion of hell open wide to devour me. I am on the point of losing Thy grace, of being cut off from Thee, of being led away by Satan as a slave and, most terrible of all, of crucifying Thee with the utmost cruelty and infinite dishonor, if I allow myself to be overcome by this temptation. O dearest Lord, prevent this. Free me from this danger, give me the grace and strength to turn this temptation to good use and to make it an occasion for glorifying Thee. My God, with all my might I renounce the evil spirit, sin, and everything that displeases Thee. I surrender my will to Thee; take it into Thy safe-keeping and do not allow me to take sides, in any way, with the will of Thine enemies. My Saviour, I conjure Thee by Thy holy Passion, by Thy boundless goodness and mercy to grant me the favor of suffering all the ignominies and torments in the world, and indeed, of dying a thousand deaths rather than ever offend Thee."

THE HOLY SACRIFICE OF THE MASS

XXIV. MANNER OF ASSISTING WORTHILY AT THE HOLY SACRIFICE OF THE MASS.

To assist worthily at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and to give God the glory He deserves, there are four things you must do.

1. As soon as you leave the house to go to Mass, you should realize that you are going not merely to attend or watch, but actually to perform an action more holy and divine, greater and more sublime, more noble and admirable than any other in heaven or on earth. Consequently, you must perform it in a holy and divine manner, that is, with thoroughly holy and divine dispositions, with great care and attention of mind and heart, and with the realization that what you are going to do is more vitally important to you than anything else in the world. I stress the words "you are going to perform" because all Christians are one with Jesus Christ, the Sovereign Priest, and, therefore, they share in His divine Priesthood. Hence, they are called priests in Holy Scripture (I Peter 2, 9). The faithful are consequently entitled not only to assist at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, but also to participate in the action of the priest, that is, to offer with him and with Jesus Christ Himself the Sacrifice that is offered to God on the altar.

2. Upon entering the Church, you should profoundly humble yourself in spirit, considering yourself most unworthy to enter the house of God, to appear before His face, and to take part in so great a mystery, - a mystery which contains in itself all the mysteries and all the wonders of heaven and earth. Remember your nothingness and your sins, for which you ought to enter into a spirit of penance, humiliation and contrition at the beginning of the Mass, accusing yourself of your sins with the priest at the Confiteor, asking God's forgiveness, and begging Him to give you the grace and strength to keep yourself free from sins in future. To make reparation, offer your Heavenly Father the Holy Sacrifice of the Precious Body and Blood of His Son, once offered to Him on the Cross, and now about to be offered to Him on the altar.

3. Having adored our Lord Jesus Christ, Who becomes present on the altar to receive the homage and adoration we owe Him, pray that He, who changes the base and earthly nature of bread and wine into His body and blood, may also change and transform the heaviness, frigidity and dryness of our earthly and hearts into the ardor, tenderness and vitality of the holy dispositions of His divine Heart. Then remember that all Christians are one with Jesus Christ, as members with their Head, and, therefore, share all His qualities. Recollect that Jesus Christ consummates this sacrifice as both Priest and Victim at the same time, so all present must likewise attend Mass both as priests and sacrificers, to offer up one and the same Sacrifice with Jesus Christ, the Sovereign Priest, and as hosts and victims, forming one Host with Jesus Christ just as they form one Priest with Him, one Host to be immolated with Jesus Christ, to the glory of God.

Thus you participate in the divine priesthood of Jesus Christ. As a Christian and member of Jesus Christ you bear the name and character of priest; therefore you ought to act in that capacity and exercise the rights it confers upon you, the right of offering up to God, together with the priest and with Jesus Christ Himself, the Sacrifice of the divine body and blood of God the Son in Holy Mass, and to offer it as far as possible, with the very dispositions with which it is offered by Jesus Christ, His Son, with holy and divine dispositions. What holy and filial dispositions! What humility, what purity and sanctity, what detachment from self and from all things, what attentiveness to God, what charity towards man and what love towards His Father! Unite yourself in desire and intention with these sublime dispositions. Pray to Jesus to implant them in you, enabling you to offer up this divine Sacrifice with Him in union with the dispositions of His adorable Heart.

Unite yourself also to the intentions for which Christ offers His endless Sacrifice. There are five principal intentions. The first is to honor God the Father in all that He is in Himself and in all things, and to pay Him fitting honor, glory, and love. The second is to render the All-bountiful Father a tribute of thanksgiving that measures up to His goodness and all the benefits He has ever bestowed on all His creatures. The third is to make complete satisfaction for all the sins of the world. The fourth is to perfect the fulfilment of all His designs and His holy will. The fifth intention is to beseech Divine Providence to grant you the things necessary to all men, both for their bodies and their souls. So, in conformity with these intentions of Jesus Christ, you ought to offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass as follows:

(1) In honor of the Most Holy Trinity, in honor of all that Jesus Christ is in Himself, in all His states, mysteries, qualities, virtues, actions and sufferings, and in honor of all that He is and achieves whether through mercy or justice, in His Blessed Mother, in all the angels and saints, in His whole Church Militant, Suffering and Triumphant, and in all creatures of heaven, earth and hell.

(2) In thanksgiving to God for all the benefits and graces whether temporal or eternal, imparted to the sacred humanity of His Son, to the most Blessed Virgin, to all angels and men, to all creatures and especially to yourself.

(3) In satisfaction to His divine justice for all your sins and for all the sins of the world, especially for those of the poor souls in Purgatory.

(4) For the fulfilment of all His designs and desires, especially those He entertains on your behalf.

(5) To obtain from His goodness all the graces necessary to you and to all mankind, so that He may be served and honored by all creatures with the perfection He demands of each one.

All this you should perform in the Christian role of priest. But over and above that, in the role of host, when you offer Jesus Christ to God in Holy Mass as a victim you are obliged to offer yourself also, like Him, as a victim. Better still, pray that Jesus Christ will enter into you and draw you into Himself to unite and incorporate you with Himself as host, to sacrifice you with Him for the glory of His Father.

The Host to be sacrificed must be slain and consumed by fire; so you must implore Our Lord to make you die to yourself, to your passions, to your self-love and to all that displeases Him, that He may consume you in the sacred fire of His divine love, and cause your whole life to be henceforth a perpetual sacrifice of praise, glory and love for His Eternal Father and for Him.

THE HOLY SACRIFICE OF THE MASS

4. You should prepare yourself for communion-if not sacramental, at least spiritual communion. Consider that our Lord Jesus Christ, Who loves you beyond measure, becomes present in the Sacrifice not only to be with you, but to be with you in intimate friendship and to impart to you His gifts and graces. And what is far more, He wills to be actually within you. He has a most ardent desire to dwell in your very heart, and give Himself to you in sacramental or spiritual communion. Therefore, you ought to prepare yourself to receive Him by fostering dispositions necessary to communicate sacramentally, namely, sentiments of humility and love. Humble yourself before Him, considering yourself most unworthy to receive Him; nevertheless, since He so earnestly desires to have communion with you, you must also long to receive Him and invite Him, by countless acts of love, to enter your heart and to live and reign in you perfectly.

5. Finally, after having thanked Our Lord for the graces He has given you in Holy Mass, leave the church with a firm resolution to spend the day well in His service, with the thought that you must henceforth be a host at the same time living and dead: dead to all that is not God, living in God and for God, totally consecrated and sacrificed purely to the glory and love of God. Declare to Our Lord that you will be a victim of His love, and that you offer yourself to Him to do and suffer, for that end, whatever may please Him. Pray that He may accomplish this in you by His very great mercy; ask Him to give you the grace to lift up your heart to Him frequently during the day, to do everything for His glory. and choose to die rather than offend Him. For all these intentions, ask Him to give you His holy blessing.

Such is the way you should make use of so divine an event as the Most Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. If you do not feel the need of so many intentions to keep your mind devoutly occupied during Mass, select the most helpful and inspirational. To assist you to acquire greater facility in the use of these exercises, I now present them in the form of prayers, which you are to use not in haste and confusion, but in a leisurely and recollected state of mind and heart, if you want to reap fruits for God's glory.

XXV. PRAYER AT THE BEGINNING OF HOLY MASS.

O my God and Sovereign Lord, behold me prostrate at the feet of Thy mercy. Deign to look with kindness upon so insignificant a creature, who recognizes and confesses before heaven and earth, that he is the most unworthy and ungrateful of all creatures.

O Father of mercies, I accuse myself before Thee, before the angels and saints, of all the lapses of my past life, all the offenses I have committed against Thy divine majesty, my great coldness in Thy ardent love, my neglect in Thy holy service and in following Thy inspirations, and countless other faults of which Thou well knowest me to be guilty. O my God, when I consider that Thy well-beloved Son, whom I am here to adore, gave me even the first moment of His life, I account myself exceedingly guilty for not having consecrated to Thee the very first use of reason given me by Thy divine majesty.

O my Lord Jesus, Thou didst spend all Thy days in poverty and suffering and didst end them on the Cross for love of me. Thou didst spend Thy whole life in uninterrupted works of ardent and exceeding great charity towards my soul. Yet I, treating my days and my life as something all my own, spend them ordinarily in useless or indifferent neglect, and often in offending Thy divine majesty. O my Saviour, grant that I may detest all my faults, since the very least of them was a reason why Thou didst will to be born in a stable and die on the Cross to expiate even that fault before the justice of Thy Father.

O my Jesus, the very least of Thy humanly divine and divinely human actions, repeated so often for my benefit during the thirty-four years of Thy life on earth, possesses such value and merit, that even if it had taken place no more than once, it could rightfully claim that my whole life should be devoted to doing Thy will, as a mark of gratitude and thanksgiving and by way of repayment to Thy divine majesty. Yet I do not do this. On the contrary, it would seem that I was born for the sole purpose of offending and insulting Thee. O what ingratitude! What infidelity! How I detest my treachery! How sorry and ashamed I am, Most Lovable Jesus, of having been so unfaithful and ungrateful, and of having corresponded so miserably with so great and strong a love as Thine for me! My God, I cast all my sins into the stream of Thy Precious Blood, into the abyss of Thy mercies, into the fire of Thy divine love. Cleanse me and utterly consume my sins. Atone for all my failings, O Good Jesus, and accept in satisfaction this most holy Sacrifice of the Precious Body and Blood, which Thou didst offer on the Cross, and I now offer Thee in reparation.

O my sweet Saviour, the disordinate love of myself and of the world is the source of all my offenses. Forever and with all my might I renounce that love. O Most Amiable Jesus, annihilate in me all earthly affections and establish in me the kingdom of Thy divine love.

XXVI. PRAYER DURING HOLY MASS.

O Jesus, my Lord and my God, Thou dost descend upon this altar that I may contemplate and adore Thee, love and glorify Thee, to recall to my memory the great love that caused Thee to suffer and die for me on the Cross. O great God, I adore Thee and glorify Thee to the full extent of my limited powers. O abyss of love, O infinite goodness, O immense charity, would that I were all love for Thee! O Most Beloved, Most Loving and Most Lovable Jesus, when will the time come when I shall love Thee perfectly? O ye Seraphim, angels and saints of paradise, give me your love, that I may employ its ardor to love my Jesus. O ye men, O creatures capable of love, give me all your hearts that I may sacrifice them to my Saviour. O loving Redeemer, would that I possessed all the love of heaven and earth! With what willingness would I direct it all to Thee! O Thou Wellbeloved Son of the Eternal Father, O Thou treasure and delight of heaven and earth, how art Thou now adored, loved and glorified on this altar by the thousands of angels who there surround Thee! How much shouldst Thou be venerated, praised and loved by men, since it is not for the angels but for love of men that Thou art present! Let all angels and men, all creatures on earth and in heaven be transformed into adoration, glorification and love of Thee! May all the powers of

Thy divinity and humanity be employed in magnifying and loving Thee forever!

O Most Mighty Jesus, I adore the power of Thy sacred words by which Thou dost change the earthly nature of bread and wine into the substance of Thy most Precious Body and Blood. I surrender myself absolutely to Thy might, so that it may transform my sluggishness, apathy and aridity into the warmth, tenderness and vitality of Thy celestial and divine Heart. Grant that I may be so transformed into Thee as to be of one heart, one mind, one will, one soul and one life with Thee.

O my most gentle Redeemer, Thou art present on this altar to recall and re-enact before us Thy bitter Passion and cruel death. Grant that I may possess a continual remembrance and vivid realization of all Thou didst do and suffer for me. Grant that I may bear with humility, submission and love all the contradictions that may befall me to-day and during my whole lifetime. O Good Jesus, Thou dost so abhor sin that Thou didst die to put it to death; and Thou dost so cherish and prize my soul as to give Thy life to make it live. Grant, O my Saviour, that I may henceforth fear and abhor nothing save sin alone, that I may prize and seek only Thy glory, and that I may hold everything else as unworthy of my love or hatred.

XXVII. PRAYER TO JESUS CHRIST, HIGH PRIEST.

O Jesus, I adore Thee as High Priest, Thou who dost ceaselessly exercise this function in heaven as well as on earth, sacrificing Thyself for Thy Father's glory and our love. Blessed be Thou a thousand times, O Good Jesus, for the infinite honor Thou dost give the Heavenly Father, and for the exceeding great love Thou dost manifest for us in this divine Sacrifice. Thou art not satisfied with sacrificing Thyself for us so many times, but Thou dost further desire to associate us with Thee in this great work, causing us all to participate in the character of high-priest, giving us the power to participate with Thee in this supreme and wonderful act, that is, to offer Thee in sacrifice when Thou dost offer Thyself, at the hands of Thy holy priests, for the glory of the Almighty Father and for our salvation. Unite me with Thee, O Divine Jesus, since it is Thy will that I should now offer with Thee this most Holy Sacrifice. Grant that I, too, may offer it with holy and divine dispositions like Thine. Oh, with what devotion, what purity and sanctity, what charity for us, what recollection and love for Thy Father dost Thou perform this holy action! Implant these dispositions in me, that I may accomplish with Thee and like Thee this act which Thou dost perform in a manner so holy and divine.

O Father of Jesus, Thou hast given us Thy Son and Thou hast, as it were, placed Him in our hands, in our power and possession. Hence I offer Thy Divine Son to Thee as though He were truly mine to give, and I desire to offer Him in union with the humility, purity, charity, love and all the other holy dispositions with which He offers Himself to Thee.

So also I desire to offer Thy Beloved Son for the same intention, with which He sacrificed Himself. Hence I offer Him to Thee:

1. In honor of all that Thou art, O my God, in Thy divine essence, in all Thy divine perfections, in Thy Three Eternal Persons, and in all the great external works Thou dost effect. I offer this sacrifice in honor of all that Thy Son Jesus is in Himself and in all His states, mysteries, qualities, virtues, acts and sufferings, and all that His external dispensations, either of mercy or of justice, in heaven, on earth and in hell.

2. I offer this sacrifice to Thee in thanksgiving for all the benefits and graces, both temporal and eternal Thou didst ever impart to the sacred humanity of Thy Son, to His most Blessed Mother, to all angels and men, and above all to me, the most unworthy of all creatures.

3. I offer this sacrifice to Thee in satisfaction for all the dishonor given Thee by all the sins of the world, past, present and future, and above all by my own, and those of the people for whom I am especially bound to pray, both living and dead.

4. I offer this sacrifice to Thee for the fulfilment of all Thy designs, especially Thy providential designs for me and all my associates, begging Thee never to permit us to impede Thy holy will.

5. I implore Thee, O my God, that in virtue of this holy oblation and precious gift that I render unto Thee, Thou mayest grant us all the spiritual and bodily graces we need, to serve and love Thee perfectly and to be Thine entirely and forever.

XXVIII. PRAYER TO JESUS CHRIST, SACRIFICIAL VICTIM.

O Jesus, I contemplate and adore Thee in this mystery as the sacred Host laden with the sins of the world which Thou dost expiate, and as the Victim immolated by Thine own self for the glory of God and the salvation of men. I learn from St. Paul that Thou dost desire us all to be living and holy hosts, worthy of being sacrificed with Thee to the glory of God the Father (Rom. 12, 1). O my Saviour, in honor of and in union with Thy supreme oblation and sacrifice, I offer myself to Thee to be for ever a victim of Thy will, a victim immolated to Thy glory and to the glory of Thy Eternal Father. Unite me to Thee, O Good Jesus.

Absorb me into Thy sacrifice so that I may be sacrificed with Thee and by Thee and, since it is necessary that the host of a sacrifice should be slain and consumed by fire, make me die to myself, that is, to my vices and passions and to all that displeases Thee. Consume me utterly in the sacred fire of Thy divine love, and grant that henceforth my whole life may be a continual sacrifice of praise, glory and love of Thy Father and Thyself.

XXIX. PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL COMMUNION.

O Most Good and Lovable Jesus, I am not worthy to think of Thee, nor that Thou shouldst think of me; still less am I worthy to appear before Thee, or that Thou shouldst deign to become present to me. Yet Thou dost not only think of me and become present to me in the Holy Eucharist, but Thou dost even long to give Thyself to me, with an infinite desire of abiding in my heart and in my soul. O dearest Lord, how wondrous are Thy mercies and how great is Thy kindness! Alas, what is there in me, wretched creature full of filth and sin, what is there capable of attracting Thee to me? Surely it is nothing but the excess of pure charity that urges Thee to come into my soul. Come, come then, O Dearest Jesus, for I love and desire Thee beyond measure! Would that I were utterly transformed into aspirations, desire, longing and love for Thee! Come, my sweet light, come, my dearest love, hasten and delay not to come into my heart which renounces all else and desires nothing save Thee alone. O Thou king of my heart, O Thou life of my soul! O my treasure beyond all price, my only joy, my most dear, most desired and most beloved Jesus! O my all, come into my mind, come into my heart and into my soul! Annihilate my pride, my self-love, my self-will and all my other vices and imperfections. Come and establish Thy humility, charity, sweetness, patience, obedience, zeal and all Thy other virtues., Come to me, there to love and glorify Thyself and perfectly unite my spirit with Thy divine spirit, my heart and Thy Sacred Heart, my soul with Thy holy Soul. Grant that this heart, this soul and this body, which are often so closely and so intimately united with Thy Heart, Thy soul and Thy body by the Blessed Eucharist, may never have any other ideas, affections, desires or emotions save those of Thy holy Heart, Thy sacred body and divine soul. Come, my Jesus, enter into me there to live and reign absolutely and forever. Veni, Domine Jesu.

XXX. PRAYER AT THE END OF HOLY MASS.

O Jesus, most worthy of love, I praise and thank Thee countless times. I summon all the angels, all the saints and creatures to bless and glorify Thee with me, for all the graces Thou hast given me by this divine sacrifice. May it please Thee to preserve and multiply in my soul all the holy desires, thoughts, affections and sentiments which Thou hast implanted in my soul during this Holy Mass, and to give me the grace to bring forth the fruit Thou dost expect of me. Thou hast lowered Thyself to become present to me by this holy mystery. Grant, I beseech Thee, that during this day I may not let one hour go by without lifting up my heart and becoming present to Thee in spirit. Thou didst descend to this altar to take possession of our hearts and receive from us the homage we owe Thee as our Sovereign Lord. Then take possession of my heart, Good Jesus; consecrate it to Thee forever. I recognize and adore Thee as my King and Sovereign Lord.

I render homage with my being, my life and all my acts, especially those I shall perform today. Take them and do with them whatever pleases Thee. Give me the grace to die rather than offend Thee, and to be a host at the same time living and dead

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

-dead to all that is not Thee, living in Thee and for Thee. May my whole life be a perpetual sacrifice of praise and love for Thee, and may I be utterly immolated and consumed for Thy pure glory and for Thy holy love. To this end I implore Thee with my whole heart, O Good Jesus, to give me Thy most holy blessing.

THE DIVINE OFFICE

XXX1. PREPARATION FOR THE DIVINE OFFICE.

The chief reason why you are often harassed by distractions and useless and wandering thoughts during vocal prayer is because your mind needs to be occupied with some thought, whether good or bad. So, if you prevent evil and useless thoughts, you have to take great care, from the very beginning of your prayer, to give your heart and your mind quite definitely to Jesus, that He may take full possession of them. You must develop the habit of filling your mind at the outset with good thoughts and holy dispositions, taking care not to slip into performing so holy an action in a careless and perfunctory fashion, more as a matter of habit than out of true devotion.

So, therefore, at the beginning of the Divine Office, remember that you are about to perform one of the greatest and most important functions possible to you, or, for that matter, to anyone in heaven or on earth. So great and exalted an act is this, that it not only is ever the ceaseless occupation of so many millions of angels and saints, with the Queen of Angels and Saints, but it always is the eternal concern of the Three Divine Persons of the Blessed Trinity, who are continually rapt in mutual praising, blessing and glorification. An action so thoroughly holy and divine-it is called the Divine Office-must necessarily be performed with holy and divine dispositions.

Consider, then, the greatness and sanctity of this act and realize that of yourself you do not possess the least qualification to recite it worthily, but rather that your whole nature hinders you. Realize that you are completely unworthy to stand before the face of God and enter into the presence of such exalted majesty. Annihilate yourself, therefore, at the feet of your Heavenly Father. Offer yourself to Jesus, and implore Him to annihilate you and to establish Himself in you, so that He Himself may perform this function on your behalf, that He Himself may glorify His Father and Himself in you, since He alone is worthy to do so. Surrender yourself to the zeal and exceeding great love with which He praises His Father, without ceasing, in heaven, on earth and in hell. For, strictly speaking, it is Jesus alone, in the whole universe, who praises and glorifies God in heaven forever by Himself and through His Blessed Mother, His angels and His saints. He praises and glorifies Him in heaven by Himself and through His Blessed Mother, His angels and His saints. He praises and blesses Him on earth ceaselessly in the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar, where He remains in a continual state of praise and adoration, and in all holy souls who praise God on earth, whether in public or privately. He praises and magnifies His Eternal Father in hell where He ceaselessly operates before the eyes of His Father as He does in heaven. Finally, He praises and exalts Him without interruption throughout the whole universe, which is entirely filled with His divine presence and majesty and with the unending praises and blessings He everywhere renders to His Father.

Unite yourself with all these everlasting praises which Jesus gives to His Father and to the Holy Trinity in every time and place and unite yourself also with the humility, recollection, love, purity, sanctity and all the other divine dispositions of Jesus Christ as He constantly renders fitting praise to His Father and the most Holy Trinity.

XXX11. MANNER OF RECITING THE DIVINE OFFICE DEVOUTLY AND OF HONORING THE WHOLE LIFE OF JESUS IN EACH DAY'S OFFICE.

Having thus devoutly prepared yourself for the sublime action of the private or public recitation of the divine office, you may honor the whole life of Jesus in the course of each day as follows:

When you recite the first nocturn of Matins, offer it to Jesus in honor of His divine and eternal life in the bosom of the Father from all eternity, before the creation of the world.

The second nocturn is offered in honor of Christ's life in the world from the creation to the Incarnation.

The third nocturn is offered in honor of His life in the sacred womb of His most holy Mother.

Offer Lauds in honor of His Holy Childhood, from His infancy until He reached the age of twelve.

THE DIVINE OFFICE

177-

Offer Prime in honor of His hidden life of labor, which lasted until He was thirty.

Offer Tierce in honor of His public life and ministry, lasting from the time He was thirty until His death.

Offer Sext in honor of His passion, death and burial.

Offer None in honor of His Resurrection and Ascension, and His glorious life in heaven, not only in Himself, but in His Blessed Mother, His angels and His Saints.

Offer Vespers in honor of His life on earth since the Ascension, in the Holy Eucharist and in His Church.

Offer Compline in honor of His universal kingship over the world of nature, grace and glory, over men, angels and all creatures; also in honor of all that He ever did or shall accomplish for His Father, Himself, His Holy Spirit, His Blessed Mother, His angels, saints and all creatures.

So, when you recite each part of your office, you should reflect attentively on the mystery designated for each particular hour. You should consider the details of each mystery of His life, for instance, His thoughts and designs, His affections and dispositions, the things He did, the virtues He practised, His inward activity in relation to the Father, His own self, the Holy Spirit, the Blessed Mother, the angels and saints, and especially the thoughts, designs and love He cherished for you in particular. Consider also the glory and praises rendered to Him in that part of His life by the Omnipotent Father, the Holy Spirit, the Blessed Mother, the angels and saints.

After these considerations you should reflect upon yourself. When you see how far removed your life is from the perfection and sanctity of the life of your Head, whom you are obliged to imitate, you should profoundly humble yourself and ask His forgiveness. Then give yourself to Him to honor and imitate that aspect of His life in all the perfection He requires of you. Pray that He will implant it within you and there glorify it Himself, destroying everything in you that might place an obstacle in its way. And finally, unite yourself with all the praises that ever were, are, or shall be given Him, in this phase of His life, by His Father, His Holy Spirit, His Blessed Mother, His angels and saints.

178- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

If in reciting the office you are honoring a mystery of the temporal life of Jesus, you ought to offer and consecrate to Him the phase of your life which corresponds to the part of His life you are honoring. Implore Him to destroy all the evil in that part of your life and to cause all its happenings to render honor and glory to what took place in the corresponding phase of His own life.

For instance, when saying Lauds, after you have considered the Holy Childhood of Jesus Christ and reflected upon your own childhood, considering how different it was from the perfect holiness of the Sacred Childhood of Jesus, and having profoundly humbled yourself for all this, you should then offer yourself to Him to honor His divine childhood in whatsoever manner He pleases. You should consecrate your childhood in honor of His own, imploring Him to destroy all that was evil in your youth, and to cause all that took place in it to give undying honor and glory to His most adorable Childhood.

Similar reflections should be employed in the recitation of other parts of the Divine Office.

You should realize, however, that there is no necessity to stop or to interrupt the recitation of office. to engage in these exercises. All this may be done by concentration on these subjects while you are chanting or reciting the office. If you have any familiarity at all With the interior life, you will not need to take extra time to perform these acts. On the contrary, the time spent thus will seem very short, so great will be the sweetness and devotion derived from the inward application of your mind and heart to Jesus, the source of all unction and consolation.

XXXIII. ANOTHER METHOD OF SAYING THE DIVINE OFFICE WITH DEVOTION.

Here is another exercise which may be of great help to you in chanting or reciting the Divine Office with devotion.

1. Prepare yourself in the manner suggested above. Then lift up your mind to heaven, and consider with what love, attentiveness, purity and sanctity the Son of God is there ceaselessly praised, blessed and glorified by His Father, Himself, His Holy Spirit, His Blessed

Mother and all His angels and saints. Unite yourself with these loving praises and blessings, as follows:

During the first psalm, unite yourself with all the praises that the Eternal Father gives to His Divine Son and with all the love with which He glorifies Him forever, offering all these praises to Jesus Christ in satisfaction. or reparation for all your failures to praise and glorify Him during your life.

During the second psalm, unite yourself with all the glory Jesus gives to Himself by His Divine Person and by His sacred humanity, offering Him all this glory in reparation for your deficiency in praising Him.

During the third psalm, unite yourself with all the blessings which the Holy Spirit renders to Jesus Christ offering Him all these blessings in reparation for the maledictions which your sins caused Him to suffer on earth.

During the fourth psalm, unite yourself with the praises given by the Most Blessed Virgin to her Son, for of herself alone she praises Him more worthily than all the angels and saints together. Unite yourself with all her attention, her very great love and all her other holy dispositions as she sings His praises without ceasing, offering her praise to Jesus in satisfaction for all your negligence.

During the fifth psalm, unite yourself with all the praises of the seraphim, eternally offered before the throne of Jesus Christ, and with all the fervor and love of their endless chant of adoration, offering Him these praises in reparation for your coldness, distractions and lack of devotion.

And so, as you recite each psalm, unite yourself successively with each choir of angels and order of saints, one after another, in their perpetual chorus of praise to the Son of God. Here is a list of them, which it would be well to memorize for your use in the present exercise.

The nine chairs of angels: Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominations, Virtues, Powers, Principalities, Archangels and Angels.

The orders of saints: Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Priests, Confessors, Virgins, Widows, Innocents.

2. Next, descending from heaven to earth, unite yourself with all the praises of Christ proclaimed by the various orders of Holy Mother Church, that is: by the order of pontiffs and bishops, the order of pastors and priests, the Orders of St. Benedict, St. Bernard, St. Norbert, St. Francis, St. Dominic, St. Theresa, St. Ignatius of Loyola, by all religious orders and the many good souls who are in the world and there greatly glorify Our Lord.

Consider how many people there are in the world who have no knowledge of the Son of God, who do not love Him and, instead of blessing Him, do nothing but dishonor Him. Then stir yourself up to bless and glorify the divine Redeemer on their behalf.

You should likewise rejoice in the thought that all the irrational creatures and inanimate objects in the universe are engaged in blessing and magnifying their Creator without interruption, with their entire being. The beloved disciple St. John assures us that he heard all the creatures in heaven, on earth, in the sea and under the earth, that is, in hell, giving blessing, honor and glory to God and to the Lamb of God, Jesus Christ, each according to his state. Some praised God out of love and of their own will, others by a happy necessity, others again by compulsion and by force. Unite yourself with all these blessings given to Jesus by all creatures.

3. Leaving the earth, descend in spirit to purgatory, to unite yourself with all the praises that are given to the Son of God by the holy souls in that blessed place of purification. Go down also in spirit to hell, there to adore and praise Jesus in the midst of His enemies and to glorify Him with a fervor and attention at least equal to the intentness of those unhappy souls in blaspheming Him. Unite yourself with all the glory and praises given in hell to the infinite justice of Jesus Christ by His Eternal Father, the Divine Judge, and His Holy Spirit. In conclusion, you should desire that everything in heaven, earth and hell, and especially everything that is in yourself, in your body or your soul, may be transformed into praise, benediction and glory for Him who can never be blessed or glorified enough. The words of David, the holy psalmist, should be your inspiration: Benedic anima mea Domino, et omnia quae intra me sunt, nomini sancto ejus, "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and let all that is within me bless his holy name" (Ps. 102, 1).

THE DIVINE OFFICE

XXXIV. DEVOUT RECITATION OF THE OFFICE OF OUR LADY.

The preparation suggested for the Canonical Office may also serve to stimulate the right dispositions for saying the Little Office of Our Lady. There you may use the following method, assisted by Our Lord's grace. In saying the Canonical Office, it is possible in the course of the day to honor the whole life of Jesus; so too, in reciting the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, you may honor in each day her whole beautiful life, or, to express it more aptly, the whole life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus. Thus you may never separate the Son from the Mother, nor the Mother from the Son, and you may behold nothing but Jesus in Mary and Mary in Jesus. Here is the way to do this:

Offer Matins to Jesus in honor of His life in the Blessed Virgin, and her life in Him, from her Immaculate Conception to her Nativity. For, from the very first, the Son of God was abiding in the mind and soul of the Blessed Virgin. He dwelt in her, sanctifying and illuminating her from the moment of her conception, beautifying her soul with glowing virtues, utterly filling her with grace, sanctity and love. And she in turn was living a most holy and admirable life in Him; and her mind ' her soul and her heart indeed dwelt more in the divine object of her sacred love than in her own self.

Offer Lauds to Jesus in honor of His life in the most holy Virgin and hers in Him from her birth to the time of His Incarnation by the wonderful works of grace, virtue, light and love which the Son of God effected during this time, without interruption, in the holy soul of this blessed child, as well as by the faith, hope, desire, contemplation, love and praise of Him which were the constant occupation of the divine soul of the most holy Virgin.

Offer Prime in honor of the wondrous and most delectable life of Jesus in Mary and Mary in Jesus during the nine months in which He dwelt in her sacred womb.

Offer Tierce in honor of the life of Jesus in Mary and Mary in Jesus from the birth of Jesus until the end of His Childhood, that is, until He was twelve years of age.

182- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

Offer Sext in honor of the life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus until the end of His hidden life - that is, until He was thirty.

Offer None in honor of the life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus from the beginning of His public life and ministry until the beginning of His life of glory, that is, from the time He was thirty until His Resurrection.

Offer Vespers in honor of the life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus from His Resurrection and Ascension until the Assumption of the Blessed Mother. For even though Jesus had ascended to His Father in heaven, He nevertheless remained with His Blessed Mother and in her until her Assumption. And in a certain sense He lived more fully in her than in heaven during this time, because He was ever producing in her greater graces and more love than in all the citizens of heaven. So, too, she was more truly in heaven with her Son than on earth, and lived more fully in the life of her glorious Son than in her own.

Offer Compline in honor of the glorious and immortal life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus amid the joys of paradise.

As you recite each part of this office, you should consider quietly, without too much mental exertion, the particular part of the life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus honored by each hour Of the office. You should meditate on the intercourse of Jesus and Mary in that part of their life: their sentiments, dispositions and relationship toward each other, their holy discourses and conversations, their divine actions, their most eminent virtues, as well as how the Mother uninterruptedly contemplated, glorified and loved the Son, and how the Son filled the soul of His Mother with light, grace and divine love.

Then you should reflect upon yourself, and when you see how remote is your life, full of sin and imperfection, from that most holy and most perfect life of Jesus and Mary, whom you should regard and imitate as your father and mother, you ought to humble yourself profoundly and beg Jesus for forgiveness. You should offer Him all the honor which His most Blessed Mother gave Him, or, rather, which He gave to Himself through her by His most perfect life in her, and hers in Him, to atone for the dishonor you have given Him by your sinful and imperfect life. And finally implore him to cause your whole life, past, present and future to render eternal homage and glory to His most adorable life and the most lovable life of His Blessed Mother, destroying all in you that goes against this glory.

XXXV. ANOTHER METHOD OF SAYING THE OFFICE OF THE MOST BLESSED VIRGIN With DEVOTION.

The second method suggested for the recitation of the canonical Office may also be applied to the Office of the Most Blessed Virgin, uniting the Mother and the Son in the following manner:

When you say the first psalm, unite yourself with all the praises which the Eternal Father ever gave and shall give forever to His Son Jesus and to the most Blessed Virgin, offering to the Son and the Mother all these praises to satisfy for your many failures to praise and glorify them.

When you say the second psalm, unite yourself with all the glory Jesus ever gave and shall give forever to Himself and to His Mother most worthy of honor, offering to the Son and to the Mother all this glory in ' satisfaction for your faults.

At the third psalm, unite yourself with the Holy Spirit in all the praises He ever gave or ever shall give to Jesus and Mary, offering them these praises in reparation for your negligences.

At the fourth, unite yourself with the seraphim, with all the other choirs Of angels, with the glorious company of saints and with the orders of creation, as outlined in the second method of reciting the Divine Office.

THE ROSARY OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

XXXVI. THIS DEVOTION IS VERY HOLY AND PLEASING TO GOD.

Only mental blindness or prodigious ignorance of the things of God could lead us to doubt that the devotion of the Rosary of the Most Blessed Virgin came from heaven and was inspired by God. It is approved and practised by the universal Church; it contains the holiest prayers anyone could possibly say, the Our Father, the Hail Mary, and the Creed, and it is a most excellent means of honoring the first mystery of the life Of Jesus, the greatest wonder God ever accomplished on earth, the miracle of the Incarnation of the Son of God in the most holy Virgin Mary. This incomparable wonder and admirable mystery, which perpetually enraptures all heaven and is there adored without interruption, should be adored just as incessantly on earth, because it transpired On earth for the benefit of the dwellers of the earth, and because the Church Militant is bound to follow and imitate the Church Triumphant in heaven.

The mystery of the Incarnation is indeed continually adored on earth, in several different ways, especially by the three Hail Marys of the Angelus, repeated three times a day at the sound of a bell, in the morning, at noon and in the evening, and by the recitation of the Rosary, made up of fifty-three Hail Marys. Each devout repetition of the Hail Mary commemorates and honors that ineffable mystery, which was effected in the Blessed Virgin by the divine salutation, "Hail, full of grace," pronounced by the Archangel Gabriel when he greeted her on behalf Of God and announced to her the coming and Incarnation of the Son of God, and her reception Of the most lofty dignity of Mother of God.

Hence, you can not too often utter words so holy and so pleasing to the Son of God, so Prized and honored by His glorious Mother, words which should be so cherished and highly revered among you. The Son of God delights in these words because He is well pleased that His most noble Mother should be hailed and honored, because all honor given to her returns again to Him and everything done for her is done for Him, even more than anything done for the least of His little ones. Then, too, these sacred words recall to mind the first mystery of His life, the mystery of His exceeding great love for His Father and for us. They are most dear to and most honored by His Blessed Mother because they brought her the greatest and most sublime message of all time. These words should be highly valued and loved because they tell of the coming of One so eagerly awaited, so desired and prayed for on earth for five thousand years, the Redeemer descending to earth to deliver mankind from the tyranny of Satan and of sin, to reconcile man with God and to effect in each soul such great and marvelous things for love of men.

For these reasons the practice of reciting the Rosary, composed of repetitions of this holy and angelical salutation, is most holy, most pleasing to God and to the Mother of God, and it ought to be the customary practice of all true Christians.

I am very much afraid that those who shall be overtaken by death without this symbol, which is one of the characteristics of the servants and children of the Mother of God, may easily be disowned by her, and consequently rejected by her Son, as unworthy to share in the mercies of the Son or the favors of the Mother. But it is not enough simply to own and carry a rosary. The main thing is to say it well. And here is the way to do so.

XXXVII. DEVOUT METHOD OF RECITING THE ROSARY OF THE MOST BLESSED VIRGIN MARY.

First kiss the cross of your rosary and make the sign of the Cross with it in honor of and in union with the exceeding great love of the Son of God when He kissed and took upon His shoulders the burden of the Cross, thereby accepting and prizing in union with His love, all the crosses, trials and afflictions He may send you in your whole life. After that, say the Credo on the Cross.

In reciting the Creed, that apostolic summary of our faith, we must give ourselves to Jesus in union with the exceedingly ardent love with which He died for us and with the love of all the holy martyrs who died for Him. We must, I repeat, in union with that same love, offer ourselves to Him to die and shed our blood a thousand times, were it possible, for His pure love, for the glory of His mysteries, and in preference to the slightest deviation from the faith of His Church. So also, we must surrender ourselves to Him to be filled with a great love and devotion for all the mysteries of His life and of His Church, that He may implant and glorify them in us according to His holy will.

With the recitation of the Our Father and the three Hail Marys introducing the first decade, we should annihilate ourselves at the feet of the Son of God and His holy Mother, considering ourselves most unworthy to appear before them or to think of them, or to have them think of us. And we should give ourselves to Jesus, imploring Him to annihilate us Himself, and to take up His abode in us, that He Himself may honor His most blessed Mother on our behalf, for He alone can give her fitting honor. Each One of us must also unite himself to His zeal, love and devotion for her. Then we should offer our prayer to the Blessed Virgin, in union with the devotion, love, humility and purity of her Dear Son and in union with all the devout prayers and all the glory and praise, past, present and future, ever addressed to her Son and herself.

This should be offered for the accomplishment of their heavenly design, especially on behalf of ourselves.

After that, as each decade of the Rosary is said, we should offer it to the Son and the Mother, in honor of one or another of their most eminent virtues, never separating Jesus from Mary or Mary from Jesus. The offering of the decades proceeds as follows:

The first decade should be offered to Jesus and Mary in honor of the deep humility that characterized all their thoughts, words and actions.

The second decade should be said in honor of the perfect purity of the Heart of Jesus and Mary. This virtue consists chiefly of two elements, namely: first, a very great hatred, horror and flight from sin, together with perfect detachment from all that is not God; and second, a most holy union with God and the pure glory of God, which existed most eminently in the holy soul of the Son of God and that of His most holy Mother.

THE ROSARY OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

The third decade should be recited in honor of the divine meekness and charity which Jesus and Mary practised towards others in their thoughts, words, actions and sufferings.

The fourth decade should be said in honor of the most holy obedience of Jesus and Mary to every operation of God's holy will. They never sought to do their own will, but rather chose the will of God in all and by all things, and the will of others for the love of God. What is more, they sought their entire satisfaction and joy in submitting to all that was willed by God and in fulfilling His every command or wish.

The fifth decade should be offered in honor of the boundless and ardent pure love of Jesus Christ for His Heavenly Father and of Mary for Jesus: for they both lived in an uninterrupted act of this pure love, and never had a thought or uttered a word or performed any action save in this pure love. It should also be said in honor of the last day, the last hour, the moment, and the death of Jesus and Mary—a death all divine and all for love.

Now, as you say each decade:

1. You should meditate on each of these virtues of Jesus and Mary, considering their eminent sanctity and with what perfection they practised each virtue throughout their lifetime in thought, word and action.

2. You should consider yourself and see how far removed you are from this virtue, and how little you resemble your Father and Mother (that is, Jesus and Mary) in this. Then, you should profoundly humble yourself on this account and beg them to forgive you, to make reparation for your failures and to offer to the Eternal Father all the honor accorded Him by their practice of this virtue, in satisfaction for the faults you have committed against it.

3. Offer yourself to Jesus and to His holy Mother with an earnest resolution to attend with more care to the practice of this virtue in future, imploring the Divine Son, by His absolute power and the inviolate Mother by her prayers and merits, to destroy in your soul all that can possibly prevent you from making this progress, and to establish the reign of this virtue for His pure glory.

But please remember well what I have said elsewhere, that in all these devotions, even though I may suggest various ideas and practices to you, there is no need for you to make use of them all every time, but only of those from which you happen to derive the most spiritual benefit. Or else, use now one, now another, according to the inspiration of Our Lord's grace. For instance, if your mind finds enough to occupy it in contemplation of one or two of the virtues that have been mentioned, or in some other virtues of Jesus and Mary, there is no need to go on to the consideration of the others, which may be considered at another time.

It remains to be said that, when you recite the last decade in honor of the last hour and most holy death of Jesus and Mary, you should offer them the last moment of your life and the instant of your death, in honor of the last day, the last hour, and the last moment of their life, and their most holy death, imploring them to grant that all that shall occur in your last day and moment may be consecrated to the homage and the glory of what took place on their last day and at the moment of their death and that you may die in the state and practice of divine love, and that your last breath may be an act of most pure love for Jesus.

XXXVIII. ROSARY OF JESUS, MARIA.

You should earnestly desire that the last words you utter in life should be: Jesus, Maria. And in order to dispose yourself to obtain this grace from divine mercy, it would be a good thing to end each day with the recitation of this very brief rosary, which I call the rosary of Jesus, Maria, because it is composed of these two words alone: Jesus, Maria, "Jesus, Mary." These Holy Names contain all that is greatest and most admirable in heaven and on earth, together with the entire virtue and sanctity of the most excellent prayers and devotions that could possibly be practised.

This rosary is made up of thirty-four small beads in honor of Christ's thirty-four years on earth, in honor of Mary's participation in them and the honor she gave Him always.

To begin with, you should say three times Veni Domine Iesu: "Come Lord Jesus," with the intentions suggested for the Rosary of the Glory of Jesus, which may be found in "Part Six" of this book.

THE ROSARY OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

On each small bead pronounce the words Jesus, Maria, "Jesus, Mary," trying to say each with all the love and devotion you would want to have if you were at the hour of death, and as if it were the last word you should ever utter. Your intention should be to pronounce each name with all the love, or in union with all the love (for these two terms mean but one thing), which ever was offered or shall be offered forever in heaven and on earth, to Jesus and Mary. You should give them this totality of love as something of your own, since, as has been said, everything belongs to you, making the offering in satisfaction for all your failures to love and serve them during your life.

On the large beads say the words: Benedicta tu in Mulieribus et benedictus fructus ventris tui, Jesus, 'Blessed art thou amongst women and blessed is fruit of thy womb, Jesus'; and as you say them, offer to Jesus and Mary all the praises and blessings that ever were, are, or shall be given to Him forever On earth and in heaven, in reparation for your failures to bless and glorify them.

PART FOUR

Devotional Exercises to Be Done Each Week
to Live a Christian and Saintly Life and to Make Jesus Reign in Your Soul

Part Four

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES TO BE DONE EACH WEEK
TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND
TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

1. THE THREE SPECIAL DAYS OF THE WEEK.

There are three week-days that should stand out above the others, and be spent with more devotion and attention to God.

Monday should be consecrated to the honor of the first day of Christ's life in the world. On this day you should renew your desire to begin a new life for Our Lord, and resolve to spend the week devotedly in His service.

Friday is dedicated to the last day of Our Lord's life on earth. You ought to regard every Friday as though it were the last day of your life, and spend it accordingly.

Saturday is consecrated to the honor of the life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus, a life to which all Christians are bound to have special devotion. On Saturday you should render love and praise to the most Blessed Virgin with more than usual zeal and affection, and try to make reparation for having fallen away during the week from your duties to her and her Son. So, too, at the close of this day, it is well to honor the Blessed Virgin in the last day and the last hour of her life as I shall set forth in «Part Six."

11. MANNER OF HONORING THE WHOLE LIFE OF JESUS IN THE COURSE OF EACH WEEK.

In order to spend the remaining days of the week devoutly, it is a good thing to dedicate each day to some mystery of the life of Christ, in order to give particular honor to His life on that day and to try to implant its special virtues in your soul by consideration and imitation. According to St. Paul, we are all dead in Adam and living in Jesus Christ (I Cor. 15, 22), and since Jesus Christ is our life (Col. 3, 4), none of us have any right to live on earth except by the life of Jesus Christ. Remember that God lets you remain here only that you may work to destroy in you the wicked and sinful life of the old Adam and to establish there the holy and divine life of Jesus.

Hence, your chief care and occupation should be to consider, adore, and imitate the life of Jesus, in order that, by this means, you may form and establish within yourself a perfect image of that life.

Here are a few meditations for each day of the week, which sum up the whole life of Jesus, and which I present in the form of prayers, so that every type of person may use them to honor the various phases of the life of Christ.

MEDITATIONS FOR EACH DAY OF THE WEEK

III. FIRST MEDITATION-SUNDAY.

The Divine Life of Jesus in the Bosom of His Father from all Eternity

1. O Jesus, my Lord and my God, I contemplate, adore and glorify Thee in Thy divine life from all eternity in the bosom of the Eternal Father, before Thy Incarnation in the virginal womb of Thy Mother. Oh, how holy a life this is, how pure, divine, wonderful and filled with glory, greatness and delights! What joy to see Thee living, from all eternity, a life so filled with perfection, contentment and wonders! Blessed be Thou, O Father of Jesus, for having imparted such a life to Thy Well-beloved Son! O Jesus, I offer Thee all the glory, love and praise Thou dost derive from the Father and the Holy Spirit throughout the eternity of Thy divine life.

2. O Jesus, when I consider Thy divine and eternal life, I see that Thy chief function for all eternity is to contemplate, glorify and love Thy Father, to refer Thyself to Him as to Thy principle, to give Him Thy being, Thy life, Thy perfections and all that Thou shalt be forever, as gifts received from Him, to be employed in glorifying and loving Him, and to offer Him infinitely worthy praise and love. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, for all these things. O Most Amiable Father, how I rejoice to behold Thee so loved and glorified by Thy Son! I offer Thee all love and glory that Thou dost receive from Him during*all eternity, by His divine life in Thy fatherly bosom before His Incarnation.

3. O good Jesus, Thou hast expended all Thy divine life for my benefit. From all eternity Thou dost think " of me, love me and offer me to the Father, and Thou dost offer Thyself also to Him, to come one day upon earth to be made flesh, to suffer and die on earth for love Of me. O Dearest Jesus, Thou hast loved me from all eternity, and I hardly know if I have yet begun to love Thee as I ought.

Forgive me, my Saviour. From now on, and for all eternity, let me live but to love Thee!

IV. SECOND MEDITATION-MONDAY.

The First Moment of the Temporal Life of Jesus

1. O Jesus, I adore Thee at the moment of Thy Incarnation, which is the first instant of Thy mortal life. I adore all the marvelous things that took place in Thee at that moment. What great accomplishments were effected in Thee and by Thee, in that blessed instant, in the eyes of the Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy sacred humanity, and Thy Blessed Mother! What thoughts, what affections, what love! How Thy holy soul in that instant devoted itself, before Thy Father's face, to adore and glorify Him and sacrifice Thee entirely to His glory, and to accomplish all that He willed! O Good Jesus, I adore Thy first thoughts and Thy first acts of adoration, oblation, love and praise, which Thou didst offer to Thy Father at that time. How exalted and divine were the love and glory Thou gavest Him then! Truly Thou didst give Him infinitely more honor and love in that moment alone than all the angels and all men accorded Him in the five thousand years that preceded Thy Incarnation, or ever shall give Him for all eternity. O Father of Jesus, what satisfaction for my soul to behold Thee so loved and glorified by Thy Son! O Jesus, be Thou blessed, adored and glorified forever for the honor and love Thou didst give to Thy Father at the blessed moment of Thy Incarnation!

2. O Jesus, when I consider Thee in this mystery, I see by the light of faith that Thou dost entertain most exalted thoughts and great designs upon her in whom the Incarnation was accomplished, and that Thou dost indeed effect great and marvelous things in*her. O Jesus, I adore Thy first thoughts, Thy first acts of love and movements of grace, of light and of eminent sanctity which Thou didst produce in Thy Blessed Mother at the moment of Thy Incarnation. So, too, do I adore the first acts of adoration, praise and love of the most admirable Mother for the Most Adorable Son. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, Son of Mary, for all the wonders Thou didst work in Thy divine Mother by this stupendous mystery. Blessed be Thou, O Mother of Jesus, for all the glory thou hast given thy Son in this same mystery. Unite me, I implore Thee, to all the love and honor thou didst give thy Dear Son in the first instant of His life, and grant that I may share in thy peerless love for Him and in thy zeal for His glory.

3. O Most Amiable Jesus, at the same instant that Thou didst look up to the Father, after the Incarnation, Thou didst also look upon me. Thou didst begin to think of Him, refer Thyself to Him and love Him and Thou didst likewise begin to think of me, to give Thyself to me and love me. At the very instant Thou didst begin to live, it was to live for me, to prepare and acquire for me most extraordinary graces, and to form plans for my salvation. From that very moment Thou didst plan and desire to create in me an image of the mystery of Thy Incarnation and to become incarnate in me,, that is, to unite me to Thyself, and Thyself most intimately to me, both physically and spiritually by Thy holy grace and Thy divine sacraments, and then to fill me with Thyself, and establish Thyself in me to live and reign perfectly in me.

O what goodness! What boundless love! Infinitely blessed be Thou, O Good Jesus! May all Thy mercies and all Thy wonders for the children of men bless Thee forever! I most humbly beg Thy forgiveness for the obstacles which I have put in the way of the accomplishment of the great designs Thou hast deigned to have in my regard. Never allow me to impede Thy grace again. From now on I desire to annihilate, at all costs, everything in me that opposes Thy holy will. My Jesus, may it please Thee to grant me the grace and strength to do this.

V. THIRD MEDITATION-TUESDAY.

The Holy Childhood of Jesus

1. O Great and Admirable Jesus, Thou wast not satisfied to become man for love of men, but Thou didst also will to become a child, subject to all the lowliness and weakness of infancy, in order to honor the Eternal Father in every condition of human life, and to sanctify all the states of our life. Blessed be Thou, Good Jesus, for these favors. May all Thy angels and saints bless Thee eternally. O most amiable Child, I offer Thee my own childhood, although it is past, imploring Thee most humbly that, by virtue of Thy divine Childhood, Thou mayest wipe out all that was bad or imperfect and cause my whole life as a child to render homage to Thy most adorable Childhood.

2. O Divine Jesus, when I contemplate Thee in Thy holy Childhood, I see that Thou art never idle, but dost effect great things for Thy Eternal Father, contemplating, adoring and loving Him, and also for Thy Blessed Mother, heaping upon her a world of graces and blessings, also for St. Joseph, and little St. John the Baptist and the other saints with whom Thou didst associate as a Child, accomplishing in them most wonderful works of illumination and sanctity. I adore Thee, love Thee and bless Thee in all Thy divine occupations and in the marvelous effects of Thy divine Childhood. I offer Thee all the honor and love Thou didst receive in Thy holy Childhood from Thy Father, Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, St. John the Baptist, St. Gabriel, and from the other angels and saints who are in any special way associated with Thy divine Childhood.

3. O most amiable Child, I adore all Thy thoughts and designs and Thy most burning love for me. Thou wast thinking of me, and didst love me without interruption in Thy Childhood. Thou didst cherish the plan and the strong desire to imprint upon my heart an image of Thy divine Childhood, that is, to make me enter upon a state of holy and sacred childhood, which should imitate and honor the meekness, simplicity, humility, purity of body and spirit, the obedience and innocence of Thy holy Childhood. O my Jesus, I give myself to Thee to accomplish Thy plan and desire and to enter into this state. I shall henceforth strive, with the help of Thy holy grace, which I invoke with my whole heart, to become meek, humble, simple, pure, obedient, free of all arrogance, bitterness and malice, like a child, so that I may render some small honor to Thy Childhood which so deserves to be honored.

VI. FOURTH MEDITATION-WEDNESDAY.

The Hidden Life of Jesus

1. O Jesus, although Thou didst have so many and such great things to do on earth, converting so many souls, working so many miracles, doing so much good by Thy blessed example and holy preaching, if Thou hadst gone out among men, yet Thou didst not will to do this. Instead, Thy choice on earth was a life hidden and unknown until the age of thirty, performing in that time no outward act that might make Thee known to men. Thou didst remain hidden and withdrawn into the Father, in whom Thy mind, heart, thoughts, desires and affections were uninterruptedly enclosed. And Thou didst choose this hidden life to honor Thy hidden life from all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father, and to teach us that solitude and retirement are pleasing to Thee. Of the thirty-four years of Thy life upon earth, no more than four were spent in active intercourse among men, while thirty were spent in retirement and solitude. Blessed be Thou, O Good Jesus, for all the glory Thou didst give Thy Father during these thirty years of Thy hidden life! Grant that I in their honor may henceforth love retirement and solitude, both interior and exterior. Draw me apart and hide me in Thee. Absorb my mind into Thine, my heart into Thy Heart and my life into Thy life. I desire henceforth, with the help of Thy grace, to make every effort to withdraw my thoughts and affections from all things into Thee, O my Jesus, as into my place of refuge, my center, my element and my paradise, outside of which all else is hell and perdition. I wish to dwell ever in Thee, following thy commandment: Manete in me; "Abide in me" (John 15, 4), that is, in Thy spirit, Thy love, Thy sentiments and inclinations, never to leave Thee again.

2. O Most Great and Most Adorable Jesus, Thou didst will to lead an unknown and despised life, a life base and abject in the eyes of men. a life of poverty, labor and suffering, bearing the name and following the trade of carpenter, to teach us first by example what Thou didst later teach us by words, namely, that "what is high to men is an abomination before God"; quod hominibus altum est, abominatio est ante Deum (Luke 16, 15). O Jesus, imprint this truth deeply in my mind and firmly implant in my heart a great hatred and horror of all fame, praise, greatness and vanity, and for all that catches and dazzles the eyes of men, giving me a very strong love for all that involves lowliness, abjection and humiliation.

3. O Jesus, Thou art Godlike Thy Heavenly Father and Thou art but One God with Him; Thou hast but one power and operation, and with Him Thou art the Creator, Preserver and Governor of our vast universe. From all eternity Thou dost send forth with Him a God and a Divine Person, that is, the Holy Ghost, who is God even as the Father and Thou. This and other exalted things worthy of Thy supreme greatness. Thou dost accomplish. Yet in Thy hidden and laborious life on earth, I see that Thou dost lower Thyself to the commonest and most lowly actions of human life, such as eating, drinking, sleeping, working, earning Thy living with the toil of Thy hands and in the sweat of Thy brow. I am filled with wonder and consolation because Thou art no less great and admirable in small things than in great. In these lowly commonplace activities Thou didst render infinitely great glory to the Omnipotent Father because, O Jesus, Thou didst perform all actions, even the smallest and most ordinary, not with common or ordinary dispositions, but with an infinite love for the Father and for us. Thou didst merit and acquire, by the power of Thy holy actions, a special grace for all our acts, to enable us to perform them meritoriously. Hence we can and must do everything, in a devout manner. Otherwise we nullify and waste the graces Thou hast acquired for us in the performance of like things. Do not allow this to happen, O Good Jesus! Give me the grace Thou hast acquired for me by Thy holy actions, so that I may perform all my own acts with holiness. This is my desire and my resolve. Grant me grace to carry it out purely for Thy glory, that in future I may offer up all my acts, even the smallest, in honor of Thine and that I may, as far as possible, perform my tasks with the dispositions and intentions that exalted the lowliness of all Thy most humble, human deeds.

VII. FIFTH MEDITATION-THURSDAY.

The Public Life of Christ on Earth and in the Most Blessed Sacrament

1. O Most Amiable Jesus, Thou dost live, reign and commune for all eternity with the Eternal Father and the Holy Spirit. How rich is this association and how delightful to Thee! What glory and praise Thou dost receive from the Father and Holy Spirit! Yet Thou didst will to come forth from the bosom of the Father to appear on earth, to associate, eat and drink in familiar visible companionship, not only with Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph and the holy apostles and disciples, but even with sinners, from whom Thou didst receive all kinds of outrages and indignities. Thou didst will to do this: (1) By association with Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, the holy apostles and the disciples, to give homage to Thy divine and holy association with the Father and Holy Spirit from all eternity. (2) By the pain Thou didst suffer from associating with sinners, to deliver us from the punishment, so rightly deserved by our sins, of being reduced for ever to the wretched company of demons, and to make us worthy to live eternally in the company of the angels and saints, Thy Blessed Mother, and the Three Divine Persons. (3) In order to show us how true are thy words: Thy delights are to be with the children of men (Prov. 8, 31). (4) To acquire for us, by the merit of Thy active life, the grace we need to behave virtuously in our relations with one another. (5) In order that the perfection of Thy holy and divine conduct in Thy relations with other men might serve as a model and example of the way we should act towards our neighbor.

2. I adore Thee, O Jesus, I bless Thee and love Thee for all these things. I adore Thee in Thy public life and active ministry, which lasted from Thy thirtieth year to the day of Thy death. I adore and give Thee glory for everything in this period of Thy life, inward and outward, that is, all the actions, words, teachings, miracles, journeys, labors and weariness, and for all Thy thoughts, feelings, intentions, affections and inner dispositions. I bless Thee for all the glory Thou didst render to the Eternal Father. I offer Thee all the love and honor accorded during the time of Thy active life by all the holy souls who came in contact with Thee. I also offer Thee all my own associations and contacts, whether past or future, in homage to Thine own, and I implore Thee to cause all my actions relating to my neighbor to be consecrated to the glory of Thy public life.

3. O Jesus, I adore the thoroughly holy and divine dispositions which characterized Thy activity among men. With what dignity, charity, meekness, patience, modesty, detachment from creatures and attention to God didst Thou move and act in the world of men! O my Saviour, I desire that such dispositions may henceforth characterize all my relations with my neighbor. Alas! How far I am from such perfection and how many faults I have committed in the days gone by! For all these I beg Thy forgiveness, imploring Thee to implant in me all the dispositions I have set down above.

4. O Lord, Thou wert not satisfied with having lived and associated with mankind during Thy mortal life. When Thou wast on the point of returning to heaven, Thy most insatiable love and Thy exceeding great desire to prove the tremendous truth that Thy delight is to be with the children of men inspired Thee to devise a most admirable invention that would keep Thee ever with us, and give Thyself to us with all the essence of Thy riches and wonders. All this was accomplished by means of the Holy Eucharist, which is a compendium of all Thy wonders and the greatest of all the effects produced by Thy love for us. O love, O goodness, how is it that I am not utterly transformed into love and praise for Thee? O Jesus, forgive me my past abuse of so great a grace, grant that in the future I may make a better use of this Divine Sacrament and that, as Thou dost find Thy delight in being with me, I may also find all my delight in Thy company, in thinking of Thee, and in loving and glorifying Thee.

VIII. SIXTH MEDITATION-FRIDAY.

The Sufferings and Death of Jesus

1. O Jesus, Thou art the love and the delight of God and the angels, of heaven and earth. Thou art the God of consolation, the source of all joy and bliss, joy and blessedness itself. And yet, when I behold Thee on the final day of Thy mortal life, I see that Thou art the object of the wrath and persecution of heaven, earth, hell, of God, men and all creatures. I see the universe and the powers of evil leagued against Thee, expending all their energies in making Thee suffer. Thou art, as it were, a target exposed to every volley of contradiction and outrage. I behold Thee so filled with sorrow, anguish and torments in every part of Thy body and soul, that Thou dost seem to be transformed into pain and sufferings. Hence the Prophet Isaias calls Thee the Man of Sorrows, Virum dolorum (Isa. 53, 3). O my Dearest Jesus, what has reduced Thee to so pitiable a state? It is Thy goodness, my Saviour, and the excess of Thy love. O my sweet love, let me adore and love and bless Thee in all Thy sufferings, both interior and exterior; let me adore in Thee the holy and divine dispositions of Thy suffering. With what submission to Thy Father's will, with what deep humiliation under the burden of all the sins of the world, with what charity for us, with what meekness and patience towards Thine enemies Thou didst endure the magnitudes of all sufferings. How ashamed I am to behold my Jesus suffering so extremely, with such dispositions, while I see how sensitive I am to the slightest pain, and so far from sharing His dispositions! O Good Jesus, I give myself to Thee to suffer all Thou dost will and I offer Thee all that I have suffered and am yet to suffer in my whole life. May it please Thee to unite my works and trials with Thine; bless them through Thine; use them as Thine own, to glorify the Father and to honor Thy holy Passion. Grant that I may share in the love, humility and other dispositions with which Thou didst suffer!

2. O Most Amiable Jesus, the torments of the Cross and of death were borne with so much love for the Father and for us that the Holy Spirit speaks of the day of Thy Passion as the day of Thy Heart's joy (Cant. 3, 11) to show that Thou didst find joy and satisfaction in suffering. O my Saviour, let me also find my joy and all my happiness in this world in trials and labors, in contempt and sufferings, if by them I can give Thee greater glory and love! Implant these dispositions in my soul, and imprint upon my heart in tense hatred for the delights and pleasures of this earth, and a particular affection for hard work and suffering.

3. O Jesus, I contemplate and adore Thee agonizing and dying on the Cross. I adore Thy last thoughts, words, actions and sufferings, the last use of Thy bodily senses and of the faculties of Thy soul, the last graces Thou didst infuse into the soul of Thy Blessed Mother and the other persons who remained at the foot Of the Cross; Thy last acts of adoration and love for the Heavenly Father; the last sentiments and dispositions of Thy Heart and soul and the last breath that yielded up Thy life. I offer Thee the last moment of my life and my death in honor of Thy holy death and the consummation of Thy life. Bless my death, O Jesus, my Saviour, and sanctify it by Thine own; unite it to Thine; grant that I may share the holy and divine dispositions with which Thou didst die. Grant, if it please Thee, that the last things of my life, that my last breath may be consecrated to the honor of Thy last breath, and that it may be an act of most pure and perfect love for Thee.

IX. SEVENTH MEDITATION-SATURDAY.

The Life of Jesus in Mary and that of Mary in Jesus

1. O Jesus, Thou only Son of God, only Son of Mary, I contemplate and adore Thee living and reigning in Thy most holy Mother, the divine Author of her existence. St. Paul says: Thou art all and dost all in all things (Eph. 1, 23; 1 Cor. 12, 6), so surely Thou art and dost all in Thy most holy Mother. Thou art her life, her soul, her heart, her spirit, her riches. Thou art in her, sanctifying her on earth and glorifying her in heaven. Thou art in her, accomplishing greater works and giving to Thyself, in and by her, greater glory than in all the other creatures of heaven and earth. Thou art in her, clothing her with Thy qualities and perfections, inclinations and dispositions, imprinting in her a most perfect image of Thyself, of all Thy states, mysteries, and virtues, and making her so like Thee, that whoever sees Jesus sees Mary, and he who sees Mary beholds Jesus. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, for all that Thou art and all that Thou dost accomplish in Thy most holy Mother! I offer Thee all the delights, all the love and all the glory Thou didst ever have or ever shalt have in her.

2. O Mother of Jesus, I honor and venerate thy most holy and admirable life in Thy Son Jesus: a life resplendent with every kind of virtue and perfection; a life Of which one single moment is more dear to God than all the lives of angels and men; a life that gives more honor and love to God than all other lives combined in heaven and on earth. This life is none other than the life of thy Son Jesus, which He communicates to thee from moment to moment by a most particular and ineffable favor. Blessed be thou, O holy Virgin, for all the honor thou hast given to thy Well-beloved Son in thy whole life. I Offer thee all my life, O Mother of life and grace, and I consecrate it all to the honor of thy life, and with my whole heart I beg thy Son Jesus, the God of life and love, to grant by His great goodness that my whole life may pay continual and eternal homage to His most holy life and to thine.

3. O Jesus, God of my life and of my heart, Thou hast a very great desire to dwell in me, and to make me live in Thee an entirely holy and heavenly life. Forgive me for all the ways I have obstructed the fulfilment of Thy desire by my sins and infidelities. Eradicate the corrupt and depraved life of the old Adam. in me, and in its place establish Thy holy and perfect life. Dwell in all Thy fulness in my spirit, heart and soul, and therein accomplish all the works Thou dost desire for Thy glory. Love Thyself in me, and in me glorify Thyself in every way that Thou mayest desire. O Mother of Jesus, if it please thee, obtain from Thy Son the accomplishment of these things in me.

X. EIGHTH MEDITATION---SECOND MEDITATION FOR SUNDAY.

Christ's Life of Glory in Heaven, after His Resurrection and Ascension

1. O Jesus, having considered and adored Thee in Thy mortal life, in the agony of the Cross, in the shadow of death and in the chill of the Sepulchre, let me now adore and contemplate Thee in the exaltation, brightness and delights of the life of glory and blessedness Thou didst enter by Thy Resurrection, which Thou hast enjoyed in heaven in the bosom of the Father since Thy Ascension. O immortal and glorious life of my Jesus! O life entirely free from the sorrow and suffering of this earth! O life completely hidden and absorbed in God! O life of nothing but love, and of love most pure, since, in His heavenly life, Jesus has no other thought than to love His Father, and to love us for His Father, to love, bless and glorify His Father for us, to offer us to His Father and to intercede for us with Him! O most holy life, most pure and most divine! O life replete with unutterable joy and exultation! O life that enjoys the fulness of glory, greatness and bliss which is God! O my Dear Jesus, what joy for my heart to behold Thee living such a life! May Thy most amiable Father be blessed forever for having brought Thee into heaven.

2. O Jesus, most worthy of love, not only art Thou in Thyself living a life of glory and blessedness, but so also are all the angels and saints who are with Thee in heaven. Thou livest in them, Thou dost communicate to them Thy glorious and immortal life, Thou art glorious and blessed in them, as St. Paul testifies in the words: omnia in omnibus (1 Cor. 12, 6). It is Thou who dost adore, praise, and love Thy Eternal Father in them and by them. Blessed be Thou for all these things, O Good Jesus. I refer and offer to Thee the glorified and blessed life of all the citizens of heaven, together with all the love and praise they give Thee now and shall give Thee forever, in homage to the life of bliss and glory which Thou hast in Thyself. I beg all Thy angels and saints to love and glorify Thee for me, and to associate me with all the love and glory they give Thee and shall give Thee forever.

3. O Jesus, Thou object of all desire, I know that Thou dost bear me an infinite love, and by Thy extreme zeal for Thy glory, dost most ardently desire to be perfectly loved and glorified in me, and also that Thou hast an infinite desire to draw me to Thee in heaven, that Thou mayest live perfectly in me and fully establish in me the kingdom of Thy glory and Thy love. Thou wilt not live and reign perfectly in me so long as I am on earth. Therefore, O my Saviour, I no longer desire to live on earth except to long without ceasing after heaven. Heaven! O heaven! How desirable art thou; how thou dost call to our love! O God of heaven, when will the time come for me to see Thy holy face? When wilt Thou live fully in me and when will I love Thee perfectly? O earthly life, how hard, how unbearable art thou! O God of my life and of my heart, how long and cruel is this life in which Thou art so little loved and so much offended! But what consoles me, Lord, is that the great apostle, St. Paul, tells me that Thy Father has given us life and raised us from the dead, and caused us to sit down with Thee and in Thee in heaven: Convivificavit nos in Christo, et conresuscitavit; et consedere fecit in coelestibus in Christo Jesu (Eph. 2, 5). Hence I live with Thee in heaven, O Jesus, and there I share in all the love, glory and praises Thou dost give to the All-glorious Father, whether by Thyself or through the angels and saints. Indeed, if I am united to Thee by grace, I can say that I am uninterruptedly loving and praising and glorifying the Eternal Father most perfectly, in Thee and with Thee, with the same love, praise and glory with which Thou dost glorify and love Him. Because I am one with Thee, as the member is one with the head, I can say with St. Augustine: wherever my head is, I am, and I live by His life, and all that is His is mine, and I share in all that He does, all His acts and activities belong to me, and in Him and with Him I do everything that He does.

Consequently, O my dear Jesus, I am even now in heaven with Thy Blessed Mother, with all Thy angels and saints, and especially in company with those to whom I am particularly united. I participate in all their praise and love of Thee, and indeed I can say with truth that I ceaselessly love and glorify Thy Father and Thee in them and with them; for both they and I are members of one identical Head and one identical body and are, therefore, all one: consequently, all that is theirs is mine. I share, therefore, all they do; indeed I do in them and with them all that they do. What a consolation it is for me to know that I am already in heaven, and that I there love and glorify God without ceasing! Lord Jesus, how can I possibly love Thee or thank Thee enough for having united me in so close and so holy a union with Thee and with all Thy saints, and for having given me, by this union, such great and profitable means of praising and loving Thee perpetually in heaven and on earth? O my Saviour, let me praise Thee and love Thee on earth as in heaven! May I live on earth a life in conformity with the life I lead in Thee and in Thy saints in heaven! May I do on earth what I do with Thee and with Thy saints in heaven, that is, may I be ever engaged, without interruption, in loving and praising Thee! May I begin my heaven in this world, seeking all my joy and satisfaction in blessing and loving Thee and in doing all Thy holy will, in striving courageously and faithfully to complete the work of grace Thou dost desire to accomplish in me, so that once this work is finished and perfected, Thou mayest come and take me with Thee into the kingdom of Thy eternal love, that I may there love and magnify Thee perfectly, without ceasing, and forever!

XI. PRAYER TO JESUS ON ALL THE PHASES AND MYSTERIES OF His LIFE, AND A CONSECRATION OF Every PHASE AND DETAIL OF YOUR LIFE To Him.

O Jesus my Lord, I cast myself down and annihilate myself at Thy feet; I surrender myself to the might of Thy divine spirit and Thy holy love, in their immense power and greatness; I adore, glorify and love Thee in Thyself and in all the mysteries and phases of Thy life. I adore Thee in Thy temporal life on earth for thirty-four years. I adore Thee in the first moment of that life, in Thy holy Childhood, in Thy hidden life of labor, in Thy public ministry among men, both when Thou wast living and walking on earth for all to see, and now that Thou art still among us in the Blessed Eucharist. I adore Thee in all Thy sufferings, whether interior Or exterior, and in the last moment of Thy passable life. I adore Thee in Thy life of glory and bliss in heaven ever since the Ascension. I adore Thee in Thy life in the most Blessed Virgin and in all the angels and saints, whether in heaven or on earth. And, in general, I adore, love and glorify Thee in all the other mysteries and wonders that are embraced in the measureless expanse of Thy life, divine, temporal, and glorified. I bless Thee and give Thee infinite thanks for all the glory Thou didst ever and ever shalt give to the Father in all the phases of Thy life.

I offer Thee all the love and honor Thou ever didst or shalt receive forever, in all Thy mysteries and states, from all the angels and all the saints, begging them most humbly to love and glorify Thee, for me, in every way possible and proper to Thy glory.

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee and beg Thee with my whole heart to enter into me, there to destroy all that is not Thee, and to imprint, a perfect image of Thyself, the states and mysteries of Thy life, Thy qualities and Thy virtues. Come, Lord Jesus, enter into me to destroy all that is not Thee and establish Thyself perfectly, there to be all and do all, that thus my being and my life, in all its aspects and ramifications, may be totally dedicated to the honor of Thy life and Thy sovereign being. May my birth in nature and in grace, my childhood, adolescence and my years of activity as a mature man, my agony, death and burial, together with all the other phases of my temporal and eternal life, be consecrated to the honor of each successive part of Thy life, Thy birth, childhood, adolescence, Thy maturity, Thy Passion, death and burial, and all the other states of Thy temporal and eternal life. May all my thoughts, words and actions give honor to Thee. May every step I take, all my works and sufferings give honor to every step Thou didst take on earth and all Thy works and sufferings. May all the powers of my soul and all the senses of my body be dedicated to the honor of Thy holy soul and senses of Thy deified body. Finally, may everything that ever was, is, and shall be in me be transformed into ceaseless and eternal adoration, praise and love for Thee. Come Lord Jesus, enter into me; live and reign over me perfectly, and there love and glorify Thyself as befits Thee, to carry out the designs of Thy goodness in my being, to accomplish the work of Thy grace and to establish forever in my heart the kingdom of Thy glory and Thy pure love. Veni, Domine Jesu, veni in plenitudine virtutis tuae, in sanctitate Spiritus tui, in perfectione mysteriorum tuorum, et in puritate viarum tuarum. Veni, Domine Jesu.

Come, Lord Jesus, enter into me in the fulness of Thy virtue, to destroy all that displeases Thee and execute all that Thou dost desire for Thy glory. Come in the sanctity of Thy spirit to detach me entirely from all that is not Thyself, to unite me perfectly with Thee and to lead me in the path of sanctity in all my actions. Come in the perfection of Thy mysteries, that is, to perfect in me what Thou dost deign to operate by Thy mysteries. Come in the purity of Thy ways, to accomplish in me, no matter at what price, and without sparing me in any way, all the designs of Thy pure love, and lead me in the straight path of that same pure love without permitting me to turn aside, without yielding anything to the inclinations and feelings of corrupt nature and self-love. Come, Lord Jesus!

PART FIVE

Devotional Exercises to Be Done Each Month to Live a Christian and Saintly Life and to Make Jesus Reign in Your Soul

Part Five

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES TO BE DONE EACH MONTH TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

1. EXERCISE FOR THE FIRST AND LAST DAYS OF THE MONTH.

The first and last day of each month ought to assume great importance for you. You should treat the first day as a new beginning of your life, and excite a fresh desire and resolution to serve and love God perfectly, and to spend that month well in His love and glory, looking upon it as though it were to be the last month of your life. But especially should you consider and make use of the last day of the month as you would wish to spend the last day of your life. The first and last day of each month should be dedicated in honor of the first and last day of the life of Our Lord, just as you consecrated the first and last day of each year. Thus you will begin and end each month as well as each year in union with Our Lord. The spiritual exercises to be proposed in 'Part Six' for the beginning and ending of the year may be adapted for each month.

11. THE MONTHLY RETREAT.

In addition to your annual retreat, it is beneficial to set aside one day in each month, for example, the first Thursday or any other special day, to renew and stimulate the good desires and resolutions adopted in the yearly retreat; to make reparation for your failures in God's service and love during the month. You should apply yourself particularly to God on that day, performing all your ordinary actions with more than ordinary attention and perfection, giving yourself with special care and fervor to exercises of praise and love of Jesus. That is why I insert here various exercises and rosaries of praise, glory, and love for Jesus, which you may use on this day of retreat, selecting now one, now another, according to the graces God may give you.

But, first, I must tell you that, in order to stir you up and enkindle you with a greater desire to praise and love Jesus, it would be a good thing for you to set apart some time that same day for the attentive consideration of the thoughts I shall set forth in the following meditation.

111. MEDITATION TO STIR YOU UP TO PRAISE AND GLORIFY JESUS.

1. Consider that Jesus is infinitely worthy of all praise, glory and blessing, for every reason in the universe. He deserves infinite praise for all that He is and all that He does for His Eternal Father, glorifying and loving Him infinitely and continually from all eternity and to all eternity; likewise for all that He is in Himself, in His divinity, in all His divine perfections, in His Divine Person, in His sacred humanity, in His body, in His soul, the very least elements of which deserve infinite praise; in all His states and mysteries; in all His qualities and offices; in all His words, thoughts, deeds, and sufferings; in all His virtues, and in everything that subsists in Him, the very least of which is so deserving of praise that, even if all the angels and saints were to be occupied for all eternity in glorifying and praising it with all their might, they would never be able to render it the glory deserved.

Furthermore, He deserves undying praise for everything that He is and everything that He has accomplished with respect to His holy spirit, His Blessed Mother, all His angels, all His saints, all men, all Christians, and all creatures on earth and even in hell. He deserves no less praise for the effects of His justice than for those of His mercy, since all His divine attributes are equally holy and worthy of adoration. Many are the reasons to bless and glorify Jesus, who so commands your adoration and love! But always remember that you should be much more ready to praise and love Him for what He is and what He does with respect to His Father, Himself, and His Holy Spirit, than for what He is and does for you and for other creatures, because the interests of God ought to be infinitely more dear to you than your own.

2. Consider that the only reason for your existence on earth is to love Jesus and give Him glory. To this you are bound by an infinite number of special reasons, because of the countless graces He has given you. Hence, it should be your chief, nay, your only care and business to make your active life a ceaseless offering of love and glory to Jesus. All your thoughts, words, deeds, and affections should have only this one object in view, to which should be directed the employment of all your time and all the powers of your body and soul. And you see how, instead of loving and glorifying Him, you have done practically nothing else, in your whole life, but offend Him in your thoughts, words, and actions, and in all the functions of your body and soul. Humble yourself profoundly before Him; ask His forgiveness, and cultivate a fervent desire to make up for all these faults, and to exert yourself from now on to love and glorify Him perfectly.

3. Look back on your whole life and examine it, together with your actions and your behavior, and consider what it is in you that most obstructs the love and glory of Jesus. Then firmly resolve to fight, overcome and destroy this defect at all costs, giving yourself withal to your Loving Jesus and imploring Him to eradicate your predominant fault by the power of His grace and His divine love.

After that, exert all the powers of your soul to praise and glorify your divine Saviour in the following manner, or in any other way He may inspire you, whether it be vocal, or only in your heart in the form of a meditation.

1V. EXERCISE TO PRAISE AND GLORIFY JESUS.

O Jesus, most worthy of honor and glory, since Thou art so full of grandeur and perfections that command praises without end and since I am in this world only to give Thee glory, I now desire to exert all the powers of my soul and body in blessing and magnifying Thee. I implore Thy Eternal Father, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, Thy angels, and saints, and all the creatures in heaven and on earth, to join with me in blessing Thee, for all that Thou art to Thy Eternal Father, to Thyself, to Thy Holy Spirit, to Thy Blessed Mother, to all Thy angels, all Thy saints, to all men, to all Christians, to myself in particular, and to all created things.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

O Kind Jesus, with all my heart I beg Thee to forgive me for having hitherto, instead of praising and glorifying Thee, done hardly anything but dishonor and offend Thee. To satisfy for this, I offer Thee all the praises that ever have been, and ever shall be rendered to Thee in heaven and on earth.

O my Dear Jesus, I give myself all to Thee. Destroy all in me that militates against Thy glory; transform every thought and function of my body and soul into praises and blessings of Thee. O Jesus, Thou art worthy of praise without end; may I be all praise for Thee! If I possessed all the strength of all the creatures in heaven and on earth, I should be obliged to exert all of it in praising Thee. How great, then, is my obligation to exert what small powers I have. So then, let everything in me be employed and consumed in blessing and magnifying Thee. Benedic, anima mea, Domino et omnia quae intra me sunt, nomini sancto ejus (PS. 102, 1).

O Jesus, so worthy to be admired, I hear Thy holy word commanding me to bless Thee from all eternity to all eternity: Benedicite Domino Deo vestro ab aeterno usque in aeternum (11 Esd. 9, 5). For this purpose I offer Thee all the blessings that have ever been or ever shall be accorded Thee, from all eternity, by Thy Eternal Father, by Thyself and Thy Holy Spirit, uniting myself with all these blessings, and imploring Thee, in Thy great bounty, to unite my humble praise to the endless voice of all who bless Thee forever.

O Great Jesus, Thou art omnipresent. By Thy divinity, Thou dost fill up heaven, earth, and even hell with the immense greatness of Thy divine majesty; Thou art most worthy to be loved and glorified in every place. SO, too, art Thou loved and glorified beyond all measure in heaven, on earth and even in hell, by Thy Father and Thy Holy Spirit, who are everywhere with Thee, and everywhere love and glorify Thee without ceasing.

Thus heaven, earth, and even hell are filled with Thy love, Thy glory and praise: Pleni sunt coeli et terra gloria tua (Isa. 6, 3). I say even hell, because it is filled with the love, glory, and praise there given Thee by the infinite justice of The Father and The Holy Spirit. O Dearest Jesus, what pleasure and joy for me to behold how the whole world is filled with Thy glory!

Indeed, my Saviour, since Thou art thus in every place, and dost everywhere deserve to be praised, I also desire to praise Thee wherever Thou art. To that end I unite myself with all the glory that is given Thee now in heaven, On earth and in hell, and shall be given Thee forever.

Furthermore, I desire now to descend in spirit into hell and there, in the midst of Thine enemies, in spite of all their hatred and fury against Thee, to unite myself with the exceeding great love borne for Thee by Thy Father and Holy Spirit in that place. I adore and love and bless Thee with my whole heart, O Jesus, my Lord, for all that Thou art in Thyself and in all things, and even for all the effects of justice which Thou dost visit upon the demons and the damned.

O Jesus, exceedingly to be adored, would that I had in myself all the powers and all the capacity to praise and glorify Thee that were once in the possession of these miserable souls which, by their malice, they have lost, so that I might now exert them in praising and loving Thee!- These traitors now surrender themselves with all their might, with never a pause. Would that I could show at least as much fervor and concentration in praising Thee as they show fury and concentration in blaspheming Thee! Would that I could make some slight reparation for the insults and curses they heap upon my Saviour!

O Good Jesus, these unhappy souls received from Thee the priceless gifts of being, life and natural perfections, and should use them all for Thy glory; yet they are doing just the contrary. But I must, and I will, give what they fail to give, and in their stead to the things they ought to be doing. For the being, the life and natural perfections of demons and of all reprobates belong to Thee, O my God, because they emanate from Thee. Consequently they belong to me, since all things are mine, according to the Holy Apostle: Omnia vestra sunt (1 Cor. 3, 22), because, in giving Thyself to me, Thou didst give me all that was Thine. Thus, it necessarily follows that I can, and must exercise on behalf of Thy glory the being, life and natural perfections of the demons and the damned, because I am bound to exert all the power that belongs to me to give Thee glory and praise. Hence, I offer and refer these things to Thee, O my Jesus, as my own possessions and I render Thee homage for them; I cast them at Thy feet and sacrifice them entirely and forever to Thy praise and Thy glory. Such is the use and employment to which I desire to put the faculties of the damned so that in spite of themselves they may give glory to Thy Holy Name.

O my God, I desire to descend again in spirit into hell, and put myself in the place that Thou knowest I have deserved by sins, where I should indeed be, if Thou hadst not delivered me by Thy mercy. There I desire to adore and love Thee, O my sovereign judge, and to glorify Thee in all the effects of the terrible justice Thou wouldst have inflicted upon me for all eternity, if Thy mercy had not taken pity on my wretchedness.

O Most Kind Jesus, I have exceeding great confidence that, in Thy infinite goodness, Thou wilt give me grace to become one of the elect who shall bless Thee forever. But none the less, supposing I were to be so unhappy as to resist the designs of Thy goodness, and by my sins cause myself to become a victim of Thy justice, I should desire at this present moment, O great God, voluntarily and through love to do what I should do then, through necessity and compulsion. I mean that I should desire to adore, love and bless, with my whole heart and all my strength, Thy most equitable judgment against me, and all its effects as Thy prophet has said: Justus es, Domine, et rectum judicium tuum: "Thou art just, O Lord: and thy judgment is right" (Ps. 118, 137). And yet, O Dearest Jesus, whom I so desire, I recover again my unshakable confidence that in Thy immense mercy Thou wilt deliver me from so great a disaster. For, alas! Non mortui laudabunt te, Domine, neque omnes qui descendunt in infernum. The dead, that is, those who have died the eternal death, shall not praise Thee, O Lord, nor shall all those who go down into hell (Ps. 113, 17). Hic ure, hic seca, modo in aeternum parcas. "Burn, tear, and cut me to pieces, provided only Thou dost pardon me in eternity" (St. Augustine), and provided that I may be numbered among those who shall praise and love Thee forever.

V. CONTINUATION OF THE FOREGOING EXERCISE.

Once I have thus adored and blessed Thee in hell, O Jesus exceedingly worthy of love, I desire to proceed in spirit to purgatory, there to adore, love and glorify Thee similarly, in all the works wrought by Thy justice there, and even in the punishment Thou wilt one day visit upon me, when I shall be in purgatory. So, too, I desire to go there to unite myself with all the love and glory that ever was, is and ever shall be given Thee in that blessed place of purification.

From purgatory I come to the visible world of creation, where I behold three different orders of being, in which I desire to bless and magnify Thee, O Jesus, Sovereign Lord of the World.

The first is the order of irrational and inanimate creatures, concerning which Sacred Scripture teaches me that they praise and magnify Thee without ceasing, to the full extent of their being and natural power, and their existence is entirely one of confession, that is, praise and magnificence of Thee. Confessio et magnificentia opus ejus (Ps. 110, 3). O my divine Creator, how I rejoice to behold Thee incessantly glorified by all Thy creatures, and to see that all Thy works are filled with Thy glory, according to the divine testimony: Gloria Domini plenum est opus ejus (Eccli. 42, 16), and to hear that the whole universe resounds with Thy praise! How guilty I am, and what a source of confusion it is to me to understand that I have to learn, from insensible creatures, the lesson of the glory I must render to Thy divine majesty. O Lord, permit me to unite myself with all the blessings accorded Thee without ceasing by all creatures. O you beloved creatures of my God, bless Him, praise Him, exalt Him for me through all the ages: Benedicite omnia opera Domini Domina, laudate et superexaltate eum in saecula (Dan. 3, 57). Divine Creator, do not allow me to live on earth except to join all Thy creatures in ceaselessly blessing Thee.

The second order in the world is the state of the wicked, that is, those who are devoid of all knowledge or love of Thee, O most kind Jesus, and who begin to do on earth what the damned do in hell that is, to dishonor and offend Thee continually. Let me, O my Jesus, with the help of Thy grace, make up for all they fall to give Thee. Let me love and bless Thee for them, and for all the favors Thou hast given them, of which they make not the slightest acknowledgment to Thy bounty. Let me refer and sacrifice to Thy glory the being, life and natural perfections Thou hast given them, just as I have referred and sacrificed to Thy glory the being, life and natural perfections of those who are in hell.

The third order which I behold in the world, O Jesus, is the good, which embraces the vast number of holy souls living in the world and in many religious communities, who are employed without ceasing in Thy praise, with such affection and discipline that not a single hour or minute of the day or night goes by without Thy receiving great glory and praise from them. For this do I rejoice beyond measure, O my God, and I desire to unite myself, if it please Thee, with all the benedictions that ever have been, or are now, or ever shall be given Thee on earth by all the precious souls that belong to Thee.

From earth my thoughts ascend to heaven, where I behold the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, together with so many millions of Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominations, Virtues, Powers, Principalities, Archangels, Angels, Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Priests, Confessors, Virgins, Widows, Innocents and other saints, who are forever engaged in loving and glorifying Thee with all their might, with radiant love and concentration. My Dear Jesus, how glad I am to behold Thee so loved and magnified! I offer up to Thee all this glory and all this praise. O Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, Mother of Jesus, and His angels and saints, with all the blessings that you give to Jesus my Lord, include, I pray you, my own also, and allow me to share in the love, attention, purity and sanctity with which you incessantly praise Him, so that I may praise Him with you forever and thus commence here below what I hope and desire to do eternally with you in heaven.

O Most Divine Jesus, I rejoice beyond all measure that Thou art so full of greatness and perfection, and consequently so deserving of glory and praise that all the creatures on earth and in heaven together are unable to praise Thee according to Thy worth. Thy dignity and worthiness of praise infinitely surpass the whole capacity of heaven and earth to praise Thee, as the Prophet David said: Confessio ejus super coelum et terram (PS. 148, 14). Only the Father and Holy Spirit give Thee praise worthy of Thy infinite greatness. All the other praises rendered on earth or in heaven are unworthy of Thee, for they are finite, while Thou art deserving of praise that is infinite.

O Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, what shall I do for You? How shall I repay You for the glory You give to Jesus Christ my Lord? Yes, even though (to imagine the impossible) I had never received nor ever should receive any favor from You, I should none the less desire to love and serve You eternally for the love and the glory that You give to Him who is my all, whom I love more than myself.

O Father of Jesus, O Holy Spirit of Jesus, I implore You with my whole heart, by Your very great love for my Lord, and by Your most ardent zeal for His glory, to atone for all my neglect in pleasing Him, and to make Him a hundredfold return for all the glory I ought to have rendered Him all my life. O Good Jesus, I give myself to Thee, to praise and glorify Thee in every way that shall please Thee. Grant that my life may henceforth be a continual sacrifice of praise and benediction for Thee, but do Thou render infinite blessing to Thyself on my behalf: Benedicite omnes virtutes Domini Domino. Let all the virtues, that is, all the might and powers of Thy divinity and humanity, Lord Jesus, be employed in blessing Thee for me, and in exalting and magnifying Thee incessantly and forever (Dan. 3, 61).

VI. ROSARY OF THE ETERNAL FATHER.

On this monthly day of recollection devoted to a more particular love and praise Of Jesus, you may, if you like, say a rosary which I call the Rosary of the Father of Jesus, because it is addressed to the Eternal Father, and beg Him to praise and glorify His Son Jesus in you and for you.

This rosary is made up of thirty-four small beads, in honor of the thirty-four years of Our Lord's life on earth.

First, repeat three times Veni Pater Jesu, "Come, Father of Jesus," to invoke and draw down to you the Father of Jesus, and to give yourself to Him that He may destroy all in you that is contrary to the glory of His Son, and glorify Him in you according to His holy will.

Then on each small bead say: Pater clarifica Filium Tuum, ut

Filius Tuus clarificet Te: "Father, glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee" (John 17, 1).

This is the prayer which the Son of God addressed to His Eternal Father on the eve of His death. Therefore, no prayer can be said by you that is more pleasing to Him than this invocation, nor can you ask Him anything that would please Him more than what you request of Him in this perfect prayer.

But when you recite this invocation, remember that it came forth from the heart and lips of Jesus. Unite yourself with the humility, the purity, the love, and all the holy dispositions and intentions with which Jesus Christ uttered it, begging the Eternal Father to glorify His Divine Son throughout the whole world, and to destroy in you and in all mankind everything that is contrary to His glory. Implore Him to implant in your soul all the graces and virtues required for His perfect glorification, and to exert the power of His own zeal and love for His Son to glorify Him there, according to, His holy will.

On the large beads say: Gloria tibi, Domine Jesu, qui natus es de Virgine, "Glory to, Thee, Lord Jesus, who wast born of the Virgin Mary." When you say this, offer to Jesus Christ all the glory that ever has been, is now and ever shall be rendered to Him forever in heaven and on earth.

VII. EXERCISE OF LOVE FOR JESUS.

Of all the duties and functions of a truly Christian soul, the most noble, most holy, most elevated that God asks of you before all others, is to exercise yourself in divine love. For this reason you must make a point of affirming to Jesus Christ our Lord, in all your pious practices and other actions, that you desire to perform them, not for fear of hell, nor for the reward of heaven, nor for the merit attached, nor for your own satisfaction and consolation, but only for the love of God Himself, for His satisfaction, His glory and His pure love.

So, too, you ought frequently to exercise yourself by contemplation and acts of this divine love.

I have already indicated many such acts in the preceding exercises. But in addition, here are thirty-four more, in honor of the thirty four years of Our Lord's life on earth, a life that was all love. Added to these are one or two others which may be used at any time, but chiefly for the monthly day of recollection or any other day in the month set aside expressly for your conscientious application to this divine contemplation, which is the greatest, the holiest, and most noble occupation of the angels and saints, and of God Himself, in which He always has been, is now, and ever shall be engaged throughout all the infinite extent of eternity.

VIII. THIRTY-FOUR ACTS OF LOVE OF JESUS CHRIST IN HONOR OF THE THIRTY-FOUR YEARS OF HIS LIFE ON EARTH.

1. O Jesus, my Saviour, Thou art all lovable, infinitely lovable and infinitely worthy of love. O my God, I need no other knowledge but this. What concern have I with so many studies and ideas and considerations? It suffices me to know that my Jesus is all lovable, and that there is nothing in Him that is not worthy of being loved beyond measure. Let my mind then be satisfied with this knowledge; but may the hunger of my heart to love Him Who can never be loved enough, never be sated.

2. Alas! My Saviour, I know that this poor, insignificant, imperfect heart of mine is not worthy to love Thee. But Thou art exceeding worthy to be loved, and Thou didst create this poor heart only that it might love Thee. Thou dost command it to love Thee under pain of death, eternal death. God of my heart, Thou hast no need to command. To love Thee is what I want, what I desire, what my heart sighs after. Yes, my Jesus, I no longer want any other desire. Farewell all other thoughts, all other inclinations, all other wishes. I wish to have but one increasing purpose here on earth; I desire nothing, only to love Jesus, who is the love and delight of heaven and earth. Ah, Jesus! Ah, My Dear Jesus! What do I desire on earth? Nothing, O my all, but only to love Thee.

3. O Jesus, worthy of all desire, indeed I long to love Thee, not only with all the power of my too feeble will, but to the full extent and with all the might of Thy divine will, which is mine since Thou hast given me all. Add to that the will of all men and angels. They also are mine, since in giving Thyself to me Thou hast given me everything. O sweetest Lord, would that I were entirely transformed into desires, aching, yearning, and longing to love Thee ever more and more!

4. O Thou desire of my soul, grant me the favor I implore; hearken to the cry of my heart. Thou knowest, Lord, what I ask of Thee; my heart has so often told Thee. I ask nothing but the perfection of Thy holy love. I desire only to love Thee and ever to grow progressively in that desire. O Thou object of all my desires, increase in me the desire to love Thee, which Thou hast given me. Increase it so much and make it so burning and strong that I may henceforth incessantly with the desire of Thy love.

5. O Jesus, worthy of all love, crown of all desire, enkindle in my soul so burning a thirst and so extreme a hunger for Thy holy love that it may be to me a ceaseless martyrdom not to love Thee enough, and let nothing more in this world be able to cause me sorrow, except that I love Thee too little.

6. O Good Jesus! Who is there who would not wish to love Thee? Who would not desire to love ever more and more such lovable goodness? My God, my life and my all, I cannot be content to tell Thee that I desire to love Thee as perfectly as possible, and that I desire it so much that, if it were possible, I should will my whole spirit to be transformed into wishing, my whole soul into desire, my heart into yearning, my life into longing.

7. O King of my heart, take pity on my misery. Thou knowest that I want to love Thee. But alas! Thou seest how much there is in me that goes against Thy love. Thou seest the innumerable multitude of my sins, my self-will, my self-love, my pride and all the other vices and imperfections which keep me from loving Thee perfectly. I detest and abhor all these defects which so obstruct my desire to love Thee! What must I do to destroy them? I stand ready to do and suffer all that pleases Thee for that end. Exert the strength of Thy powerful arm to exterminate in my soul all the enemies of Thy love.

8. O Jesus, everything in Thee is love, and all love for me. And although I ought to be all love for Thee, there is in me nothing of myself, whether in body or in soul, that is not opposed to Thy love. Oh, what pain! Oh!, what anguish! How can I tolerate my own self? Where art Thou, divine love? Where is Thy power? Where the force of Thy mighty arm? O consuming and devouring fire, where are Thy heavenly flames? Why dost Thou not totally annihilate this wicked and sinful life of mine, and establish Thy life, divine and holy ?

9. O all-powerful love, I surrender myself entirely to Thy holy might. Come, I beseech Thee, into my soul, there to destroy all that displeases Thee, and to establish Thy heavenly kingdom. If suffering is all that is required to effect this change, I offer myself with my whole heart to Thee, that I may suffer all the martyrdom and torments that ever have been and ever shall be suffered in the world. Spare me not, love! Nothing matters except that I be set free from all that displeases my Saviour and of all attachments that keep me from loving Him. I long to love my Jesus and I will to love Him perfectly, no matter what the cost, no matter what the sacrifice.

10. O God of love, Thou art all lovable, all loving, all love and all love for me. Why am I not also all love for Thee? Why are not heaven and earth transformed into a pure flame of love for Thee?

11. My sweet love, who shall henceforth prevent me from loving Thee, now that I realize Thy immense goodness? Shall my body? I will grind it to dust first! Shall my past sins? O Jesus, I plunge them deep into the sea of Thy Precious Blood. Take my body and my soul and make me suffer all that pleases Thee, to purge them utterly, so that they may no longer prevent me from loving Thee. Shall the world, or creatures stop me? No. With all my might I renounce all affections of sense and all created things. I consecrate my whole heart and all my affections to Jesus, my Creator and my God. And as for you, O world, excommunicated from Jesus, since He and His disciples are not of this world, and since He said that He prayed not for the world, know once and for all that I give you up forever. I fly from you as from an excommunicate; it is my will to consider you as an antichrist, the enemy of my Lord Jesus Christ. I will set no more store by your praises and censures, your pleasures and ambitions, or by all that you most highly value and cherish than I would by a dream or a puff of smoke that vanishes away. I will hold in abhorrence your spirit, your code of behavior, your opinions and your accursed maxims. Finally, I will hate and persecute your malice just as much as you hate and persecute the goodness of my Lord Jesus Christ.

Farewell then, world, and once again farewell to all that is not God. Jesus shall henceforth be my world, my fame, my fortune, my delight and my all. I no longer desire to see anything but Jesus Christ. Eyes, close yourselves up against all else, for He alone is a worthy Object of vision. I no longer want to please anyone but Jesus. I no longer want to have any love or affection save for Him. I no longer want to rejoice except in His love and in performing His most amiable will. Nor do I any longer wish to grieve except for what offends Him and is contrary to His divine love. O love! O love! Let me love or let me die:

may, rather let me both die and love! Die to all that is not Jesus, and then love Him alone to perfection.

12. O King of my love, Thou hast placed me on earth only that I may love Thee. Oh, how noble, how holy and how lofty is the end for which Thou hast created me! O what a favor, O my heart! What an honor was given Thee, when Thou wast created for the same purpose as the God who made Thee, and to employ thyself in the same divine activity which is His ceaseless concern! This great God exists only to contemplate and love Himself eternally and continually. My soul is created only to love the God who made it, and to be forever employed in loving and blessing Him. May He be forever loved and blessed, the King of all hearts, who has given to me a heart, capable of loving Him!

God of my heart, since Thou hast created me only to love Thee, do not allow me to live except in love of Thee, ever growing in Thy love. Death or love! Give me more life, my God, only that I may love Thee more. Better a thousand deaths than the loss of Thy love.

13. O divine love, be the life of my life, soul of my soul, heart of my heart. Let me live no more save in Thee and by Thee. Let me no more subsist save by Thee and for Thee.

14. Thou sole object of my heart, Thou alone art worthy to be loved. All that is not Thee is mere nothingness and deserves not even one passing glance. It is Thee alone that I desire, Thee alone that I seek, Thee alone I long to love. Thou art my all; the rest is nothing to me now and I no longer want to regard anything or love anything, save Thee in all things.

O Dearest Jesus, Thou art my greatest friend; indeed Thou art my one and only friend. To me Thou art Father, Brother, Spouse and Head. Thou art all mine. I desire to be all Thine forever.

15. O Jesus, who alone art worthy to be loved, who alone dost love and alone art loved by the Eternal Father and by all the elect who love in heaven, grant that I may love Thee above all things, alone in all things, and that if I love any created thing, I may love it only in Thee and for Thee.

16. O Thou only love of my heart! O Thou sole object of my love! Nothing in heaven or on earth is worthy of love save Thee. When, therefore, shall it be ordained that men will see nothing and love nothing in heaven and on earth save Thee?

17. O Jesus, O my one and only love, detach me altogether from myself and from all things. Draw me inescapably close to Thee. Possess me so fully and so absolutely that nothing but Thee may ever retain any part of my mind or my heart.

18. O Dearest Jesus! How lovable Thou art, and yet how little loved! The world thinks not of Thee, nor of loving Thee. It thinks only of offending Thee and of persecuting those who desire to love Thee. Let me then think of Thy love instead of the world and concentrate all my thoughts on loving Thee! Grant that I may love Thee as much as the world ought to love Thee.

19. O Eternal Son of the Eternal Father, Thou art all lovable, all loving, and all love. From all eternity Thou didst begin, without beginning, to love me forever. If I had existed from all eternity, I should have been bound to love Thee always. As I have only existed in time I should at least have loved Thee from the first moment I obtained the use of reason. Alas! I have begun to love Thee late indeed, nor do I even dare to say that I have even now begun to love Thee as I should. O Eternal God, Thou hast never passed a moment without loving me, through all the extent of Thy eternity, and yet I hardly know if I have ever spent a single moment of my life in loving Thee as I ought. On the contrary, I know only too well that I have never spent a day without offending Thee. What pain, what heart break for my soul, O Lord; I can not tolerate myself when I think of this. Break with grief, O my heart. Dissolve into tears, O eyes! Why am I not dissolved into a sea of tears of penance and of blood, to lament and wipe out my prodigious ingratitude towards such great kindness! O love, no more offenses, no more sin, no more infidelity, no longer anything but love!

20. O eternal love, Thou art loved from all eternity by the Eternal Father and by the Holy Spirit. Boundless is my joy at this; I unite myself with this love, and I lose myself in the ceaseless love of the Father and the Holy Spirit for Thee from all eternity.

21. O everlasting beauty! O eternal goodness! If I had an eternity on earth, I should be bound to employ it all in Thy love. How great, then, is my obligation to use what little life and time remain for me to love Thee! O dearest Lord, I consecrate it all to Thy holy love. Grant that I may no longer live save to love Thee, and that no moment of my life may pass without being employed in Thy divine love! But above all, grant me to love Thee for all eternity. Whatever happens, I unite myself now with all the love that shall be Thine throughout eternity.

O eternity of love! My Dearest Jesus, consume me with thy divine Fire; dismember me, reduce me to dust and make me suffer every thing Thou dost please in this world, provided only that I may love Thee eternally.

22. O King of Ages, Thou hast bought, at the price of Thy blood, every minute of my time and of my life so that I might use them in loving Thee. Too much, too much, alas, have I wasted on self-love, on love of the world and on attachment to created things. Too much time have I lost, time that has cost Thee so dearly, which ought to be so precious to me, since it could be employed in such great and important work as the infinite concerns of Thy divine love. It is indeed time, O Jesus, high time, that I begin seriously to practise the holy exercises of Thy sacred love. Let me have no more days and hours, except to love Thee. Let me so dispose my life that there may remain for me in all the world only myself and Thee. May I have nothing to do but think Of Thee and converse with Thee, heart to heart, spirit to spirit. And may nothing, of all the things that happen in the world, touch me or pertain to me, save only the one care and the one desire to love Thee. O Jesus, increase in me this desire, and make it become so burning and so urgent that it may grow from a simple desire, into continual longing. May I aspire to Thee incessantly; may I tend towards Thee perpetually; may I yearn for Thee night and day without ceasing. O Sweetest Jesus, Thou only love of my desires, when will the time come when I shall be utterly transformed into a pure flame of love for Thee?

23. O immense love, God of the Universe, Thou dost fill heaven and earth; Thou art everywhere and in all things. Everywhere dost Thou infinitely love the Father and the Holy Spirit, and art infinitely loved by Them. So, too, Thou dost love me infinitely in all places and in all things. Let me love Thee also in all places and all things, and let me love all things in Thee and for Thee. To that end, I unite myself to Thy divine immensity, and in its fathomless power, I direct my mind and my will everywhere and into all places in the world. There, in all the power and immensity of Thy spirit and Thy love, I love Thee, glorify Thee and adore Thee infinitely. I also unite myself to the all-embracing love of Thy Father and Thy Holy Spirit for Thee, manifested everywhere and in all things that are in heaven, on earth and even in hell.

24. O infinite goodness, an infinite love would be necessary to love Thee as Thou dost deserve. What joy for my soul, what satisfaction for my heart, to know Thou art so good, so perfect, and so lovable that even if all creatures on earth and in heaven were to exert all their strength, throughout eternity, they would never be able to love Thee enough. There is none but Thyself, together with the Father and the Holy Spirit, capable of loving Thee worthily.

25. O infinite goodness, if I had every single heart and the total capacity for love possessed by all men and angels, I should be bound to exert them all in the love of Him who is infinitely lovable, and directs all the sources of His wisdom, power and goodness to loving me and working so many wonders for my love. How great, then, is my obligation to exert my little strength in loving His goodness! Henceforth, O my Dear Jesus, I desire to pour forth all the powers of my body and soul in loving Thee. But that is not enough. I desire also to gather unto myself all the might of heaven and earth, which belong to me by Thy gift of Thyself, and exert them all in loving Thee. I desire to employ likewise all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity, which are also mine, since Thou hast Thyself given Thyself to me.

I love Thee, then, O Jesus, I love Thee with all my might, with all the strength of my body and my soul, all the capacity of every creature in heaven and on earth, and all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity.

26. But what am I saying, O my God? I am not worthy to love Thee. To Thee alone belongs so holy and divine a function. Therefore I annihilate myself at Thy feet, plunging into the deepest abyss of my nothingness. I give myself all to Thee. Do Thou Thyself destroy me by the power of that most mighty love, which reduced Thee even to our nothingness, and establish Thyself in me in order to love Thyself there with a love worthy of Thee. Let me love Thee, henceforth, no longer by myself nor by the powers of my own mind and my own love, but by Thee and by Thy mighty spirit and Thy flaming love.

27. O Most Lovable Jesus, Thou dost assure us in Holy Writ that the Father loves us even as He loves Thee, that is, with the same affection and the same love with which He loves Thee. Thou dost command us to love Thee as Thou dost love the Heavenly Father and to remain ever in Thy love, even as Thou dost ever dwell in the love of the Father. But, Lord, Thou knowest my powerlessness to love Thee by myself. Grant me the grace to perform what Thou dost command of me; then command me as Thou wilt. Destroy my own heart and my self-love. Implant within me Thy Heart and Thy love, so that I may henceforth love Thee as Thou lovest the Father and as the Father loves Thee. May I always remain in Thy love, as Thou dost remain always in the love of Thy Father; and may I do everything by the power and under the guidance of that love. Yes, my Jesus, it is in that eternal, infinite and immense love of the Father for Thee, and of Thee for the Father for all eternity, that I desire to love Thee from now on, consecrating to that love my every thought, word and deed for Thee. It is Thy infinite love, Thy immense Heart all filled with treasures of sublime love, that I offer to Thee as my own heart and love, since Thou gavest it to me in giving me Thyself, together with the beloved heart of Thy peerless Mother, the most lovable, the most loved, and the most loving of all human hearts. To these I add the hearts of all the saints and holy persons in heaven and on earth, and I offer them as my own, since Thy holy apostle, St. Paul, teaches us that the Almighty Father, in giving Thee to us, gave us all things together with Thee (Rom. 8, 32).

28. O Jesus, Thou art purity itself and Thou dost love me with an exceedingly pure love. I desire also to love Thee with the purest love possible. Hence, I wish to love Thee in Thyself, in Thy own love; I desire to love nothing but Thee for Thyself alone, and solely for Thy good pleasure. I love Thee, O my Dearest Jesus, I love Thee with that exceeding pure love Thou hast for Thyself. I love thee also in the most pure love of the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy most pure Mother, Thy angels and Thy saints. O Father of Jesus, angels of Jesus and His saints, O all creatures, come to my aid. Help me to love your Creator and mine. Come, let us love Him, our most lovable Lord, let us employ and expend all our being and all our powers in loving Him who created us only that we might love Him.

29. O Thou my heart's dear Friend and Thou dear Heart of my love! How desolate it is, and how much to be lamented with tears of blood, to see Thee loved so little even by those who claim to love Thee.

And this is strange because there is no one so worthy of love as Thou; yet it seems there is nothing in the world less loved than Thou art. There are many souls who love the thought of heaven and the sweetness of Thy grace and the consolations of Thy love, but out of a thousand good men scarcely one will be found to love Thee purely for love of Thyself alone. O most pure love, my dearest Saviour, Thee alone do I seek, Thee alone do I desire, Thee alone do I love. I desire to love Thee not for my own interest and satisfaction, not because it is sweet full of consolation, but because Thou art most worthy to be loved for Thyself alone.

30. When shall I love Thee so purely that I shall be able to say with truth: My Jesus is my all and everything else to me is nothing. He alone sufficeth me, and I desire no other. I desire Him not for myself but for His own goodness. The joys of Paradise, the consolidation of heavenly love, are not my aim. I seek the Lord of Paradise and the divine Author of all consolations. And even if He were never to favor me with any consolations or reward (which would not be possible to His goodness), yet should I wish to love Him always, because He is most worthy of love, for love of Himself. I desire no other reward than to have the power to love Him for His own sake alone.

O Good Jesus, implant these loving dispositions in my heart and in the hearts of all mankind especially those to whom Thou knowest I am indebted and eager to remember in my prayers. O King of all hearts, behold I offer to Thee each poor human heart Thou hast created to love Thee, desiring now only to breathe Thy love. Destroy in those chosen hearts all that is contrary to Thy sacred affection; fill them with Thy divine love. O dearest Saviour, draw them to Thyself; unite them to Thy Sacred Heart; engulf them in Thy love and number them among the blessed of whom it is said: vivent corda eorum in saeculum saeculi: "Their hearts shall live for ever and ever" (PS. 21, 27), that is, they shall live with the life of divine love, in order to love forever the God of love and of life! How blessed are the hearts consecrated for all eternity to adore, praise and love the most adorable and exceedingly lovable Heart of Jesus! Blessed be He who has created these cherished hearts that He might be glorified and loved by them forever!

31. O God of my life and of my heart, Thou dost ever love me. Thou dost employ all Thy powers and all creation in heaven and on earth, to testify to me of Thy love. I learn from one of Thy dearest saints: "Heaven and earth and all creation never cease to tell me that I should love the Lord my God" (St. Augustine., Manuale, c.24). Everything that I hear, everything I see, taste, touch and smell, everything that can be known or desired by my memory, understanding and will, all things visible and invisible that are contained in the order of nature, grace and glory, all the temporal and eternal graces I have received from Thee, all the angels and saints, all the encouraging examples they have given me by their virtues and their holy lives, all the wonders Thou hast worked on behalf of Thy most holy Mother, all the perfections inherent in the essence of Thy Divine Person, all the mysteries of Thy divinity and humanity, all Thy divine attributes and virtues, all Thy thoughts, words, deeds and sufferings, every step Thou didst take on earth, every drop of Thy Precious Blood, all the wounds of Thy sacred body, in a word, all things that are or ever were, in created or uncreated being, in time and in eternity, constitute so many tongues, by which Thou dost continually proclaim to me Thy goodness and Thy love. All these things incessantly testify that Thou dost love me and dost urge me to love Thee in return. All are so many voices by which Thou dost say constantly to me: Amo te, amo te: dilige me quia ipse prior dilexi te. Dilige Dominum Deum tuum ex toto corde tuo, ex tota anima tua, et ex totis viribus tuis. I love thee, I love thee; love Me for I have loved thee first. Love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart and thy whole soul and thy whole strength." Finally, all these things are so many preachers, so many voices crying out to me without ceasing: Love, love for Jesus, who is all love for you, who employs all that He is, all that He has, all that He knows, all that He does and all that depends on Him, in heaven and on earth, to make you realize the love He bears you, and to win your heart and compel you to love Him.

My Lord and my God, how surpassingly great is Thy bounty and how wonderful Thy love for me! Thou dost love, desire and seek me with intensity and fervor, as if I were of great concern to Thee, as if I were indeed truly necessary to Thee. Thou dost desire to possess me and dost fear to lose me as if I were a precious treasure. Thou dost pursue my friendship with as much insistence as if Thy happiness depended upon it. Would there be anything more Thou couldst do for me, O Lord, even if Thy whole happiness and glory did depend upon my love? O profound kindness, I lose myself in Thy fathomless depths. O priceless kindness, how can it be Thou art so little valued, so little loved, and so much offended and persecuted by those whom Thou lovest so? O hearts of men, how hardened you must be not to be softened by so many persuasive and loving voices! How frozen, not to be melted by so many sacred fires and flames! How can I resist so many powerful attractions of Thy infinite kindness? What dost Thou desire or expect of me, O my Saviour, except that I reply to Thee with St. Peter, the Prince of the apostles: Amo te, amo te, I love Thee, I love Thee" (John 21, 15-17).

But instead of replying to Thee thus, I have cried out against Thee with the cruel Jews, by the voice of my sins: Tolle, tolle; crucifige eum (John 19, 15). O what anguish and heart rending sorrow! All my sins, my ingratitude, my perverse inclinations, my self-love, my self-will, my pride, all my other vices, all my evil thoughts, words and actions, all the misuse of my bodily senses, of spiritual faculties, all are so many voices worthy of hell that clamor against Thee unceasingly with the Jews: Tolle, tolle; crucifige eum. O detestable traitor! Is this how you love Him who is all love for you? Is this your answer to Him who calls you with such sweet persuasion to His love? Is this how you repay His unbounded kindness for all the blessings you have received from Him? Forgive me, O most generous Lord, I beseech Thee, forgive me. May all Thy kindness and mercies (if I be permitted to say it thus) ask forgiveness for me. May Thy holy Mother, with all the angels and saints, cast themselves down at Thy feet to win this pardon from Thy clemency. May all the creatures by which Thou dost cry out to me, I love you, be so many suppliants on my behalf before the throne of Thy benignity, crying with all the humility, repentance and contrition that ever was or ever shall be: "Forgive, forgive, have mercy on this poor sinner!"

O most merciful Saviour, may it please Thee to accept and approve by Thy great mercy the promises I am about to make for the future. O my Most Lovable Jesus, since Thou dost constantly love me, and since Thou dost employ all that is within and without Thyself in loving me, I, too, desire to be ever concerned in loving Thee, employing all that is within and without me in Thy holy love. And even if, to imagine the impossible, I were to be in no way under obligation to love Thee, I should, nevertheless, desire to love Thee with my whole heart and all my strength.

To that end, if it please Thee, I desire to dedicate all my thoughts, words and deeds, all the functions and senses of my body and faculties of my soul, my every breath and heartbeat, every pulse of my veins, every instant of my life, all things that have been, are, and shall be in me, even my sins, so far as it is possible, to Thy wisdom, which well knows how to make all things cooperate for the good of those who love Thee. I desire that all these things may turn into so many voices, by which I may continue ceaselessly and eternally telling Thee, with all the love in heaven and on earth: Amo te, amo te, etiam Domine Jesu, amo te. I love Thee, I love Thee, yes, my Lord Jesus, I love Thee." And if any element of my Soul or part of my body says the contrary, I desire that it may be ground into powder and cast to the winds.

32. I also desire that all things that ever were, are and shall be in the orders of nature, grace and glory, in heaven or on earth and even in hell, may be as many voices proclaiming without ceasing forever, on my behalf: Amo te, amo te, Domine Jesu, I love Thee, I love Thee, Lord Jesus." This is the spiritual use I am bound and freely desire to make of all things, in so far as they belong to me and have been given to me by Thee to employ in Thy love.

33. I also desire further, O my Jesus, that all the powers and perfections of Thy divinity and humanity, all Thy states, mysteries, attributes, virtues, thoughts, words, acts and sufferings, all Thy sacred wounds, every drop of Thy Precious Blood, every moment of Thy eternity, if such an expression be permissible, all things that are or ever existed in Thy body, soul and divinity, may be so many voices proclaiming to Thee forever for me: Amo te, amantissime Jesu, amo te bonitas infinita; amo te ex toto corde meo, ex tota anima mea, et ex totis viribus meis, et magis atque magis amare volo. I love Thee, O Most Loving Jesus; I love Thee, O infinite goodness; I love Thee, with my whole heart, with my whole soul, and all my might, and I desire to love Thee ever more and more."

Finally, my Saviour, I desire, if it please Thee, that there may no longer be anything in existence, in my body or in my soul, in my life and my eternity, which is not transformed into love for Thee.

In order to implement my desires and wishes effectively, I desire and will all this, not with my human and natural will, which is too weak and unworthy to be employed in willing such great and holy things, but with Thy divine will, O Jesus, which is all powerful and belongs to me, since Thou art all mine.

O my Lord, if my powers were as great as my desires, I should in deed make everything achieve its perfect fulfilment for Thy glory and love. But it is for me to desire and for Thee to effect-Thou dost do all things and dost the will of them that fear Thee. Grant, then, these my cherished and deepest desires, O Most Beloved Jesus. I beg this of Thee by all that Thou art, by Thy infinite goodness and mercy, by everything Thou dost love, and by all who love Thee in heaven and on earth for Thy most pure love and satisfaction. Thy love is mine and since I will what I have said in the power of Thy divine will, my confidence is firm that, in Thy infinite goodness, all these things shall be effected as Thy eternal wisdom deems most fitting to the glory of Thy divine greatness.

34. Good Jesus, when will the time come when there will no longer remain anything in me to prevent me from loving Thee? Too well I know that this shall never be on earth, but only in heaven. O beautiful heaven! How you appeal to my desires! O blessed city where Jesus is perfectly loved and His glorious love fully reigns, where no hearts dwell that are not completely transformed in this divine love! O earth, O world, O body, dark prison of my soul, how unbearable you are! Wretch that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? Do I still have long to remain in this miserable exile, in this strange land, in this place of sin and accursedness? Will not that day soon come, that desirable hour for which I have so often longed, in which I shall begin to love most perfectly my most lovable Lord?

My Dearest Jesus, shall I then never love Thee as I desire? God of mercy, wilt Thou not take pity upon my sorrow? Wilt Thou refuse to hear my supplication? Wilt Thou not grant what I implore with such pitiful cries? O my Lord, to Thee do I cry, Thee do I desire, for Thee do I long. Well Thou knowest that I desire nothing on heaven or earth, in life or in death, except Thy pure love.

Mother of Christ, angels and saints of Christ and all His creatures, take pity on my sorrow; speak on my behalf to the Beloved of my soul; tell Him that I pine away with love of Him. Tell Him that I desire nothing in time or eternity but His pure love; I desire neither heaven, nor the glory of heaven, nor the great joys of paradise, nor the delights of His grace, but only His most pure love. Tell Him that I can no longer live without that pure love. I implore Him to make haste, to fulfil in me the designs and work of His grace and to consume me utterly in His divine love, in order to take me soon into His eternal kingdom. Amen. Veni, Domine Jesu! "Amen. Come, Lord Jesus" (Apoc. 22, 20). Come, my life and my light, come, my love, my all, come unto me and eradicate everything that works against Thy love. Come to me to transform me wholly into love for Thee. Come to draw me to Thee, and to establish me soon in that abode of love where true and perfect love reigns, where all is love, pure and continual, changeless and everlasting. Come, O Dearest Jesus, Thou sole love of my heart.

1X. ACTS OF LOVE FOR JESUS, PRISONER IN THE SACRED WOMB OF His MOST BLESSED MOTHER.

O Jesus, my love, I behold Thee a prisoner in the most pure womb of Thy Blessed Mother, but more imprisoned in the sacred bonds of Thy divine love. Let me love Thee, O Good Jesus, in the infinite love that binds Thee and make me with Thee a prisoner of divine love.

O love that holds Jesus captive in Mary and Mary in Jesus, take my heart, my mind, my thoughts, desires and affections prisoner and establish Jesus in me, in order that I may be completely filled with Him, and that He may live and reign perfectly in me.

O Jesus, my sweet love, I love Thee with all the love with which Thou wast loved, during Thy nine months' imprisonment, by Thy Eternal Father, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, and all the angels and saints who took some special part in this mystery of love.

O abyss of love, when I behold Thee in the sacred womb of Thy most holy Mother, I see Thee as it were divinely lost and annihilated in the ocean of Thy divine love. Let me lose myself, and be destroyed with Thee in this same love!

X. ACTS OF LOVE IN HONOR OF THE BIRTH AND HOLY CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.

O Jesus, Thou art infinite love in all the moments, states and mysteries of Thy life, but, above all, Thou art pure love and sweetness, at the moment of Thy birth and during Thy most Holy Childhood

238- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

Let me love Thee at this precious moment, in this hidden state. May heaven and earth join with me and may the whole world be transformed into love for its Creator and God, Who is completely transformed into gentleness and love for the world.

O most amiable Child, Thou art born by love, in love and for love. At the moment of Thy birth, Thou dost love Thy Eternal Father more than all angels and men together could do in all eternity. So, too, the Heavenly Father loves Thee more at this moment than He ever did or will love all men and angels together. O Jesus, I offer Thee all the love concentrated on Thee at birth by Thy Eternal Father, by Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, St. Gabriel and all the angels and saints who participated so intimately in this most lovable mystery.

O love of Jesus, that dost triumph over Him in all His mysteries, but particularly in His sublime Childhood and the consummation of His Cross, O love that in these two mysteries, dost transform His Omnipotence into helplessness, His plenitude into poverty, His sovereignty into dependence, His eternal wisdom into infancy, His joy and bliss into sufferings, and His life into death, conquer my selflove, my own will and my passions, and put me in a state of powerlessness, indigence, dependence, holy and divine childhood, and death to the world and to myself, which state may adore and glorify the powerlessness, the dependence, Childhood and death to which Thou Aids to reduce my Jesus in the mysteries of His Nativity and of His Cross.

These acts of love upon the Nativity and Childhood of Jesus will suffice to show how to make similar acts in honor of the other mysteries of the life of our Most Lovable Jesus.

XI. ACTS OF LOVE FOR JESUS CRUCIFIED.

Here are ten acts of love for Jesus Crucified, which may be made when you kiss the crucifix, which it would be well to do each day, in the evening, after your examination of conscience, so that you may end your day in the love of your divine Redeemer and obtain from Him the grace to end your life in acts of love of Him. This is how you proceed:

I. Kiss the foot of the cross, saying:

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES      239 -

"O Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love with which Thou didst kiss, embrace and love the Cross presented to Thee on the day of Thy holy Passion, but actually embraced from the moment of Thy Incarnation, with all my heart I love and embrace all the crosses, bodily or spiritual, it may please Thee to send me in my whole life, uniting them to Thine, and begging Thee to grant me a share of that great love with which Thou didst bear them."

2. Kiss the wounds in the holy feet of Jesus with the following desire:

"O Jesus, if it please Thee, I desire to kiss Thy holy feet with love like that of St. Mary Magdalen when she kissed those blessed feet in the Pharisee's house, when she won the reward of hearing these sweet words from Thy holy lips, "Thy sins are forgiven thee."

3. Again kiss the feet of Jesus with this desire:

"O Jesus, I desire to kiss Thy holy feet with all the love of all the just souls on earth, offering Thee all their love in satisfaction for all the times in my life when I have let myself fall away from Thy love."

4. Kiss the wound in the left hand with this intention:

"O Jesus, I desire, if it please Thee, to kiss this sacred wound in union with the love of Thy archangel Gabriel, all the Seraphim and all the angels, especially my guardian angel, offering Thee all this love in satisfaction for the many times I have been guilty of falling away from Thy holy love."

5. Kiss the wound in the right hand with this elevation of the soul to Jesus:

"O Jesus, I desire to kiss this holy wound in union with all the love which all the saints in heaven have for Thee, offering Thee their immense love in satisfaction for all the sins I have committed against Thy divine love."

6. Kiss the sacred wound in the side of Jesus, in union with the love of the Blessed Virgin; or rather, consider yourself unworthy to kiss this holy wound, and ask the most Blessed Virgin to kiss it for you:

"O Mother of Jesus, I implore thee to kiss the holy wound in the side of Thy Son for me, and by this holy kiss make Him a hundred fold return for all the love I should have given Him in my whole life."

And instead of kissing the wound in His side, kiss the wound in the feet, with the following desire:

"O Jesus, if it please Thee, I desire to kiss Thy holy feet in union with all Thy holy Mother's love for Thee, offering Thee all this love in reparation for the faults I have committed against Thy love."

7. Kiss the holy wounds of the sacred head crowned with thorns; or rather, considering yourself too unworthy for this, address yourself to the Eternal Father, and say to Him:

"O Father of Jesus, if it please Thee, imprint a most holy kiss on the sacred brow of Thy Well-Beloved Son, and by this kiss render to Him a thousand times the love I should have given Him in my whole life!"

And instead of kissing the wounds of the sacred head, once more kiss the feet of the Crucified Saviour saying:

"O Jesus, let me kiss Thy holy feet with all the love Thy Eternal Father bears Thee, and let me offer Thee this infinite love in reparation for my failures to love Thee."

8. Also kiss the holy feet of Jesus in union with the love of the Holy Spirit:

"O Jesus, let me kiss Thy holy feet in union with all the love of Thy Holy Spirit for Thee, offering Thee that burning love in satisfaction for the faults I have committed against Thy divine love."

9. Once again kiss the sacred feet in union with the divine love of Christ for His own person, saying to Him in your heart and with your lips also, if you wish:

"O Jesus, once again I kiss Thy sacred feet, with all the love Thou hast for Thyself. I offer Thee all this love to satisfy for my failings, imploring Thee to recompense Thyself a hundred thousand times for all the love I ought to have given Thee since I came into the world."

10. Finally, kiss these divine feet once more with all the holy love in earth and heaven together, saying:

"O Jesus, let me once more kiss Thy divine feet with all the love that ever was, is now and ever shall be accorded Thee from all eternity to all eternity, in heaven and on earth, by all the divine and holy persons who love Thee. Let me offer Thee this matchless love in satisfaction for all my sins and infidelities, for all the failures to love Thee of which I have ever been guilty in my whole life."

Note that, when you make these acts of love, there is no necessity to pronounce the words with your lips, nor even to have actually present in your mind the thoughts I have set down. It is quite enough to kiss the crucifix ten times, with the above intentions. Each of these acts may be performed in an instant. It is nevertheless a good thing, at the beginning, to apply your mind to these thoughts and intentions. Later on, when you have been following this exercise for some time, the whole veneration of the cross may be performed with great facility in a very short time.

These ten acts may also be made without a crucifix, if you say ten times the holy words: O Jesus! and each time will to say them with the above intentions.

XII. ROSARY OF THE HOLY LOVE OF JESUS.

This rosary consists of three decades and four beads, a total of thirty four small beads, in honor of the thirty-four years of the life of Our Lord on earth, a life all of love.

To start with, you say: Veni sancte Spiritus, reple tuorum corda fidelium, et tui amoris in eis ignem accende: "Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of Thy faithful and enkindle in them the fire of Thy love." This invocation draws down upon you the holy love of Jesus, which is His holy spirit, and gives you to Him, that He may destroy everything in you that opposes Him, and perfect the love of the Holy Ghost for the Son of God. -

On each small bead, you say the following words, taken partly from the Gospel and partly from St. Augustine, who repeats St. Peter's triple repetition of Amo te to Our Lord after His resurrection, when asked whether he loved Him. Amo te, amantissime Jesu; amo te bonitas infinita, amo te ex toto corde meo, ex tota anima mea, et ex totis viribus meis, et magis atque magis amare volt. I love Thee, Most Amiable Jesus, I love Thee, O infinite goodness, I love Thee with my whole heart and with all my might, and I desire ever to love Thee more and more!

242 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

The first Amote, I love thee," should be said in union with all the love of the Eternal Father for His Son, the second should be said with the intention of sharing all the love of the Son of God for Himself. The third should be recited with all the love of the Holy Spirit for Jesus, bearing in mind that, in giving you His Son, the Eternal Father gave you everything with Him, as St. Paul says (Rom. 8, 32), and it follows that the love of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost belongs to you, and that you are entitled to, employ it in order to love Jesus.

As you say ex toto corde meo, "with all my heart," you must understand by this the Heart of Jesus, the Heart of Mary, the heart of each of the angels and saints in heaven, all comprising a tremendous Heart one with the most Sacred Heart of Jesus and of Mary, by virtue of the union existing between all hearts. And this is likewise your heart, for St. Paul assures you that all things, without exception, belong to you: omnia vestra sunt (1 Cor. 3, 22), and consequently in loving Jesus you can and must use this universal Heart as if it were your own.

The words ex tota anima mea, "with my whole soul," denote the holy soul of Jesus, that of the Blessed Virgin, and all the holy souls in heaven which together form one single soul by virtue of the union wrought by charity. This soul is yours, and you must make use of it to love Him who gave it to you.

When you say, ex totis viribus meis, "with all my might," you ought to have the intention of employing all the powers of the divinity and humanity of Jesus and all the strength of all the creatures in heaven, on earth and even in hell, as your own power to love Jesus.

When you say the last words: Et magis atque magis amare volo, "and I desire to love Thee ever more and more," you should have the intention of employing all your will in desiring to love Jesus, and also of exerting the full extent and infinite capacity of the divine will in order to desire to love Jesus with a will that is infinite and worthy of Him, since your own natural will is not capable of loving Him as He deserves.

On the large beads of the rosary say these words of St. Augustine:

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES

0 ignis, qui semper ardes et numquam extinguerit, 0 amor! qui semper ferves et numquam tepescis, accende me, accende me totus, ut totus diligam te. "O fire, who art ever burning and never extinguished, O love, who art ever fervent and never growest cold, enkindle me, set me on fire, that I may be all aflame with love for Thee."

Or else, instead of this, you may say: Veni Sancte Spiritus ... etc.

I might also add at this point that it is sometimes very beneficial to recite the above words: Amote, amantissime Jesu, etc., after Holy Communion, for at that moment you possess within yourself most intimately the love of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, with the divine Heart and holy soul of Jesus, and all the powers of His divinity and humanity, and you are then more than ever entitled to direct all these infinite powers as your own in loving Jesus. Then you can indeed say to Him truly amo te amantissime Jesu, amo te, etc., with the intentions you have given above.

It is also a good thing to repeat, after Communion, this verse of the Psalmist: Benedic anima mea Domino, et omnia quae intra me sunt, nomini sancto ejus: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and let all that is within me bless his holy name" (Ps. 102, 1). By this you refer to Jesus, Who is at that time within your heart as the soul of your soul, to the Most Holy Trinity, and all the wonders of heaven and earth. For they are within you in the Holy Eucharist, which is a compendium of God's wonders. And you should desire that everything within you may be employed in blessing, glorifying and loving Jesus and the Most Holy Trinity, and all the plenitude of the divinity that dwells in Jesus Christ.

XIII. PATRON SAINT FOR EACH MONTH.

The angels and saints are most pleased, most willingly hear and answer most gladly the prayer that they may love Jesus for you and help you to love Him. It is in this that they place all their happiness and so it should be your chief prayer to them. In addition to the saints to whom you should have special devotion all your life, it is a most holy practice to choose one particular saint every month, and ask him each day to love Our Lord for you and help you to love Him, to make use of you to love and glorify Him, to atone for the faults you commit during the month against His love. You should love and glorify Our Lord in the saint of your choice, uniting yourself to the praises given Our Lord by him, and striving to imitate the works and virtues he practised for Christ's glory.

244- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

XIV. THE MONTH OF MARCH.

Of all the months of the year, the month of March deserves your particular consideration. It was in this month that the greatest works and the holiest mysteries of God were accomplished. The world was created in the time corresponding to March. Many learned doctors are of the opinion that during this month the waters of the deluge receded, the People of God were delivered from the captivity of Egypt, and passed dry-shod through the Red Sea. It was in this month that the Son of God was made flesh, suffered, was crucified, died, delivered the souls of the saints from Limbo and rose again from the dead. It was also in this month that the Most Holy Sacrament~ merit of the Altar was instituted, that the Blessed Virgin entered upon her dignity of Mother of God, and that the holy apostles were consecrated priests by the Son of God. Thus the month of March is, in a proper and particular way, Christ's own month, because it was in this month that Jesus began and ended His life on earth, and accomplished His greatest works. It is a special month in the life of the Blessed Virgin Mary, because during March she became Mother of God. It is the month of divine love, wherein the Son of God brought about the greatest mysteries of His love namely, the Incarnation, the Passion, and the divine Sacrament of His Body and Blood. It is also specially dedicated to St. Joseph, foster father of Jesus and Spouse of the Most Blessed Virgin, and includes his feast as well as that of St. Gabriel, the angel who ever waited upon Jesus, the guardian angel of the Mother of Jesus and the herald of the Annunciation.

Hence you should make this month the occasion of most special zeal, devotion, and renewal of fervor.

Part Six

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES FOR THE BEGINNING AND END, AND DURING THE COURSE OF THE YEAR TO LIVE A CHRISTIAN AND SAINTLY LIFE AND TO MAKE JESUS REIGN IN YOUR SOUL

SPIRITUAL EXERCISE FOR THE NEW YEAR

1. BEGINNING THE NEW YEAR WITH JESUS.

The great Apostle St. Paul tells us that, «Christ died for all, that they also who live, may not now live to themselves, but unto him Who died for them» (11 Cor. 5, 15), and that he "died for us; that, whether we watch or sleep, we may live together with him" (1 Thes. 5, 10). Jesus Himself assures us that His "delights were to be always with the children of men" (Prov. 8, 31). Therefore, if you are not to deprive Him of His delight, nor of the efficacy of His most holy death, you must seek all your delight in His society, and exercise your ingenuity in piously contriving to be ever with Him, never losing sight of Him, and having Him as your object in all things; you must wake and sleep, live and die with Him, begin and end all your years, months, and days with Him. I shall now set before you the way to begin and end each year well and how to spend it with Jesus. You shall see in 'Part Seven' how to begin and end your lives with Jesus.

To begin each year of your life in union with Jesus, you should begin it as He began His earthly life. For that purpose, at the beginning of every year, you should take a little time to cast yourself at the feet of Jesus, in order to pay Him your tribute and homage by means of the practices which I am about to set before you.

11. TRIBUTE TO JESUS CHRIST FOR THE NEW YEAR.

O Jesus, my Lord, I adore, bless and love Thee with all the powers of my soul, in the first moment of Thy life of suffering on earth.

248- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

I adore all the holy thoughts, sentiments and dispositions of Thy divine soul, and all that took place within Thee in that first moment.

O Admirable Jesus, from the very first moment of Thy mortal life, Thou didst turn towards the Eternal Father to adore, love and glorify Him, to refer to Him Thy being, Thy life and all its consequences. Thou didst give Thyself to Him to do and suffer everything He pleased, for His glory and for love of us. I behold that, at the same instant, Thou didst turn Thy spirit and heart towards me, to think of me, to love me, to make great plans for my soul and to prepare very special graces for me.

Blessed be Thou, O Good Jesus, and may all the creatures of heaven and earth, and all the powers of Thy divinity and Thy humanity eternally bless Thee for all these things.

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee, to commence this year as Thou didst begin Thy life on earth, and to enter with Thee into Thy holy dispositions. I beg Thee, by Thy great mercy, to implant these dispositions in my heart.

O Most Adorable Jesus, in honor of and in union with the humility, love and other holy dispositions with which Thou didst adore and love Thy Eternal Father, giving Thyself to Him at the first moment of Thy life, I adore, love and glorify Thee, as my God and my Saviour, as the Creator of time, the King of years and of centuries, and as the divine Redeemer who purchased for me, at the cost of Thy own blood, all the time which is given to me on earth.

O Jesus, I consecrate to Thee all my minutes, hours, days and years, my being and my life, and all that goes with it. I desire to employ everything for Thy pure glory alone. I desire all my thoughts and acts, every beat of my heart, every breath I draw, and all else that shall take place in me this year, and in my whole life, to become so many acts of praise and love for Thee. May it please Thee, my dear Jesus, to grant that this may be so, through Thy most great power and goodness.

I also offer Thee, O Jesus, all the love and glory that shall be given to Thy majesty. I unite myself with all the honor and praises that shall be given Thee this year and forever, by Thy Eternal Father,

SPIRITUAL EXERCISE FOR THE NEW YEAR

Thy Holy Spirit, Thy holy Mother, Thy angels, saints and all Thy creatures.

O Most Amiable Jesus, I adore all the designs Thou dost deign to shape for me during this year. Do not permit me to put obstacles in their way. I give myself to Thee to do and suffer everything Thou dost please, for the accomplishment of these eternal designs. In honor of, and in union with the same love with which Thou didst accept, at the first moment of Thy Incarnation, all the sufferings Thou hadst to bear in life, I now accept and embrace, for Thy love, all the sufferings of body and spirit I shall have to undergo this year and during my whole life.

O my Saviour, a year will come that will be the last in my life. Perhaps this very year now unfolding is to be my last. If I knew with certainty that this was to be so, with what care and fervor would I spend it in Thy service! However that may be, I wish to spend this year as if I had no more time to love and glorify Thee in this world, and to make up for the occasions in the past, when I have fallen away from my love of Thee. Please grant me, O Good Jesus, all the graces that I need for this.

III. PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN FOR THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR.

O Blessed Virgin, Mother of my God and Saviour, I honor and reverence thee in the first moment of thy life. I honor and reverence all the dispositions of thy holy soul, and all that took place in thee at that time.

Thou didst begin immediately, O holy Virgin, to love and glorify God most perfectly, and from that first moment to the last of thy life, thou didst ever love and glorify Him more and more. And as for me, in spite of all the years I have been in this world, I have not yet begun to love and serve Him as I should.

O Mother of mercy, beg thy Divine Son to have mercy on me. Atone for my failings, offering Him on my behalf all the love and glory thou didst ever give Him, to satisfy for my neglect in loving and glorifying Him. Grant that I may share in thy surpassing love for Him, and in the fidelity of that great maternal love. Pray for me, that He may give me the grace to begin, at least now, to love Him perfectly, and that all that shall take place during this year, and all my life, may be consecrated to His glory and thy honor.

Ye angels of Jesus and His saints, pray for me, that our loving Saviour may give me new grace and new love for Him, to devote this year and my whole life, purely and solely, to the service of His glory and love.

DEVOTION TO THE MYSTERIES OF THE LIFE OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

IV. EACH YEAR YOU MUST HONOR WITH SPECIAL DEVOTION ALL THE STATES AND MYSTERIES OF OUR Lord's LIFE.

So many and so binding are your obligations to honor and love Jesus Christ in Himself and in all the circumstances and mysteries of His life, that anyone who might wish to undertake the enumeration of them would be attempting the impossible. I shall, however, call attention here to one or two. To begin with, I shall show that, since your duty is to continue and fulfil in yourselves the life, virtues and actions of Jesus Christ on earth, so must you also prolong and fulfil, in yourself, the states and mysteries of Jesus, and frequently implore Jesus Himself to consummate and accomplish them in you and in His whole Church.

You cannot too often realize and reflect on the truth that the mysteries of the life of Christ have not yet reached their full perfection and completeness. Although they are perfect and complete in Christ's own Person, they are not yet completed in you who are His members, nor in Holy Mother Church, which is His Mystical Body. It is the plan of the Son of God that His whole Church should participate in and actually be, as it were, the continuation and extension of the mystery of His Incarnation, birth, Childhood, hidden life, public life of teaching and of labor, His Passion and His death, by the graces He desires to impart to you, and by the effects He wishes to accomplish in you through these same mysteries. By this means, He desires to fulfil His mysteries in you.

Therefore, St. Paul says that Jesus Christ is fulfilled in His Church (Eph. 1, 22-23) and that we all come together in His perfection and His maturity (Eph. 4, 13), which means, as I have said, His mystical Body, which is the Church—a maturity which will not be complete until the Day of Judgment. And St. Paul again speaks elsewhere of the same fulness of God which is accomplished in you, and of the growth and increase of God in you (Eph. 3, 19). And in another place he says that He fills up in His body the Passion of Jesus Christ (COL. 1, 24). Now what he says of the fulfilment of the mystery of the Passion may also be said of the other mysteries of the life of Jesus Christ.

So the Son of God plans to perfect and complete in you all His states and mysteries. He intends to fulfil in you the divine life which has been His for all eternity in the bosom of His Father, imparting a participation in that life, and making you live, with Him, a life entirely pure and holy.

It is His design to complete in you the mystery of His Incarnation, birth and hidden life, by taking flesh in you and being born in your souls, as it were, through the Sacraments of Holy Baptism and the Blessed Eucharist, causing you to live by a spiritual and inward life, a life hidden with Him in God.

It is His design to perfect in you the mystery of His Passion, death and Resurrection, by causing you to suffer, to die and to rise again with Him and in Him. It is His design to fulfil His glorious immortal life in heaven, by causing you to live, in Him and with Him, a glorious and immortal life after death. He likewise intends to perfect and accomplish in you and in His Church all the other mysteries of His life by the communication and participation granted to you by His holy Will, through the continuation and extension of these mysteries operating in you.

This universal plan of the Son of God will not be completed until the Day of Judgment. The ranks of the saints will not be filled up until the consummation of the time God has allotted to men for their sanctification. Therefore, the mysteries of Jesus will not be complete until the end of the time determined by Jesus Christ Himself for their consummation in you and in His Church, that is, until the end of the world.

Now the life you have here on earth was given to you only for the accomplishment of the infinite designs of Jesus Christ for mankind. Hence, you should employ all your time, your days, your years, in cooperating with Jesus Christ in the divine task of consummating His mysteries in yourself. You must cooperate in this by good works and prayer, by frequent application of mind and heart to the contemplation, adoration and veneration of the sacred mysteries of His life according to the different seasons of the year, so that, by these very mysteries, He may work in you all He desires to accomplish for His pure glory. This is the first reason why you must have a special devotion to all the infinitely precious details and aspects of the life of Jesus.

V. ADDITIONAL REASONS FOR HONORING THE MYSTERIES OF THE LIFE OF CHRIST.

Although you have every reason to cultivate particular devotion to the mysteries of His life, I shall present four special obligations.

1. You are obliged to imitate the Heavenly Father, according to the teaching of St. Paul: Estote imitatores Dei sicut filii/ii charissimi (Eph. 5, 1). Now the Divine Father is continually absorbed in contemplating, glorifying and loving His Son, Jesus Christ, and in causing Him to be loved and glorified in Himself, and in all His states and mysteries.

2. You must love and honor especially all things through which God is given love and glory. Everything that exists in Jesus Christ gives infinite glory to God. So you should give particular and, were it possible, infinite honor to all the vast mysteries and the very smallest details that are found in the life of Christ. You are infinitely more obliged to honor them and to thank the Son of God for the glory He rendered to His Father by His mysteries, than you are to pay homage and thanks for the graces and salvation He has acquired for you, inasmuch as God's interests ought to be infinitely more dear to you than your own.

3. The Holy Ghost, speaking through Holy Mother Church, continually invites and urges you to adore and glorify the mysteries of Jesus. At the beginning, middle and end and in all the principal parts of Holy Mass, in the hymn Gloria in Excelsis, in the Credo, at the last Gospel, In principio erat Verbum, and at several other places in the Holy Sacrifice, as well as in the daily recitation of the Creed, in daily prayers, and throughout the Divine Office, the Holy Ghost unceasingly recalls to your thoughts the blessed mysteries of the life of

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

Jesus. Why is this so, if not in order that they may be the object of your contemplation and adoration and the subject of all your pious exercises, and that thus they may be the daily bread and nourishment of your souls? For your souls should live by faith alone and by the attention and love which they must entertain for the mysteries of God and of Jesus Christ, according to St. Paul's statement: "But my just man liveth by faith" (Heb. 10, 38).

4. All greatness deserves honor and homage, but an infinite greatness deserves infinite honor and homage. This constitutes yet another special obligation. Jesus Christ is the greatest of the great. He is greatness itself, and is an infinite and incomprehensible greatness. Everything that is bound up in His divinity and humanity, all the mysteries of His existence and even the slightest things that took place in Him, all sustain an infinite greatness and dignity and embody an infinity of wonders. Therefore, they deserve infinite honor and glory.

And yet, great and noble and holy as these things are, how little known, how seldom considered, how poorly honored they are, even by the very ones who style themselves the children of Christ, who bear His Name and dwell on earth only to know and love Jesus, His life and His mysteries. They are so meagerly honored even by these who cannot possess any real life except in His love and knowledge, according to these great words of Truth Himself: "This is eternal life: That they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17, 3).

The happiness of heaven consists in this alone, and in this alone consists true life on earth: to know, love and honor the life and mysteries of Christ. This will be the basis of the account you shall be required to give of yourself at the hour of death. One of the greatest reproaches that will be made against you in that hour, will be the scanty and poor attention and honor you have given to the life and mysteries of Jesus. This will be the purpose of the Son of God in holding His universal judgment at the consummation of time, namely, to exact, by the power of His justice, the honor and homage due to His mysteries by all creatures, and even by His own enemies, before the eyes of heaven and earth. This also is the reason for the existence of hell, that those who shall have failed to honor

Christ's mysteries on earth by love and free will, will render this necessary tribute in hell through constraint and force, by the operation of God's justice in them.

That is why, if you are to avoid being among the number of these miserable creatures, you must make it your chief care and devotion to consider and honor the mysteries of the Son of God. Preference should always be given to the feasts of Our Lord, as well as to those of His holy Mother, over all other feasts. And you should dispose your time and your devotional exercises in such manner as to honor the entire life of Jesus, and the orderly sequence of its mysteries during the course of each year.

VI. SEQUENCE TO BE OBSERVED THAT YOU MAY EACH YEAR HONOR ALL THE STATES AND MYSTERIES OF JESUS.

Beginning with the first of all the states of Jesus, the divine life enjoyed by Him in the bosom of His Father for all eternity, it is recommended to honor it in the time immediately preceding Advent, so that you may adore Jesus in His life in the bosom of His Father for all eternity, before adoring Him in His life in the bosom of the Virgin, in the fulness of time. When I speak of the time before Advent, I mean the months of October and November.

I set aside, however, the last two weeks of November, as being appropriate for honoring the life led by Christ in the world before His Incarnation, for the space of five thousand years, from the creation of the world up to the Incarnation of the Creator of the World. For during this time Christ was living, in a certain manner, in the minds and hearts of the angels of heaven, of the patriarchs, prophets, and just men on earth, who knew that He was to come and loved Him, desired Him, awaited Him and continually asked God for His coming. In the same way He lived in the souls of the patriarchs who were in Limbo. So also did He live in the Mosaic Law, which was promulgated only to prefigure and foretell Him, and to dispose the world to believe in Him and receive Him when He should come.

During Advent you should honor the mystery of the Incarnation, and the dwelling of Jesus within Mary for the space of nine months.

256 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

From Christmas to the Purification, honor the Holy Childhood of Jesus, and all the mysteries included in it, as the Church presents them for veneration, such as the mystery of His birth, of His dwelling in the cave at Bethlehem, of the Circumcision, the Epiphany, the Presentation, the Flight into Egypt, His life there up to the age of seven years, of the journeys to the Temple in Jerusalem in company with His holy Mother and St. Joseph, their loss of Him in the Temple, and His session in the midst of the Doctors at the age of twelve years.

From the Purification to Ash Wednesday, honor the infinitely precious and unknown hidden life which He spent working with His Mother and St. Joseph, up to the age of thirty years.

From Ash Wednesday to the First Sunday of Lent, you should honor the Baptism of Jesus in the Jordan and His manifestation by the voice of the Father, saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased" (Matt. 3, 17), by the descent of the Holy Ghost upon Him in the form of a dove, and by the testimony of St. John the Baptist.

During the first week of Lent, honor the solitary life of Jesus in the desert.

During the second week of Lent you should honor His public and active life among men, from the age of thirty to that of thirty-three years and three months, following closely the daily gospel of the liturgy of the Church for the holy season of Lent. One week is, however, too short to honor Christ's public life, and as you cannot devote any more time to it in Lent, you shall honor it again after the Feast of Corpus Christi.

The other four weeks of Lent will be dedicated to the honor of the penitential life of Christ, which is divided into four parts, namely, humiliations, privations, exterior and interior sufferings. In the first of these four weeks, honor all the humiliations which Jesus bore in His life, both interior and exterior. In the second, His interior and exterior privations. In the third, the exterior sufferings endured in His body. The fourth, the interior sufferings which He bore in His soul.

Holy Thursday, honor the institution of the most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist at the Last Supper, and the washing of the feet of the Apostles.

From Good Friday to Easter Sunday, adore Jesus in His agony. His suffering, His Cross, His death, the descent of His soul into Limbo, and the burial of His body.

Easter Sunday, Christ's Resurrection and His entry into the life of glory. This, too, you should venerate on all the Sundays of the year, which are especially consecrated to the honor of Christ's Resurrection.

From Easter to the Ascension, honor Christ's life in glory, and His stay upon earth after the Resurrection.

From the Ascension to Pentecost, you shall again honor Christ's glorified life, this time in Heaven after His Ascension. This glorified life should likewise be adored every Sunday of the year.

From Pentecost to the Feast of the Holy Trinity, you are to honor the mission of the holy spirit of Christ, and all the greatness, attributes and mysteries of that divine spirit.

On the Feast of the Holy Trinity, you shall adore the life of the Blessed Trinity in Jesus, and the life of Jesus in the Trinity, which you should also honor every Sunday of the year. The first day of each week is always dedicated to the mystery of the Holy Trinity, the honor of the life of the Holy Trinity in Jesus, and of the life of Jesus in the Holy Trinity, and to the honor of the mystery of the Resurrection and the state of the glorified life of Christ.

The three days following the Feast of the Holy Trinity are dedicated to the Three Divine Persons: Monday, to the honor of the Father; Tuesday, to the honor of the Son; and Wednesday, to the honor of the Holy Spirit.

During the octave of Corpus Christi, as well as on the Thursdays of each week, you shall honor the perpetuation of the life of Our Lord in the Holy Eucharist.

The time remaining between the octave of Corpus Christi and the month of August shall be divided into two equal parts. The first is dedicated to the honor of the public life of Jesus, for which there was not sufficient time during Lent.

The second part shall be devoted to the honor of the mystery of the second coming of Jesus, and of the general and public judgment to take place at the consummation of time, which is one of the mysteries of the glorious life of Christ, and the first mystery which Holy Church proposes to our adoration in the Creed after the mystery of the ascension and the enthronement of Christ at the right hand of the Father.

During the month of August, honor the four principal attributes of Jesus Christ, as follows:

1. His divinity, or divine essence. This He possesses in common with the Father and Holy Ghost, making Him co-equal with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God infinite, incomprehensible, eternal, immortal, all-powerful, all-wise, all-good, resplendent with all the perfections that inhere in the divine essence.

2. His Divine Person. This is proper and peculiar to Him, in virtue of which He is the Son of God, the image and splendor of the Father, and the divine exemplar according to which the Father formed all things.

3. His holy soul, with all its faculties, memory, understanding, and Will.

4. His holy body, with all the members, sensations, and feelings, especially His Precious Blood and His divine Heart.

During the month of September, honor the seven kingdoms of Jesus Christ, which are:

1. Christ's kingdom in the natural world, made up of the four elements of earth, water, air and fire, and all natural things that exist in the world.

2. The kingdom of Christ in the spiritual and mystical world on earth. that is, the Church Militant.

3. The kingdom of Christ in death, in which are honored His sovereignty, His justice, His eternity, His death and His immortal life.

4. The kingdom of Christ in the particular judgment, which He daily and hourly exercises upon souls as they depart from this life, in which His justice, His equity, His truth, His power and divine majesty are greatly honored.

5. The kingdom of Christ in the Church Suffering, Purgatory, where continual glory is given to His divine will, His justice, His goodness and His sufferings.

6. The kingdom of Christ in hell, where all His divine perfections and all His mysteries are honored in a way that is superlatively terrifying and astounding.

7. The kingdom of Christ in the Church Triumphant, in heaven.

These are the seven kingdoms of Christ to be honored during the month of September. I call them kingdoms because Christ reigns and triumphs in all these states, and in all these things, and because these seven kingdoms are filled with the glory, the honor, the power, the presence and the majesty of Jesus Christ, as I shall show more fully in the proper place, if it may please God to give me the time and the grace to continue this book.

On the feasts of the Blessed Virgin, and on Saturdays, you shall honor the life of Jesus in His Virgin Mother and all the wonders and mysteries He worked in her.

On the feasts of angels and saints celebrated during the course of the year, you shall honor the life of Jesus as manifested in the angels and saints.

So, you must leave no mystery in Jesus Christ without special honor. You should see Him and honor Him in all places, all times and all things. During the course of the year, you must venerate each of His manifestations and all His mysteries. But to make it easier for you, while waiting for God in His good pleasure to give me time and grace to finish another book I have begun,(1) to give a more extensive treatment to all the kingdoms and mysteries of Christ, I shall here set down the chief aspects you must consider and honor in each mystery of the life of Jesus, and outline a method for their veneration.

First, I should like to point out that you are obliged to have particular devotion to certain angels and saints, to whom you should pay special honor during your lifetime. It is also a good thing to single out some order of saints and angels for special veneration during the course of each year. But it is much more important for you to select some attribute or mystery of Jesus to honor throughout your lifetime, having first recommended your intention to God, invoked the Holy Ghost and consulted your spiritual directors. It is likewise an excellent practice to choose a special mystery each year, On the Feast of the Ascension of the Son of God, to be the object of particular veneration in the course of that year. This should be done in the manner I shall propose below.

(1). St. John Eudes probably refers to All Jesus, or Exercises on the Mysteries of Jesus, a work which was never published. The manuscript is not extant. Cf. P. Costil, Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus. et Marie, 1, 644, and R. P. de Montigny, Vie du P. Jean Eudes (Paris, 1827), P. 438.

VII. EACH MYSTERY OF THE LIFE OF CHRIST To BE VENERATED UNDER SEVEN ASPECTS.

Among the infinite wonders contained in each mystery of the life of Jesus, there are seven main aspects which you should consider and honor in them, for knowledge of them will give you much light and scope, as well as facility in concentrating on His Mysteries.

The first is the external aspect of the mystery, that is, all its outward manifestations. For instance, the visible exterior elements in the mystery of the birth of Jesus are the nakedness, poverty, cold and weakness of the newborn Want, the little swaddling bands in which He was wrapped, His cradle in the crib and on the straw between the ox and the ass, His tears and baby cries, the tiny movements of His sacred feet and hands, the first gaze of His baby eyes, His slumber in the arms of His Blessed Mother, the nourishment He took from her most holy breasts, the sweet kisses He received from her and from St. Joseph, the visit of the shepherds, and all the Other touching incidents that took place outwardly in the stable of Bethlehem, On the night of the birth of the Son of God.

This is what I call the body and the exterior of the mystery of the birth of Jesus. Likewise, all that took place outwardly in the mystery of the Incarnation, of the Circumcision, the Presentation in the Temple, the flight into Egypt, the Passion and all the other mysteries. All that was said or done or suffered outwardly, either by the Son of God, or by the other human beings and the angels who were present at the unfolding of the mystery, comprises its body. Every detail deserves your consideration and honor, because there is nothing unimportant in the mysteries of Jesus, but, rather, each aspect is great, divine and worthy of adoration.

If the Son of God, therefore, takes the trouble to concentrate His divine spirit and Heart (which ought not, it seems, to be concerned about anything Other than divinity itself), on the consideration of every step you take, even numbering the hairs of your head, as He Himself asserts, and writing and treasuring in His Heart the slightest actions you perform for Him, so that He may do honor and glorify them for all eternity in heaven, how much more should you centre your mind and heart on the consideration, adoration and glorification of the smallest details Of the infinite mysteries of His life, seeing that there is not one thing about them which is not infinitely great and admirable, and deserving of infinite honor and adoration!

The second aspect to be considered and honored in each mystery of the Son of God is the interior spirit of the mystery, that is, the particular virtue, power and grace which inhere in the mystery and are peculiar to it, since each mystery has its own proper virtue and Spirit of grace. This includes the thoughts and intentions, the affections, sentiments, dispositions and interior activity accomplishing the mystery. In a word, it includes all that took place inwardly in the mind, Heart and holy soul of Christ, and in the minds and hearts of ,all those who participated directly in the mystery.

Take, for example, all the interior content of the Incarnation, the birth, Passion and other mysteries of the Son of God, such as the thoughts in His mind, the afflictions and sentiments of His Heart, His inward dispositions of humility, charity, love, submission, meekness, patience. Likewise the inward activity of all His mysteries and acts, with respect to His Eternal Father, Himself, His Holy Spirit, His Blessed Mother, His angels and His saints, mankind in general, and each one of us in particular. Add to this the power and virtue and spirit of grace which He exercised in His Incarnation, His birth, Passion and other mysteries. I call at this the spirit, the core and, as it were, the soul of the mystery.

This spiritual aspect ought to engage your principal attention and honor in the mysteries of the life of Our Lord; yet it actually receives the least attention and honor. Many Christians are satisfied to con template the body and the externals, without passing on to the inward features of these tremendous mysteries. Yet it is the spirit and the core that are most important, constituting the foundation, the substance life and truth of the mystery, whereas the exterior is no more than a covering, an accessory, and the accidental being of the mystery. The exterior and body is passing and temporal, but the interior virtue and spirit of grace which dwell in each mystery are permanent and eternal.

Thus you may truly say that Christ's mysteries are not in the past, but are always present, according to the spirit, the interior, the truth and substance of the mysteries, not according to the body and exterior. It is true, however, that one may also say that even according to the body and externals, the mysteries remain ever present in a certain sense, before God, just as all things are always present to Him by virtue of His eternity, because there is nothing past or future in the sight of God.

The third aspect to be honored is the effect accomplished and continually renewed in each one of the mysteries of Jesus. In Sacred Scripture, the Son of God is called the "Lamb, which was slain from the beginning of the world" (Apoc. 13, 8), since from the beginning of the world He has by His death, Incarnation and all His other mysteries, brought about many wonderful effects in glory, felicity, light, grace, mercy, justice and terror, in heaven, on earth, in hell, upon men, angels, and all other creatures. This I shall show, God willing, more extensively further on.

The fourth aspect to be adored in all Christ's mysteries is the special intention present, for in each mystery Our Lord sought to carry out some particular intention, for instance, the intention to glorify His Father and Himself, to glorify the mystery itself and, in certain special ways that are unknown to us, to sanctify souls and to accomplish all the untold effects of grace bound up in each inscrutable mystery.

The fifth aspect to be venerated is the association of the Blessed Virgin with each mystery of Christ. She has a special and extraordinary part in all the mysteries of the life of her Son. She has more share than all the angels and saints and the whole world put to gether because in her the Son of God wrought greater wonders by each of His mysteries than He operated in all His angels and saints or in the entire universe. So also, the Blessed Virgin gave more honor by herself to all her Son's mysteries than all the angels and saints, and the whole world put together.

The sixth aspect is the participation of the angels and saints, who belong specially to each of the mysteries of Christ. Every mystery has its own angels and saints who are dedicated to it by special participation, concern and association.

For example, the angels and saints of the mystery of the Incarnation are St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, all the saints who have ever cultivated special devotion to this mystery and one particular order of angels-we know not which, although it seems likely that it is the Seraphim-who are dedicated to honor this mystery in a special way because it is a mystery of love.

The angels and saints of the mystery of the Nativity are St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, the watchful shepherds, the saints who have cultivated special devotion to this mystery, like St. Bernard, and many others.

The angels and saints of the mystery of the Childhood of Christ are once again St. Joseph and St. Gabriel: for these, together with the most Blessed Virgin, have a part in all the mysteries of the Son of God. There is also St. John the Baptist, who was sanctified by the Child Jesus; then St. Zachary and St. Elizabeth; St. Simeon, the just man who received and held the child Jesus in his arms on the day of His Presentation; St. Anna, the prophetess, who was also in the Temple that day and likewise, as we may readily believe, received Him into her arms. Then the Three Wise Men, the Holy Innocents, and all the guardian angels of these saints, as well as many other saints and angels, unknown to us but dear to Our Lord.

The angels and saints of the hidden life of Our Lord are St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, St. John the Baptist, and all the saints with whom He was associated during His hidden life and all the saints who ever led a hidden and solitary life, and another order of angels, we know not which. For just as the order of Thrones is especially dedicated to honoring Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar, as He Himself revealed to Blessed Angela of Foligno, so it is also very probable that each of the other mysteries has some particular order of angels assigned to its special Honor.

The angels and saints of Christ's public life and ministry include all the holy apostles and disciples, all the saints who were His companions in the course of His public life and ministry, and the guardian angels of all these saints.

The angels and saints of the mystery of His Passion, Cross and death are especially St. Gabriel, St. John the Evangelist, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Martha, Salome, the other holy women gathered at the foot of His Cross, all the holy martyrs, all the saints who, have had remarkable devotion to this mystery and another order of angels unknown to us.

The seventh aspect to be considered and revered is your own singular and special share in the mysteries of Jesus Christ. You have a very particular part in each mystery of the Son of God, inasmuch as He had some thought, some plan, some special love for each one of you, and the design to impart to you special graces and special favors, both on earth and in heaven by every mystery of His perfect life. This obliges you also to pay a particular honor to each of His mysteries.

VIII. SEVEN METHODS OF VENERATING THE MYSTERIES OF OUR LORD.

The mysteries of Jesus are so admirable and worthy of honor that we are bound by many obligations to honor them; therefore we should omit nothing that may be done or suffered in their honor, but must glorify them in every possible way. Now here are seven methods by which you can and must honor them.

1. By thoughts, considerations, affections, dispositions and inward acts, applying your hearts and your minds to contemplate and reflect upon these mysteries to adore them and give them glory.

2. By your words, your speech and your conversations with your friends. All the conversation and communication which Christians hold one with another on earth should have no other subject but Jesus Christ and the virtues and mysteries of His life, just as they shall have no other topic in heaven.

3. By all your outward acts of devotion such as the celebration for bearing of Holy Mass, receiving Holy Communion, going to Confes sion, or hearing Confessions, reciting the divine office and all the other customary exercises. You should also honor them by the external acts performed each day, referring and offering all these things to Jesus in veneration of the mystery you propose to honor. For example, if you intend to honor the mystery of the Incarnation, you should offer Our Lord the above acts in words like these:

"O Jesus, I offer Thee this Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, this Holy Communion, and all the other acts that I shall perform today, in honor of the most adorable mystery of the Incarnation."

4. By the practice of humiliation, mortification and penance, offering them to Jesus for this same end.

5. By imitation, when you strive to reproduce within yourself the mystery you would honor, in so far as it can be imitated. For instance, if you are to honor the mystery of the Childhood of Jesus, you should try to imitate Him in the simplicity, humility, meekness, obedience, purity and innocence of His holy Childhood, and thus to imprint upon yourself an image of the divine Childhood. This is one of the most perfect ways of honoring the mysteries of Jesus.

6. By your mental attitude, when you honor the mysteries of Jesus not only by a few passing exterior or interior acts, but when you are in a stable and permanent state of mind which of itself pays uninterrupted honor to some mystery of Jesus. For instance, if you live in interior or exterior poverty, and this state is borne with patience and submission to God, you honor by your very state the poverty of Christ, and thus your condition is the means of paying continuous honor to the state of poverty to which Jesus was voluntarily reduced while He was on earth.

If by some infirmity or illness you are reduced to a state of weakness so that you can scarcely move and take care of yourself, and you bear this condition with submission to the will of God, in honor of the helplessness to which Jesus was reduced in His Childhood, your state gives honor to the state of helplessness and feebleness of the Child Jesus.

If yours is a retired and solitary state of life, and you love your solitude for the love of God, you honor, by your state, the hidden and solitary life of Jesus.

266- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

If your condition is a cross to you, full of interior and exterior pain and suffering, which you bear with humility and love, in honor of the cross and afflictions of Jesus, you honor by your state the mystery of the Passion and sufferings of Jesus.

7. This method of honoring the mysteries and states of the Son of God is most excellent. They should be honored by a most humble and searching recognition of your unworthiness, incapacity and impotence to accord them the veneration they deserve, recognizing that there is nothing in you worthy to be employed in their honor, but rather that all in you of yourself is an obstacle to the glory you should give them, because Jesus is the only one worthy to honor Himself and His mysteries as they deserve. For this reason you should supplicate Him to glorify them Himself in you, in every way He desires.

IX. SEVEN OTHER METHODS OF HONORING THE MYSTERIES OF JESUS.

I have said above that one of the methods to honor Jesus is by your dispositions and interior acts. Now here are seven of these, which you may use in order to converse inwardly with Jesus on the subject of His mysteries.

1. You must contemplate, adore, glorify and love Jesus in all that is contained, in general, by the complete mystery, in all its circumstances and all that goes with it. Then, if you wish to study the details of the mystery, you may contemplate, adore, love and glorify Him in all that He is (1) in the body and exterior of the mystery; (2) in the spirit and interior of the mystery; (3) in the effects He brought about by the mystery; (4) in His intentions in each mystery; (5) in the participation of the Blessed Virgin; (6) in the part taken by the angels and saints belonging to the mystery; (7) in your own part in it.

2. YOU should rejoice and behold Jesus so great, so admirable, so full of love, charity, sanctity and every sort of virtue and perfection, in each mystery. So, too, you ought to rejoice to see Him love and glorify His Father so highly and so fittingly in this mystery, and to contemplate Him so perfectly and so magnificently loved and glorified by His Father, by His Holy Spirit, by His Blessed Mother, by His angels and by His saints.

DEVOTION TO THE MYSTERIES OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

3. You must bless and thank Jesus for all the love and glory He has given and will give forever to His Father and Himself, as well as for all the graces and favors He has imparted to you and to the whole world by each mystery. But you must thank Him far more for the glory rendered to His Father and Himself, than for the graces imparted to you by His mysteries, because God's interest ought to be dearer to you than your own. Indeed, it is quite enough for you to thank Him for the glory given by His mysteries to His Father and Himself, without particularly thanking Him for the graces acquired for you. If He has obtained and imparted to you any graces, by His mysteries, it was in order to glorify His Father and Himself in you. Thus, when you thank Him for the glory He has given His Father and Himself by His mysteries, you are also thanking Him for the graces He has given you in each mystery. You then express your profound thanks to Him in a most holy, most disinterested and singleminded manner, which makes you forget yourself and see only God in your inward acts.

4. You should humble yourself at the feet of Jesus and beg His forgiveness for your failure to honor Him, for dishonoring Him by your sins, for the obstacles, both in yourself and in others, which you have put in the way of the glory of this mystery and the accomplishment of its designs. You should beg Him to atone for your fault and to make to Himself a hundredfold return for all the honor you ought to have given Him in this mystery, and also implore the Eternal Father, the Holy Ghost, the Holy Virgin, and all the angels and saints to make reparation for your failings, and to make on your behalf a hundredfold recompense to your loving Saviour.

5. You should refer to Jesus all the effects of grace, glory and holiness He ever brought about, in heaven and on earth, by each mystery. You should offer Him all the glory, love and praise which ever were or ever shall be rendered to Him in each of His mysteries, by the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, the Blessed Mother, the angels and saints, particularly by those who belong more intimately to each mystery, and by all the creatures that exist in heaven, on earth and in hell. I have already said that all the divine mysteries are honored even in hell by the power of His divine justice. You ought to unite yourself to all the honor which has been, is, and ever shall be given to the mysteries of Jesus in the whole universe and by all things. You should invoke the Eternal Father, the Holy Ghost, the Blessed Virgin, the angels and saints, especially those that have a particular association with the mystery, to join your homage to the honor they give and ever shall give to the mysteries of Jesus.

6. You should surrender yourself to Jesus to honor this mystery, in every way He desires. After you have exerted all the strength and capacity it shall please Him to give you, you should then beseech Him to honor the mystery Himself, in you, with all the power and holy resourcefulness of His mind and love. You should beg Him to annihilate in you all that is contrary to the glory of this mystery, and to produce in you, by this mystery, all the graces and effects He wills, so that He may rule you according to the spirit and the grace of the mystery, and consummate it in you, and, finally, accomplish in us all the designs He has, in this mystery, in your regard. Then you should give yourself to Him to do and suffer all that He wills, with that end in view.

7. You should ask Jesus to imprint on your heart and on the hearts of all Christians a very great zeal for the glory of His mysteries and to destroy everything that presents an obstacle to their glorification. You should implore Him to cause them to be known and glorified by all men as much as He desires and to consummate them in His Church, fulfilling all the designs which He cherishes in His mysteries. You should offer yourself yet again to Him to do and suffer, for this intention, anything He may will.

These are a few ways of honoring the mysteries of Jesus, and you may choose those which best suit your individuality, making your choice according to the grace Our Lord shall give you, and according to the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

But, in order to facilitate the practice, I shall now condense these seven last ways into a prayer which I dedicate to the holy Childhood of Jesus, which you may apply in turn to each of His other mysteries individually.

DEVOTION TO THE MYSTERIES OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

X. PRAYER To HONOR THE HOLY CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.

1. O Good Jesus, I adore, love and glorify Thee in all the thoughts, designs, sentiments, dispositions and interior occupations of Thy holy soul as a child, with regard to Thy Father, Thyself, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Holy Mother, Thy angels and saints and in particular to me.

2. I rejoice, O Good Jesus, to contemplate Thee in the state of Thy Childhood, and to behold Thee love and glorify the Eternal Father so ardently, and so filled with virtues, excellences, and greatness even as a child.

3. I give Thee infinite thanks for all the love and glory Thou hast rendered to the Father and Thyself in the divine mystery whereby Thou didst grow from infancy to manhood.

4. I beg Thee to forgive me, O my Saviour, for my failure to venerate Thy blessed Childhood, and for all the obstacles I have put in the way of the graces Thou didst plan to effect in me by this mystery. Atone, I beg Thee, for my defects and give Thyself for me a hundredfold return to pay my debt. O Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, angels of Jesus and His saints, glorify my Saviour for me in this mystery.

5. O Jesus, I refer to Thee all the effects of grace and glory Thou didst accomplish in heaven and on earth through Thy holy Childhood. I offer all the love, and glory that ever has been or shall be given to Thee in this mystery forever, on earth or in heaven, by the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Holy Mother, and all the angels and saints, begging Thee to unite me with their continual praises given forever to Thee in this mystery.

6. O divine Child Jesus, I give myself to Thee to honor the mystery of Thy Childhood in all the ways Thou dost please. Destroy in me everything that opposes the glory of this mystery. Grant me a share in the simplicity, humility, sweetness, purity, innocence, obedience and other virtues of Thy holy Childhood. Place me, by this means, in a state of holy and sacred Childhood and filial devotion which shall be a constant imitation and praise of Thy divine Childhood.

7. O Most lovable Jesus, implant in the hearts of all Christians a most ardent zeal for the glory of this divine mystery. Destroy in them all that stands in the way of that glory. Cause it to be glorified by all men in the manner Thou dost desire, and accomplish all Thy cherished designs in this mystery. I give myself to Thee to do and suffer all Thou dost please, for this intention.

DEVOTION TO THE MOST BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

XI. MANNER OF HONORING JESUS IN MARY, AND MARY IN JESUS.

Devotion to the most Blessed Virgin, Mother of God is so pleasing to her Son, and is so dear and commendable to all true Christians, that it is not necessary to recommend it to those who desire to lead a Christian life.

I shall only tell you that you must never separate what God has so perfectly united. So closely are Jesus and Mary bound up with each other that whoever beholds Jesus sees Mary; whoever loves Jesus, loves Mary; whoever has devotion to Jesus, has devotion to Mary. Jesus and Mary are the two first foundations of the Christian religion, the two living springs of all our blessings, the two centres of all our devotion, and the two objectives you should keep in view in all your acts and works. A man is no true Christian if he has no devotion to the Mother of Jesus Christ and of all Christians. St. Anselm and St. Bonaventure assure us that it is impossible for persons who are not loved by the Mother of Christ to have any part with Him. Conversely, it is impossible for anyone to perish upon whom she looks with favor.

As you must continue the virtues of Jesus and keep with you His sentiments, so you must also continue and maintain in your hearts the love, tenderness and devotion that Jesus cherished for His Blessed Mother. He loved her most perfectly and accorded her the very highest honor in choosing her to be His Mother, giving Himself to her as Her Most Beloved Son, taking from her a new being and life, becoming subject to her, following her guidance in outward things during His Childhood and hidden life, afterwards crowning her Queen of heaven and earth, glorifying her and causing her to be glorified by the whole world.

To continue on earth this love and devotion of Jesus towards His most Blessed Mother, you should have a most especial devotion and veneration for her. Now, to honor her as God requires of you, and as she desires, there are three things for you to do:

272- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

1. You must see and adore her Son in her, and see and adore Him alone. It is thus that she wishes to be honored, because of herself and by herself she is nothing, but her Son Jesus is everything in her, her being, her life, her sanctity, her glory, her power and her greatness. You should thank Our Lord for the glory He has given to Himself through His admirable Mother. You must offer yourself to Him and ask Him to give you to her, causing all your life and all your acts to be consecrated to the honor of her life and her actions. You must pray that He will make you participate in her admirable love for Him and in her other virtues. You must ask Him to employ your life in her honor, or rather to honor Himself in her, in whatever way He pleases.

2. You must recognize and honor her first as the Mother of God, then as your own Mother and Queen. You must thank her for all the love, glory and perfect service she rendered to Her Son Jesus Christ our Lord. You must refer to her, after God, your being and your life, subjecting yourself entirely to her as her slave, imploring her to direct you in all your affairs and to assume full power over you, as over something belonging entirely to her, and to dispose of you as she pleases, for the greater glory of her Divine Son. You must beg her to employ all your actions to honor the infinite works of her Son, and to associate you with all the love and praises which she ever gave Him and ever shall give Him throughout eternity.

It is a good thing to make these acts of devotion every day, every every week or at least every month.

To that end, you might use a prayer to the Blessed Virgin contained in 'Part Two' and another prayer that follows presently.

3. You can and should honor the most holy Virgin Mary by thoughts, meditating on the holiness of her life and the perfection of her virtues; by words, taking pleasure in speaking of her perfections and in hearing them discussed; by actions, offering them to her in honor of and in union with her own; by imitation, striving to imitate our admirable Mother, especially in her charity, her pure love, her detachment from all things and her most divine purity, the thought of which ought to arouse in you a powerful desire to shun and fear more than death the least fault against purity, whether in thought, word or act.

DEVOTION TO THE MOST BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

Finally, you may honor the Blessed Virgin by special prayers or works of devotion, such as the Rosary, which ought to be in common use among all Christians, and the Office of Our Lady, which you should recite in union with the love and devotion of her Son Jesus for her, in honor of both their perfect lives and of their sublime virtues.

Let me also add one word more. Each year, you should honor a special mystery of Jesus, as has been said above. It is also good each year, on the day of the Blessed Virgin's Assumption, to choose one of the mysteries of her life for particular veneration during the year. For that reason I have set down the chief of these mysteries.

XII. MYSTERIES OF THE LIFE OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN.

The chief states and mysteries of the life of the Most Blessed Virgin are: her Conception; her abiding in the blessed bosom of her mother, St. Anne; her Nativity; the day on which she received the holy name of Mary, eight days after her birth; her Presentation in the Temple; her childhood up to the age of twelve years; her life and service in the Temple until the age of fifteen years; her holy marriage to St. Joseph, the feast of which is kept in some churches on the fifteenth of January; the Incarnation of Jesus and the Annunciation of her dignity of mother of God; her Visitation and three months' stay with her cousin, St. Elizabeth; her journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem; the birth of her divine Child; the flight into Egypt and her sojourn there with the Child Jesus and St. Joseph; her return from Egypt and hidden life in Nazareth with her Son Jesus, until he attained the age of thirty years; all the journeys she shared with her Son Jesus, following Him everywhere throughout His public ministry; her martyrdom at the foot of the Cross; her joy in the Resurrection and Ascension of her Son; the close of her life on earth, from the Ascension until her own Assumption; the holy Communion she received during that time; her most happy death; her Assumption in triumph; her glorious enthronement at the right hand of her Son, her coronation as Queen of heaven and earth; and her most blessed life in heaven since the Assumption.

XIII. PRAYER HONORING JESUS CHRIST IN His BLESSED MOTHER.

O Jesus, Only Son of God, Only Son of Mary, I adore Thee in one general act of adoration in all Thou art and in all that Thou hast ever brought about in Thy most holy Mother. And I adore Thee particularly and love and glorify Thee in all that Thou art and all that Thou hast brought about in her Conception, Nativity, Presentation, and the other mysteries of her life.

O my Jesus, I take infinite joy in contemplating Thee so great, so admirable, so glorified, and so loved in Thy Blessed Mother.

With my whole heart I thank Thee for all the glory Thou hast ever given and ever shalt give Thyself in her perpetually.

I beg Thee to forgive me, O my Saviour, for all the failings of which I have been guilty with respect to the honor due to Thy most honorable Mother, and for everything I have ever done in my life that was displeasing to her. May it please Thee to atone for my defects, and render to her on my behalf all the honor I should have given her during my whole life.

O Jesus, I refer to Thee all the effects of sanctity and love which Thou hast ever produced in Thy lovable Mother, and I offer Thee all the glory and love that was ever given Thee in her and by her.

O Good Jesus, I give myself all to Thee. Destroy in me everything that is displeasing to Thy holy Mother. Give me entirely to her. Grant that all my life and actions may be consecrated to the honor of her admirable life. Grant me to share in Thy love and zeal for her glory, or rather for Thy glory through her, as well as in her most pure and shining love for Thee, her burning zeal for Thy glory, her humility and her other virtues. Finally, deign to make use of me, O Jesus my Lord, to glorify Thee, and cause Thee to be glorified in her, in every way that shall please Thy holy will.

XIV. PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN, APPLICABLE TO ANY MYSTERY OF HER LIFE.

O Holy Virgin, with all the powers of my being, I adore and honor thy Son Jesus in thee. I honor and reverence thee according to what thou art in Him and by Him, particularly in the mystery of thy Im maculate Conception, Nativity, etc. I honor all the sentiments and dispositions of thy holy soul, and all that took place in thee in this mystery.

Blessed be thou, O Holy Virgin, for all the glory Thou hast given God in this most precious mystery and in thy whole life.

I beg thee to forgive me, O Mother of Mercy, for all the lapses and sins I have committed against thee and thy Dear Son. To satisfy for these I offer thee all the honor and praises that have ever been accorded thee in heaven and on earth.

O Mother of Jesus, I give myself all to thee, imploring thy sweet mercy to give me to thy Son and to destroy in me by thy merits and prayers all that displeases Him. Grant me to share in thy most pure love, thy humility and all thy myriad, resplendent virtues.

Grant that my whole life and each of my acts may be consecrated to the honor of the life and actions of thy Dear Son. Unite me to all the ardent love and perfect glory thou dost and wilt give Him forever. Take my being, my life and all that is in me, and employ me as a creature that is entirely thine, in order to glorify Him in every way thou mayest wish.

DEVOTION TO THE SAINTS

XV. MANNER OF HONORING JESUS IN THE SAINTS AND THE SAINTS IN JESUS.

You ought to cultivate devotion to all the saints and angels, especially to your guardian angel and your patron saint, to the saints who knew Our Lord on earth, to the order of angels and saints with whom you are to be associated in heaven, and to the angels and saints who are charged to watch over the places where you live or travel, and protect your circle of friends.

You should honor them because Jesus Christ loves and honors them: Quicumque glorificaverit me, glorificabo eum. "Whosoever shall glorify me, him will I glorify" (1 Kings 2, 30). And He adds that the Eternal Father honors those who serve His Son: "If any man minister to me," says the Son of God, "him will my Father honor" (John 12, 26). Likewise because they love and honor Jesus, they are His friends, His servants, His children, His members, and, as it were, part of Himself. Finally, to honor them is to honor Him because He is everything in them.

Therefore, you ought to venerate the relics of the saints as a portion of Jesus and part of His members. You should carry relics upon your person in union with the love with which He preserves all the saints, from all eternity, in His Sacred Heart, in order to unite yourself with the love and praises of each of the saints, whose relics you carry with you or honor at their shrines.

To honor the saints in a fitting manner:

1. You should adore Jesus in them, for in them He is everything: omnia in omnibus (Eph. 1, 23). He is their being, their life, their sanctity, their joy and their glory. You should thank Him for the praise and glory rendered to Himself in them and by them, and thank Him more for this than for the graces He imparted to them, or imparted to you through them, because God's interests should be dearer to you than your own. You ought to offer Him all the honor and love that His saints ever rendered to Him, asking His infinite bounty to make you participate in their ardent love and all their other eminent virtues.

DEVOTION TO THE SAINTS

Thus, when you go on a pilgrimage, or receive Holy Communion, or celebrate Holy Mass, or perform any devout action in honor of any saint, you should offer it to Jesus, for the above intentions, in the following manner:

"O Jesus, I offer Thee this journey, this Communion, this Mass, or this act, in honor of all that Thou art in this saint; in thanksgiving for all the glory that Thou hast given to Thyself in him and by him; for the increase of his glory, or rather the increase of Thy glory in him; for the accomplishment of all the designs which Thou hast in regard to him, and that Thou mayest grant me through his prayers and intercession, Thy holy love and all the other graces necessary for me to serve Thee perfectly."

2. When you have recourse to the saints, you ought to be humble, considering yourself most unworthy even to think of them, or to be thought of by them. You should thank the saints for the service and glory they have given to Our Lord and offer yourself to them, asking them to offer you to Jesus, to beg Him to destroy in you everything that displeases Him and to cause you to share in the wealth of graces imparted to them. You should further implore them to honor and love Him for you, and to render to Him a hundred times over all the love and glory you should have given Him. Offer yourself to the saints to be used to honor and glorify Him in any way they see fit.

3. Every city, town and village has its heavenly guardians, so when you are travelling or reach a destination where you intend to spend a little time, you should greet the angels and saints who watch over that place. You should beg your good angel to salute them on your behalf, and you should ask their permission, as lords of that place, to pass through or stop over. Remember that they might in all justice forbid you to enter or pass through, because you are sinners, unworthy to walk on the face of the earth, and because your sins might perhaps draw down some just punishment of God upon the places where you dwell, or through which you pass. All these considerations give you good reason to imitate St. Dominic, who, when he entered any town, begged God not to annihilate it on account of his sins. So it is good to pray to the angels and saints who protect the places we live in or visit, to glorify and love Our Lord for you, and to make up for the faults you may commit while you are in these places.

When you enter upon any kind of transaction with other people, you should always invoke their guardian angels and patron saints, praying that they may dispose them to do whatever tends more to the glory of God in the business you are transacting with them.

It is also an excellent practice to select a special order of saints on All Saints' day, and a particular choir of angels on St. Michael's day, choosing to honor them, or rather Jesus in them, in a more particular manner during that year, as has been explained. A practical application will be given below.

The choirs of angels are as follows:

The Angels, Archangels, Thrones, Dominations, Virtues of Heaven, Powers, Principalities, Seraphim, and Cherubim.

The orders of Saints are:

The Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Priests, Confessors, Virgins, Widows and the Holy Innocents.

Now in order to render it a simple matter for you to honor Jesus in the saints and the saints in Jesus, I shall put it in practical form in the two following prayers. I shall apply them to St. John the Evangelist, and you may address similar prayers to any saint in particular.

XVI. PRAYER TO OUR LORD, HONORING Him IN ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in all that Thou art and all that Thou hast ever accomplished in all Thy saints, especially in the blessed Apostle and Evangelist St. John. O Great Jesus, Thou art in all things, and I desire to see and to honor Thee only in all things, especially in the saints, and in Thy beloved disciple St. John. Thou art everything in Him; Thou art his being, his sanctity, his joy, and his glory. How admirable art Thou, my Jesus, in all Thy saints and particularly St. John! How beloved and glorified art Thou in him! How I rejoice, my Saviour, and how I bless Thee for all the glory Thou dost give to Thyself through this great apostle!

DEVOTION TO THE SAINTS

279-

O Good Jesus, I offer Thee all the honor and love ever accorded Thee by this divine evangelist. I give myself all to Thee; annihilate in me everything that displeases Thee and grant me a share in the graces Thou hast given to the great St. John, especially his humility, his specially tender love for Thee, his boundless charity towards his neighbor, and all his other virtues.

XVII. PRAYER TO ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST.

O blessed Apostle and Evangelist St. John, I adore and honor Jesus in thee. and I honor and venerate thee in Jesus with all the powers of my soul. I thank thee with my whole heart for the ardent love and faithful service thou didst render to my Saviour. I offer myself to thee; give me forever to Jesus. By thy prayers and merits destroy in me all that is contrary to His glory. Use me, if it please thee, as a creature completely at thy disposal, to glorify and love Him as thou dost see fit. Grant that I may share in thy most pure love for Him and in all thy remarkable virtues. Love Him and glorify Him for me. Make up for all the failings Of which I have been guilty and may yet be guilty, in His love and His service, and give Him a hundredfold return for all the love and honor I ought to give Him. Include my love in all the loving praises thou hast ever given and shalt give to Him forever. Pray to Him for me, that I may no longer live except to love Him, that I might die a thousand times, were it possible, rather than offend Him, and obtain for me the favor that everything in me, past, present and future, may be transformed into praise and love for Him. Finally, obtain for me the grace to die in the practice of His most pure love.

ANNUAL RETREATS AND SOME OTHER SPIRITUAL EXERCISES

XVIII. EXCELLENCE AND PRACTICE OF ANNUAL RETREATS.

It is a most holy and most important thing, the usefulness of which cannot be perfectly known except to those who try it out, to devote a little time each year entirely to God, and to give oneself to spiritual exercises and prayer with exceptional care. just as people in the world occasionally have banquets, over and above their daily meals, and enjoy themselves heartily at these festive gatherings, so, too, it is very appropriate for all Christians, who profess to live a holy life, to add to their ordinary exercises of devotion some exceptional feasting and rejoicing of the spirit, by applying themselves to God and busying themselves with loving and glorifying Him with more affection and fervor than usual. It is indeed in this that perfect joy and true delight consist, namely, in association and conversation with God by means Of holy prayer.

To this St. Paul exhorts not only the religious, but all Christians, married or unmarried, advising them to depart, for a certain space, from the mutual practices and obligations of their state, and devote themselves exclusively to prayer.

This custom has been practised in the Church of God down through the ages. We read of many saints and prelates of the Church who, putting aside the cares of their normal activities and domestic affairs, frequently withdrew for a few days into solitary places, to concentrate on the contemplation, love, and glory of God.

This is what I call an annual retreat, as it takes place every year in all religious communities. It is also practised by many people in the world, who each year set aside three or four days in which they bid farewell entirely to all cares for earthly things, and withdraw into a religious house to devote themselves to exercises of piety and divine love.

You should not fail to give yourself to the practice of prayer and the love of God with more care and fervor during days of retreat in the way prescribed for you by your spiritual directors.

ANNUAL RETREATS AND OTHER SPIRITUAL EXERCISES

Your retreat ought to be made with these chief ends in view:

1. To continue and honor the various retreats of Jesus, for example, His retreat from all eternity in the bosom of His Father; His retreat for nine months in the bosom of His Mother; His retreat in the stable at Bethlehem for forty days; in Egypt for seven years; at Nazareth for the whole extent of His hidden life, which lasted until He was thirty years old; for forty days in the desert; in heaven and in the glory of the Father, ever since the Ascension; and in the Blessed Sacrament, where He is, as it were, always in retreat, in the hidden Eucharistic life, and so shall be until the end of time. Also offer it in honor of the retreats made by the Blessed Virgin, and her part in the retreats of her Son. So, the first aim, the first and foremost intention of your retreat ought to be to love and glorify Jesus and His most holy Mother, and to unite yourself always more and more to both Mother and Son.

2. To atone, during the time of the retreat, for the negligences and faults you have committed during the year, against the love and glory of Jesus and Mary.

3. To renew your desires and your strength, to dispose yourself for the reception of fresh graces, in order to walk more courageously in the ways of divine love, and destroy more completely all the obstacles encountered as we advance along the road to Paradise, our eternal retreat.

You ought to regard your annual retreat as a foretaste of heaven, and the time thus spent as a small portion of eternity. You should strive during this time to reproduce what is accomplished in heaven and in eternity, beginning here below the life and activities that are to be your everlasting occupation in heaven, to contemplate, love and glorify God as He is contemplated, loved and glorified without interruption in heaven. You should also employ the time spent in retreat as if you had no more time remaining to love and glorify Jesus, and atone for the faults you have committed against His glory and love. You should above all affirm before Him that you desire to devote yourself to these holy exercises, not for your own particular consolation, merit and interest, but only for His pleasure and for His pure glory.

As members of religious communities customarily renew their vows at the time of their retreat, I shall here set down a prayer to Jesus to foster the proper dispositions for this important renewal.

XIX. PRAYER TO JESUS FOR THE RENEWAL OF THE THREE VOWS OF RELIGION.

O Jesus, my Lord, I adore, love and glorify Thee in Thy holy poverty, Thy divine purity and Thy most perfect obedience. I adore and glorify Thee in the eternal design Thou hast for all the souls who ever have made or shall make vows of poverty, chastity and obedience; and especially Thy holy design for my own soul.

I give Thee infinite thanks, O Good Jesus, for all the glory Thou hast rendered to the Almighty Father and Thyself by Thy poverty, chastity and obedience, as well as by the poverty, chastity and obedience of Thy Blessed Mother and all holy religious souls. I most humbly beg Thee to make up for my faults, and to restore unto Thyself a full measure of all the honor I ought to have given Thee by my three vows. I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer anything that may please Thee.

O Dearest Jesus, once again I offer to Thee the three vows I have made, of poverty, chastity and obedience and I protest before heaven and earth that I desire to keep them perfectly right up to my last breath, in homage to Thy divine poverty, chastity and obedience, in honor of the vows of Thy holy Mother.

I give myself to Thee, O Jesus; may it please Thee to destroy in me all that is contrary to these three virtues and give me grace to keep these three vows with all the perfection Thou dost ask of me.

O Mother of Jesus, angels and saints of Jesus, implore Him to annihilate in me all that displeases Him and to establish in me a participation and image of His poverty, chastity and obedience, that I may ever advance in the continual imitation and adoration of His poor, chaste and obedient life on earth.

ANNUAL RETREATS AND OTHER SPIRITUAL EXERCISES

XX. EXERCISE OF REPARATION.

The Son of God employs every resource of His divine wisdom to devise with holy ingenuity new ways of giving Himself to you, and of demonstrating His unfailing love for you; therefore, you ought also to seek out with holy ingenuity new ways to consecrate and devote the span of your life to His glory and love.

Inasmuch as you have been His enemies in the first few months of your life and since then have often been unfaithful to Him, you ought surely to make use of every kind of means of reparation for your infidelities and faults, to the full extent of your ability aided by His grace.

To make reparation, the following practice is recommended. Every year, set aside one day for each year of your life on earth; then, having profoundly humbled yourself before Our Lord, in view of the sins and ingratitude of your past life, having begged His forgiveness and implored Him to obliterate your sins in His Precious Blood and consume them in the fire of His divine love, take a firm stand in the unshakable resolution to enter upon a new life, and to begin to love and honor Jesus as though you were only now starting to live.

Stir up a strong desire to use these precious days of recollection as if they were the first days of your life, or as though they were to be the last you would ever have, to love and glorify Jesus on earth. Strive to do all you should have done in each year of your life. Strive to make such holy use of this time and to conduct yourself so perfectly in all your doings and activities, that you may to some extent make reparation for the failings of your past life.

Here is your plan of action for each day.

Devote the first day to reparation for the deficiencies of the first year of your life. This should be done in the following manner:

1. Adore Jesus in the sublime events of the first year of His life. Accuse yourself before Him, and beg His forgiveness for all the dishonor you gave Him by the state of original sin in which you were for a part of the first year of your life. To make satisfaction for this, offer to the Eternal Father all the honor His Son Jesus gave Him in the first year of His life on earth, and offer to Jesus all the honor given Him by His Blessed Mother in the first year of his earthly life.

2. Offer to the Eternal Father everything that occurred in the first year of your life, and implore Him, by His most burning love and exceeding great zeal for the glory of His Divine Son, to transform all that you suffered, and all that occurred both outwardly and inwardly in you during your first year of life, into praise, glory and love for His Son, and for all the events, both outward and inward, of the first year of His life in this world.

Repeat to Jesus the prayer just offered to the Eternal Father and beg to consecrate all that you suffered, in body and soul, every use you made of the limbs, senses and faculties of your body and soul during that first year of your life, to the honor of His sufferings in body and soul, in union with the operations Of His limbs, senses, and faculties of body and soul during the first year of His divine Infancy.

Say this prayer also to the Holy Ghost, similarly to the Blessed Virgin and to the angels and saints, that by their merits and glory they may now transform the first year of your life into eternal homage and glory to the mysteries of the first year of the life of Jesus Christ.

3. Offer to Jesus all the acts to be performed on the first day of your retreat and the love, praise and acts of adoration you shall give Him in union with the love, glory, and praises that were accorded Him in the first year of His life by His Eternal Father, by Himself, by the Holy Spirit, by His Blessed Mother, His angels and all His saints, to make Him a hundredfold return for all the glory and love you should have given Him in the first year of your life, if you had enjoyed the use of reason.

On the second day, corresponding to your second year, and on each of the other days, corresponding to each of the years of your life, you shall practise the same exercises as on the first day. Make exception, of course, for the fact that on the days corresponding to your childhood years, in which you remained in the state of baptismal grace, it will not be necessary to ask pardon for sins committed, since during that time you were incapable of sin. But you will indeed have to humble yourself greatly for having gone so long a time without really knowing God, and for having carried about within you, all that time, the principal and source of all sin, namely, the remains of the corruption of original sin, which corruption is the source of all sin.

If your years outnumber those of the temporal life of Jesus, you might carry on the same exercises with reference to the years of the glorious life of Jesus in heaven. Although it is true that the duration of this glorious and eternal life of Jesus is not counted by years in heaven, because there is no passage of time nor years in eternity, nevertheless, on earth, and with respect to us, that life may be measured by years. At present you may calculate the glorious life of Jesus, since His Resurrection, at about nineteen hundred years.

Consequently, if you are over thirty-four, you shall, on the thirty-fourth day of this pious exercise, adore Jesus in the first year of His glorified life in heaven. The next day, take the second year, and so on, performing the same exercise with respect to the years of the glorious life of Jesus as were proposed for the years of His temporal life.

You may perform this exercise not only on your own account, but also on behalf of other souls with whom you have some special bond, or to whom you are in any way obligated, uniting the years of their lives with your own, and performing the exercise for them as well as for yourself. Yet do all of this not for yourself nor for them, but for Jesus, for His glory and for His most pure love.

You might wish, during this exercise, to recite the Rosary of Jesus in glory-as follows:

XXI. ROSARY OF THE GLORY OF JESUS.

This rosary is made up of three decades and four beads, a total of thirty-four small beads, in honor of the thirty-four years of Christ's life on earth.

First, you repeat three times Veni Domine Jesu, "Come Lord Jesus" (Apoc. 22,20), the inviting words with which St. John ends his Apocalypse, and you say them to invoke Jesus and draw Him into your soul, your mind and your heart, imploring Him to enter into you and annihilate everything in you that displeases Him, and to fill you with His grace, His spirit and His pure love. It is also a good thing to recite these same words with the same intention at the beginning of your other prayers and acts.

286- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

On each small bead say: Gloria tibi, Domine Jesu, qui natus es de Virgine, cum Patre et Sancto Spiritu in sempiterna saecula.

As you repeat this invocation you should offer to Jesus all the glory given to Him in each year of His life by His Father, His Holy Spirit and His Blessed Mother, and all His angels and saints, by way of satisfaction for your faults against Him in each year of your life, imploring Him to consecrate all that ever occurred in your life to the honor of all that took place in each year of His own.

For example, at the first bead, as you say Gloria tibi Domine Jesu, etc...., you should offer to Jesus all the glory of the first year of His life in satisfaction for your deficiencies in honoring Him during the first year of your life. So too you should offer Him your first year, imploring Him to cause all that occurred in it to be consecrated to the honor of all that occurred in the first year of His life.

At the second bead, you should offer Him all the glory given Him in the second year of His life by His Father, etc., while also offering Him the second year of your own life, imploring Him, etc. And so on, with the other beads.

On the large beads, you say the Gloria Patri, and as you do so, offer to the Holy Trinity all the glory that Jesus ever gave or ever shall give to the Three Divine Persons, by way of satisfaction for your faults against the Blessed Trinity.

XXII. ADDITIONAL SPIRITUAL EXERCISES TO BE PERFORMED EACH YEAR.

It is also a very holy practice to set aside a little time each year to acquit yourself before God of the duties you should have been obliged to pay Him at the hour of your birth and baptism, if you had possessed the use of reason. You should do the same with regard to your future obligations towards Him at the hour of death, thus using this means to prepare yourself for death. I shall, however, reserve the exercises appropriate to such matters for the last part of this book.

XXIII. PREPARATION TO GAIN INDULGENCES

At frequent intervals during the course of the year, rich opportunities for gaining indulgences are available; yet most Christians are satisfied to seek nothing more on such Occasions than exemption from die punishment due to their sins, having practically no other end in view but their own interest. This very fact prevents many from gaining the desired indulgences, and robs God of the glory which constitutes the purpose for which He offered them to you. It will consequently be very much to the point if I give you some idea of the intentions and dispositions you ought to have, if you are to gain indulgences worthily for the pure glory of God. Hence, when you wish to gain an indulgence, prepare yourself accordingly.

ANNUAL RETREATS AND OTHER SPIRITUAL EXERCISES

1. Adore the very great love which prompts God to grant you these indulgences. His burning love for you gives Him a very great desire to behold you soon united with Him; and as He well knows that the punishments you have deserved by your sins will defer the fulfillment of His desires, by detaining you in purgatory, unless wiped out in this world, He wills to give you indulgences, which are the shortest and easiest way of wiping out your deserved punishment. Give yourself to Him, in order to gain a wealth of precious indulgences not so much out of consideration for your own interests, as to fulfill His constant desire to bring you nearer to Him. Carry out everything prescribed for gaining the indulgences, in honor of and in union with the most pure love that prompts God to give them to you.

2. Adore the exceeding great love of Jesus, by which He acquired these indulgences. You must see them as fruits of the Cross and Passion of Christ, as graces which cost Him dearly indeed, since He purchased them at the price of His blood and death. Hence, you should desire to gain indulgences so that the Son of God may not be cheated of the fruits and effects of His Cross, and in order that what cost Him so dearly may not be lost, nor become vain and fruitless so far as you are concerned.

3. Adore God's justice, before which you are accountable for the penalties due to your sins, and cultivate an active desire to gain indulgences, not to escape those penalties, but to satisfy and glorify God's justice.

4. It is also good to adore God's universal design for your souls from all eternity. For from all eternity God designs to establish you in a high degree of grace on earth and of glory in heaven. But by your sins, you have put many Obstacles in the way of the fulfillment of His eternal plan. Even though the guilt of your sins may have been forgiven by a good confession, you have, nevertheless, made yourself unworthy to receive many of the graces God designed to give you, if you had not prevented Him by your sins. Now, He desires by indulgences to wipe out these iniquities and remove from your heart the obstacles raised by sin against the fulfillment of His plans. He wishes to make you capable and worthy to receive the graces planned for you in accomplishment of His infinite designs. Desire, therefore, again these indulgences not to escape the sufferings; of purgatory, but that God may avoid being disappointed in the designs He deigns to entertain in your regard.

5. Desire to gain indulgences so that your souls may be perfectly cleansed of many evil effects left by sin, which prevent you from loving God perfectly, thus you may become able to love Him with a more pure and ardent love. To do this, each time some opportunity of gaining an indulgence arises, address the Son of God as follows:

"O Jesus, I give myself to Thee to do all that Thou dost desire me to do in order to gain this indulgence, in honor of and in union with the very great love with which Thou didst acquire it for me with Thy Precious Blood, in homage to Thy divine justice, to bring about the fulfillment of Thy designs in my regard, so that I may love and glorify Thee ever more perfectly."

XXIV. ANNUAL CONFESSION.

Once you have made a good general confession, you should no longer think of your past sins, that is, not consider and examine them in detail any more, but be satisfied to detest them in general and humble yourself before God for them. It is, however, a very profitable thing, and a most important one, to make an annual confession, to review the chief faults you have committed during each year. For it is much to be feared that you may have frequently been remiss in your ordinary confessions, by having failed to approach the tribunal with the necessary preparation, contrition and other dispositions demanded by the sacrament of Penance. You cannot be too careful or diligent in a matter so important as the salvation of a soul created to love and glorify God forever.

Yearly confession has become a frequent practice among all Christians who desire to please God and to guarantee their salvation for the glory of God. There are many, indeed, who review their confessions every six months, and still others at even shorter intervals.

Adopt this holy practice at least at the end of each year, so that you may to some extent repair your failings during the year, and dispose yourself to serve and love God more perfectly the next year. If you do not do this at the end of the year, make your review of your confessions at some other time, according to the advice of your confessor, but in any case, perform it with an unusual amount of preparation, self-abasement and contrition.

And above all, make a point of protesting to Our Lord that you do not wish to make this exercise for the unburdening and satisfaction of your soul, nor for your own merit or interest, but solely for His pleasure and pure glory.

XXV. ENDING THE YEAR WITH JESUS.

To end each year of your life with Jesus, you ought to close it just as Jesus ended His mortal, human life on earth. You ought to set aside a little time at the end of each year to acquit yourself of your obligations and offer fitting homage to Jesus as the following prayer suggests.

XXVI. PRAYER OF PRAISE AND GRATITUDE FOR THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

O Jesus, my Lord, I adore, love and glorify Thee in the last day, the last hour and last minute of Thy mortal life on earth. I adore all that happened both inwardly and outwardly on that last day, I mean, Thy last thoughts, acts, words and sufferings, Thy final use of the senses of Thy sacred body, and the last dispositions of Thy holy soul, to which I desire to unite myself now, with a view to die closing moment of my own life.

O Divine Jesus, by the light of faith I behold Thee on that last day of Thy life, adoring and loving Thy Father infinitely. Thou dost give Him fitting thanks for all the graces imparted to Thee and, through Thee, to the whole world during the time of Thy sojourn on earth. Thou dost ask His pardon for all the sins of men, offering Thyself to Him to suffer the penance due to them. Thou dost think of me with love exceeding great, with a most ardent desire to draw me to Thyself. Finally Thou dost sacrifice Thy Precious Blood and Thy most noble life, for the glory of the Heavenly Father and for love of us. Blessed be Thou infinitely for all these inestimable graces.

O Good Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love, humility, and other holy dispositions with which Thou didst perform all the last actions of Thy life, I give Thee infinite thanks for all the glory Thou didst give the Eternal Father during Thy life on earth, for all the graces Thou hast bestowed upon me and all men this year and always, as well as for the graces Thou wouldst have lavished on me, if I had not stood in Thy way.

I most humbly beg Thy forgiveness for all the outrages and indignities Thou didst suffer on earth because of me, and for all the offenses I have committed against Thee this year. In satisfaction, I offer Thee all the honor and glory rendered to Thee, during Thy time on earth and during the past year, by Thy Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy holy Mother, and by all the angels and saints. So, too, I offer myself to Thee to bear all the penance Thou mayest ordain for me in this world and in the next.

O Jesus, most worthy of love, I adore Thy infinite thoughts and designs for me on the last day of Thy most precious life; and I give myself to Thee to do and suffer all Thou dost desire of me, for the fulfilment of these unfathomable designs. Grant that I may die a thousand times rather than hinder the operation of Thy loving Providence.

O Good Jesus, I offer to Thee the last day, the last hour and the last moment of my life and everything that may happen to me outwardly and inwardly then. I mean, my last thoughts, words, actions and sufferings, as well as the last use of my bodily senses and of the powers of my soul.

May it please Thee to grant that all these things may be consecrated to the honor of the last day, the last hour and last moment of Thy life. May I die loving Thee with Thy holy love. May my being and my life be sacrificed and consumed for Thy glory, and may my last breath be an act of pure love of Thee. This is my intention, my desire, my expectation. O my Dear Jesus, relying as I do upon the excess of Thy infinite love, may it please Thee to grant, by Thy great mercy that this may be so.

XXVII. PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN, AT THE END OF THE YEAR.

O Mother of Jesus, Mother of the Eternal and Immortal God made Man, I honor and venerate thee in the last hour and moment of thy life. I honor thy last thoughts, words and acts, and the last use made of the senses of thy immaculate body and of the powers of thy glorious soul. Especially I wish to honor the last act of love made by thy mother's heart for thy Most Beloved Son.

With all my heart I bless and thank thee, O holy Virgin, for all the glory thou didst render to God during thy spotless life, and for all the graces thou didst ever obtain from His bounty for me and for all men, especially during this year.

I beg thy forgiveness, O Mother of Mercy, for all the offenses thou didst suffer on earth, as well as for those I have committed this year against thee. To make satisfaction for these, I offer thee all the honor that has ever been accorded thee in heaven and on earth.

O Mother of Fair Love, I offer thee the last day, the last hour and moment of my life, and all that shall take place in me at that last moment, in honor of the last Moment, hour and day of thy life, and of all that occurred in thee on that day. Unite me, if it please thee, with all the holy and divine dispositions of thy maternal heart and thy pure soul. Grant that, by thy merits and prayers, my last thoughts, words, acts and breaths may be consecrated to the honor of the last thought, words, acts and breaths, both of thy Son and of thyself. Grant that I may die loving Him with His holy love, and that I may be utterly consumed and sacrificed to His glory, and that my life may end with a last act of most pure love for Him.

O Angels and Saints of Christ, pray that He may consummate all this in me, by His exceeding great mercy and for love of Him.

I. CONCERNING THE RIGHTFUL HOMAGE YOU OUGHT TO HAVE RENDERED TO GOD AT THE MOMENT OF YOUR BIRTH IF YOU HAD THE USE OF REASON.

I can never tell you enough, nor should you grow tired of hearing and considering (so important is it) that Jesus Christ, who is your Head and whose members you are, passed through all the stages of human life, through which you are passing. He did almost all the things that you do, and performed not only His outward acts but also all His interior actions for Himself and for you. Therefore, Christian sanctity and perfection consist in ceaselessly uniting yourself to Him as His members, and in continuing to do what He did, as He did it, to the best of your ability, uniting yourself with His dispositions and intentions. It likewise consists in consenting and adhering to what He did for you in the presence of His Father and in ratifying it. So, too, it consists in performing all your inward actions not only for yourself, but also for the whole world, in imitation of the Son of God, and especially for those with whom you have some special connection with respect to God. This Christian devotion inspires similar acts of union and imitation proportionately, towards the Blessed Virgin, never separating the Mother from the Son. But you will gain a clearer idea of this from reflecting upon the devotion you should have paid Him from the very first moment of your life and at the instant of your birth on earth, if you had enjoyed the use of reason.

11. PRAYER TO JESUS FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR BIRTH.

1. O Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy eternal birth and Thy divine dwelling for all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father. I also adore Thee in Thy temporal conception, and in Thy presence in the sacred womb of Thy most pure Mother, for the space of nine months, and in Thy birth into this world at the end of that time. I adore and revere the great and admirable occurrence of all these mysteries. I adore and honor the holy dispositions of Thy Divine Person and Thy holy soul in these mysteries. With my whole heart I adore, love and bless all the acts of adoration, love, oblation Thou didst render to the Eternal Father, and all the other divine acts and practices offered Him in these mysteries.

2. Again I adore and glorify Thee, O Good Jesus, as performing all these things for Thyself, for me and for everyone in the world. On this anniversary of my birth I give myself to Thee, O my Dear Jesus, that I may now repeat the acts Thou didst perfect while dwelling from all eternity in the bosom of the Father, and for nine months in the bosom of Thy Mother. I unite myself to Thee to perform this duty as Thou didst perform it, in union with the love, humility, purity, and other holy dispositions of Thy adorable soul. Since Thou didst perform this act for Thyself and for me and for all men in the world, I also desire to exercise this present devotion, not only for myself, but for all the men in the world.

I now desire, O my Saviour, to render unto Thee as far as I can, with the help of Thy grace, all the rightful homage I should have paid Thee if I had been gifted with the use of reason, from the first moment of my life. So, too, I desire to pay Thee all the due need of adoration, praise, and love, which should have been given to Thee at that same time by all my friends, and by all people who ever were, are, or shall be in the world; and even that which should have been rendered to Thee by the evil angels at the moment of their creation.

DEVOTIONS FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR BIRTH

I give myself again to Thee, my Lord Jesus. Enter into me, and unite me to Thyself in order that in and by Thee I may fulfil these desires for Thy pure glory and satisfaction.

3. In union, therefore, with the devotion, love, humility, purity and sanctity, and all the other sublime dispositions with which Thou didst honor, bless, love and glorify the Eternal Father in Thy eternal and temporal birth, and in Thy dwelling from all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father, and during nine months in the bosom of Thy Mother: I acclaim Thee; I adore, love, bless, and glorify Thee together with the Father and the Holy Spirit as my God, my Creator, and Sovereign Lord. I adore, love, and glorify Thee also on behalf of all creatures-angels, men, animals, plants and inanimate things. I wish I could possess in myself the totality of their being, all their strength and all their actual or potential capacity to glorify and love Thee, that I might now use it all in paying Thee this homage for myself and for them, especially those for whom, before Thee, I have both the obligation and desire to pray with special zeal.

4. I give Thee infinite thanks, O my God, on behalf of myself, all creatures, and especially my particular friends, for the gift of life, and the capacity to know and love Thee. I thank Thee for having preserved our existence and allowed us to be born alive to receive Holy Baptism. If we had died before being delivered from original sin by the grace of Holy Baptism, which has been the misfortune of many souls, we should never have seen Thy divine face, and we should have been deprived forever Of Thy holy love. May all the angels and saints bless Thee forever for this most special favor Thou hast accorded us.

5. Omnipotent Creator, Thou didst give me being and life solely that I might employ them in Thy love and service. Therefore, I offer my life to Thee. I consecrate and sacrifice it altogether to Thee, together with the being and life of all the angels, all men and all creatures, in testimony that I desire no longer to, live save to serve Thee with all the perfection Thou dost ask of me.

6. O my God, what a source of humiliation and pain it is for me to think that, during the first months of my life, I was Thy enemy and under the power of Satan, in a continual state of sin that infinitely displeased and dishonored Thee! For this I most humbly beg Thy forgiveness, O my Lord, and in satisfaction for the dishonor I gave Thee while I remained in the state of original sin, I offer Thee, O Father of Jesus, all the glory given Thee by Thy immaculate Mother during the time she dwelt in the blessed womb of St. Anne, her mother.

7. O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love with which Thou didst accept and bear all the crosses and sufferings that were permitted by the Heavenly Father to attend Thy temporal birth, I offer Thee all the trials and afflictions I have suffered since my birth, and those remaining for me to suffer until the end of my life, accepting and loving them for love of Thee, and begging Thee to consecrate them to the homage of Thy own sufferings.

8. O Most Kind Jesus, I offer Thee all the circumstances of my birth, and I implore Thee by Thy very great mercy to wipe out all that displeases Thee in the first part of my life. Deign to make up for my faults, giving to Thy Father and to Thyself all the honor I ought to have given Thee at that time, if I had been capable of honoring Thee; and mayest Thou grant that the earliest phase of my life may render an undying homage and glory to the divine state of Thy dwelling in the bosom of Thy Father and in the womb of Thy Mother, and to Thy eternal and temporal birth.

9. Such, O my Lord, is the rightful homage I ought to have rendered to Thee, had I been able, at the moment Of my birth, and indeed from the first moment of my life, that I now endeavor to render to Thee, although very tardily and imperfectly. But what gives me infinite consolation, O my Dear Jesus, is that I know Thou didst atone for my deficiencies by Thy temporal birth. Then Thou didst render all this just homage to God the Father, performing in a most holy and divine manner all these acts and devotions for Thyself and for me. Thou didst refer and consecrate to His glory all Thy being and Thy entire life, present and to come, and together with it all my being and every state of my life, and of all creatures that ever were, are, or shall be, all the past, present, and future state of created things being just as vividly present to Thee then as now. Thou didst look upon every life as Thine own, as something given to Thee by the Father, according to Thy blessed words: Omnia mihi tradita sunt a Patre meo (Matt. 11, 27). Thou wast consequently obliged, by thy profound love for Him and Thy zeal for His honor, to refer and give and sacrifice everything to Him. And this Thou didst do most excellently.

Thou didst also offer to Thy Father the holy and divine state of Thy dwelling in the sacred womb of the Virgin, all filled with glory and love for Him, in satisfaction for the dishonor that was to be rendered to Him by myself in the state of original sin. And at the same moment when Thou didst accept and offer to Thy Father all the crosses and sufferings of Thy whole life, Thou didst offer Him also all the past, present, and future trials and afflictions of all Thy members: for it is the function of the head to act for himself and on behalf of all his members, because the head and the members are but one, and also because all that pertains to the members belongs to the head, and conversely all the attributes of the head belong to the members.

And so, O divine Head, Thou hast turned my whole being and the whole condition of my life to meritorious purpose. In Thy temporal birth, Thou didst render for me to Thy Father all the rightful homage I should have rendered Him at my own birth, and Thou didst then practise all the acts and exercises of devotion that I should have practised. Be Thou blessed for ever! How willingly I consent and adhere to all that Thou didst do at that time for me! Indeed I ratify it with my whole will, and would gladly sign that ratification with the last drop of my blood. I also endorse all Thou didst do for me in all the other phases or actions of Thy life, to compensate for the faults Thou didst know I was going to commit.

In imitation of Thee, O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the same love which led Thee thus to accomplish all things for Thyself and for all Thy brothers, members, and children, and for all creatures, I henceforth desire in all my functions and activities to render to Thee all the honor and glory I can, for myself and for all Christians, who are my brothers, and members of the same Head and Body. I desire to honor Thee on behalf of all men and all other creatures that are, unworly or incapable of loving Thee, as I all of them put together had entrusted me with their duties and obligations towards Thee, and had charged me to love and honor Thee on their behalf.

III. PRAYER TO THE MOST BLESSED VIRGIN.

O Mother of Jesus, I honor thee, as far as I am able, in the moment of thy holy conception, and in the instant of thy birth into the world. I honor all the love, all the adoration, praise, oblations, and blessings thou didst offer to God at that time. In union with thy love, purity, and humility as thou didst adore, love and glorify Him, and didst refer thy being and thy life to Him, I adore, bless, and love my God, with thee, my Mother, with my whole heart. I consecrate and sacrifice to Him forever my life, my being, and my whole self.

So also, acclaiming thee, O Blessed Virgin, as Mother of God and consequently as my Sovereign Lady, I refer to thee, after God, the whole state of my being and my life. I implore thee most humbly to offer to God, for me, all the love, the glory, and rightful homage thou didst render to Him at thy birth, by way of satisfaction for my faults, and to cause, by thy prayers and merits, all the phases, actions, and sufferings of my life to pay undying homage to all the phases, actions, and sufferings of thy Son's life and thine own.

IV. PRAYER TO THE ANGELS AND SAINTS WHOM YOU WERE IN DUTY BOUND TO HONOR AT THE TIME OF YOUR BIRTH.

Having acquitted yourself in the above manner of your rightful tribute of homage to Our Lord and His Blessed Mother, you should offer your salutations and pay your respects to the holy guardian angel assigned to you by God when you were born; to the guardian angels of your father and mother, of the house, the place, and the diocese where you were born; to the order of angels with whom God plans to associate you in heaven; also to the saints of the day, the place, and the district where you were born. You should thank them for their helpful favors, offer yourself to their honor all your life long according to God's holy will. You should ask them to offer you to Our Lord, to use you as an instrument for His glory, and to render to Him all the due tribute of homage you should have paid Him at your birth. Invoke these devoted guardians frequently to obtain by their prayers fresh grace and new strength for you to begin a new life, which may be totally consecrated to their glory and the glory of the God of angels and saints.

EXERCISE FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR BAPTISM

V. CONCERNING THE RIGHTFUL TRIBUTE THAT YOU SHOULD HAVE PAID TO GOD ON THE DAY OF YOUR BAPTISM.

Holy Baptism is the beginning of your true life, that is, your life in Jesus Christ, and it is the origin of all happiness. Therefore, it is certain that you would have been obliged to render a very special tribute to your Heavenly Father on the occasion of your baptism. But you were incapable of fulfilling your obligation then because you did not have the use of reason. It is logical that you should each year set apart a little interval near the anniversary of your baptism, or else some other time, to devote yourself to prayer and thanksgiving for this priceless sacrament.

VI. OBLIGATIONS TO OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST WHO INSTITUTED AND MERITED BAPTISM FOR YOU.

The author of the holy Sacrament of Baptism is Jesus Christ our Lord. He is the source of all its graces, acquired and merited by His Incarnation, by His Baptism in the River Jordan, by His Passion and Death. He applied these infinite merits to you by virtue of His Resurrection, out of His exceeding great love. All those invaluable blessings require you to pay Him the tribute of respect expressed in the following prayer.

VII. PRAYER.

O Jesus, I adore Thee as divine Author of the holy Sacrament of Baptism, which Thou didst institute for my salvation. Thou didst also acquire and merit the grace contained in that Sacrament, by Thy Incarnation, Thy Baptism in the River Jordan and by Thy holy death.

I adore the exceeding great love with which Thou didst merit and institute this same Sacrament.

I adore all the designs which Thou didst cherish in its institution, for the whole Church and for myself in particular.

EXERCISE FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR BAPTISM

I thank Thee countless times for all the glory Thou hast given to Thyself and for all the graces Thou hast transmitted to Thy Church, and to me in particular, by this Sacrament.

I offer Thee all that glory and all the graces Thou hast produced in Thy Holy Church by this means.

I beg Thee to forgive me for neglecting to take advantage of the grace Thou didst give me in holy Baptism, and for having made it valueless by my cowardice and infidelities in Thy service, and for having even destroyed it entirely in my soul, by my sins.

I give myself to Thee, O Good Jesus; renew in me the treasure of baptismal grace, and accomplish in me, by Thy very great mercy, all the plans of Thy Providence on my behalf in the divine Sacrament of Baptism.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy Incarnation, Passion, and Death, as meriting the grace of the Sacrament of Baptism; but especially do I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy holy Baptism in the River Jordan. I adore all the dispositions of Thy divine soul in this mystery, and all the designs Thou didst then deign to have in my regard. How different was Thy Baptism, Lord, from ours! In Thy Baptism Thou didst take upon Thyself our sins, to make satisfaction and do penance for them before the Father of heaven, in the desert and on the Cross, while in our baptism Thou didst lift from us the burden of our sins, washing and effacing them in Thy Precious Blood. Baptize me with the Baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire, even as Thy blessed precursor, St. John the Baptist, assures us Thou dost baptize, that is, consume all my sins in the fire of Thy holy love, and by the power of Thy divine spirit.

VIII. THE ETERNAL AND TEMPORAL BIRTH OF JESUS, AND His DEATH, BURIAL AND RESURRECTION ARE THE EXEMPLAR OF BAPTISM.

All things outside of God have their idea, their exemplar, and their prototype in God; so also Sacramental Baptism has for prototype and exemplar four great mysteries, namely:

1. The mystery of His eternal birth, because His Father, by eternal generation, imparted to Him being, life and all the divine perfections, by reason of which He is the Son of God and the perfect image of

304- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

His Father. Likewise, by Baptism He imparted to you the celestial and divine life He received from His Father; He implanted in you a living image of Himself, and He made you children of His Own Heavenly Father.

2. The mystery of His temporal birth, because at the moment of His Incarnation and birth in the Virgin, He united our nature with His and His essence with our nature, and filled it with Himself and clad Himself in it as in a garment; similarly in the holy Sacrament of Baptism He united Himself with you and incorporated you with Him; He formed Himself and, as it were, took flesh in you. He clothed and filled you with Himself, according to these words of St. Paul: "As many of you as have been baptized in Christ have put on Christ (Gal. 3, 27).

3. The mystery of His death and burial, for St. Paul also tells us that "All we, who are baptized in Christ Jesus, are baptized in his death" (Rom. 6, 3), and that "we are buried together with him by baptism into death" (Rom. 6, 4). This means precisely the same as the thought expressed by the same Apostle in other words: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (COL. 3, 3), that is, you have entered by baptism into a state which obliges you to die to yourself and to the world, and to live no longer except with Jesus Christ, by a totally holy and divine life, hidden and absorbed in God, resembling the life of Jesus Christ.

4. The mystery of the Resurrection, because by His Resurrection the Son of God entered into a new life, totally heavenly and spiritual, entirely separated from the earth. And so St. Paul instructs the faithful: "We are buried together with him by baptism into death; that as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also may walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6, 4).

For these reasons, then, we owe our Saviour a great tribute of homage and should lift up our minds and hearts to Him.

IX. PRAYER TO JESUS.

O Jesus, Son of God and at the same time Son of man, I adore Thee in Thy temporal and eternal birth. I give Thee infinite thanks for all the glory Thou didst thus render to Thy Father. I adore the thoughts and designs Thou didst then deign to have for me, thinking of me from the very first, O Good Jesus: Thou didst love me and didst plan to make in me a living image of Thyself, of Thy birth and Thy life. Just as Thy Father communicates to Thee His divine and immortal life, and just as Thou art consequently His Son and His most perfect image, so also Thou didst plan to transmit to me by Baptism Thy holy and celestial life, and to make me a living image Of Thyself, and to transform me by grace into what Thou art by nature, that is, a child of God, and by participation and resemblance, God and another Jesus Christ. Who could ever thank Thee for such great favors! How culpable I am for having, by my sins, so often impeded the perfect fulfilment of Thy divine plan! Forgive me, my Saviour, with all my heart I beg Thee to forgive me, and I give myself to Thee so that Thou mayest make amends for my faults and renew in me that image of Thyself, of Thy birth and of Thy life. Separate me from myself and from all that is not Thee, in order to unite and incorporate me with Thee. Empty me of myself and of all things, destroy me utterly, in order to fill me with Thyself and to form and establish Thyself in me. Cause me henceforth to be a perfect image of Thyself, just as Thou art a most perfect image of Thy Father. Grant that I may share in Thy filial love for Him, since He is my Father as He is Thine; enable me to live by Thy life, that is, a holy and perfect life, truly worthy of God, since Thou hast made me God by participation; and, finally, invest me so fully with Thy qualities, perfections, virtues and dispositions, and so transform me into Thee that men may see only Jesus in me, only His life, His humility, His meekness, His charity, His love, His spirit, and His other virtues and qualities, since Thou dost will me to be Thy other self on earth.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy holy death, Thy burial and Resurrection. I give Thee thanks for the glory Thou didst give Thy Father in these mysteries, and for the thoughts and plans Thou didst have in them for me. For Thou didst always think of me in all these mysteries, and at every moment of Thy life, and Thou didst always have a special plan for me. Thy special Providence was to imprint on my soul, by holy Baptism, an image of Thy death, burial and Resurrection, causing me to die to myself and to the world, hiding me in Thyself, and with Thee in the bosom of the Eternal Father, and raising me up again and causing me to live like Thee a new life, altogether celestial and divine. For this, be Thou blessed forever. Alas, by my sins I have destroyed in myself the great effects produced by Thy goodness, and for this I beg Thee, with all humility and contrition, to forgive me. I give myself to Thee, O Good Jesus, I surrender myself to the spirit and the power of the mystery of Thy death, burial and Resurrection, that Thou mayest cause me to die again to all things; that Thou mayest hide me in Thyself and with Thyself in the bosom of Thy Father; that Thou mayest dissolve my mind in Thy mind, my heart in Thy Heart, my soul in Thy soul my life in Thy life; and that Thou mayest establish in me the new life into which Thou didst enter by Thy Resurrection, so that I may no longer live, save in Thee, for Thee, and by Thee.

306- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

X. JESUS CHRIST, IN THE PERSON OF THE PRIEST, BAPTIZES EACH CHRISTIAN.

All the Holy Fathers teach us that our Lord Jesus Christ, Himself, by the power of His holy spirit, confers all the Sacraments in the person of the priest, who represents Him and acts in His Name and by His authority. It is He who consecrates in Holy Mass and gives us absolution in the Sacrament of Penance; also He baptizes us with various symbolic ceremonies, inspired by His Spirit in Holy Mother Church and filled with mysteries that signify great graces that are conferred upon us in holy Baptism. We should, therefore, pay Him homage in this connection.

XI. PRAYER TO JESUS CHRIST WHO BAPTIZED YOU.

O my Most Beloved Jesus, I adore and recognize Thee as the One who baptized me, in the person of the priest, whom Thou didst use as a living instrument to confer this grace upon me. Alas, Lord, I knew Thee not at that time: I did not think of Thee, I did not love Thee, nor did I appreciate the very great favor conferred upon me. Yet this did not deter Thee from loving me, and receiving me among the number of Thy children, and even of Thy members, by the sanctifying grace of Baptism. O my adorable Saviour, I desire with all my heart to bring back that holy time, that happy moment in which Thou didst baptize me, in order that I may adore, bless, love and glorify Thee infinitely, imploring Thy Eternal Father, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, all the angels and saints and all creatures to love, bless and thank Thee for me forever.

O Jesus, I adore Thee as the One who, by Thy Holy Spirit, didst institute and inspire in Thy Church all the ceremonies which accompany the solemn administration of Sacramental Baptism. I adore all Thy admirable designs in their institution. I give myself to Thee that Thou mayest effect them in my person, and that by Thy great mercy Thou mayest produce in me the great and holy effects signified by these symbolic ceremonies.

O Jesus, cast out the evil spirit from me forever and fill me with Thy Divine Spirit. Give me a lively and perfect faith. Fortify my bodily senses and my spiritual faculties against every kind of temptation by the virtue of Thy holy Cross and consecrate them to Thy glory. Fill my soul with Thy divine wisdom, that is, with Thyself; excite in me the most avid hunger, thirst and desire of Thee, the principal and only food of my soul, so that I may no longer find any savor or relish in anything save Thee alone. Keep me safe in Thy Church, as in the bosom of a mother, apart from whom there is no life or salvation, and give me the grace to honor her in all her observances, as in customs taught and inspired by Thee. Give me the grace to obey all her laws and commandments, as those of a mother most worthy of honor who commands me nothing save in Thy Name. In all things and everywhere teach me to follow the maxims and guidance of her Spirit, which is entirely Thine own.

O Good Jesus, open my ears to Thy word and Thy voice, as Thou didst open the ears of man possessed by the deaf and dumb spirit, by the application of Thy sacred spittle, and close them altogether to the voice of the world and of Satan. Anoint me with the oil of Thy grace so that I may spread abroad, as it were, the divine odor of Thee in every place. Give me a firm and lasting peace with Thee and with every kind of creature. Clothe me in the white robe of Thy holy innocence and divine purity, both bodily and spiritual. Dispel the shadows of my darkness, filling me with Thy heavenly radiance. Set me on fire with Thy sacred love and cause me to be a shining and a burning light, to illumine and enkindle all my associates with the light of Thy knowledge and the fire of Thy love. Finally, if I was a source of joy to all the citizens of heaven, to the Blessed Virgin, the Eternal Father, Thyself, and the Holy Spirit, when by Baptism I was delivered from the power of Satan and admitted into the divine company of angels and saints, and even of the Three Divine and Eternal Persons, and if in token of this joy the church bells were rung after I was baptized, cause me now to live henceforth in such a way as to continue to be a source of joy and satisfaction to the court of heaven, the Queen of Angels and the Most Blessed Trinity. Grant also that I may find all my satisfaction and joy in serving and loving Thee.

XII. SOLEMN PROFESSION MADE BY ALL CHRISTIANS AT BAPTISM.

I have in another place explained the nature of the solemn and public profession made by all Christians at Baptism. For that reason I need not repeat what has already been said; but it would be worth your while to refer to it again in "Part One" of this book. I shall confine myself now to recommending a prayer to Jesus Christ in renewal of the profession made to Him at Baptism, and as a repetition in your own person of the Christian vows pronounced on your behalf then by your sponsors.

XIII. RENEWAL OF BAPTISMAL VOWS.

O Jesus, my Lord and my God, I adore Thee as the mystical Head whom I must follow and imitate in all things, according to my solemn and public profession made at Baptism. I promised, through my sponsors, before heaven and earth, to renounce Satan utterly with all his works and his pomps, that is, sin and the world, and to adhere to Thee as my Head, and to give and consecrate myself altogether to Thee, to dwell in Thee forever. Great indeed are this promise and profession, which oblige me, as a Christian, to practise great perfection and sanctity. To profess to dwell in Thee and to adhere to Thee as my Head is to profess to be one with Thee, as the members are one with their head, it is to promise to have but one life, one mind,

EXERCISE FOR THE ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR BAPTISM

one heart, one soul, one will and one thought, one devotion and disposition with Thee. It means to profess not merely poverty, chastity and obedience, but to profess Thy very self, that is, Thy life, spirit, humility, charity, purity, poverty, obedience and all other virtues. In a word, it is to make the very profession Thou didst make before the Eternal Father at the moment of the Incarnation, a profession perfectly fulfilled throughout Thy life. It means to make profession never to follow one's own will, but to seek all happiness in doing everything willed by God, to remain in a state of perpetual subjection to God, and submissive to men for the love of God. It means existing always as a host and victim continually sacrificed to the pure glory of God.

Such is the vow I made at Baptism, O Jesus my Lord. How holy and divine is that profession! How far is my life from this sanctity and perfection! How often have I failed in every respect to live up to so sacred a promise! Forgive me, most merciful Lord, forgive me. O divine Redeemer, I implore Thee to repair all my failings, and in satisfaction for them, to offer to Thy Father the inestimable honor Thou didst accord Him all Thy life long, by carrying out perfectly the profession made to Him at the Incarnation.

O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the very great love and holy dispositions of Thy profession, I now desire to enact in my own person what I promised through others at my baptism, that is, I will to renew the profession then made by my godparents. Therefore, in the virtue and might of Thy Spirit and Thy love, I forever renounce Satan, sin, the world and myself. I give myself to Thee, O Jesus, to adhere to Thee, to remain in Thee, to be but one with Thee in heart, mind, spirit and life. I offer myself to Thee, never to do my own will, but to seek all my happiness in doing everything commanded by Thy holy will. I sacrifice myself to Thee as a host and victim to be immolated to Thy pure glory in any way that may be pleasing to Thee. O Most Compassionate Jesus, I implore Thee by Thy great mercy, grant me the grace to carry out this holy profession perfectly. Do Thou fulfil it Thyself in me and for me, or rather for Thyself and for Thy own good pleasure, in all the perfection Thou dost desire; for I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer whatever pleases Thee for this intention.

XIV. BAPTISMAL TRIBUTE TO THE HOLY TRINITY.

As has been said, it is our Lord Jesus Christ who baptizes the faithful; but each soul is baptized in the Name and by the power of the Most Holy Trinity. The Three Divine Persons are present at holy Baptism in a particular manner. The Father is present generating His Son in the soul and imparting to it a new being and new life in His Son. The Son is present, being born and receiving life in the soul, transmitting His divine sonship, by which the neophyte becomes a child of God, just as He is Son of God. The Holy Spirit is present, forming Jesus in each soul even as He was formed in the bosom of The Virgin. The Father, Son and Holy Ghost are present, separating the new-born Christian from all things, taking possession of him and consecrating him specially to Themselves, imprinting Their divine character and image on his soul and establishing in his being (as in Their living temple, Their sacred tabernacle, or Their holy throne and heaven) the dwelling-place Of the Blessed Trinity, Their glory, kingdom and life. And consequently, if only sin did not stand in the way, the Three Eternal Persons would dwell always in each Christian heart in a particular and ineffable manner; They would most wonderfully glorify one another by living in the soul a most holy and divine life. So, too, it follows that we belong to God as creatures entirely consecrated to Him and we must consequently pursue no other purpose in life save His glory and service. In this connection it would be well to pay the following tribute of praise to the Holy Trinity.

XV. PRAYER TO THE BLESSED TRINITY.

O Holy and Adorable Trinity, I adore Thy divine essence and Thy Three Eternal Persons; I adore Thee for having been present at my baptism; I adore all the designs of Thy Providence for me. I beg Thee to forgive me for impeding their fulfilment and in satisfaction I offer Thee the life, actions and sufferings of my Lord Jesus Christ and of His most holy Mother. I give myself to Thee, O Divine Trinity, for the accomplishment of those same designs. O Eternal Father, O Thou the Only Son of God, O Holy Spirit of the Father and the Son, enter into me; enter into my heart and my soul; separate me from all that is not Thyself, draw me to Thyself, live and reign in me, destroy in me all that displeases Thee, and cause my being and my life to be completely consecrated to Thy pure glory.

XVI. ROSARY OF THE BLESSED TRINITY.

During the time devoted to the commemoration of the day of your baptism in the Name of the Most Holy Trinity, it would be a good thing to pay particular honor to that great mystery by saying the Rosary of the most Holy Trinity, which is made up of three decades and three beads in honor of the Three Divine Persons.

First, say three times the words: Veni Sancta Trinitas "Come, Holy Trinity," to invoke in your memory, understanding and will the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, to give yourself to Them, that They may glorify Themselves in you as They will.

On each small bead, say the Gloria Patri, offering to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost all the glory that has been rendered to Them from all eternity by Their own Divinity and all that shall be rendered to Them for all eternity in heaven and on earth, by way of satisfaction for the faults you have committed against Their honor.

On the large beads, say, with the same intention, the words: Tibi laus, tibi gloria, tibi amor, O beata Trinitas . , "Praise be to Thee, glory to Thee, love to Thee, O Blessed Trinity."

XVII. CONCLUSION.

To conclude the exercise on holy Baptism, thank Our Lord for the graces He has imparted during this exercise, asking Him to forgive you for the faults you have committed in it. Offer yourself to the Blessed Virgin, to your guardian angel, to the holy angels who were present at your baptism, to the saint whose name you were given, and to all the other angels and saints. Ask them to offer you to Jesus, to thank Him for you, to pay Him on your behalf all the rightful tribute of homage you would have rendered Him at the time of your Baptism if you had had the use of reason. Invoke their generous intercession to obtain from Him the grace to carry out perfectly all the holy desires and resolutions Our Lord has inspired in your heart during this exercise.

EXERCISE OF PREPARATION FOR DEATH

XVIII. PREPARATION FOR A HAPPY DEATH.

Death is usually preceded by such violent throes or intense weakness that the dying person is unable to direct his thoughts to God and cannot pay Him the homage owed to His divine majesty at that crucial time. Therefore, it is extremely advisable to anticipate this disability by setting aside a few days each year to carry out now what one ought rightfully to render to God at the hour of death. St. Gertrude tells us that when she had once performed this exercise, Our Lord revealed that it was most pleasing to Him, and He promised to set aside her preparation and keep it for the day of her death. You should be confident that in His goodness He will give this grace to you also, if you make use of the same exercise. For this purpose it would be well to devote ten days to a series of ten meditations and spiritual exercises in preparation for a Christian and holy death. I now present them in due order, showing how they are to be carried out.

First Day

XIX. MEDITATION ON SUBMISSION TO THE DIVINE WILL.

1. O my Lord Jesus, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, adoring my Judge and Sovereign, as Thou dost pronounce on me the sentence of death, pronounced to Adam and in his person to all sinners, by, Thy words: "Dust thou art, and into dust thou shalt return" (Gen. 3, 19). In honor of Thy exceeding great love and most profound humility as, prostrate upon the ground at Pilate's feet, Thou didst hear and accept the sentence of death, spoken by the Roman Governor but willed by Thy Eternal Father, in honor of and in homage to His divine justice, I submit with my whole heart to the sentence of death Thou didst pass upon me even at the beginning of the world, recognizing that I have deserved it not only by original sin, but each time I have committed sin.

EXERCISE OF PREPARATION FOR DEATH

2. O my God, I recognize that even if I were guilty of no sin, whether original or actual nevertheless, by Thy absolute sovereignty and power over me Thou couldst in all holiness take away my life, annihilate me and do with me as Thou wilt.

And so in honor of the very great love and in union with the deep submission with which the Blessed Virgin, Thy Mother, accepted death even though she was not obliged to die, by reason of any sin, original or actual, I, too, accept death in homage to Thy sovereignty, abandoning myself entirely into Thy hands, that Thou mayest dispose of me in time and in eternity, according to Thy holy will, for Thy greater glory.

3. O Jesus, Thou art eternal and immortal; Thou art the source of all life, and yet Thou dost will to die on the Cross the most cruel and ignominious of all deaths in homage to the justice and sovereignty, the divine and eternal life of Thy Father, and to give me a token of Thy love. And so, my Saviour, even if I were not obliged to die on account of my sins, and even if (to suppose the impossible) I depended in no way upon Thy sovereignty, and even indeed if Thou hadst not died for me in particular, I ought not only to accept death, but even to desire to die, in order to honor Thy holy death, which is so exalted and worthy of honor that all living creatures ought to subject themselves to death voluntarily even if they were not already obliged to die, in homage to the death of their Creator made Man.

But even if Thou hadst not died, O my God, all living things ought most willingly to sacrifice their very existence to pay homage to Thy supreme and eternal being, and to bear witness by this sacrifice that Thou alone art worthy to live, and that no other being or life has any right to show itself, but should be annihilated in Thy presence as the stars of heaven are extinguished in the light of the sun.

Thy death is so worthy of honor and homage, Thy life is most worthy to be adored. With excessive love Thou didst will to die, not only to satisfy the justice of Thy Father and to honor His sovereignty, but also to sacrifice Thy human and temporal life for the glory of the divine and eternal life with Thy Father and Holy Spirit. By this sacrifice Thou didst bear witness before heaven and earth, that there is none but the divine life alone that is worthy of existence, and all other created life, however noble and excellent, should be extinguished in the sight and in the presence of this supreme and uncreated life. Therefore, in honor of Thy death, in homage to Thy life, in union with the infinite love with which Thou didst thus will to die, for such great and divine intentions, and also in honor of the burning love with which Thy Blessed Mother and all Thy saints, especially Thy holy martyrs, embraced death with a very ready will for the same intentions, I accept and embrace death with my whole heart, in whatever form it may please Thee to send it to me, that is, in the place, time, manner, and under all the circumstances it shall please Thee to decree.

And so if Thou dost order me to die a painful or even a shameful death, or that I be left desolate and abandoned by all human help, or if I am to be deprived of the use of my senses and reason, provided Thou art always with me, Thy holy will be done. I desire to accept and embrace all this in honor of Thy most sorrowful and ignominious death, in honor of the unspeakable desolation Thou didst suffer on the Cross, abandoned even by the All-loving Father. I accept it in homage to the surrender of Thy senses Thou didst make in earliest childhood. I honor Thee in the humiliation Thou didst suffer, being treated as a madman by Thy own people, at the beginning of - the preaching of the Holy Gospel, and by Herod and his court during Thy Passion.

Finally, my Dear Jesus, I place myself entirely in Thy hands. I abandon myself so completely to Thy good pleasure that I no longer desire to have any other will or desire, save to let Thee will, desire and choose for me, in this and in everything else. Thou dost possess infinite wisdom and power and Thou hast a far greater knowledge and power and will to further Thy glory than I ever could have. One thing alone I beg of Thee, and it is that, since Thou didst die in love, by love and for love, if I am not worthy to die for Thy love or by that love, at least Thou mayest permit me to die in Thy dear love.

4. O my Jesus, I implore that, just as Thou didst perform all Thy actions and functions for Thyself and for all men, especially for Thy children and friends, I may be permitted, in honor of and in union with Thy love, to perform all these actions and render unto Thee all due homage not only for myself but for all men, especially for all those for whom Thou knowest that I am both bound and anxious to pray with particular fervor.

O Mother of Jesus, surely it would seem that thou shouldst not have died, since thou art the Mother of the Eternal and Immortal Son of God, who is life itself! Yet thou didst willingly submit to death, in homage to the most adorable death of thy Son. Thus, thy death is so exalted and worthy of honor that all creatures ought to subject themselves to death by their own free will, in order to honor the death of their Sovereign Lady, the Mother of their Creator. Therefore, O holy Virgin, even if I were not obliged to die, I should, nevertheless, wish to accept death freely, and offer it to thee together with the death of each one who is dear to me, and of all mankind, in homage to thy most holy death. I most humbly implore thee, O Mother of Life, to unite my death to thine in honor of the death of thy Son and to obtain from Him the grace to die in His favor and in His love.

Second Day

XX. THANKSGIVING FOR ALL THE BENEFITS OF YOUR WHOLE LIFE.

After you have made the solemn act of acceptance, you should prepare for a holy death, first by thanking Our Lord for all the favors you have received from Him in your whole lifetime. And it is very wise to devote a day to this exercise as follows:

1. O Jesus, I contemplate and adore Thee as the principle and source of all good things and all temporal and eternal graces, past, present and future, in heaven and on earth, especially those I have received from Thee. I refer all these graces to Thee, for Thou art their source and Thy glory is their destiny. O Good Jesus, who could ever describe all the favors Thou hast done me? They are numberless and I am utterly incapable of thanking Thee for them as Thou dost deserve. O dearest Lord, may all that ever was, is, or shall be in me, may all earthly and heavenly creatures, all the angels and saints, Thy Holy Mother, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Eternal Father, all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity, and all the graces and mercies which emanated from Thee, may all these be employed in praising Thee forever. May they be entirely transformed into everlasting praise of Thee, of all that Thou art together with Thy Father, Thyself and Thy Holy Spirit, and of all the graces Thou didst ever impart to Thy sacred humanity, Thy Blessed Mother, the angels and saints, and all creatures, and especially the graces Thou hast given me, or would have given me if I had not stood in Thy way.

0 Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, Mother of Jesus, angels of Jesus, Saints of Jesus, and all creatures of Jesus, bless and give thanks to Him for me forever. 0 Divine Jesus, do Thou glorify Thyself for me and return to Thyself a hundredfold all the thanks I ought to render to Thee.

2. 0 Good Jesus, Thou knowest how many favors and benefits I have received from Thy Blessed Mother, the angels and saints in heaven, and from many persons on earth. Thou knowest also how incapable I am of acknowledging them and giving thanks for them as I ought. And so I have recourse to Thee, imploring Thee most humbly to make up for my deficiencies and to give, on my behalf, to all those souls, both in heaven and on earth, all that I ought to render to them for the benefits I have received at their hands.

3. 0 Mother of Grace, Mother of my God, it is through thy intercession that I have received all the graces ever bestowed on me from heaven. May heaven and earth bless thee for them all, on behalf of myself and of all the thoughtless persons who have received favors from thee and give thee no thanks whatever.

Third Day

XX1 CONFESSION AND SATISFACTION.

Having set aside one day to thank God for all the graces He has given you in your lifetime, it is most necessary that you devote another day to ask forgiveness for your sins and to make satisfaction to Him. To that end, you ought on this day to make a good confession, either an extraordinary confession or one marked by unusual contrition and self-abasement, with as much care and preparation as if it were to be your last confession. The acts of contrition and other exercises for confession in «Part Two» will serve your purpose here also. Besides doing this, you would do well to set aside a little time during the day to meditate on this matter, in the presence of God, in the following way:

1. 0 Most Lovable Jesus, infinitely worthy of all service and love, to whom I owe debts without number, Thou didst create me only to love and serve Thee. Yet I have done scarcely anything but offend Thee by thought, word and deed, by all my bodily senses and spiritual faculties, by my misuse of Thy creatures, against all Thy commandments, in countless different ways. 0 what sins! What ingratitude! What betrayals! Lord Jesus, I cast all my offenses upon Thy divine love, into the abyss of Thy mercies. Grant that I may be utterly changed into sorrow and contrition, with tears of blood to detest and wipe out the sins I have committed against that immense Goodness, so deserving of love and honor! My God, what is there that I could ever do to make reparation for my sins? But even if I were to suffer all the torments and martyrdom in the world, I still could not of myself alone repair the insult given Thee by even the least of my faults.

2. 0 Good Jesus, I offer Thee instead all the glory, love and service given Thee by all the saints and Thy most Blessed Mother, by their holy thoughts, words and actions, by holy use of their bodily senses and their spiritual powers, by their eminent virtues and sufferings, in satisfaction for the failures of my lifetime. I offer Thee likewise all the honor given Thee forever by all the angels, by the Holy Spirit, by Thyself, and by the Eternal Father, in reparation for the dishonor I have given Thee all my life.

3. 0 Heavenly Father, 0 Holy Spirit, 0 ye angels and saints, offer up for me, to my Saviour, all the love and glory you ever gave Him, in satisfaction for the wrong I have done Him by my offenses.

4. Miserable sinner that I am, by offending my God I have offended all things. I have offended the Father, the Son, the Holy Ghost, the Mother of God, all the angels and saints, and all creation, for all are concerned and offended in offense to their Creator. How, O my God, how can I make reparation for so many offenses, make satisfaction to so many persons and pay off so many debts? I know what I will do: I have my Jesus who is in Himself an infinite wealth of virtues, merits and good works. He has been given me to be my riches, my virtue, my sanctification, my redemption and reparation. I shall offer Him to the Eternal Father, to the Holy Ghost, to the Blessed Virgin, to all the angels and all the saints in reparation and satisfaction for all the faults I have committed. O Holy Father, O Divine Spirit, I offer all the love and honor that my Jesus gave you by all His divine thoughts, words and actions, by His divine employment of all the members of His body and of His soul, by all His glorious virtues and heroic sufferings, in satisfaction for all the offenses I have committed against you all my life long.

O holy Virgin, O holy angels, O blessed saints, I offer you my treasure and my all, my Saviour Jesus Christ. I conjure you to draw upon His infinite storehouse of merit whatever you require in payment and satisfaction for all the debts I owe you, by reason of my sins and negligences.

5. O my Jesus, my divine Redeemer, do Thou make reparation for all my faults, and by Thy very great mercy atone for all my sins committed against the Eternal Father, Thyself the Son, the Holy Spirit, Thy most Blessed Mother, the angels and saints and all persons I have offended. I give myself to Thee to do and suffer in atonement whatsoever may be pleasing to Thy holy will, accepting now all the sufferings of body or spirit that I may have to bear, whether in this world or in the next, in satisfaction for my sins.

6. O most holy Virgin, I have so many obligations to serve and venerate thee; yet I have so little honored and so greatly offended thee by offending thy Son! I beg thy forgiveness, O Mother of Mercy, and I offer Thee in satisfaction all the honor ever accorded thee in heaven and on earth. I implore all the angels and saints, the Holy host, thy Son, and the Eternal Father to supply for my deficiencies, and fill up the measure of glory I ought to have rendered to thee all my life long.

319-

Fourth Day

XXII. HOLY COMMUNION.

Holy Communion is the most precious and effective means given you by God to render to Him all the honor and service you owe to Him. To prepare for a holy death, you should make a point of taking one day of this exercise to dispose yourself for an exceptionally well-prepared Communion, marked by extraordinary devotion and approached with as much care and recollection as if it were to be your last. The exercise I drew up for Holy Communion, in Part Two of this book, will prove sufficient for this purpose, provided you use it profitably.

Let me merely tell you that you should offer this special Communion to Our Lord: 1. in honor of all that He is in Himself and towards You; 2. in thanksgiving for all the effects of His love for His Father and for all creatures, but especially for You; 3. in satisfaction for all the dishonor and pain given Him by all the sins of the world, especially by your own; and 4. for the fulfilment of the plans of His Divine Providence for all men, especially for you.

Offer yourself to the Eternal Father, begging Him to unite you with the surpassing love of His paternal heart when He received His Son Jesus Christ into His bosom on the day of the Ascension. Give yourself to Jesus and beg Him to unite you with the most ardent love and profound humility with which He instituted the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, on the eve of His death. Offer yourself to the Blessed Virgin, to St. John the Evangelist, to St. Mary Magdalen and St. Mary of Egypt, and all the other saints, praying that they may cause you to participate in the love and fervor, the humility, purity and sanctity with which they received Holy Viaticum.

After you have received Communion and made the usual thanksgiving to Our Lord with unusual fervor, adore His divine plans from all eternity for you. Beg Him to forgive all the obstructions you have ever placed in the way of their operation. Fervently beg Him not to let you die until He has completed the plans of His goodness and the work of His grace in your soul. Give yourself to Him with a great.

desire and mighty resolution to work manfully to consummate His work in you, and to destroy in yourself everything that might stand in His way, so that you may be able to repeat to Him, on the last day of your life, His words to the Heavenly Father On Good Friday: Opus consuminavi quod dedisti mihi ut faciam, I have finished the work which thou gayest me to do" (John 17, 4).

Fifth Day

XX111. EXTREME UNCTION.

You do not know whether you will be able to concentrate on God when you receive the Sacrament of Extreme Unction, (assuming that it may please Him to grant this grace). It would, therefore, be a good thing to devote the fifth day to acquit yourself of the obligations to Our Lord to this holy Sacrament and to prepare for a meritorious reception of Extreme Unction.

1. O Jesus, I adore Thee as the author of the Holy Sacrament of Extreme Unction, and as the source of its priceless graces, which Thou hast acquired and merited for us by the shedding of Thy Precious Blood. I refer to Thee all the graces Thou didst ever produce in souls through Extreme Unction. I bless Thee a thousand times for all the glory Thou hast given to Thyself by this last Sacrament. I adore the infinite design of Thy Providence in the institution of Extreme Unction and I surrender myself to the accomplishment of Thy divine Plan for me according to Thy holy will. I implore Thee most humbly to grant me the grace of receiving this Sacrament at the end of my life. And if I should not be able to receive it, I implore Thee to produce in MY soul, by Thy great mercy, the same graces I would acquire by its reception.

2. O Jesus, I adore Thee in the holy anointing of Thy sacred body in the last days of Thy life by St. Mary Magdalen, and at Thy burial by St. Nicodemus and St. Joseph of Arimathea. I offer Thee all the holy unctions ever performed, in this last Sacrament, upon the bodies of all Christians who have received it or ever shall do so, in honor of and homage to the divine anointing of Thy deified body.

EXERCISE OF PREPARATION FOR DEATH

3. O Good Jesus, I adore Thee as High Priest to whom, before all others, belongs the right of conferring all the Sacraments. I give myself to Thee as High Priest and implore Thee to inspire in my soul all the dispositions required for the fruitful reception of Extreme Unction and to produce in me all the graces represented by its consoling ceremonies.

In order to dispose myself for its reception, O my Saviour, behold I cast myself down at Thy feet, accusing myself before Thee and Thy heavenly court of all my sins, most humbly begging Thy forgiveness with all the humility and contrition I can muster, with my whole heart imploring Thee, together with Thy Blessed Mother and all the angels and saints, to ask forgiveness from Thy Eternal Father, and to offer to Him in satisfaction for my sins the full measure of Thy infinite merits and sufferings.

O Good Jesus, come into my soul and into my heart. Come to bring me Thy holy peace and to destroy in me all that might disturb the peace and repose of my spirit. Come unto me, and with Thy Precious Blood purify me of the foulness of my sins. Come to grant me full and total absolution, indulgence and remission of all my sins.

O Most Kind Jesus, I offer Thee all the senses and members of my body and all the powers of my soul. Anoint me, I beg Thee, with the sacred oil that ever flows from Thy divine Heart, that is, with the oil of Thy grace and mercy and, by this heavenly anointing, cleanse me of the evil effects of my sins. O Dearest Jesus, I offer Thee the holy employment of bodily senses and spiritual powers ever made by Thy Divine Self, by Thy Blessed Mother and all the saints, in satisfaction for my abuse or misuse of the members and senses of my body and the faculties of my soul. May it please Thee to grant me the grace to employ them in future only for Thy pure glory.

Finally, O Most Amiable Jesus, may it please Thee to give me Thy holy blessing. Ask the Beneficent Father and the Holy Spirit to bless me with Thee, so that this divine and mighty benediction may destroy in me all that displeases Thee, and transform me utterly into eternal benediction and praise of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Sixth Day

XXIV. CHRIST'S LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT, AND THE WILL YOU SHOULD MAKE IN ITS HONOR.

On this day you should prepare to make a will, in imitation and honor of the final testament of Jesus Christ on earth. In the presence of God you should meditate on the infinitely adorable legacy left by Christ and consider how to make your own will in the same spirit with similar dispositions. This may be done in the following manner:

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the last days of Thy life. I adore every aspect and event of these last days, but especially Thy divine Testament pronounced in the Cenacle, on Mount Olivet and from the Cross. I adore, bless and glorify the supreme love for Thy Father, the most burning charity towards us and all the other holy dispositions of Thy last Testament to mankind.

In Thy last will there are five bequests:

The first bequest is to Thine enemies, for, O wonder of wonders, O immensity of goodness, Thy first word and first prayer on the Cross is for Thine enemies, begging the Father to pardon them, in the very hour when they were crucifying Thee.

The second bequest is to the Heavenly Father, the final gift of Thy holy soul with these words: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23, 46). These words were uttered not only with reference to Thy deified soul, but to my soul and to the souls of all who belong to Thee, which were all at that moment before Thy sight, and Thou didst look upon them as Thy own possession, forming all together but one soul with Thine, by virtue of their most intimate union. When Thou didst say to the Father: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum, Thou didst speak for Thyself and for me; Thou didst commend my soul together with Thine into the hands of Thy Father, addressing this prayer to Him who is at once Thy Father and mine, in Thy Name and my own, against the hour when my soul shall leave my body. And Thou didst make the offering of my soul with the same love with which Thou didst say Pater or Father in general, not My Father in particular, to show that Thou didst regard Him not only as Thy own Special Father, but as the common and universal Father of all Thy brethren and members. Thou didst pray to Him not only for Thyself in particular, but also in general for all who belong to Thee, with filial confidence and love, as much for Thyself as for them, for which mayst Thou be loved and blessed forever.

The third bequest in Thy will concerns the Blessed Mother, to whom Thou didst give that which was most dear to Thee after herself, the beloved disciple, St. John the Evangelist. At the same time there were represented in the person of St. John all the other disciples and children, until the end of time. When Thou didst say to Mary the words, "Woman, behold thy son" (John 19, 26), Thou didst give her not 'only St. John, but all other Christians to be her children. Reciprocally, in saying to St. John the words "Behold thy Mother?" (John 19, 27), Thou didst give to him and also to all Christians, represented in his person, Thy most precious possession in the order of created beings, namely, Thy most Blessed Mother. Thou didst give her to them to be their Mother just as she was Thy Mother, imparting to them Thy precious relationship and character with her. That was the reason Thou didst call her no longer Thy Mother, but Mulier, "woman," to show the transfer to us of Thy relationship to her as Son, and the gift to us, as Mother, of her who was about to cease to be Thy Mother for a time by reason of her Son's death. And so, good Jesus, Thou didst bequeath me in Thy will to Thy Blessed Mother, not only as a servant and subject, but actually as a son: Mulier, ecce filius tuus. Thou didst give her to me not only as my Queen and Lady, but in the most honorable and lovable character there is—that of a Mother. O love! O excess of goodness! May the whole world be transformed into love for so great a goodness!

The fourth bequest in Thy will is particularly ours and concerns us so diversely that it seems to have been made for us alone.

1. During Thy last days on earth, O Jesus, Thou didst express a surpassing and extraordinary love, assuring us that Thy Father loves us as He loves Thee (John 17, 23), and that Thou lovest us as Thy Father loves Thee (John 15, 9). And Thou dost consequently urge us to love one another as Thou hast loved us (John 13, 34).

2. Thou didst likewise commend us with most particular affection to the most exalted and powerful persons most dear to Thee, by whom Thou art most loved in heaven and on earth—that is, Thy Eternal Father and Thy divine Mother. To the Father just before setting out on the road to Calvary, Thou didst address a beautiful prayer: "Holy Father, keep them in thy name whom Thou hast given me. Not for them only do I pray but for them who through their word shall believe in me" (John 17, 11-20). While hanging on the Cross, Thou didst place our souls in His hands together with Thine own, as has been said. Thou didst also commend us to Thy divine Mother.

3. We share in Thy will because in Thy last, solemn and public prayer, Thou didst obtain from the Heavenly Father the greatest favors that could have been asked of Him, or that He could have given us. Here are the prayers Thou didst address to Him for us: 'Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me' (John 17, 24), that is, that they should have their dwelling and take their rest with Me forever in Thy bosom and Thy Fatherly Heart. "Just Father, may the love wherewith Thou hast loved me, be in them" (John 17, 25-26), that is to say: love them as Thou lovest Me, love them with the greatest, the most burning and most divine love that could ever possibly exist. Look upon them as Thou dost regard Me; love them with the very heart with which Thou lovest Me; treat them as Thou dost treat Me; give them all that Thou givest Me. "That they may be one, as thou, Father, in me and I in thee; that they also may be one in us ... I in them, and thou in me: that they may be made perfect in one" (John 17, 21-23). O dearest Lord, what love! What more couldst Thou ask the Father for us?

4. We share in Thy will because Thou didst give us the most rare and precious gift, Thy Eternal Father to be our Father, praying Him to love us as He loves Thee, as His children with sublime paternal love. Thou didst give us Thy Blessed Mother to be our Mother. Thou didst give us Thy most Holy Body in the Eucharist, Thy holy soul on the Cross in death with the words: I lay down my life for my sheep" (John 10, 15). Thou didst give Thy Precious Blood to the very last drop, Thy life, merits, sufferings, humanity and divinity, as expressed in these words: "The glory which thou hast given me, I have given to them" (John 17, 22). Thou didst give up all without reserve. O dearest Lord, how admirable is Thy goodness, poured forth for us in the very hour when we were causing Thee to suffer so many evils! How can we love Thee so little and think so seldom of Thee? How can so great a love be held so cheap and be so despised by those whom Thou so lovest?

The filth and last bequest in Thy will was made on Mount Olivet when, departing from the apostles and ascending into heaven, Thou didst give them Thy holy blessing. We share in this bequest also, for in imparting Thy blessing to the holy apostles and disciples Thou didst bless all of us, each one in particular, for we were all just as much present in Thy sight then as we are now. May heaven and earth bless Thee, O Author of all gifts, and may all things in heaven and earth be transformed into eternal blessings of Thee.

Such, good Jesus, are the five clauses of Thy admirable will, in honor of which I desire, if it please Thee, to draw up my own testament as follows:

XXV. LAST SPIRITUAL WILL AND TESTAMENT.

1. O Most Kind Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love with which Thou didst shed Thy Blood and die for Thy enemies and pray to Thy Father to pardon those who crucified Thee, with my whole heart I fully forgive all those who have ever offended or injured me, and I implore Thee to grant them full pardon. I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer whatever may please Thee for their sake, even to shed my blood and die for them, if necessary. So, too, in all the humility I can muster, I beg all whom I have ever offended or displeased in my whole life to forgive me, and I give myself to Thee to make whatever satisfaction to them Thou mayest desire.

2. In honor of and in union with the exceeding great love, the most perfect confidence and all the other dispositions with which Thou didst commend Thy soul and all the souls that belong to Thee into the hands of Thy Father, I surrender my soul, with the souls of all those for whom I am bound to have special concern, into the gentle hands and the most loving heart of the Divine Father, who is my

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

God, my Creator and my Most Lovable Father, that He may dispose of them according to His good pleasure. I trust that His infinite goodness will place them with Thy soul, good Jesus, in His Fatherly Bosom, there to love and bless Him eternally with Thee, according to the desire of Thy soul, expressed in the words: "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me" (John 17, 24).

3. In honor of and in union with Thy great charity in giving all Thy friends and children to Thy most Blessed Mother, I resign into her hands all those entrusted to my care, imploring Thee, Good Jesus, to commend them Thyself to Thy Virgin Mother. I implore her with my whole heart, by ~Thy very great love for her and hers for Thee, and by the same love with which Thou didst give her Thy friends and children, to look upon them henceforth as her children in a more special way, and to be their Mother.

4. In honor of and in union with the exceedingly powerful love whereby Thou didst commend me to Thy Father on Thy last day, and didst beg Him, on my behalf, for such great favors, giving me all that was most dear to Thee, with such extraordinary tokens of that love, urging me also to love my neighbor as Thou didst love me: I commend to Thee all those whom Thou knowest I should commend particularly to Thee, and I beg Thee on their behalf for all that Thou didst ask for me from Thy Eternal Father on Good Friday. I abandon myself to Thee to love Thee as Thou lovest the Father and as the Father loves Thee. I give myself also to Thee to love my neighbor as Thou didst love me, and to shed my blood and give my life for him, if it is Thy holy will.

5. O Jesus, God of all blessings, I adore Thee in the last moment of Thy sojourn on earth, upon Mount Olivet, as Thou didst leave the earth to ascend into heaven. I adore Thee giving Thy most holy blessing to Thy Blessed Mother, Thy apostles and disciples; I adore the exceeding great love and all the other dispositions which filled Thy divine soul when Thou didst impart this supreme blessing as is related in the Holy Gospel (Luke 24, 50).

O Good Jesus, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, in union with the humility and the other holy dispositions of the Blessed Mother and the holy apostles and disciples as they received Thy blessing. I most humbly implore Thee, by all Thy love for them, and theirs for Thee, to give now to me and to all I have commended to Thee, Thy most holy blessing, so that by the power of that divine blessing all that displeases Thee in me may be destroyed and I may be altogether transformed into everlasting praise, love and benediction of Thee.

Seventh Day

XXVI. THE AGONY AND THE MOMENT OF DEATH.

You shall consider this day as if it were to be your last. You must strive to spend it with as much care and devotion as if you had only this one day in which to love God. For this purpose, you should apply yourself to the contemplation and adoration of Our Lord in the last day of His life on earth, and to do everything in union with the holy and divine dispositions of His last actions. With the last day of your life in view, you should implore Jesus to unite you to his dispositions and foster them in your heart, that you may be of the number of those of whom it is said: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord" (Apoc. 14, 13) that is, who die in the dispositions of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Similarly you should consider and honor the Blessed Virgin on the last day of her life, uniting yourself to her dispositions, offering her the last day of your life. The prayers addressed to Jesus Christ and His Blessed Mother for the end of the year should also serve your purpose here.

I may also add at this point that it is a good thing on this day to adore Jesus and honor His most holy Mother in their agony and death, offering your agony and death in union with theirs, imploring them to bless and sanctify your death by their own. It is also most beneficial to adore the infinite power of the divine love that caused the death of Jesus and of His most holy Mother, for they both died of love and by love.

You should implore that divine love to cause you to die with Jesus and His divine Mother, and to consume and sacrifice your life in its sacred flames.

328- THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

You should also honor the holy martyrs and all saints in their agony and death; offer them your agony and death, in union with their own, begging them to unite you with their holy dispositions as they prepared for death. Implore them specially to associate you with all the love and glory they gave to Our Lord on the last day of their life and at the moment they died for Him.

You should pray specially to St. John the Evangelist, St. Mary Magdalen and the good thief who died with Jesus, and all the other saints who were present at the death of the Son of God, that through the merits of their privilege in being near Him in death, they may give you special assistance at the hour of your own death.

On this same day it would be most advisable to read the Passion of Our Lord, the seventeenth chapter of St. John, containing His last words and prayers before setting forth to be crucified, as well as the prayers of Holy Mother Church for the agonizing soul, which are to be found at the end of the Breviary. For you do not know whether you will be in a fit state on the last day of your life to complete these preparations for a holy death. Hence, it is a good thing to anticipate that day, and to read the Passion of Our Lord and the above-mentioned prayers with all the devotion you would wish to put into them at the hour of death, and all the devotion with which they have ever been read by the whole Church.

But above all, when you read the seventeenth chapter of St. John, which contains the last words and prayers of Jesus, give yourself to Him in a sincere effort to pronounce these words and prayers in union with His love, dispositions and intentions when He spoke them, imploring Him to foster in your heart these sublime dispositions in preparation for the last day of your life and to produce the effects of these holy words. -

Finally, cast yourself down at the feet of Jesus and His most holy Mother, to implore them to give you their most holy blessing. "O Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, give me your holy blessing for the last moment of my life. By your great goodness, grant that the last moment of my life may be consecrated to the glory of the last moment of yours, and that my last breath may be an act of most pure love for you!"

EXERCISE OF PREPARATION FOR DEATH

Eighth Day

XXVII. THE PARTICULAR JUDGMENT.

It is a most holy practice, when present at a deathbed, to kneel down at the moment the person dies, to adore the advent of the Son of God, who comes to judge that soul right there in the body, where it remains until it is consigned elsewhere by His judgment. It would be quite easy to prove that the Son of God thus comes to judge the soul at the hour of death, because several passages of Holy Scripture clearly speak of it. This is not, however, the place to do so. All I have to say for the present is that if it is beneficial to adore the Son of God in the exercise of His judgment upon others at the hour of death, how much more should you adore Him in His coming for you and His judgment~merit at the hour of your death. Therefore, you must render to Him now, freely and out of love, the honor that shall be obligatory when your end comes. Hence, this day shall be spent in this exercise, performed as follows:

1. O Jesus, Thou art the Saint of saints and Sanctity Itself, infinitely above all sin and imperfection. Yet, I behold Thee prostrate with Thy face to the earth at the feet of the All-just Father in the Garden of Olives, and the following day at the feet of Pilate, where the Eternal Father contemplates Thee as the Victim who has taken upon Himself all the sins of the world, giving Himself without reserve for the ransom of mankind. Thou hast taken the place of all sinners and borne the heavy judgment of our sins by dying on the Cross for our salvation. Thou dost accept that judgment with most perfect submission, most profound humility and most ardent love for Thy Father and for us. O Jesus, I adore and glorify Thee in this judgment and in all the holy dispositions of humiliation, contrition, submission and love with which Thou didst suffer to be judged and condemned to save us.

2. In honor of and in union with these dispositions, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, great Jesus, adoring Thee as my sovereign judge. I most willingly submit myself to Thy supreme power. I infinitely rejoice that Thou hast sovereign power over me and over all men and angels. A thousand times I bless the Eternal Father for having given Thee this power. I affirm sincerely that if, to imagine the impossible, Thou didst not have this power, and I did have it, I would want to strip myself of it to give it to Thee; if I were not subject to Thy power to judge me, I should wish to subject myself voluntarily to that power, out of homage to Thy divine justice and to the condemnation Thou didst undergo from Thy Father during Thy holy Passion.

3. O Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy coming at the hour of my death and at the moment of Thy judgment of my soul. I adore now every aspect and detail of my particular judgment. May it please Thee to grant me now some measure of the divine light by which Thou wilt clearly show me every event of my whole life, compelling me to give an account of everything. Grant me a share in the zeal for justice with which Thou wilt be avenged for my offenses, so that I may from now on see my sins clearly and make reparation by perfect contrition, horror and detestation for these same sins.

4. O my God, how many sins I have committed against Thee all my life, by thought, word and deed, in every way! They can not be numbered, I confess; and I accuse myself before Thee, Thy Blessed Mother, before all the angels and saints, and, if it be Thy holy will, before the whole world. I accuse myself of my sins just as they are in Thy sight, as Thou knowest them. If only I could see my offenses as Thou seest them! If only I knew myself as Thou knowest me, and as I shall see and know myself in Thy light at the moment of judgment! How I shall be confounded and humiliated then by the realization of what I am! What horror my crimes will awaken in me! What regret, what anguish at having so little loved and so greatly offended so transcendent a goodness as Thine! How quickly will I then accuse and condemn my own self! Indeed there will be no need of any other judge, for I shall be the first to pass sentence upon my own misdeeds and ignominy.

5. But why wait until that final hour? Lord, at this very moment I surrender myself to the zeal of Thy divine justice and to the spirit of Thy just hatred and righteous horror for sin. In honor of and in union with Thy extreme hatred of sin, I hate and detest all my sins; I hold them in abhorrence; I renounce them forever; I offer myself to Thee to suffer for them all the penance Thou shalt order. Casting myself down before Thy face, in the ultimate depths of abjection, to which, O great God, I have deserved to be reduced by my sins, I pronounce against myself, in the presence of heaven and earth, that final sentence. Since I, who am nothing but a worm of the earth, a handful of ashes and mere nothingness, have in so many ways offended so exalted and great a majesty, there are no tortures, either on earth, in purgatory or in hell, capable of worthily expiating my sin, without the intervention of Thy mercy and the power of Thy Precious Blood. For all these torments are finite, while the offense of my sins is infinite, since they offend an infinite majesty, and consequently deserve an infinite punishment.

So, my sovereign Judge, falling down once more at Thy feet, and in the nethermost depths of the bottomless pit of my sins, I adore and bless and love Thee with my whole heart, as pronouncing the sentence that Thou shalt pronounce at the hour of my death, and I voluntarily, with all the love possible to me, submit to this sentence, whatever it may be, telling Thee with the Royal Prophet, with all the power of my will: "Thou art just, O Lord, and thy judgment is right" (Ps. 118, 137). And I most obediently accept anything it may please Thee to ordain in my regard, in time and eternity, giving myself to Thee to bear not only all the sufferings of Purgatory, in homage to Thy divine justice, but any other penalty Thou mayest impose upon me. I take no thought of what is to become of me nor of what is to be done to me in time and eternity, provided only that the wrong and dishonor I have done Thee may be made good, no matter what the cost.

And yet, O God of mercy, do not permit that I should be numbered among those who will never love Thee. O most merciful Lord, what am I that Thou deignest to open Thy blessed eyes to look upon me, to summon me into Thy presence in judgment and to exercise Thy justice upon me? It is all too true that I deserve Thy mercy far less than Thy justice. But, O Thou Saviour of my soul, remember that Thou didst will to be judged for me, and that Thou art most worthy that my sins should be forgiven in Thee, since Thou didst ask the All merciful Father to pardon them for me. And yet, Lord, enter not into judgment with Thy miserable and unworthy servant, but offer for me to Thy Father the judgment Thou didst sustain for my sins, and pray that His divine forgiveness be granted, not to me but to Thee.

O Father of Mercy, I confess that I have deserved to bear the stern weight of Thy judgments, and that I am not worthy that Thou shouldst give me the least grace, nor that Thou shouldst pardon the very smallest of my sins. I offer Thee the terrible judgment Thy Son sustained for my faults, and I implore Thee to pardon them, not to me, but to Thy Beloved Son, who begs Thy forgiveness on my behalf, and to give Him, also, all the graces I need for Thy service. All possible punishments in the world, visited upon me, are incapable of giving Thee fitting satisfaction for the very least of my crimes. Thy Son alone can make perfect reparation for the dishonor I have given Thee. And so I offer to Thee, and I implore Him to offer with me, all that He did and suffered in His whole life, and all the honor He ever rendered to Thee, whether by Himself or through His Blessed Mother, His angels and all His saints.

O Mother of Mercy, Mother of Jesus, O angels and saints of Jesus, offer to God all your merits and works on my behalf and all the glory you ever gave Him, in satisfaction for my offenses and implore Him to treat me not according to the rigor of His justice, but the multitude of His mercies, in order that I may love and bless Him with you forever.

Ninth Day

XXVIII. DEATH AND BURIAL.

Since Jesus Christ, our Lord, willed to pass through all the phases of human life, in order to honor His Eternal Father and to bless and sanctify them for you, you should also have a holy zeal for honoring Him particularly in each of the phases of His life, and to consecrate all the states, in which you have been and are to be, to the honor of each aspect of His mortal life. Following this teaching, after you have adored Him in the last moment of His life, dedicating to Him your own last moment, it is now very appropriate to adore Him in the state of death, in which He remained for three days, and to consecrate to Him the condition of death in which you are to be from the last moment of your life until the day of the general resurrection, as follows:

1. O Jesus, Thou art eternal life and the source of all life, yet I behold Thee cold in the darkness and shadow of death. I see Thee bid farewell, for a little while, to Thy most lovable Mother, to Thy dearly beloved apostles and disciples, and to all Thy friends left bathed in tears, in the greatest mourning and lamentation of all time. I contemplate Thy holy soul separated from Thy divine Body, with which it had so holy, so close and so sublime a union. I see this same Body, more holy and sacred than all the heavenly bodies (I mean than all those in all the heavens, and more than the empyrean heaven itself), lying in a sepulchre, among the rocks in the dust. O my Jesus, I adore, praise and glorify Thee thus. I offer Thee all the honor rendered to Thee in this state by Thy holy Mother, by St. Mary Magdalen, by the holy apostles and disciples, by the angels, by the holy souls Thou didst free from Limbo and by the whole Church, with all the glory Thy Father gave Thee, and which Thou now enjoyest in heaven, in recompense for that humiliation Thou didst bear on earth. I offer Thee the state of death which will one day be mine, in honor of that state of death in which Thou didst remain before the Resurrection. I offer Thee the separation from the company of my friends and relatives that I shall one day have to bear, in honor of the most bitter separation which Thou didst suffer, torn from the most sweet company of Thy dearest Mother, of Thy dearly beloved apostles and disciples. I offer Thee all the sorrow and the tears of my relatives and friends in honor of the sorrow and tears of Thy harrowed Mother and sorrowing apostles. I offer Thee the separation of my soul from Thy sacred body. I offer Thee all the states of my soul, until its reunion with its body, whatever they may be, in homage to the state in which Thy holy soul existed during the time it was separated from Thy body. I offer Thee the burial of my body and all the actions that shall be done in performing this burial, in honor of the burial of Thy holy body. In honor of and in union with the same love with which Thou, O good Jesus, didst will that Thy sacred body should lie upon the dust within a hollow rock, and by which Thou hast so often given me this same body in Holy Communion, although I am nothing but a worm of the earth, I most willingly surrender my body to the ground and to the worms. I consent to be reduced to ashes and dust, but only on condition, O crucified Saviour, that all the grains of dust into which my flesh and bones shall crumble, may be so many voices praising and glorifying without interruption the adorable mystery of Thy burial, and that I may thus sing with the holy psalmist: Omnia ossa mea dicent, Domine quis similis tibi? "All my bones shall say: Lord, who is like to thee?" (Ps. 34, 10).

2. O Divine Jesus, even though Thy body and soul were separated, nevertheless they are continually united to Thy divinity. Thus, they never ceased to be worthy of infinite honor and adoration. Therefore, I adore Thy holy soul in its descent into Limbo. I adore all that happened in Thy soul and all the efforts produced in the souls of the Holy Patriarchs in Limbo. I also adore Thy body in the tomb, in all its members, for there is no part of it that is not infinitely adorable. I adore you, O most holy eyes of my Saviour's body. I adore you, O, sacred ears of my God. I adore and praise you, O most blessed mouth and tongue of Him who is the Word and eternal utterance of the Father. I adore and bless you, O most divine hands and feet of my Lord. I adore and love you, O most amiable Heart of Jesus.

Alas, my Beloved, Thy perfect body is lifeless because of my sins! Those sacred eyes, that by their sweet aspect gave joy to all who came in contact with Thee, are now darkened by the shadow of death. Those holy ears, always open to hear the cries and prayers of all unhappy creatures, are now closed and hear no more. Those divine lips, which pronounced the words of life, have become mute and speak no words. Those blessed hands that wrought so many miracles are lifeless and still. Those holy feet, so often wearied for the salvation of the world, are no longer able to walk. But above all, the most loving Heart of my Jesus, the most exalted and noble throne of divine love, is without life or feeling. Ah, my Dear Jesus, who has brought Thee to this pitiable state? My sins and Thy love! Cursed and detestable sin, how I abhor you! O love of my Saviour, may I love you, may I bless you without ceasing!

3. O Good Jesus, I surrender myself completely to the power of Thy holy love. I implore Thee by that love, to reduce me now into a state of death that may imitate and honor Thy state of death. Utterly extinguish in me the life of sin and of the old Adam. Cause me to die to the world, to myself and to all that is not Thee. Mortify my eyes, ears, tongue, hands, feet, heart and all the other powers of my body and soul, so that I may no longer be able to see, nor hear, speak, taste, act, walk, love, think, will, nor make any other use of all the parts of my body or the faculties of my soul, save in accordance with Thy good pleasure, led by the guidance of Thy divine spirit.

4. O my Well-beloved Jesus, I give myself to Thee to derive the benefits of these words of Thy apostle: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (COL. 3, 3). Hide me utterly with Thee in God. Bury my mind, my heart, my will and my being, so that I may no longer have any thoughts, desires, or affections, any sentiments and dispositions other than Thine own. And just as the earth changes and transforms into itself the bodies buried within it, do Thou change and transform me completely into Thyself. Bury my pride in Thy humility, my coldness and tepidity in the fervor of Thy divine love, and all my other vices and imperfections into Thy holy virtues and perfections so that, just as the earth consumes all the corruption of the body buried in it, so all the corruption of my soul may be consumed and annihilated in Thy divine perfections.

5. O Mother of Jesus, I honor and revere thee in the state of thy death and burial. I offer thee all the honor then given thee by the angels and holy apostles. I thank thee for all the glory thou didst give to the death and burial of Thy Son by Thine Own. I offer thee my own death and burial, imploring thee to obtain for me, by thy holy prayers, the grace that every aspect of my earthly end may pay everlasting homage to the death and burial of thy spotless self and of thy beloved Son, our Saviour.

Tenth Day

XXIX. ENTRANCE OF THE SOUL INTO HEAVEN AND UNDYING LIFE.

Even though we are most unworthy to see the face of God and to be admitted into the blessed company of the citizens of heaven, it is, nevertheless, most certain that the Father, the Son, the Spirit, the Blessed Virgin, all the angels and all the saints eagerly desire to behold you soon joined with them, to be overwhelmed as they are in the torrents of the heavenly and unspeakable delights of divine love which reigns with fulness in heaven. And we ought to have great trust that, in the goodness of God, this will one day be realized for us. Our greatest consolation in this world ought to be the thought and expectation of that day when we shall begin to love and glorify God in all perfection. What rejoicings we should voice with the Royal Prophet, at the vision and thought of that blessed day: Laetatus sum in his quae dicta sunt mihi, in domum Domini ibimus: I rejoiced at the things that were said to me: We shall go into the house of the Lord" (PS. 121, 1). "Blessed are they who dwell in thy house, O Lord: they shall praise thee forever and ever." (PS. 83, 5).

Surely if you celebrate the day of your birth into the life of grace by holy Baptism, how much more should you celebrate the feast of your entrance into heaven and your birth into the life of glory! Anticipate that day, and begin now to celebrate that feast by means of the following exercises:

1. O Jesus, I adore, praise and glorify Thee countless times at the moment of Thy triumphant entrance into heaven. I offer Thee all the glory, love and praises that were given to Thee in welcome by the Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother and all the angels. I also honor Thy Blessed Mother in the moment of her assumption into Paradise. I offer her all the glory and praises that were given her by the Omnipotent Father, by her Beloved Son, Thyself, Thy Holy Spirit, all the angels and all the saints. I offer to Thee and to Thy glorious Mother, my own entrance into Paradise, which, I hope, by Thy great mercy, to make one day, in honor of the glorious and triumphant entry of Thy ascension and her assumption. O my Most Adorable Jesus, I desire to consecrate everything that ever was, is and shall be in me, in time and in eternity, to the honor and homage of Thee and Thy most holy Mother.

2. O Most Admirable and Most Adorable Trinity, I adore, bless and magnify Thee infinitely for all that Thou art in Thy manifold works of mercy and justice toward me and to all Thy creatures, in heaven, on earth and in hell. I offer Thee all the adoration, love, glory, praise and benediction accorded Thee forever. O my God, how I rejoice to behold Thee so full of greatness, of marvels, of glory and joy! It is enough. I desire no other glory, felicity or happiness, in eternity save to behold the incomprehensible glory, felicity and happiness of Him whom I love more than myself. O my glory and my love, may all heaven and earth be transformed into glory and love for Thee! Finally, I sacrifice myself all to Thee to be sacredly annihilated and consumed forever in the most pure fire of Thy divine love.

3. O Jesus, Thou only object of my love, with what love, with what praises can I ever repay Thee for all that Thou art in Thyself, and for all the innumerable effects of Thy goodness towards all Thy creatures, myself in particular? Lord, may all Thy creatures, all Thy angels and saints, Thy Blessed Mother, and all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity be employed in blessing and loving Thee forever.

4. O Mother of God, O holy angels, O blessed saints, I hail, honor and thank you all in general, and each one in particular, especially those to whom I owe some special obligation and with whom I am to be most closely associated in eternity. In thanksgiving for all the favors I have received from you, and much more for all the glory and services you have rendered to my God, I offer to each one of you the most amiable Heart of my Jesus, source of all joy, all glory and all praise. I give you my mind and my heart; unite them with your minds and hearts and associate me in your constant chorus of praise to Him who created me, that I may praise and love Him eternally with you. Pray ardently that I may bless and love Him through you, while awaiting the day when it may please Him to unite me with you to love and glorify Him to perfection.

5. O blessed day, when I shall begin to love most purely and perfectly my Lord and Saviour who is infinitely amiable! O thousand times happy day in which I shall begin to be all love for him who is all love for me! O Jesus, my sweet love, how consoled I am when I think that I shall love and bless Thee eternally! My eyes dissolve in tears and my heart melts with joy at the sweetness of the thought that some day I shall be completely transformed into praise and love for Thee. But, alas, when will it come, this day, so longed for and a thousand times desired? Will it yet delay for long? Heu mihi quia incolatus meus prolongatus est! "Woe is me, that my sojourning is prolonged" (Ps. 119, 5). Usquequo, Domine, oblivisceris me in finem, usquequo avertis faciem tuam a me? "How long, O Lord, wilt thou forget me unto the end? How long dost thou turn away thy face from me" (Ps. 12, 1)? Quae admodum desiderat cervus ad fontes aquarum ita desiderat anima mea ad te, Deus (Ps. 41, 2).

No more the hunted stag desires,
Fleeing in woe and weariness,
Waters to quench his burning thirst,
Than my poor heart with sadness pressed
Sighs after Thee, O Lord, my rest.

My heart is driven nigh to death
By cruel desires, merciless,
And longs for Thee, Lord, Mighty God,
And in its longing, cries apace:
When shall my eyes behold Thy face?

When, ah, when will come that day
To take my earthly woes away
And bring me home at last to Thee?

While waiting for that day, I desire, O my Saviour, to realize in myself St. Paul's words: "Our conversation is in heaven" (Phil. 3, 20), as well as Thy words of reassurance and guidance: "The kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17, 21). I desire to live on earth as though I were not here, but living by my heart and spirit in heaven. I desire to concentrate all my powers on the establishment of the kingdom of Thy glory and holy love within myself. But Thou knowest, Lord, that of myself I can do nothing; therefore, I give myself to Thee, that Thou mayest destroy every obstacle and perfectly establish the kingdom of Thy pure love in my body, in my soul, and in all my thoughts, words and actions.

XXX. CONCLUSION OF THE EXERCISE.

At the end of these exercises on the subject of death, you should thank Our Lord for the graces He has given you through them, and beg Him to forgive the faults you have committed in their performance. Ask Him to compensate for your deficiencies, and to accomplish in you the fulfilment of His words: "Blessed is that servant, whom when his lord shall come he shall find so doing. Amen I say to you: he shall place him over all his goods" (Matt. 24, 46-47). Pray that He may ever watch within you and for you, lest you be taken by surprise. Beg Him to keep these exercises and preparations in store for you against the hour of your death and to be Himself your disposition and preparation.

Follow the same procedure proportionately, invoking the Blessed Virgin, the angels and saints, especially the saints on whose feast day the Lord knows you are going to die.

XXX1. SOME OTHER POINTS OF ADVICE AND NECESSARY DISPOSITIONS FOR A HOLY DEATH.

I shall here add a few other suggestions and practices which may prove useful to you, when you sense that your life is approaching its end.

The chief thing for you to do, when you feel that you are nearing the end of your life, is to devote yourself as much as possible to acts of love of Jesus, ever uniting humility with love. There is no more powerful and effective means of quickly wiping out our sins, advancing with great strides along the road to God, and giving Him pleasure than the divine exercise of active love.

If you are worried by the fear of death or by qualms of mistrust by reason of your past sins, ask some' kind person to read to you the passages about confidence contained in 'Part One" of this book.

340 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

If you are not too sick to listen to reading aloud, ask some kind friend to read to you, from time to time, the foregoing meditations on death, and the exercises of praise and glorification of Jesus which are to be found in 'Tart Five" of this book.

Let him also read passages from the Lives of the Saints or some other book of devotion, but particularly the Passion of Jesus Christ, the seventeenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John and the prayers for the agonizing soul, as on the seventh day of the "Exercise of Preparations for Death."

Do not forget, when you are at the end of your life, to remind one of your friends to gain a plenary indulgence for you, not in your own interest but for the pure glory of God, according to the method suggested in 'Tart Six," where indulgences are discussed.

Frequently clasp the Crucifix in your hands, so that you may from time to time make acts of love while kissing the Cross and the Five Wounds, as I explain in "Part Five!"

Let the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary be ever in your heart and frequently on your lips. Renew the desire to pronounce them with the intentions recommended for the Rosary of Jesus and Mary in 'Part Three.'

Pray with St. Francis: "Lord, release my soul from the prison of this body that I may praise Thy Holy Name with all the just who await me in heaven."

Constantly invoke the Blessed Virgin, using the words of Holy Church: Maria Mater gratiae, Mater misericordiae, tu nos ab hoste protege et hora mortis . S suscipe: "O Mary, Mother of Grace, Mother of Mercy protect us from the enemy and receive us at the hour of death."

O Mother of Jesus, be a mother to my soul. Monstra te esse Matrem. "Show thyself my Mother." Monstra to esse Matrem Jesu. "Show that thou art the Mother of Jesus," by destroying in me, by thy prayers and merits, all that is contrary to the glory of thy Son Jesus, and causing Him to be loved and glorified perfectly in me.

Repeat with St. Stephen: Domine Jesu suscipe ~spirituum meum: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit" (Acts 7, 58).

As you say all these words, ever unite yourself with the devotion,

EXERCISE OF PREPARATION FOR DEATH

the love and die other holy dispositions with which they were first pronounced.

Accept your suffering in union with Jesus, in agony in the garden of Olives: Pater, non mea voluntas sed tua fiat: 'Father, not my will but thine be done" (Luke 22, 42). And again with Jesus agonizing on the Cross, say: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum. 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23, 46).

Constantly lift up your heart to Jesus, saying to Him with the beloved disciple St. John: Veni Domine Jesu: "Come, Lord Jesus" (Apoc. 22, 20).

Repeat with St. Peter: Domine, tu scis quia amo te. "Lord, thou knowest that I love thee" (John 21, 16).

Say with the good thief: Memento mei, Domine, dum veneris in regnum tuum: "Lord, remember me when thou shalt come into Thy Kingdom" (Luke 23, 42). And as you pronounce these words, unite yourself with the, heartfelt contrition of the good thief, contrition so deep and moving that he merited the infinite grace to hear from the lips of the Son of God: "Amen I say to thee: this day thou shalt be with me in paradise" (Luke 23, 43).

Humbly repeat with the poor publican in the Gospel: Deus propitius esto mihi peccatori. "O God, be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18, 13).

Let your heart chant with King David: Miserere mei Deus, secundum magnam misericordiam tuam: "Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy" (Ps. 50, 3). Suscipe me secundum eloquium tuum et vivam, et non confundas me ab expectatione mea: "Uphold me according to thy word, and I shall live: and let me not be confounded in my expectation" (Ps. 118, 116). In te Domine speravi, non confundar in aeternum: In thee, O Lord, have I hoped, let me never be confounded" (Ps. 30, i).

You may also make use of these little aspirations: "O Jesus, love Thy Father and Thy Holy Spirit for me." "O Father of Jesus, O Holy Spirit of Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, O angels of Jesus, O saints of Jesus, love Jesus for me."

Volo Domine Jesu te regnare super me: "Lord Jesus, I will to have Thee reign over me."

342 - THE KINGDOM OF JESUS

Dominare in medio inimicorum tuorum: "Lord Jesus, reign over me in the midst of all Thy enemies."

"O my Dear Jesus, be Jesus to me; O my all, be all to me, for the past, present and future."

Unum necessarium, unum volo, unum amo, unum quaero: "One thing alone is necessary. Farewell to all things else; speak of them no more to me. I desire but one thing, I seek but one thing, I love but one thing, which is all to me, and all else is nothing to me. It is my sweetest Jesus Whom I desire, my Dearest Jesus whom I seek. Him I love and Him I long to love with all the love in heaven and on earth."

Jesus meus et omnia: "My Jesus is all to me. Once more, farewell to all that is not Jesus. My Jesus is sufficient for me. I desire nought but Him in heaven and on earth." Veni Domine Jesu: "Come Lord Jesus, enter into me, there to love Thyself to perfection."

"O Jesus, my all, be Thou my preparation for my death. O Jesus, I give myself to Thee to die with Thee, in Thee and by Thee."

"O Jesus, I give myself to Thee to unite myself, at the moment of death, with all the dispositions of love and sanctity which ennobled the death of Thy divine humanity, Thy holy martyrs and all the other saints."

"O Jesus, O Mary, Mother of Jesus, I implore you to give me your holy blessing."

Finally, try to make your last word be the Holy Name of Jesus and the sweet name of Mary: Jesus, Mary! or else, Live Jesus! or Jesus, be Jesus to me!

Thus, you may converse with Our Lord with profound devotion and consoling ease by means of frequent ejaculations. But if you wish Him to give you the grace to make these loving aspirations at the hour of your death, you must develop the habit of saying these words and pronouncing these ejaculations frequently during your life, especially at night, lying in bed before falling asleep, using now one, now another, according to the inspiration of the spirit of God.

It would also be well to ask those present around to assist you during your last sickness, to read and reread frequently the above prayers. And if by chance you should lose the power of speech, let them diligently continue to make these acts on your behalf, particularly if it should happen that you lose the use of your senses or your reason. Once you have made the request and expressed to your friends that it is your will for them to make acts of love in your name and for you, Our Lord will accept these precious acts as if you yourself were making them, since they are made at your request and on your behalf.

Pray also to the Blessed Virgin and your special angels and saints to carry out all these things for you, together with everything else they know God expects of you on the last day of your life. But above all, supplicate Jesus Himself to do this for you, and put great trust in His infinite goodness, that He will be your all, and will do on your behalf everything that is required of you for a holy and happy death. And I pray you to note this last point well.

Even though you should prepare yourself for death with all possible care and devotion, by means of these exercises, none the less, after having done all that has been suggested, you should not rely or rest upon your own acts, exercises and preparations, but rather place all your reliance and trust in the pure goodness and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, ever imploring Him to be your preparation, your virtue, your sanctification and your all.

For after all is said and done, to Jesus Christ alone does it belong to be all and accomplish all, in all men and all things that He may have the glory Of all, according to the divine words of St. Paul, with which I began this book, and by which I wish to finish it: Omnia in omnibus Christus: "Christ is all and in all" (COL. 3, 11). Oh, Let Him then be all, in time and in eternity!

O Jesus, be all, be all on earth as Thou art in heaven: be all in all men and things. Be all in this little book. Everything it has Of good is all from Thee. It speaks but of Thee and for Thee; it aims only at forming and establishing Thee in the souls of those who use it. Let its readers see in it nothing but Jesus, seek in it nothing but Jesus, and learn from it nothing but to love and glorify Jesus. Be all to him who has written this book and to those who shall read it; for Thou knowest,

O Jesus, my dear all, that it is my will never, in life or in death, to have any other object or desire but to see Thee live and reign in all men and all things. Live then, Jesus, live and reign in us. The wretched Jews cried: Nolumus hunc regnare super nos: "We will not have this man to reign over us." We, on the contrary, desire to proclaim in the face of heaven and on earth: Volumus, Domine Jesu, te regnare super nos. "We want Thee, Lord Jesus, to reign over us." Reign, therefore, O King of Souls, dwell perfectly and absolutely in thy Kingdom in our hearts that we may forever sing the divine canticle: Omnia in omnibus Jesu: "Jesus is all in all things!" Live Jesus! Live Thou great all! Live great Jesus, Who art all! Live this great all, which is Jesus! Live Jesus! Live Jesus!

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown.(1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution(2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world(3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1).Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumers ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2)The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.

2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae et Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a savior of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre de Bérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the

1 X -

Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking. They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.

FOREWORD

THE series of selected works of Saint John Eudes now being edited for the convenience and the edification of the devout this present work adds a great spiritual classic, the central treatise, in a way, of all the books written by Saint John. Pope Leo XIII, in proclaiming the heroic virtues of the saintly author, declared him to be the "author of the liturgical worship of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Holy Heart of Mary" and in so doing the Vicar of Christ implicitly paid tribute to The Admirable Heart of Mary, now offered in English translation by the editors of these selected works.

This was the first book written on the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. As such, it is a basic work in modern spirituality, one of the great devotional treatises which have shaped the history of Catholic prayer life. The characteristic gifts of the devout writer—his elevation of thought and directness of expression—are admirably exemplified in the beloved pages of his Marian masterpiece. The translators are to be warmly thanked for the fidelity and felicity of their English version; it keeps remarkably the spirit and the simplicity of Saint John's original work.

The Eudist Fathers are pardonably anxious to bring before an ever larger public the spiritual works of their inspired Founder. In so doing, they are acting in obedience to the filial instincts of worthy sons of a father so deserving of their zeal. But they are also doing the Church and all souls a great service. They are serving the Church because they are spreading a devotion at once true to the traditions of Catholic piety and consistent with the spiritual needs of our day. They are inspiring souls because they are making available to those who sincerely seek to love God and honor His Mother a rich treasury of the most sublime, yet most simple literature on the cult of Christ and of Mary. May God bless their efforts!

We live in times full of danger for the Church. Her enemies have rarely in history been so numerous or so organized. Her property is the Object of avaricious designs; her prelates are increasingly under attack; her organization, resented by those who hate her, daily encounters fresh opposition and malicious interference. God's purposes are always hidden and sometimes hard for His children to discern. We can only await His Holy Will in patience and in prayer, confident that in the final day He will vindicate His saints and establish His Kingdom beyond the reach of destructive hands.

But one thing is certain: there can be no times so difficult that they will not produce saints. Indeed, times of crisis are invariably times of great Sanctity. Wherefore we rejoice that, among the many books being published on current events, sociology, politics and history as these affect the Church, there is an increase in books on the Science of the saints, the art of loving God and the means of growing in His favor. In the rich harvest of such books now made ours by modern publishing techniques, none are more fervently welcome than the works of Saint John Eudes, the "prodigy of his age," and among his books none will more enrich the spiritual lives of its readers than this incomparable devotional classic The Admirable Heart of Mary.

EPISTLE DEDICATORY

To Her Royal Highness

MADAME DE GUISE(1)

Madame,

All the stones in the Church of the most holy Heart of Jesus and of Mary, erected at the Caen seminary, are like so many voices crying out that this book, which also bears the title of The Admirable Heart of Mary, should be dedicated to Your Royal Highness as a sign of the gratitude of our little Congregation. (2) We consider and honor you, Madame, as the foundress of our first and principal church, whose every stone is yet mother tongue proclaiming that, among the great number of princes and princesses who have built churches in honor of the King and the Queen of the angels, Your Royal Highness alone can claim this privilege: that there are no others to whom God has granted the favor of making them His instruments to erect churches in honor of the adorable Heart

(1). Elizabeth of Orléans, the Duchess of Alençon and Guise (1652-1696) was the daughter of Gaston d'Orléans and the widow of Louis Joseph de Lorraine, the Duke of Guise, Joyeuse and Angoulême. Lacking resources, St. John Eudes had been forced to stop work on the chapel of the Caen seminary, the cornerstone of which had been laid with great solemnity on May 20, 1664. The aldermen, seeing how slowly the construction was progressing, threatened to reclaim the ground that they had granted to the Saint on the Place Royale. In 1673 the Duchess of Guise, on the recommendation of Madame de Lorraine, the Abbess of Montmartre and her sister-in-law, gave St. John Eudes the sum of 12,000 livres to complete the chapel on the condition that Mass and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament in honor of the Holy Heart of Mary be celebrated perpetually in it every Saturday for her and her family. Confiscated during the French Revolution, the chapel and Seminary in Caen became the City Hall. The chapel was divided horizontally in the middle, and until recently the upper part served as a municipal library, while the lower portion had been transformed into a hall for social functions. The building was completely destroyed during the Allied Invasion in 1944.

of His Son Jesus and the admirable Heart of His dearest daughter Mary. Your Royal Highness is the first one to be chosen by His Divine Majesty for such a noble and august work. All the citizens of heaven will look upon and respect you forevermore as the foundress of the first church in the world which ever bore the name of the Church of the Most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, (3) and which was so named by the Sovereign Pontiff Clement X, or rather by the Holy Spirit, since this Divine Spirit is the soul of the Church as well as its head, governing it in all matters of Christian faith and piety.

Your royal birth, Madame, endowed you with certain grandeurs which earn the homage and respect of all Europe, while the excellent virtues which shine forth in the holiness of your life make you venerable in heaven and on earth. But the title of foundress of the first church to be dedicated to these two incomparable Hearts will eternally crown you with a completely unique honor and glory unrivalled in heaven.

Your Royal Highness is also the first to have established in this church the celebration each Saturday of the Holy Sacrifice of the Altar, along with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, in honor of the admirable Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. It is therein that the angels, who assist by the thousands at this sacrifice and benediction, and who have a special love for all persons who honor their Sovereign Princess, look upon you and honor you as the beloved of her Heart, and as the one who has had a sanctuary built on earth to be the dwelling of the King and Queen of heaven. That is why they are preparing for you a palace incomparably more beautiful, rich and magnificent than all the palaces of the greatest monarchs in the world. Did I say a palace? It is much more than that, Madame. They are preparing a glorious and eternal abode for you in their hearts.

In addition, all the Masses said in this church and all the works performed there until the consummation of the world will be like precious stones of incalculable worth which will make your crown wonderfully rich and brilliant. I very humbly and urgently beseech my most adorable Saviour and His most amiable Mother to take full, absolute and eternal possession of Your Highness's truly royal heart and to make their holy love reign supreme in it, that you may live in all perfection according to the Heart of God.

(3). St. John Eudes had previously dedicated the chapel of the Coutances seminary to the Holy Heart of Mary, "who has but one Heart with her Beloved Son." In this chapel, begun on July 3, 1652, Mass was first celebrated on September 4, 1655. Cf. #### Part One

OBJECT OF THE DEVOTION TO THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

CHAPTER I

REASONS FOR THE NAME "ADMIRABLE"

JESUS CHRIST, the Only-Begotten Son of God, chose the incomparable Virgin Mary from among all creatures to be His Mother and deigned to be nourished and governed by her, In His infinite goodness He also gave her to us to be our Queen, our Mother and our sure Refuge in all our needs. He therefore wishes us to honor her as He honors her and to love her as He loves her.

According to the Apostle St. Paul, Christ is the Head of His Mystical Body, the Church, and we are the members. (1) We must therefore be animated by His Spirit; we must follow His inspirations, walk the path He has traced, and continue, as it were, His life on earth by practising the virtues which were His own. It follows that our devotion to His Holy Mother must be a continuation of His devotion to her. We must be filled with the Sentiments of respect, submission and affection which He entertained for her on earth and still entertains in heaven. Mary always held and will hold forever the first place in the Sacred Heart of her Divine Son; she always was and will never cease to be the first object of His love after the Eternal Father; and so He wishes that, next to God, she should be the principal object of our devotion. For this reason, after the veneration we owe to the Divine Majesty of God, we cannot render a greater service to Jesus Christ or do anything more pleasing to Him than to serve and honor His most worthy Mother.

The human will is not, however, moved to love a fellow creature unless the intellect first knows what renders it worthy of respect and esteem. The infinite zeal with which the Son of God is inflamed for all that concerns His dear Mother, has urged Him to reveal to us through the inspired words of Sacred Scripture and through the writings of the Fathers some small measure of the perfections with which He has enriched her. The reality far surpassing our knowledge of her in this vale of darkness will be revealed only in heaven, the land of unclouded light.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Among the divinely inspired passages of Sacred Scripture I select one from the twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse, which is a compendium of all the great things that can be said or thought of our marvellous Queen. "A great sign appeared in heaven: A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars." (2) What is this great sign? Who is this miraculous woman? St. Epiphanius, (3) St. Augustine, (4) St. Bernard (5) and many other holy doctors agree that the woman is Mary, the Queen among women, the Sovereign of angels and men, the Virgin of virgins. She is the woman who bore in her chaste womb the perfect man, the God-Man. "A woman shall compass a man." (6)

Mary appears in heaven because she comes from heaven, because she is heaven's masterpiece, the Empress of Heaven, its joy and its glory, in whom everything is heavenly. Even when her body dwelt on earth, her thoughts and affections were all rapt in heaven.

She is clothed with the eternal Sun of the Godhead and with all the perfections of the Divine Essence, which surround, fill and penetrate her to such an extent that she has become transformed, as it were, into the power, goodness and holiness of God.

She has the moon under her feet to show that the entire world is beneath her. None is above her, save only God, and she holds absolute sway over all created things.

She is crowned with twelve stars that represent the virtues which shine so brightly in her soul. The mysteries of her life are as many stars more luminous by far than the brightest lights of the sky. The privileges and prerogatives God has granted to her, the least of which is greater than anything shining in the firmament of heaven, as well as the glory of the saints of Paradise and of earth, are her crown and (7) her glory in a much fuller sense than the Philippians could be said to be the crown and joy of St. Paul.'

OBJECT OF THE DEVOTION

But why does the Holy Ghost call Mary "a great sign"? It is simply to tell us that everything in her is wonderful, and that the marvels that fill her being should be proclaimed to the entire world, so that she may become an object of the admiration for the inhabitants of heaven as well as for mankind on earth, and so that she may be the sweet delight of angels and men.

This is likewise the reason why the Holy Ghost inspires the faithful throughout the world to sing in her praise: Mater admirabilis. "O Mother Most Admirable." Moreover, according to the testimony of several trustworthy authors, (8) a holy Jesuit who once asked the Mother of God to reveal to him which of the many titles in her Litany was most pleasing to her received this same answer: Mater admirabilis.

Mary is truly admirable in all her perfections and in all her virtues. (9) But what is most admirable in her is her virginal heart. The heart of the Mother of God is a world of marvels, an abyss of wonders, the source and principle of all the virtues which we admire in our glorious Queen: "All the glory of the king's daughter is within." It was through the humility, purity and love of her most holy Heart that she merited to become the Mother of God and to receive the graces and privileges with which God enriched her on earth. These same sublime virtues of her immaculate Heart have rendered her worthy of the glory and happiness that surround her in heaven, and of the great marvels that God has wrought in and through her.

Do not be surprised if I say that the virginal Heart of this Mother of Fair Love is an admirable Heart indeed. Mary is admirable in her divine Maternity because as St. Bernardine of Siena says, "to be Mother of God is the miracle of miracles;" miraculum miraculorum. But the august Heart of Mary is also truly admirable, for it is the principle of her divine Maternity and of the wonderful mysteries this privilege implies.

Of Mary's admirable Heart I shall attempt to speak in this book although to speak and write worthily of the holy Heart of God's own Mother one would need a heart of fire. To know and proclaim the perfections of the noble Heart of the Queen of Angels one should have the intellect of a cherub and the flaming love of a seraph. Nay more, it would be necessary to possess the mind, the heart, the tongue and the hand of Jesus Christ, the King of all hearts, to understand, honor, proclaim or (9). The Saint enumerates here many of Mary's admirable perfections. Since most of these passages are found elsewhere, we have occurred them in this edition.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

commit to writing the treasures of sanctity contained in the holy Heart of Mary, the worthiest, most royal and most marvellous of all hearts after the most adorable Heart of our Saviour Himself.

I am not so presumptuous as to believe that I can enclose within the pages of this book the immense treasure and the innumerable wonders contained in the incomparable Heart of Mary which is and will forever be the object of the ecstatic contemplation of the happy citizens of heaven.

When the angels beheld their Queen and ours at the moment of her immaculate conception they were filled with admiration at such fulness of grace and in their wonderment exclaimed: "Who is she that cometh forth as the morning rising, fair as the moon, bright as the sun, terrible as any army set in array?" (10) What then must their rejoicing be, now that they behold in heaven all the marvellous perfections of her Heart from the first moment of her life on earth until the last?

The God of Angels finds even the footsteps of this glorious Queen so holy and so pleasing to His Divine Majesty that He exclaims: "How beautiful are thy steps in shoes, O prince's daughter!" (11) Under His divine inspiration Holy Church, both Militant and Triumphant, celebrates on earth and in heaven Our Lady's visitation to her cousin Elizabeth. From this we see how great is Our Lord's desire that we should admire and honor as He does the many holy and admirable actions which were inspired in the most amiable Heart of His peerless Mother.

If the smallest virtuous act of this heavenly Virgin represented in Sacred Scripture by one of her hairs, is so pleasing to God as to make Him proclaim that she has wounded and ravished His heart with a hair of her neck (12) what must we think of the manifold acts of love which, like sacred flames, were constantly darting from the burning furnace of her virginal Heart ablaze with divine love? These flames were incessantly rising to Heaven to the Heart of the Most Holy Trinity.

Holy Church, whom the Divine Spirit guides in all things, celebrates on earth and will forever celebrate in heaven several feasts to honor the various events in the earthly life of the Mother of God, such as her Presentation, in which she offered herself to God in the temple of Jerusalem; her Purification to honor her obedience to a law that did not apply to her; the feast of Our Lady of Snows in memory of the dedication of the first church consecrated to her. What praises and homage her Holy Heart then deserves, that Heart which for at least sixty-three years offered up so many acts of faith, hope, love of God and charity towards men, humility, obedience and every other virtue? What mind can understand and what tongue express the richness of this incomparable Heart, the Sovereign of all hearts consecrated to Jesus?

(10). Cant. 6, 9.

(11). Cant. 7, 1.

(12). Cant. 4, 9. "Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse: thou hast wounded my heart . . . with one hair of thy neck."

Her Heart is a vast sea of grace, a measureless ocean of perfections, an immense furnace of love. Would that I might lose myself as a drop of water in this ocean or be consumed like a straw in this furnace, so that nothing of what I write could be considered as coming from me, but only from Jesus Christ who is the unique source of all good!

O most holy Mary, Thy divine Son, Jesus, hath created thy Heart, and He alone knows the great treasures he has hidden therein. He it was who lit the fire burning in this furnace, and none but He can measure the heights reached by the flames which leap from its abyss. He alone can measure the vast perfections with which He has enriched the masterpiece of His all-powerful goodness, or count the innumerable graces He has poured into this ocean of grace: "He created her in the Holy Ghost, and saw her, and numbered her, and measured her." (13)

And now I beseech thee, O most Blessed Virgin Mary, through thy Heart and for the honor of that very Heart to offer me to thy beloved Son and to pray that He may annihilate my personality and set Himself in the place of my nothingness, so that not my voice but His may be heard. May Jesus Christ be the author of this book, and I but the instrument of His surpassing love for thee and of the zeal with which He watches over the honor of thy most worthy Heart. May He inspire the thoughts He wishes to see expressed in this book and the very words He desires I should use. May His blessing rest in fullest measure on the readers of this book, and may He transform all its words into bright and ardent coals, so that their hearts may be purified, enlightened and inflamed with the sacred fire of His love. In a word, may they become worthy to live according to God's Heart and to be numbered among the children of the maternal Heart of God's own Mother.(14)

(13). Ecclus. 1, 9.

(14). It is usual in the devotional works of the seventeenth century to find prayers scattered throughout the doctrinal parts. St. John Eudes follows this custom in the present volume. The last two paragraphs of this chapter make up a beautiful prayer to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

CHAPTER 11

THE HEART OF MARY IN GENERAL

BEFORE expounding the prodigious virtues and the incomparable marvels of the admirable Heart of Mary, according to the lights which He Who is the Source of all light will be pleased to give me, I shall point out the various meanings of the word "heare, in Sacred Scripture.

1. The word "heart," first of all, signifies the material and corporeal heart which beats within our breast, the noblest part of the human body. It is the principle of life, the first organ to begin to live and the last to be stilled in death; it is the seat of love, hatred, joy, sadness, fear and every passion of the soul. Of this heart does the Holy Ghost speak when He says: "With all watchfulness keep thy heart, because life issueth out from it." (1)

2. "Heart" is also employed in Scripture to signify the memory. This is, no doubt, its meaning in these words of Our Lord: "Lay it up therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before how you shall answer. For I will give you a mouth and wisdom which all your adversaries shall not be able to resist and gainsay." (2) That is, remember when you are brought before kings and judges for my name's sake, not to prepare an answer for your enemies because I will give you wisdom, which your enemies will not be able to gainsay.

3. It likewise denotes the intellect, with which we meditate. Meditation is, in fact, discursive reasoning on the things of God, tending to persuade and to convince us of the truth of Christian doctrine. This is the heart alluded to in the words: "The meditation of my heart (is) always in thy sight." (3) In other words, "my heart, that is, my intellect, is always occupied in meditating and contemplating thy glory, mysteries and works."

4. The word "heare, expresses the free "I of the superior and rational part of the soul, the queen of the other faculties, the root of good and

(1). Prov. 4, 23

(2). Luke 21, 14.

(3). Ps. 18, 15.

evil, and the mother of virtue and of vice. Our Lord refers to this heart when He says: "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth that which is evil." (4) Here, "a good heare" means the righteous will of the just man, from which all kinds of good can come; and "an evil heare" means the bad will of the wicked, which is a source of all kinds of evil.

5. We must also understand by the word "heare" that highest part of the soul which theologians call the point of the spirit. It is the seat of contemplation, which consists in turning the mind directly toward God and viewing Him in all simplicity, without discursive reasoning or multiplicity of thoughts. The Fathers of the Church apply to this power of the soul those words which the Holy Ghost puts in the mouth of the Blessed Virgin Mary: "I sleep, and my heart watcheth." (5) According to St. Bernardine of Siena and several other writers, sleep and rest of the body did not prevent Mary's holy Heart, that is, the highest part of her mind, from being always united to God in sublime contemplation. (6)

6. At times "heart" stands for the whole interior life of man; I mean, of course, the spiritual life, as indicated by these words spoken by the Son of God to the faithful soul: "Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thy arm," (7) that is, stamp the image of my interior and exterior life in your interior and exterior life, in your soul and in your body, by a perfect imitation of Me.

7. The word "heart" can also signify the Holy Spirit, the veritable Heart of the Father and the Son, Whom They desire to give us for our own mind and heart. "And I will give you a new heart, and put a new spirit within you." (8)

8. The Son of God is called the Heart of the Eternal Father in Sacred Scripture, and it is of this heart that the Father speaks to His Spouse, the Blessed Virgin, when He says to her: "Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse," (9) or according to the Septuagint: "Thou hast ravished my heart." And the Son of God Himself is called in Scripture "The breath of our mouth," (10) that is, the soul of our soul and our heart's very heart.

All these hearts are to be found in Mary, the Mother of Fair Love, and they form in her one single heart, because all the faculties of the superior and the inferior part of her soul were always harmoniously united. Moreover, Jesus, who is the heart of His Father, and the Holy Ghost, who is the heart of the Father and the Son, were given to Mary to be the soul of her soul and the heart of her heart.

To understand more clearly what is meant by the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary, we must recall that, just as we adore in the Most Holy Trinity and in the Incarnate Word three hearts which form but one heart, so also do we honor in the Mother of God three hearts united in one.

The first heart to be found in the Blessed Trinity is the Son of God, who is the Heart of the Eternal Father, as we have seen above. (11) The second is the Holy Ghost, who is the Heart of the Father and the Son. The third is Divine Love Itself, an adorable attribute of the divine essence, which can be considered as the Heart of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. These three hearts are in reality only one single Heart, and with it the three eternal Persons love one another as They deserve to be loved. They also love mankind with an incomparable charity.

The first heart to be found in our Loving Saviour, Jesus Christ, the God-Man, is His heart of flesh, deified like all the other parts of His sacred body by its hypostatic union with the Divine Word. The second is His spiritual heart, that is, the superior faculties of His holy soul, including His memory, His understanding and His will, all most specially deified by the hypostatic union. The third is His divine heart, that is, the Holy Ghost, by whom His adorable humanity has always been animated~mated in a higher degree than by its own soul and heart.

Thus we have in Jesus Christ, the God-Man, three hearts forming but one, because His divine Heart constituted the soul, the heart and the life of His spiritual and bodily hearts. Moreover God has established such perfect unity between them that these three hearts form only a single heart, filled with infinite love towards the Blessed Trinity and with surpassing charity towards men.

The first heart of Mary, the Mother of God, is the heart of flesh endosed in her virginal breast. Although this heart is corporeal, it is nevertheless (10). Lam. 4, 20.

(11). See no. 8, P. 9.

OBJECT OF THE DEVOTION

completely spiritualized by the spirit of grace and the spirit of God which fill it.

The second heart is her spiritual heart, made God-like, not indeed by the hypostatic union as in the Incarnate Word, but by a superlative participation in the divine perfections, as we shall see in the following pages. This heart is referred to by the words of the Holy Ghost: "All the glory of the king's daughter is within," (12) that is, has its origin in her heart and her inmost soul.

The third heart of Mary is divine and is truly God Himself, for it is none other than the love of God. This is the heart of which she says: "I sleep, and my heart watcheth," (13) which means according to the interpretation of several holy Doctors: "While I grant necessary rest to my body, my Son Jesus, who is my Heart and whom I love like my own heart, is always watching over me and for me."

These three hearts of the Mother of God constitute a single Heart, through the holiest and most intimate union that ever was and will be, next to the hypostatic union. Of these three hearts, or rather, of this single Heart, the Holy Ghost has said twice: "Mary kept all these words, Pondering them in her heart." (14)

Our Lady cherished the mysteries and marvels of her Son's life, first of all, in her material and corporeal heart, the principle of life, the seat of love and of the other physical emotions. All the movements, every beat of this virginal heart, the material functions that it accomplished and the emotions that swayed it, existed solely for Jesus and for the things that concerned Him. Her love was spent in loving Him, her hatred in hating all that is contrary to Him, her joy in rejoicing in His glory and His grandeurs, her sorrow and compassion in bewailing His trials and sufferings. The same may be said of every emotion of her bodily heart.

Secondly, Mary kept all these things in her spiritual heart, that is, in the noblest part of her soul, in the inmost recesses of her mind. All the faculties of her soul were constantly applied to contemplating and adoring everything that took place in the life of her Beloved Son, down to the very smallest details.

Thirdly, Our Lady kept all these things in her divine Heart, that is, in her Son Jesus, who was the mind of her mind and the heart of her heart. He in turn kept them for her and recalled them to her mind when necessary, that she might feed herself in contemplation upon the mysteries of His life, rendering them due honor and adoration, and repeating them to the holy apostles and disciples, who were to preach them to the faithful.

(13). Cant 5, 2.

(14). Luke 2, 19 and 51.

This then is what is meant by the admirable Heart of the beloved Mother of God. This is the worthy subject of which I shall have to speak in this book. The next three chapters will treat in greater detail of the corporeal, spiritual and divine Heart of Mary. In the rest of the book, you will find comments proper to her corporeal heart, others concerning her spiritual heart, others pertaining only to her divine Heart, while additional characteristics will be common to all three. Every word that I write, every point that I make, will further the spiritual progress of my readers, if they will but lift up their hearts to God as they read, in praise and thanksgiving for the innumerable graces and treasures of the Heart of Mary.

O Jesus, Son of God and Son of Mary, my task is great and beyond my power, but I trust in Thy goodness and in the love of Thy Holy Mother. I seek nothing, as I, a sinner, strive to show forth the wonders of the Heart of Mary; nothing, except to make some small return for the countless graces received from Thy paternal Heart through the loving Heart of Thy Mother. To Thee, O Jesus, I surrender myself, my mind, my heart and my pen for one purpose only: that my readers may understand and cultivate a lively devotion to the Most Admirable Heart of Thy Blessed Mother.

THE CORPOREAL HEART OF MARY

Just as everything in Our Lord Jesus Christ is great and admirable, so also everything that concerns Mary, His holy Mother, is replete with grandeur and marvels. Every part of the sacred humanity of the Son of God is deified and raised to an infinite dignity through its union with the Divinity; so likewise everything in the Blessed Virgin Mary is ennobled and sanctified by her divine maternity. There is no part of the sacred body of the God-Man that is not worthy of the eternal admiration of angels and men, and there is nothing in the virginal body of the Mother of God that is unworthy of the eternal praise of all creatures.(1)

The Holy Ghost, the Son of God and His Saints have given high praise to the sacred members of Mary's immaculate body. We may therefore conclude that her blessed heart, the first and worthiest part, is deserving of especial veneration. Shall we not share the sentiments of Jesus Christ, our Head, and follow the example He gives us? Mary's Divine Son, who has willed to be our Head and our Brother, manifests great zeal in honoring even the smallest exterior detail of the person of His Most Blessed Mother. Who therefore can dare to criticise(2) the other children of this Mother of Fair Love, if, following the spirit and example of their divine Head and Elder Brother, they render special homage to her maternal Heart and celebrate a feast in its honor with the permission of Holy Church?

There are five marvellous prerogatives of the corporeal heart of Mary which render it forever worthy to receive the veneration of men and angels.

(1). In the original edition, the Saint here proceeds to exalt the body of the Blessed Virgin Mary, supporting his exposition with tests from Sacred Scripture, the Fathers of the Church and the writings of various Saints. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes V. 6, P. 41, ff.

(2). When St. John Eudes wrote this work, the devotion to the Heart of Mary was new. It was attacked and criticised by the Jansenism. This opposition explains why the Saint in this book never misses an opportunity to silence those "who dare to criticise," by setting forth the proofs for the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

The first prerogative consists in the fact that the heart is the principle of the life of our holy Mother. It is the principle of all the functions of her bodily, material life, ever holy in itself and in its every function and employment. It is the source of the life of the Mother of God, the life of her who gave birth to the only Son of God, the life of the woman through whom God gave life to all the children of Adam, sunk as they were in the abyss of eternal death. Finally, her heart is the source of a life so holy, so noble, so sublime that it is more precious in the sight of God than the lives of all the angels and men.

The second prerogative of the corporeal heart of Mary is that it produced(3) the virginal blood with which the sacred body of the God-Man was formed in the chaste womb of His blessed Mother.

The third prerogative of Mary's heart of flesh is that it was the source of the human, material life of the Infant Jesus during the nine months that He dwelt in Mary's sacred womb. While the infant is in its mother's bosom, the mother's heart is to such an extent the source of the infant's life that both mother and infant can be said to depend upon it for their existence. Mary's admirable heart was therefore the source of the two most noble and precious lives, at once the source of the holy life of the Mother of God and of her only son, the humanly divine as well as the divinely human life of the God-Man.

The fourth prerogative of the amiable heart is noted in the words of the holy bride to the divine bridegroom, that is, of Mary to Jesus, who is her Son and her Father, her Brother and her Spouse: "Our bed is flourishing," (4) that is, our bed is covered and perfumed with flowers. What is this bed? It is the pure heart of the Blessed Virgin where the divine Infant so gently rested?

(3). St. John Eudes thought that the blood, which curies life through the organism, is produced in the heart, or at least receives its final perfection there, so that before having passed through the heart it is unfit either to nourish the body or to assist in the performance of its vital functions. He was mistaken in that notion, as were all his contemporaries. But it still remains true that the heart influences the entire organism in sending the blood through it. "All vital movement springs from the heart," says Claude Bernard, "and thus it is the heart which gives indication of life. . . . It is still at work when the other organs surrounding it lie dormant. . . . It never rests; while everything else sleeps, the heart is beating. As long as it remains in motion, life can reassert itself, but when it ceases to pulsate, life is irrevocably lost. Just as its first movement was the unmistakable indication of life, its last beat is the sum sign of death." Quoted by Reverend Ange LeDoré in Les SS. Coeurs et le V. Jean Eudes, V. 2, P. 25. Cf. Father Charles Lebrun's work, La Dévotion au Coeur de Marie (Paris, 1910, P. 289.

It was a great privilege for St. John, the beloved disciple, to have rested once on the Saviour's adorable breast, from which he drew such great light and derived the knowledge of so many marvellous secrets. But not only once but many times did our divine Saviour rest on the virginal heart of His dearest Mother. What abundance of lights, of grace and of blessings the Eternal Sun, the very source of light and grace, must have poured into that maternal heart, on which He rested so often! Her heart never interposed the slightest obstacle to divine grace. On the contrary, she was always disposed to welcome every celestial favor. Our Lord loved her heart more than all other hearts put together, and was in turn loved by it more perfectly than by the hearts of all the Seraphim. What union, what intimacy, what understanding, what correspondence between these two Hearts! What fire in these two furnaces of love constantly inflamed by the breath of the Holy Spirit!

And now we come to the fifth prerogative of this holy heart. It is the altar upon which a great and perpetual sacrifice, most agreeable to God, is constantly offered. On it are immolated all the natural passions which reside in the human heart. (5) There we found at once the concupiscible and the irascible appetites of the soul, given by God to man that they may be led to hate, fear, avoid, combat and destroy the things that hurt them, (5). St. John Eudes stresses the connection between the heart and the passions in order to bring out a final prerogative of the corporeal heart of Mary. There is, indeed, a close relationship between the heart and the perceptible feelings. "We feel our hearts affected by our emotional states, and even our moral dispositions," says Father Bainvel. "We feel that our emotional states and our moral dispositions are connected with certain states and movements of the heart. We are not simply wing a metaphor when we say; 'My heart is panting; my heart is full; my heart is oppressed; my heart is gladdened.' These expressions translate for us a physiological reality as well as a psychical." Cf. Bainvel, La Dévotion au Sacré-Coeur de Jésus, p. 183.

Following the physiology of his day, St. John Eudes looked upon the heart as the seat of the passions and the organ of love. This was the prevailing opinion in the eighteenth century. Even in recent years this theory found adherents. The late Cardinal Billot, an outstanding theologian, boldly made the following statement in his treatise, De Verbo Incarnato (Rome, 1904) 4th edition, P. 348:

Cor non solum symbolum amoris est, sed etiam organum; imo symbolum quia organum; inquam, amoris sensitivi et compassivi qui subjectatur in conjuncto. "The heart is not merely the symbol of love (of the senses); it is also its organ. It is in symbol, in fact, only because it is its organ." This is also the opinion of Bainvel in La Dévotion au Sacré-Coeur, p. 122, and Vermeersch, Pratique et Doctrine de la Dévotion au Sacré-Coeur, P. 392. It must be noted, however, that most modern physiologists teach that the heart can do no more than experience the repercussions of the motions, the organ of which is the brain together with the nervous system. Cf. Lebrun, Oeuvres Complètes, du Vénérable Jean Eudes (Vannes. 1907), v. 6, p. xxv.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

and to love, desire, hope for and seek that which will benefit them. These two principal passions comprise eleven others, which are like soldiers fighting under two captains, or like weapons and instruments used to attain the two ends mentioned above.

The irascible appetite possesses five passions, namely hope, despair, daring, fear and anger. The concupiscible appetite includes six; love, hatred, desire, abhorrence, delight and sadness.

Man's revolt against the commandments of God caused all these passions to revolt against self and to fall into such disorder that instead of being completely subject to the will, which is the queen of all the soul's faculties, they often make it their slave. Instead of being the guardians of the heart in which they reside, preserving it in peace and tranquillity, the passions usually become as many executioners who torment the heart and fill it with conflict and war.

Such was not the case with the passions that reside in the corporeal heart of the Queen of Angels, for they were always entirely subject to her reason and to the Divine Will that held sovereign sway over every part of her soul and body.

Just as these passions were rendered divine in the adorable Heart of Our Lord Jesus Christ, so were they sanctified most excellently in the holy Heart of His Blessed Mother. The fire of divine love, burning day and night in the ardent furnace of this virginal heart, so purified, consumed and transformed her passions into its own substance, that, as this heavenly fire had no other object save God alone, towards whom it constantly tended with incomparable ardor and impetuosity, so these passions were always turned towards God and exercised in His service. They were moved and led exclusively by the love of God, which possessed, animated and inflamed them in so marvellous a manner that they became a perpetual and admirable sacrifice in honor of the Blessed Trinity.

We may consider the most pure body of Mary as a sacred temple, indeed as the most august temple that ever was or will be, next to the temple of the sacred humanity of Jesus Christ, her divine Son. We see her virginal heart as the sacred altar of this temple. We behold Divine Love as the high priest offering to God uninterrupted sacrifices in this temple and on this altar. We contemplate the Divine Will bringing many victims to be sacrificed on this altar of Mary's heart. Among the victims we distinguish the eleven natural passions slaughtered by the flaming sword which the high priest holds in his hand, that is by the efficacy of Divine Love. They are consumed and transformed into the heavenly fire which burns upon the altar of her heart; they are immolated to the most Holy Trinity in a sacrifice of praise, of glory and of love.

Thus did the great high priest, Divine Love, sacrifice on the holy altar of Mary's heart, all her passions, inclinations and sentiments of love, hatred, desire, aversion, joy, sadness, hope, distrust, daring, fear and anger.

And this sacrifice commenced the first instant the holy Heart of Mary began to beat in her virginal breast, that is, the very first instant of this immaculate Virgin's life. It continued uninterruptedly until her last breath, gaining in sanctity and in love with every passing moment.

O great and truly admirable sacrifice, so wonderfully agreeable to the God of hearts! O blessed Heart of the Mother of Fair Love, consecrated altar whereon so divine a sacrifice was offered! Blessed art thou, O most Holy Heart, for having loved and desired nothing but Him who alone is amiable and desirable! Blessed art thou for having established thy joy and thy contentment in loving and honoring Him, who alone is capable of satisfying the heart of man, and for having known no other grief than that caused by the offenses committed against His Divine Majesty!

O Blessed Heart, thou hast hated nothing, fled from nothing, feared nothing, except what could injure the interests of thy Beloved Son, and hast never known anger except towards that which was opposed to His glory!

O Blessed Heart, so completely closed to the vanities of the earth and of self-interest that not one trace of them ever found place in thee! Thy confidence in God was equalled by thy firm trust in divine bounty, and, fired with holy generosity, never didst thou give way before the obstacles raised by hell and the world to prevent thee from advancing along the path of sacred love, but thou didst always surmount them with unremitting~ constancy and invincible strength.

These are some of the marvellous prerogatives of the admirable Heart which beats in the virginal breast of the Mother of God. Is it not true that, even if we considered only the material and corporeal Heart of the Queen of Heaven, it would still be worthy of the greatest honor and veneration?

Blessed indeed we the hearts of the true children of Mary, who strive to live in conformity with the most holy Heart of their Mother most admirable!

Think, think of the honour that is due to her Heart, most noble part of the virginal body that gave human flesh to the Eternal Word, forever the center of adoration of the angels and saints in heaven! What honour is due to her heart, life-principle of the Mother of God and of God-mademan!

Above all, what great veneration is merited by the Heart that God Himself loved and glorified most highly, the Heart that adored and loved God more perfectly than all the hearts in heaven and upon earth! May every heart praise and magnify thee forever and ever!

CHAPTER 1V

THE SPIRITUAL HEART OF MARY

THE Holy Ghost is wont to describe many things with few words. Wishing to praise the principal faculties of the body and soul of His Spouse, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and to exalt the merits of her Heart, He uses very few words, which nevertheless contain many meanings. What does He say? How does He praise Mary, the sovereign of hearts? He utters only three words: Quod intrinsecus latet. (1) But these three words encompass all the great and admirable utterances that can be said or thought of her royal Heart; they reveal to us that it is a treasure hidden from the most enlightened eyes of heaven and earth, a treasure so filled with celestial riches that God alone can have a perfect knowledge of its wonders.

Notice that the Holy Spirit pronounces these words not only once, but twice in the same chapter. He does this in order to impress them more strongly on our minds and to oblige us to consider them with greater attention, as well as to manifest to us both the corporeal heart of the Queen of Heaven, which was the subject of the preceding chapter, and her spiritual heart, of which I shall speak now.

What is the spiritual heart? In order to understand it, we must remember that, although the soul is essentially one, it can nevertheless be considered as having a threefold life.

The first and lowest life is that of the vegetative soul, which is similar in nature to that of plants, for the soul in this state has no other function than to nourish and sustain the body. The second is the sensitive life, which we have in common with animals. The third is the intellectual life, like that of angels, comprising the intellectual memory, the intellect proper and the will, together with the highest part of the mind, which theologians call the point, the summit or the eminence of the spirit. This last power is led not by the light of complex reasoning, but by a clear intuition of the intellect and a simple movement of the will whereby the soul submits to the truth and the will of God. (1). Cant. 4, 1 and 3 "what is hid within."

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

It is this third life called spirit, the mental, superior part of the soul, which renders us like the angels and carries with it in its natural state the image of God and in the state of grace, a participation of the divine nature.

This intellectual part is the heart and the noblest portion of the soul, for, first, it is the principle of the natural life of the rational soul, which consists in the knowledge it can obtain of supreme truth with the aid of the natural light of its intelligence, and in its natural love for sovereign goodness. Animated by the spirit of faith and grace, it becomes the principle of the supernatural life of the soul, which knows God by celestial light and loves Him with supernatural love, "This is eternal life: That they may know thee, the only true God." (2)

Secondly, this intellectual part is the heart of the soul, because in it is centered the will, the faculty and capacity of loving, but in a manner much more spiritual and noble and exalted and with a love incomparably more excellent, more lively, more active, more solid and durable than the love which proceeds from the sensitive and corporeal heart.

The will, enlightened by the light of the intellect and the torch of faith, is the principle of this love. When it is led only by the light of human reason and acts only in virtue of its natural capacities, the will produces only a human and natural love incapable of uniting the soul to God. But when it follows the torch of faith, and is moved by the impulses of the spirit of grace, it becomes the source of a supernatural and divine love, which makes the soul worthy of God.

Thirdly, sacred theology teaches us that, even though grace, faith, hope and charity spread their heavenly influence and divine movements to the other faculties of the inferior part of the soul, they nevertheless reside and have their true natural dwelling in the superior part. Hence it follows that this same part is the real heart of the Christian soul, because divine charity can have no other abode than the heart which possesses it, according to the words of St. Paul: "The charity of God is poured forth in our hearts." (3)

Fourthly, St. Paul proclaims to all Christians: "Because you are sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts," (4) and assured them that he bends his knees to the Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ to obtain the privilege that His Divine Son may dwell in their hearts. (5) Now, what is this heart, if not the superior part of our soul, since the God of grace and love cannot dwell in a Christian soul elsewhere than in the part where grace and charity reside?

All this clearly demonstrates that the true and proper heart of the rational soul is the intellectual part, called spirit, the mental, superior part.

This being so, the spiritual heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary is the intellectual element of her soul, comprising her memory, intelligence, will and the supreme point of her spirit. This is the heart which expresses itself in the first words of her admirable Canticle, the Magnificat: 'My soul doth magnify the Lord: and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.' (6) It is the spirit, the soul's first and noblest part, which must, in a very special manner, glorify God and rejoice in Him.

Of this marvellous heart I have great things to say. But to use the language of St. Paul, even all human and angelic tongues together pronouncing everything that could be said would still fall far short of its perfections. "Of whom we have much to say, and hard to be intelligibly uttered." (7)

If the virginal heart beating in the consecrated breast of the Virgin of virgins, the most excellent organ of her holy body, is so admirable, as we have already seen, what must be the marvels of her spiritual heart, the noblest portion of her soul? Is it not true that, as the condition of the soul surpasses that of the body, so also does the spiritual heart excel the corporeal? We have already considered the rare prerogatives of her heart of flesh, and we shall now endeavor to express the incomparable gifts and inestimable treasures with which her spiritual heart is filled.

I shall place before you only a short summary to encourage you to bless the source of so many marvels, to praise her who made herself worthy of so many graces, and to honor her most holy heart, which so faithfully preserved her graces and privileges and used them so perfectly.

First of all, Divine Bounty miraculously preserved the heart of the Mother of Our Saviour from the stain of sin, which never touched it because God filled it with grace from the moment of its creation, and clothed it with purity so radiant that, next to God's, it is impossible to conceive of greater purity. His Divine Majesty possessed her heart so completely from its first instant that it never ceased for a moment to belong entirely to Him and to love Him more ardently than all the holiest hearts of heaven and earth united, Such is the opinion of many great theologians.

In the second place, the Father of Light has filled this beautiful Sun

(6). Luke 1, 46-47.

(7). Heb. 5, 11.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

with the most brilliant lights of nature and of grace. If we consider the natural illumination shining within Mary, we see that God gave to the chosen Spouse of the Holy Ghost a natural intellect more clear, lively, profound, vaster and more perfect in every way than any other intellect, an intellect worthy of the Mother of God, worthy of the woman destined to guide and rule Divine Wisdom, worthy of the Mistress of the Church and Queen Regent of the universe, worthy of her who was to converse: familiarly on earth with the angels of heaven, and what is more, with the King of Angels, for thirty-four years, an intellect worthy of the lofty functions and sublime contemplation to which she was consecrated.

As regards supernatural light, the luminous heart of Mary, Seat of Wisdom, was so filled with its radiance that the learned Albert the Great, nurtured in the school of the Mother of God, plainly teaches, together with many other holy Doctors, that there was nothing Our Lady did not know. (8) They assert that she possessed infused knowledge of every science, and in a much more eminent degree than the most learned minds that ever existed (9)

Her vast knowledge of the Blessed Virgin Mary was dedicated to a most holy use, employed only to urge her to love God with greater ardor, to procure the salvation of Souls with greater fervor, to hate sin more vigorously, to humble herself more profoundly, to despise still further everything that the world esteems and to prize and embrace with greater affection the things it detests, namely poverty, abjections and suffering.

Moreover, Our Lady never experienced undue pleasure in the lights that God imparted to her, never became attached to these favors, never preferred herself to other beings on account of them, but always returned them to God as pure as they sprang from their source.

Such was the knowledge of the Admirable Heart of Mary. What Shall we now say of the twofold love that inflamed her heart, her love for God and incomparable charity for men?

It was by the force of love and humility that Mary attracted the wellbeloved Son of God, the Heart of the Eternal Father, to be the Heart of her heart.

The love of Mary's most blessed heart makes it an inexhaustible source of gifts, favors and blessings for all those who truly love their Mother most amiable, and honor with affection her most lovable heart, according (8). Tract. super Missus est, cap. 149--After enumerating the various aspects of Mary's knowledge, St. Albert the Great summarizes thus: . . . est conclusio ex praedictis omnibus, quod nullius rei proprie habuit ignorantiam.

(9). Here St. John Eudes describes in detail the different types of knowledge possessed by the Blessed Virgin Mary. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, v. 6, p. 92 ff.

ing to the words the Holy Ghost puts on her lips: "I love them that love me." (10)

Finally, it is this heart which has loved and glorified God above all the hearts of angels and men, and therefore, can never be revered adequately.

What honor is due to such great and admirable wonders! What veneration should be shown to the heart of Mary, the noblest part of the holy soul of the Mother of God! What praises must be rendered to all the faculties of the spiritual heart of the Virgin Mother, namely her memory, her intellect, her will, and the most intimate part of her spirit, which were never exercised except for God and by motivation of the Holy Ghost.

What respect her holy memory commands, which only remembered the unutterable favors she had received from the divine munificence, and the graces God constantly showers on every creature, in order to thank Him incessantly!

What veneration is due to her intellect, always engaged in considering and meditating on God's mysteries and His divine perfections in order to honor and imitate them! What veneration is also due to her will, perpetually absorbed by the love of God!

What honor the supreme part of her spirit commands, which was day and night absorbed in contemplating and glorifying His divine majesty most excellently!

Is there any praise not merited by the marvellous heart of the Mother of the Saviour, a heart which never encompassed anything that could in the least displease Him, a heart so filled with light and grace, a heart possessing the perfection of all virtues, all the gifts, all the fruits of the Holy Ghost, with all the evangelical beatitudes?

Will you not admit, dear reader, that, if heaven and earth were to exalt the admirable heart of Mary eternally with all possible strength and if the entire universe were to thank God for having filled her heart with such a wealth of marvels, this honor and thanksgiving could never fittingly be made.

(10). Prov. 8, 17

CHAPTER V

THE DIVINE HEART OF MARY

JESUS CHRIST, the Heart of the Eternal Father, is the Heart of His Holy Mother.(1) Is not the heart the principle of life? And what is the Son of God to His dear Mother? He always was and will be forever the heart of her heart, the soul of her soul, the spirit of her spirit, and the sole principle of all the movements, uses and functions of her most holy life. St. Paul tells us that it is not himself who lives but Jesus Christ who lives in him? (2) Our Lord is the life of all Christians:(3) so who could doubt that He abides in His holy Mother, and that He is the life of her life, the heart of her heart, in a union incomparably more excellent even than with St. Paul and the o&r faithful saints?

Let us listen to what Our Lady revealed to St Brigid: "My Son was (1). Between the Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Holy Heart of Mary there exists a union so perfect that there never has been and never will be "a closer one aside from the hypostatic union." St. John Eudes calls both Jesus and the Holy Ghost the Divine Heart of Mary. We must remember, however, that no matter how close is the union between Jesus and Mary it does not destroy the distinction of persons. Jesus Christ, the Divine Heart of Mary, so closely united to her corporeal and spiritual hearts, is nevertheless extrinsic to her person. It therefore cannot belong to the immediate object of the devotion to the Holy Heart of Mary because the devotion concerns Mary herself and cannot have any object other than whatever belongs properly to her person. Thus it is that the particular object of the devotion to the Holy Heart of Mary must be limited to her corporeal and spiritual hearts.

Nevertheless, it must be noted that the devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary and to the Saints, when it is well understood, never confines itself to their persons; it ascends to God Who is the author of their holiness and Who is no less adorable in what He effects in His saints than in what He is in Himself. Without this consideration, devotion to Mary and to the saints would not be an act of religion, for religion relates to God and if now and then the acts which it inspires are addressed to creatures, it is because of their special union to the Divinity. "The devotion we have for the Saints," says St. Thomas, "never ends with them; it passes to God, for it is God Himself whom we honor in the saints." Sum. Theol. 2a 2ae, cl. 82, an. 2, ad 3.

St. John Eudes was convinced and rightly so that all honor rendered to the Blessed Virgin Mary and to the Saints in the Catholic Church implies homage to the person of Jesus Christ, who is the final object, together with the Father and the Holy Ghost. Cf. Lebrun, La Dévotion au Coeur de Marie (Paris, 1917); P. 312 ff.

(3). Col. 3, 4.

truly my Heart to me. When He left my bosom to be born, it seemed as though half of my Heart were going forth from me. When He suffered, I felt His pain as though my Heart endured the identical sorrows and torments that He endured. When my Son was being Scourged and torn with whips, my Heart was scourged and whipped with Him. When He looked at me from the Cross, and I at Him, two streams of tears gushed from my eyes; and when He saw me oppressed with sorrow, He experienced such violent anguish at my desolation that the pain caused by His sorrow was my sorrow as His Heart was my Heart. Because Adam and Eve together betrayed the world for one, single forbidden fruit, so did my beloved Son wish that I should cooperate with Him in redeeming it with one Heart, quasi cum uno Corde. (4)

You See, therefore, how the Son of God is the Heart and life of His holy Mother, in the most perfect union conceivable. The Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Paul, proclaims that our adorable Saviour must so live in all His servants that His life be manifested in their bodies. "That the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our mortal flesh." (5) Who could consequently understand with what abundance and perfection Our Lord communicates His divine life to her from whom He received a divinely human and a humanly divine life because she conceived and begot the God-Man?

Jesus lives in her soul and in her body, and in each faculty of her body and soul. He lives in her entirely, which means that whatever is in Jesus is also in Mary, His Heart abides in her heart, His soul in her soul, His spirit in her spirit. 'The memory, intellect and will of Jesus are alive in the memory, intellect and will of Mary; his interior and exterior senses in her interior and exterior senses. His passions in her passions; His virtues, mysteries and divine attributes are living in her Heart. Nay, more than living, they hold sovereign sway, producing inconceivably marvellous effects and impressing a living image of themselves as her Heart mirrors His Sacred Heart.

So it is that Jesus is the principle of life in His most holy Mother. So it is that He is the Heart of her Heart and the life of her life. St. Brigid once heard her say: "Every homage rendered to my Son is likewise rendered to me, and who dishonors Him dishonors me. We have always had such perfect mutual love that we seemed to have as it were but one Heart for both. Quasi cor unum ambo fuimus." (6)

This admirable Heart it is, which receives our respect and praise, which must be esteemed an object of veneration for all Christians, for to honor Mary's marvellous Heart means to honor countless holy and divine mysteries deserving of the eternal veneration of angels and men. It also means to honor all the functions of the corporeal and material life of the Queen of Heaven, of which the Heart is the principle, that life superlatively holy in itself and in every use she made of it. It means honoring the perfect functions of her memory, her will, her intellect, and the highest part of her spirit. It means honoring innumerable great and ineffable mysteries which were perfected in the superior part of her soul.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

It means above all to honor the great love and ardent charity of this Mother of Fair Love toward God and men, together with the effects which that love and charity produced in her thoughts, words, prayers, actions, sufferings, and in the exercise of every virtue.

This veneration of Mary means honoring the corporeal Heart, the spiritual Heart and the divine Heart of Jesus, who are also the Hearts, or rather, the one and only Heart of Mary. It means giving glory to Our Lord, Jesus Christ, who is the Heart of the Eternal Father, and has willed to become the Heart of His Holy Mother.

It means honoring and glorifying all the effects of light, grace, and sanctity which this divine Heart of Mary, who is Jesus Christ Himself, has effected, and all the movements of the heavenly life of which He was the principle in her soul, and also the great fidelity with which she cooperated, on her part, with all that His grace accomplished in her heart during so many years. What tongue could proclaim, what mind could conceive, what heart could worthily honor so many great and admirable wonders of grace!

If Holy Church celebrates an annual feast in honor of the chains of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, how great a solemnity does not the august Heart of the Queen of Apostles deserve ! If the holy name of Mary is so greatly venerated by all the faithful, if the oracles of the Holy Spirit, the Fathers and Doctors of the Church, like St. Germanus, Patriarch of Constantinople, St. Anselm, St. Bernard and many others, have said such wonderful things concerning the name of Mary, if one of them (7) assures us that "after the adorable name of Jesus, Mary's name is above every name, so all creatures in heaven, on earth, and in hell must bend their knees to honor it, and that every tongue must proclaim the holiness, glory and virtue of this holy name"; if the Church celebrates its feast annually in many places what must we say, what must we think of the marvellous Heart of our holy Mother, that Heart far more precious than her name? What should we do to honor it? Indeed every heart, every pen and every tongue should be employed in loving, in writing and in speaking of the incomparable Heart of Mary. The entire universe should therefore celebrate the Feast of Mary's Immaculate Heart.

You all know that in various great churches throughout the Christian world there are venerated constantly, with special feasts, treasured relics of the most holy Mother of God, for example her veil. If Holy Church has proclaimed feasts in veneration of the least and smallest objects traditionally belonging to Our Lady, how much more should we not celebrate the praises of her most exalted and most sublimely honorable Heart?

To conclude the first part of my treatise, I would have you realize, dear Reader, that Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Heart of the Eternal Father, willed to become the Heart or life-principle of His Most Blessed Mother, and He likewise wills to become the Heart of your own life.

Having granted you the grace to become one of the members of His mystical body, He seeks to share your life so that you may say with St. Paul: "Christ liveth in me!" (8) Such is the infinite plan of God, such His burning desire. Our Lord seeks to establish His life, not only in your soul, but in your body, that His spirit may become your spirit and His heart your heart, united in all its love, thoughts and actions, by self-surrender. Surrender, even as His Heart was completely and perfectly the heart of His Admirable Mother.

If the will of God is to become your will, and if the spiritual and corporeal faculties of the sacred humanity of Our Lord are to animate the faculties of your soul and body, what must you do? You must cooperate.

First, you must seek the death of every activity of your soul and body that is displeasing to God, bearing in your body the mortification of Christ. (9) Then, having mortified your faculties, their powers and exercise must be turned towards virtue.

Above all, offer yourself frequently to the Son of God. Beg Him to deign to exercise the almighty power of His arm to destroy within you everything that is contrary to His Holy Will, and to establish over you the reign of His divine Soul and His Crucified Body.

Especially useful is the most devout prayer of St. Augustine, the Anima Christi, Sanctifica Me. "Soul of Christ, sanctify me." (10) It will help you to attain your purpose at all times, but particularly after you have received

(8). Gal. 2, 20.

(9). 2 Cor. 4, 1n.

(10). St. John Eudes attributes this prayer to St. Augustine, but does not give any reasons for doing so. Although St. Ignatius places it at the beginning of the Spiritual Exercises, he is not looked upon as the author of the prayer. The Anima Christi was first indulgenced in 1330 by Pope John XXII, who is thought to have written it. Cf. Dreves, Laacher stimmen, 1898. To this well-known prayer St. John Eudes adds the invocation: Cor Jesu, purifica me, accende me. "Heart of Jesus, purify me, enlighten me, inflame me."

ceived Our Saviour within Your heart, either during the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, or in Holy Communion. When you are speaking to the Divine Heart of Jesus, if you realize His actual and veritable presence within you, you will pronounce this prayer with greater fervor and receive greater blessing for its recitation.

But I tpilst return to thee, O Mother Most Admirable, to exclaim that in thee,,are accomplished all things most perfectly, most gloriously, in union with thy Divine Son. Whether it be corporeal, spiritual or divine, His Heart is thine, He is the life of thy life and the heart of thy Heart. May He be blessed, praised and glorified forever by all creatures, because of the graces imparted to thee, O Mary, and all the greatness of His humanity and His divinity!

CHAPTER I

GOD THE FATHER, DELINEATOR OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

The exposition I have made in Part One ought to suffice to show that, next to the sacred humanity of Christ, there exists in the universe no creature more deserving of honor and veneration than the admirable Heart of His most pure Mother, and that this devotion is specially pleasing to the Divine Majesty of God and most beneficial for all Christians.

But in order to foster and strengthen this devotion more and more deeply in the hearts of the faithful where it already exists, and to spread and establish it among those who so far have no place for it, I wish to show fully that devotion to the Heart of Our Lady, instead of being without basis and reason, is a cult established on foundations so firm, with roots so strong, that all the powers of earth and hell cannot possibly shake or weaken it.

The first foundation and the primary source of the devotion to the most holy Heart of Mary is the adorable Heart of the Eternal Father and His unfathomable love for the Blessed Mother of His Only-begotten Son. This infinite love induced our Heavenly Father to give us many beautiful images and figures of the most worthy Heart of His holy Mother.

God the Father, to whom we assign by appropriation the creation of the world, together with the establishment and fulfilment of the Old

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Law, was pleased to foreshadow, in every part of the universe and in all the mysteries, sacrifices and ceremonies of the Old Testament, His only Son through whom He created and willed to renew all things. Likewise, the Eternal Father lovingly prefigured, both in the visible world and in the rites of the Mosaic Law, Mary, the woman chosen from all eternity to be the Mother of the adorable Redeemer. "It was she whom the Prophets foretold long before her birth," says St. Jerome. "It was she whom the Patriarchs described in many figures; it was she who was announced by the Evangelists." (1) "Toward her converge all the predictions of the Prophets, all the mysteries of Scripture," says St. Ildephonsus. (2) Elsewhere he writes: "The Holy Ghost foretold her through the Prophets, announced her by the divine oracles, manifested her in figures, promised her by means of the things which preceded her birth, and fulfilled in her the things which followed it." (3)

St. John Damascene(4) says that the earthly paradise, Noe's ark, the burning bush, the Tables of the Law, the Ark of the Covenant, the golden vessel containing the manna, the golden candlesticks in the Tabernacle, the table with the loaves of proposition, Aaron's rod, the furnace of Babylon, were all figures of the incomparable Virgin Mary.

The Eternal Father did not content Himself with prefiguring the person of His Son Jesus in His prototypes, Abel, Noe, Melchisedech, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, Josue, Samson, Job, David and many other holy persons who lived under the Old Law, which preceded His Son's appearance on earth. God also wished to give us several beautiful representations of His mysteries in detail, such as His divine espousal of human nature in the Incarnation, His Passion, Death, Resurrection and Ascension.

In like manner, God the Father was not satisfied to foreshadow and represent the person of the Mother of His Beloved Son merely in the person of Mary, sister of Moses, in the Prophetess Debbora, wise Abigail, chaste and generous Judith, beautiful and compassionate Esther, and many other valiant women. Beyond this, the Eternal Father designed to entrust to us special pictures and images of the mysteries and qualities of His incomparable Mother, her virtues and even the more noble faculties of her virginal body. Several passages of Sacred Scripture reveal these pictures, especially the twenty-fourth chapter of Ecclesiasticus, and the Canticle of Canticles, where her Immaculate Conception is represented by the lily growing among thorns without being wounded by them: "As the lily among thorns;"(5) her Nativity, by the rising dawn;(6) her Assumption, by the Ark of the Covenant which St. John saw in Heaven;(7) the sublime eminence of her dignity, her power and her holiness, by the height of the cedar of Lebanon;(8) her charity, by the rose;(9) her humility, by the spikenard;(10) her mercy, by the olive;(11) her virginity, by the closed gate of the Temple which God showed to Ezechiel the Prophet.(12)

But above all else, Our Heavenly Father has willed to place before our eyes a wealth of beautiful figures and marvellous representations of Mary's most holy Heart. He has done this to show us how much He values and cherishes this lovable Heart and because the rare and wondrous perfections that fill it are well-nigh innumerable and can be represented and described only through a great number of figures and symbolic pictures.

Among the many images and representations of the Admirable Heart of Mary I can distinguish twelve of surpassing beauty. Six of them are found in the principal divisions of the universe; namely, the heavens, the sun, the center of the earth, the inexhaustible fountain of Genesis, the sea and the Garden of Eden. The six others appear in six of the most important manifestations witnessed by the world from the time of Moses to the death of Our Lord. They are the burning bush of Mount Horeb, the mysterious harp of David, the magnificent throne of Solomon, the marvellous Temple of Jerusalem, the miraculous furnace of Babylon, and the Holy Mount of Calvary.

In this Part we shall consider one by one the first six manifestations of the august Heart of the Queen of Heaven. We shall dwell at length upon them so that we may be inspired to bless and praise the hand of the Divine Artist who drew them, to reverence and admire the rare perfections of the prototype whose too inadequate reflection they are, and to evoke a higher esteem for the devotion to the holy Heart of Mary. It is a wellfounded devotion, testing on a solid basis, because its first origin and firm foundation is the Adorable Heart of the Eternal Father, Who drew these symbolic pictures for us.

MARY'S HEART, THE HEAVENS

THE first symbolic picture of the Admirable Heart of Mary which the Eternal Father has given to us is the heavens. Mary's pure Heart is truly a heaven of which the sky over our heads is a mere shadow and image. It is a heaven exalted above all others, of which the Holy Ghost speaks when He says that the Saviour of the World went out from a heaven surpassing all others in excellence, when He came on earth to redeem mankind: A summo caelo egressio ejus.<sup>(1)</sup> As Our admirable Mother had formed her Divine Son in her Heart before conceiving Him in her womb,<sup>(2)</sup> we can truly say that, having remained hidden in her Heart for a little while even as He had been in the Heart of His heavenly Father from all eternity, Our Blessed Saviour emerged from it to manifest Himself to men. But just as He went forth from heaven and His Father's bosom, without however relinquishing them: Excessit, non recessit; <sup>(3)</sup>a so also is His Mother's Heart a heaven whence He came forth in such a manner that He nevertheless remained and will remain forever in it: "For ever, O Lord, thy word standeth firm in heaven." <sup>(4)</sup>

The heavens are called the special work of God's hands: "The heavens are the works of thy hands," <sup>(5)</sup> but the Heart of the Mother of God is the unequalled masterpiece of His omnipotence, His unfathomable wisdom and His infinite goodness.

God made heaven to be the particular abode of His Divine Majesty:

- (1). Ps. 18, 7.
- (2). St. John Eudes repeats very often that Mary conceived her Divine Son in her Heart through faith and love before conceiving Him in her womb. In this connection he likes to quote the words of St. Augustine (Lib. de S. Virginitate, c. 3): "Mary's maternal relationship would have availed nothing, if she had not borne Christ in Her Heart more happily than in her body"; and also the saying of St. Leo the Great: "She conceived (Christ) in her soul before conceiving Him in her body." (Serm. I de Nativitate Domini).

- (5). PS. 101, 26.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

"The Lord hath prepared his throne in heaven." <sup>(6)</sup> It is true that He fills both heaven and earth with His divinity: "I fill heaven and earth," <sup>(7)</sup> but heaven to a far greater degree than earth, for He has established there the fulness of His grandeur, power and divine magnificence: "Thy magnificence is elevated above the heavens." <sup>(8)</sup> In like manner, we can truly say of the Heart of the Blessed Mother of God that it is a real Heaven of the Divinity, of the divine attributes and of the Most Blessed Trinity.

The Admirable Heart of Mary is an empyrean heaven, that is, a Heaven all fire and flames, ever burning with the fire and flames of celestial love, holier and more ardent than the love of the Seraphim and of the greatest Saints who dwell in the empyrean heaven.

Mary's pure Heart is the Heaven of Heavens, created for God alone, because it is the priceless inheritance and rich portion of the Lord, who always possessed it most entirely: "Heaven of heaven is the Lord's." <sup>(9)</sup> Yes, the most holy Heart of the Queen of Angels is the Heaven of Heavens for three significant reasons.

First of all, Jesus Christ is truly the Heaven of the Blessed Trinity. The Holy Ghost assures us that the fulness of the Divinity abides in Him: "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead," (10) and this same Jesus has forever fixed His dwelling in the Blessed Heart of His most worthy Mother. This must not surprise us, for Sacred Scripture reveals that even in this present life, He maintains His dwelling in the hearts of all who believe in Him with a firm and perfect faith. We can therefore conclude that, as our most lovable Saviour is Himself a Heaven, possessing no abode more glorious and delightful, next to the adorable bosom of His Eternal Father, than the Heart of His holy Mother, which is itself a Heaven, He is truly Heaven dwelling within a heaven. In this way, the Heart of the Mother of Jesus can be said to be the Heaven of Heaven.

Secondly, Mary's Immaculate Heart is the Heaven of Heaven because the spotless Virgin is really a heaven considered in her own person. This is the quality ascribed to her by the Holy Ghost, according to a learned and holy writer: "From heaven the Lord hath looked upon the earth." (11) As this commentator explains it, "the Lord, dwelling in the Blessed Virgin Mary, as in a heaven, has turned the eyes of His mercy towards the earth, that is, towards sinners." (12) Then the same author goes on to say that this marvellous Virgin is a heaven because, as all living things in the order of nature receive their life from the influence of heaven, so does Holy Church teach us that the life of grace is given to us through the Blessed Virgin Mary: Vitam datum per Virginem." (13) I Now if this incomparable Virgin is a Heaven, our own heaven in this world of grace, because next to God the source of our spiritual life, we can well say that her Heart is the Heaven of Heaven, having been the principle of her corporal and spiritual life on earth and of the eternal life that she now enjoys in Heaven.

Thirdly, the Admirable Heart of Mary is the Heaven of Heaven, because, as St. Bernard says, it contains the entire Church, which is called in Sacred Scripture the Kingdom of Heaven, and because all the children of the Church receive through Mary the life of grace. (14) If St. Paul assured the Christians of his time that they were in his heart, (15) who would dare to contradict St. Bernardine of Siena, (16) who tells us that the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, like a good mother, carries all her children in her Heart? Who will contradict me if I add that Our Lady will forever carry all the inhabitants of heaven in her inmost Heart, which becomes the Heaven of Heaven, and a true Paradise of the Elect, in which they find the fulness of delight and joy, due to the inconceivable love for each soul which consumes her maternal Heart? Thus the blessed will forever sing: Sicut laetantium omnium nostrum habitatio est in corde tuo, sancta Dei Genetrix. O holy Mother of God, thy boundless charity has so vastly extended thy maternal Heart that it has become like a great city, or rather an immense heaven, full of ineffable consolations and unspeakable joys for thy beloved children, whose happy dwelling it shall be for all eternity.

The Heart of our Holy Mother is thus truly a heaven, an empyrean heaven, the Heaven of Heaven. O Heaven, more exalted, more extensive and more vast than all the heavens! O Heaven, enclosing Him whom the heaven of heavens cannot contain! O Heaven, filled with more praise, glory and love of God than the Heaven where eternal bliss resides! O Heaven, wherein the King of Heaven reigns more completely than in all other heavens! O Heaven, where the Most Holy Trinity dwells more worthily and accomplishes wonders far greater than in the empyrean heaven! O Heaven, in which divine mercy has established its throne and deposited its treasures, where it hearkens to the cry of the unfortunate and helps them in all their necessities! "O Lord, thy mercy is in heaven." (17)

Let us draw nigh to this throne of grace and with great confidence present our requests to the Mother of grace and mercy. Through the intercession of her Heart, most exalted, yet most tender, we shall obtain the graces that we need to become pleasing in the sight of the celestial majesty of God.

Rejoice, O readers, rejoice, you whose great happiness it is to be numbered among the true children of the Mother of pure love, for your names are written in her maternal Heart! Lift up your eyes and your hearts to that beautiful heaven! It is there that your hearts will find light, strength, powerful aid in the battle of life, guidance and succor, and above all inspiration to love your Creator and Redeemer, the Lord of Heaven, strongly, purely and above all things.

(17). Ps. 35, 6.

MARY'S HEART, THE SUN

THE sun is the second symbolic picture which God, the Creator of heaven and earth, has deigned to give us of the Immaculate Heart of the Queen of heaven and earth. God did not create the natural sun, our wonderful luminary, merely to enlighten our material world; He made it also to be a representation of the excellent perfections which shine in the luminous Heart of the world's Sovereign Lady.

We should remember that the infinite power of God has divided this great universe into three different states or orders, namely the state of nature, the state of grace and the state of glory. His divine wisdom has nevertheless established such a perfect bond, relationship and resemblance among these three states and among the beings existing in these orders that whatever is in the order of nature is an image of the things belonging to the order of grace, and whatever belongs to the order of nature and grace is a figure of what is to be seen in the state of glory. Hence, the sun, which is truly the heart of the visible world, and the most beautiful and glowing gem of nature, gives us, in spite of its dazzling light, only a very faint shadow of our heavenly Sun, the Heart of the Mother of God.

Sacred Scripture calls the sun an admirable vessel, the work of the Sovereign Lord. "An admirable instrument, the work of the Most High. Great is the Lord that made him.(1) I But we can say of the most excellent Heart of the Mother of God that it is an incomparable masterpiece of God's almighty hand. It is a compendium of all the marvels He has worked in pure creatures, and will be the eternal object of the admiration and delight of angels and men. Great indeed is He who made it, because His divine magnificence appears in her admirable Heart more clearly than in all the other wonderful things of nature, grace and glory.

The sun, which gives light to our visible world and which is, so to (1). Eccclus. 43, 2 and 5.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

speak, its heart, is entirely luminous, is light itself and the source from which the other heavenly bodies receive their light. Mary's Heart is surrounded, filled, penetrated by light, and her light is incomparably more brilliant and radiant than all the lights of the celestial spaces. It is all light, and after God, it is the first source of the lights which shine in the firmament of the Church. "I made that in the heavens there should rise light that never faileth."(2)

The sun is, moreover, the principle of the vegetative, sensitive and animal life in the visible world. The Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary is the source of life of three great worlds. We have already seen(3) that it is the source of life of the Mother of God, who is a world unto herself, filled with marvels far greater and more wonderful than the world we contemplate with our bodily eyes.

But I shall add that the pure Heart of Mary is the source of three different lives to be found in this holy Mother, namely the natural and human life that animated her body on earth; the spiritual and supernatural life which her soul then possessed; and the glorious, eternal life which both her body and soul enjoy in Heaven. Everyone agrees that the heart, in the sense in which we have defined it, is the source of the corporeal life; we must likewise admit that it is the source of love and charity, the virtues which constitute the true life of a Christian soul in time and in eternity, and hence can be said very truly to be the very element which fosters the life of the soul for earth as well as for heaven.

Secondly, the immaculate Heart of Mary is the principle of the life of a second world, infinitely more admirable than the preceding one. What is this world? It is the God-Man, filled with countless rare marvels. Now, this God-Man is the Son of Mary, and Mary's Heart is consequently the source of His life, since the mother's heart is the principle of the child's life as well as her own.

Thirdly, the Heart of the Mother of Our Saviour is the origin of life for a third world, composed of true children of God, who are vivified by grace on earth and glory in heaven, because under God they derive both the life of grace and the life of glory from the Mother of Him who is their Head and whose members they themselves are. They are indebted for this benefit to her holy Heart, whose original purity, profound humility and ardent love, made her worthy to become the Mother of God and of all the children of God. St. John Chrysostom is surely right when he says that the heart of St. Paul was "the heart of the whole world. For it is through that apostolic heart that the Spirit of Life was

(2) Ecclus. 24, 6.

(3). Part one, Ch. 3, P. 25.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

poured forth on all things and given to the members of Jesus Christ." (4) But how much more true is this of the incomparably loving Heart of the Queen of Apostles? Yes, hers is indeed the heart of the entire world, the heart of Heaven and earth, the heart of the Church Militant, Suffering and Triumphant, since the Holy Spirit bids us sing: Vitam datam per Virginem, genies redemptae plaudite. "All ye nations, redeemed by the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ, rejoice, sing the praises of your Redeemer and His glorious Mother! You were condemned to eternal death, and the Son of Mary has made you free; the Mother of Jesus has restored life to you, even eternal life, by giving you her Son, who is Life essential and the source of all life."

The solar sun has been in perpetual motion since its creation in space, and it travels so rapidly that mathematicians calculate its speed to be over one Million leagues an hour. Similarly, the holy Heart of Mary, from the moment of her Immaculate Conception, has been completely kept in motion by love for God and charity towards mankind. As long as Mary, the admirable Sun of Light and Purity, was on earth, she sped or rather flew with such celerity on the path of sanctity that the speed of our material sun is simply a shadow and a figure by comparison. For this holy Sun, Mary's immaculate Heart, progressed incomparably farther in the mystical and supernatural way of the world of grace than the material sun which revolves around our visible world.

Sacred Scripture teaches us that the Sun is the tabernacle of God. "He has set his tabernacle in the Sun." (5) This is infinitely more true of the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. St. Ambrose applies these words to her, and we should refer them especially to her Heart, in which God resides more gloriously and works far greater wonders than in the sun of any universe. I hear the Eternal Father pronounce that the throne of His Only-Begotten Son is like to a Sun before His face: "His throne (is) as the sun before me. . . ." (6) What is this throne of Christ, if not the Heart of His dearest Mother, which is therefore the ever brilliant Sun shining before the Father of lights?

If the material sun radiates its light, heat and influence over all living things on earth, still more does this mystical Sun, the Heart of Mary, make its holy light, divine warmth and celestial influence felt everywhere in Heaven and earth, over men and angels: "There is no one who can hide himself from his heat." (7) The earthly sun gladdens with its rays die inhabitants of the lowly world; the heavenly sun enriches the whole universe with its great and boundless charity towards all God's creatures. Gaudium annuntiat universo mundo. It is the consolation of the suffering souls in Purgatory, the joy of the faithful on earth, the exultation of the angels and saints in heaven, and the delight of the Most Blessed Trinity. St. Germanus of Constantinople calls the Heart of Mary the happiness of the entire world. Commune mundi gaudium. (8) And St. John Damascene says that it is an ocean of inexhaustible delight: Gaudii pelagus inexhaustum. (9).

"Take away the sun that enlightens our material world," says St. Bernard, "what will become of day or light? Take away Mary, the Star of the Sea, or take away the Heart of Mary, the true Sun of the Christian World, and what would be left? Without Mary's radiance, nothing is left but enveloping darkness, the shadow of death and the frightful night of the grave." (10)

O excellent Heart of my Queen, my most amiable Sun, blessed are the hearts that love thee! Happy the minds that meditate on thy greatness, and the tongues that preach and praise thee! Blessed are the eyes that contemplate thee, O radiant Mary! The more they gaze on thee, the greater their desire, the stronger the light and strength they receive to enable them to gaze yet more upon thy dazzling light!

O beautiful Sun, enlighten our darkness, melt our frigidity, dispel the clouds and fogs of our minds, inflame our hearts with thy sacred fire! Make us ever receptive to thy sweet influence, that every Christian virtue may flourish in our souls, so that they may be rendered fertile in all kinds of good works. By thy intercession, obtain that we may lead a heavenly life on earth, and never seek any joy here below except the joy of the children of God, which consists in pleasing their Heavenly Father and obeying His adorable will in all things.

O radiant Sun, let our hearts become like clear and polished mirrors, and be pleased to impress thy likeness on them, that they may bear a perfect image of thy humility, purity and submission to the divine will as well as of thy charity, love, sanctity and all the other virtues and perfection of thine admirable Heart. This we ask for the glory of God who made our hearts for Himself alone.

CHAPTER IV

MARY'S HEART, THE CENTER OF THE EARTH

THE third symbolic picture of the most noble Heart of Mary is described in the inspired words: "God hath wrought salvation in the midst of the earth." (1)

What is this earth and what is its center? I find several meanings of the word "earth" as mentioned in Sacred Scripture, among which two seem to be most important. The first is the earth created by God at the beginning of the world, which He gave to Adam and his descendants. "But the earth he has given to the children of men." (2) The second is the earth made for the new man, Jesus Christ, Our Lord, to whom the following words were spoken: "Lord, thou hast blessed thy land." (3)

The first earth incurred the wrath of God because the first man sinned. Cursed is the earth in thy work. (4) The fallen earth is a land of misery and darkness, of disorder and death, a land of never-ending woe. In the words of Job, it is "a land of misery and darkness, where the shadow of death, and no order, but everlasting horror dwelleth." (5)

The second earth is a land of blessings, grace and light, a land of eternal life, a land that has become nobler, more august, more luminous and holier than all the heavens. What is this priceless renewed earth? It is the most Blessed Virgin Mary, of whom the first earth, considered as it left the hands of God and existed before being cursed by God, is only an imperfect image and sketch. Of this earth did the Holy Ghost speak in Scripture: when He said through the Prophet, Isaias: "Let the earth be opened, and bud forth a saviour." (6)

It was in Mary, the center of this blessed earth, that God worked out the salvation of mankind. "He hath wrought salvation in the midst of the earth:' (7) Both St. Jerome and St. Bernard (8) apply these words to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Notice, however, that the Holy Ghost who uttered these words through the lips of the Royal Prophet, David, does not proclaim merely that God worked the salvation of the world in this earth, but in the midst of the earth, in media terrae, or according to another version, in intimo terrae, in the center or in the heart of the earth. By that is meant the heart and bosom of the spotless Virgin Mary. Yes, it was in the midst of this "good earth," or better, in the good and excellent Heart of Mary, Mother of Jesus Christ, "in a good and perfect heart," (9) that the Eternal Word, coming forth from the Father's bosom to save mankind, was received and zealously nourished, producing fruit a hundredfold and one hundred thousand times a hundredfold.

All this was declared in that divine prophecy of the Holy Spirit which reveals so many great and admirable mysteries: "There shall be a firmament on the earth on the tops of mountains, above Libanus shall the fruit thereof be exalted: and they of the city shall flourish like the grass of the earth;" (10) or according to another version: "A full measure of wheat scattered over the lofty mountains, shall grow so tall that, stirred by the breath of the wind, its undulations shall imitate the verdant woods of Libanon."

What is this overflowing measure of wheat, if not the only Son of God, the true wheat of the elect, the bread of God, Who is the life and strength of man's heart? "Bread may strengthen man's heart." (11) The Eternal Father scattered this sanctifying wheat when He gave us His Divine Son with such great love in the mystery of the Incarnation and He still scatters it every day in full measure when He continues to give us Our Lord daily with consummate goodness in the Blessed Eucharist. What are the lofty mountain-tops, if not His most worthy Mother, whom the Holy Spirit sets before our eyes under the name and figure not of a single mountain but of many mountains? Mary possesses in the highest degree all that is most excellent in the sacred mountains, that is in all the Saints, who are called in Sacred Scripture "the holy mountains," (12) and "the everlasting hills." (13) What are the mighty summits of these mountains, if not the exalted prerogatives and sublime perfections of the Sovereign Lady of the Universe?

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Now then it was up on these holy mountains with lofty summits in the midst of this sacred soil, in the excellent Heart of the best of Mothers, that the adorable wheat of redemption was first Sown and planted, since she received Our Saviour in her heart before conceiving Him in her womb. It was later scattered throughout the world by the preaching of the Apostles, animated by the Holy Ghost as by an impetuous wind and became infinitely multiplied in the hearts of all Christians.

We can, therefore, say in truth that Jesus is the fruit of Mary's Heart as well as of her womb, and that the faithful are the fruits of the same Heart, because the very virtues of faith, humility, purity, love and charity, which rendered her worthy to become the Mother of God, made her also the Mother of all God's children. As the Eternal Father gave her the power to conceive His Son in her Heart and in her virginal womb, by clothing her with the divine virtue whereby He generates His Divine Son from all eternity in His own adorable bosom, so also did God grant her the power to form Christ and give birth to Him in the hearts of the children of Adam, who thus became members of Jesus Christ and sons of God.

Even as Mary conceived and will eternally bear her Son Jesus Christ in her Heart, she also conceives and holds forever in the same Heart all the holy members of our Divine Head. They are her beloved children, the fruits of her maternal Heart, and she offers them to the divine majesty as a perpetual sacrifice.

Thus did Our Lady, "the good earth," fructify the grain of wheat which she received from God. Her Son had to die even as the seed must die and, as it were, become annihilated that He might not remain alone, but might produce numberless other grains. In this sense did the King of Kings work out our salvation in the center of the earth.

I could quote many holy Fathers and illustrious Doctors to show how Almighty God saved mankind "in the midst of the earth," that is, in the Holy Heart of Mary, Mother of Jesus. Her Heart cooperated with His divine mercy, having received such a plenitude of grace, according to the Angelic Doctor, St. Thomas, that she became enabled to cooperate with her Son in the salvation of all men.(14) This inspires St. Bonaventure to say that her Heart is the source of universal salvation.

"All salvation springs from Mary's Heart." (15)

(14). Magnum est in quolibet Sancto, quando habet tantum de gratia, quod sufficit ad salutem multorum; sed quando haberet tantum, quod sufficeret ad salutem omnium hominum de mundo, hoc esset maximum, et hoc est in Christo, et in beata Virgine. Opusc. 8.

(15). In Psalt. B. Virg. Ps.79.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER 45 -

All this being conceded, what must be our obligations towards the most charitable Heart of our Blessed Mother! What gratitude can we show, what praises can we sing, what feast can we celebrate in honor of her Heart, that will be worthy of her excessive charity towards us, and of the favors granted to us by divine mercy through her intercession?

Mary is the center of the earth in which our salvation was wrought. She is also the center of the renewed world, the Christian world, the world of the new man, the world of divine love and holy charity. Here are three reasons to show that Mary's Heart is the center of the Christian world.

First, all beings consider their center the seat of their repose, their conservation, and, as it were, their salvation. The salvation of man having taken place in the Heart of Mary, all Christians must consider her as the source of their life after God and as the cause and the center of their happiness.

The words of the Fathers of the Church will bear us out in this. Here is what St. Bernard has to say. -His words refer to the person of the Blessed Virgin, but can be applied especially to her Heart. "With good reason is Mary called the center of the earth, for all the inhabitants of Heaven, and those of hell, those who come before us, and those who will come after us, their children's children and their entire posterity look to her as to the midst and the center of the earth. She is, in fact, next to her divine Son, the mediator between God and Man, between the Head and the members of the Mystical Body, the Church, between the Old and New Testament, between Heaven and earth, between justice and mercy. They look to her as to the Ark of God, Ark of the Covenant and of peace between God and His people, as the cause of all that is good and the masterpiece of all ages, past and to come. The inhabitants of Heaven, that is, the angels, look to her as to the one through whom the losses inflicted on them by sin will be repaired; those who are in the fiery torment, which here means purgatory, look to her as to the one through whose mediation they will be delivered, those who came before us see in her the fulfilment of the ancient prophecies, those who shall follow us consider her as the means whereby they will one day be crowned with immortal glory." (16)

These words of St. Bernard not only may be applied to the Heart of the Mother of God, but are actually more applicable to her Heart than to her person. The cause being nobler than its effects, her Heart so, full of humility is, as we shall see, the cause and the source of all virtues which adorn Our Lady and render her worthy to be the object, the refuge, and as it were, the center of every creature past, present and to come. Hence I conclude that her marvellous Heart is indeed the midst and center of the world of the new man.

Secondly, I say that the Heart of Mary is the center of this new world, meaning the world of divine love and holy charity, a world of tenderness and dilection, having charity as its only law, because all holy love and divine charity contained in the hearts of angels and men, who love God for Himself and their neighbor for the love of God, are found united in the Heart of the Mother of Fair Love as in their centre. Mary's Heart is like a beautiful mirror, large enough to reflect all the Sun's rays focussed on its polished surface.

Thirdly, you will remember that the most humble and pure Virgin ravished and attracted to herself the adorable Heart of the Eternal Father, His Beloved Son, and that He became the Heart of her Heart. Jesus is, therefore, the true Heart of Mary. Is not this amiable Jesus the love, the delight, the center and the joy of Heaven and earth? Is it not certain, therefore, that the true Heart of Mary, namely Jesus, is the center of all the hearts of angels and men? They must ever be turned towards it, gaze upon it unceasingly and make it the object of their aspirations and desires. It is the seat of their perfect repose and of their supreme felicity. Out of it there is only trouble, fear, anxiety, death and hell.

O Jesus, true Heart of Mary, take possession of our hearts, and draw them nigh to Thee. Inspire them to love, desire, seek and relish only Thee. May they ever long for Thee, may they always seek their rest and happiness in Thee, may they remain in Thee forever and be consumed in the ardent furnace of Thy Divine Heart so as to be transformed eternally in Thee!

MARY'S HEART, THE INEXHAUSTIBLE FOUNTAIN

THE fourth symbolic picture of Our Lady's most blessed Heart is the wonderful fountain that God caused to spring from the ground at the beginning of the world, as described in the second chapter of Genesis. "A spring rose out of the earth, watering all the surface of the earth." (1) St. Bonaventure tells us that this fountain was a figure of the Blessed Virgin Mary. "She was prefigured in the fountain that sprang from the earth." (2) But we have equal reason to say that this represented her Heart, which is truly a living fountain whose heavenly waters irrigate not only the whole earth, but every created thing in Heaven as well as on earth.

Mary is the sealed fountain of the holy Spouse, which her divine Bridegroom calls "a fountain scaled up," (3) for it remained scaled not only against the world, the devil and every kind of sin, but it was closed even to the Cherubim and Seraphim, who could not penetrate the marvellous secrets or comprehend the inestimable treasures hidden by God in Our Lady's pure Heart.

Sacred Scripture states that the heart of man is evil and inscrutable. (4) But the Heart of the Queen of Heaven inspires these words: "God created her in the Holy Ghost, and saw her, and numbered her, and measured her." (5) In other words, so holy and impenetrable is the Heart of Mary that only God Who enclosed within His treasures of grace and put His seal upon it, can know the quality, quantity and price of the graces hidden in this scaled fountain. All we can say is that Mary's immaculate Heart is a fountain of light, a fountain of holy and blessed water, a fountain of living and life-giving water, a fountain of milk and honey and a fountain of wine. It is the source of a great river, nay, of four miraculous streams, and finally, it is the source of an infinity of blessings and goodness.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Mary's peerless Heart is a fountain of light; that foreshadowed in the person of Queen Esther, who is represented in Sacred Scripture as a small fountain that becomes a great light and is turned into the sun. "The little fountain which grew into a river, and was turned into a light, and into the sun . . ." (6) It is the fountain of the sun, fons solis, mentioned in Chapters fifteen and seventeen of the Book of Josue.

The Heart of Mary, as well as her name, which means "enlightened" or "the one who enlightens," and also "star of the sea," is indeed a true fountain of light. Holy Church considers and honors her as the resplendent door of pure light; Tu porta lucis fulgida, and salutes her as the portal through which divine Light entered the world: Salve porta, ex qua mundo lux est orta. Truly the Heart of Mary is the fountain of the sun, because Mary is the Mother of the Sun of Justice, and this divine Sun is the fruit of Mary's Heart.

O incredible wonder! O inconceivable miracle! Who could ever have thought that the sun could be born of a star, or that a fountain could be the source of the sun, fons solis. Thus, then, the virginal Heart of Mary is a true fountain of light.

Mary's Heart is a fountain of water, but one of blessed, holy and precious water. I here speak of the innumerable tears that poured from this sacred fountain and, united with those of the Redeemer Himself, cooperated in our redemption. O Mary, how many streams of tears have Bowed from thine eyes, with their source in thy loving, charitable, devoted and merciful Heart Tears of love, tears of charity, tears of joy, of sorrow and of compassion! How often did not the ardent love of the maternal Heart for thy infinitely lovable Son cause thee to shed bitter tears, beholding Him so little loved, so much hated, offended and dishonored by the majority of men, although it was the duty of man to serve Him? How often thy burning charity for souls caused thee to weep because through their own malice, millions of precious souls would be lost, notwithstanding all that He did and suffered in order to save them? How many times have the holy angels witnessed tears of sublime devotion coursing down thy beautiful face, as thou wast absorbed in holy communion with the Divine Majesty? All the saints were granted the gift of tears, which could not possibly have been wanting in the Mother of Sorrows who has assured us that she possesses the fulness of gifts bestowed on all the saints. In plenitudine sanctorum detentia mea. (7)

O Mother of Jesus, the joy which filled thy peerless Heart on so many occasions while thou wast on earth with thy beloved Son caused sweet est tears to flow from thine eyes. Those were tears of joy and consolation, for example, when He assumed our human nature in thy sacred womb, when thou didst visit thy saintly cousin Elizabeth, when thy dear Son was born in Bethlehem, when the three Holy Kings came to adore Him, when, after having lost Him for three days, thou didst find Him in the temple among the Doctors, when He visited thee after the resurrection and when thou didst watch His triumphant ascension into Heaven.

Alas, thy consolations in this life were negligible compared to the sufferings thou didst have to endure. If the joys of thy Heart caused tears of rapture to flow from thine eyes, the poignant sorrows that were so often thine, especially at the Lime of the passion and death of thy beloved Son, made thee shed floods of bitter tears. Then were the sacred words fulfilled in thee: "Let tears run down like a torrent day and night: give thyself no rest, and let not the apple of thy eye cease." (8)

Now then are not all these tears of joy, love, charity, devotion, sorrow and compassion like so many waters streaming from the holy fountain of Mary's immaculate Heart? Oh, with what good reason, therefore, do we call her admirable Heart a fountain of blessed, holy and precious water!

The most pure Heart of Mary is also a fountain of living water, which means a fountain of grace. This ought not to astonish us, for the Archangel Gabriel declared long ago that the Mother of the Saviour was full of grace, gratia plena, and the Church calls her Mater gratiae, Mother of Grace, and Mater divinae gratiae, Mother of Divine Grace. The Angelic Doctor, St. Thomas, affirms that Our Lady is so full of grace that out of her abundance she can dispense graces to all men. (9)

Her most generous Heart is indeed a fountain of living waters whose salutary streams flow on all sides, over the land of the wicked as well as of the just, in imitation of the All-good and All-merciful Heart of our Heavenly Father who causes His providential rain to fall on the good and the bad alike. This is the reason why the Holy Ghost calls the charitable Heart of the Mother of Mercy "the fountain of gardens," fons hortorum. (10) In another passage He names it the fountain that "shall water the torrent of thorns." (11)

What are these gardens, what is this torrent of thorns, watered by this beautiful fountain?

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

The gardens are all the Orders of the Church that lead a truly Christian and holy life. They are delicious gardens for the Son of God, blooming with flowers and fruit that the Spouse longs for when she exclaims: "Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples: because I languish with love." (12) These mystical gardens likewise represent all holy souls, no matter what their state or condition, in whom the heavenly Bridegroom finds His delight among the flowers of holy thoughts, desires and affections, and among the refreshing fruits of virtues and good works.

These gardens of delight are constantly watered by the fountain which is called by the Holy Ghost "the fountain of gardens," according to many holy Doctors who apply these words to the Blessed Virgin Mary. (13)

But Mary's Heart is not only the fountain of gardens whose waters impart refreshment to just and holy souls. St. Jerome also refers to the Holy Mother of God these words of the Prophet Joel: ". . . a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the torrent of thorns." (14) What are these thorns and this torrent? The thorns represent the wicked, whose lives are infested with the thorns of their sins. This torrent is the world, which resembles an impetuous torrent, full of refuse and evil odors, making much noise, but flowing swiftly past, dragging the majority of men into the abyss of perdition. "The world passeth away, and the concupiscence thereof." (15)

But the Heart of the Mother of Mercy is so full of goodness that its effects are felt even by the torrent of thorns, or rather, by the poor thorns which are swept in this torrent to be thrown into the eternal whirlpool of hell. The wonderful waters of her holy fountain, coming in contact with these barren and dead thorns, fit only for eternal fire, cause many of them to awaken to new life, and some are even transformed into beautiful trees that bear quantities of good fruit, worthy to be placed on the table of the Eternal King. The reason is that this fountain's divine waters are not only living, but life-giving. Mary's Heart is, therefore, not only a fountain of living waters but a fountain of life, and of life eternal.

But it is not enough to love life without furnishing the substance to nourish and sustain it. For this reason, Mary's maternal Heart is not only a fountain of living and life-giving waters; it is, moreover, a fountain of milk, of honey, of oil and of wine.

It is a fountain of milk and honey, for we hear the Divine Spouse say ing to Mary: "Thy lips, my spouse, are as a dropping honeycomb, honey and milk are under thy tongue," (16) which means, "Thy words are full of sweetness and tenderness, and thy Heart must consequently be filled with them." Mary's heart and tongue always agree, and there is perfect conformity between her words and her sentiments. If therefore she has milk and honey in her mouth, she must also have them in her Heart; and they are under tongue and upon her lips only because her Heart is filled with incomparable sweetness.

Hence, the inspired words: "My spirit is sweet above honey, and my inheritance above the honey and the honeycomb." (17) We must, therefore, conclude that her Heart is a real fountain of milk and honey, whose streams flow incessantly into the hearts of her children, thus verifying the saying of the Holy Ghost: ". . . you shall be carried at the breasts, and upon the knee, (she) shall caress you, as one whom the mother caresses." (18) Happy are they who raise no obstacles to the fulfilment of these consoling words! Happy are those who do not close their ears to the voice of the sweetest Mother constantly crying: "As newborn babes, desire the rational milk without guile, that thereby you may grow unto salvation." (19) Come, my well-beloved, come, ~t of my honey and drink of my milk, that you may taste and see how sweet and delightful it is to serve and love Him Who has made me so amiable and tender towards His children, and how my Heart is full of love and affection for those who love me in return. "I love them that love me." (20)

We see therefore that the Heart of the Mother of Fair Love is a fountain of milk and honey for all her children, especially for those who are still weak, tender and delicate, not yet capable of taking more solid food.

Her Heart is also a fountain of oil, that is, of mercy for all sinners. It is, moreover, a fountain of wine to give strength and vigor to the weak and comfort to the sorrowful and afflicted, according to the divine words: "Give strong drink to them that are sad: and wine to them that are grieved in mind." (21)

All those who comfort other men for the sake of charity, and, above all, who work for the salvation of their neighbor, should be inebriated with the wine of divine love! To such as these our charitable Mother, ever burning with zeal for the salvation of souls, cries in a loud voice:

"Come, children, come beloved of my Heart, come, draw from the fountain of your Mother's Heart the heavenly wine of divine love; drink long and deep; filled with the rapture of the spirit, you need fear no excess. 'Drink, and be inebriated, my dearly beloved.' (22) Drink of this pure wine, father of virginity and of all holy virgins. 'Wine springing forth virgins.' (23) His heavenly wine fills the Seraphim with delight; it inebriated the Apostles of my Divine Son; it filled the Redeemer Himself with holy rapture when, in the excess of His love for you, He renounced the grandeurs of His divinity and humbled Himself in the lowly crib and on the ignominious Cross. Drink with Him of this delicious wine, that you may forget and despise what the world loves and esteems, that you may love and value God alone, and exert yourself with all your might to establish the reign of His love and His glory in the souls of men. Thus will you become the beloved children of His Heart and of my own.

Who will give me a voice strong enough to be heard in all the world, crying to all men: "All you that thirst, come to the waters: and you that have no money make haste, buy, and cat: Come ye, buy wine and milk without money, and without any price." (24)

You who thirst vainly after the false honors of the world, come instead to the most honorable Heart of the Queen of Heaven, and you will learn by the example of this Heart's thirst for the glory of God alone, that true honor consists in following His Divine Majesty: "It is great glory to follow the Lord." (25) Every other honor is only smoke, vanity and illusion. You who thirst after the riches of earth, come hither, and you will find incomparable treasures.

You who thirst after worldly pleasures, Come and you will find the contentment of the angels, the delights of God, the peace and joy of the children of God and of God's Mother, according to the divine promise addressed to each faithful soul: "Behold I will bring upon her as it were a river of peace, and as an overflowing torrent the glory of the Gentiles." (26)

Emerge from the filth of the world's horrible torrent, of the torrent of thorns that is whirling you into the abyss of perdition! Emerge and enter the sweet waters of the river of peace. Give yourself up in holy ecstasy to this torrent of delights. Properate, hasten, why do you wait?

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

Do you fear to slight the incomparable goodness of the Heart of Jesus, your God and Redeemer, if you invoke the charity of His Mother's Heart? Do you not know that Mary is nothing, possesses nothing, and can do nothing except in, through and by Jesus? Do you not know that Jesus is everything and that He can and does accomplish everything through her? Do you not know Jesus made Mary's Heart as it is, and that He willed it to be the fountain of light, of consolation and of every possible grace for those who will have recourse to it in their necessities? Do you forget that not only does Jesus reside and dwell perpetually in Mary's Heart, but that He is in truth the heart of her Heart and the soul of her soul; and that therefore coming to the Heart of Mary means to honor Jesus and to invoke her Heart is to invoke Jesus?

Our Lady asks of you only one thing, which is, that if you seek to taste the sweetness of the milk and honey flowing from the fountain of her Heart, and experience the potency of its wine, you must renounce all evil feasting and give up all tasting of the wine of the demons. It is impossible to drink of the chalice of Our Saviour and of the goblet of the devil, to partake of the heavenly banquet of God and at the same time to eat at the table of the devil (27) You must choose between them. It should be so very easy to make your choice!

Consider how strange it is! The world offers nothing but crumbs and dregs of feasting, empty fame, wealth and fleeting pleasure, but it sells you these stale crumbs and dregs at the costly price of worry, pain, bitterness, restlessness, anguish, often even at the price of your very life. As Sacred Scripture exclaims: «Why do you spend money for that which is not bread, and your labour for that which doth not satisfy you? » (28) Furthermore, the libations that the world sells so dearly are not only stagnant and bitter, completely unable to satisfy you in this life, but their venom is poison bringing eternal death. What satisfaction can you possibly expect to derive from waters as bitter as those of Egypt? (29).

On the other hand, the Divine Son of God and of Mary offers you the refreshment and rapture of the fountain of the fulness of the House of God, of which you are free to drink forever. O what blind, blind folly it is to choose the goblet of sin instead of the chalice of Our Saviour! God Himself has exclaimed in amazement at this, through the prophet Jeremias, saying:

«Be astonished, O ye heavens at this, and ye gates thereof, be very desolate. . . . For my people have done two evils. They have forsaken me, the fountain of living water, and have digged to themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." (30)

O dearest Lord, have pity on such wretchedness, and by the pure heart of Thy most blessed Mother, grant unto us the living water that flows from Thee through the miraculous fountain of her Heart. Stifle in our hearts the dangerous thirst for worldly things and grant us instead the thirst that burns only to please Thee, to love Thee, to seek our delight and refreshment in following Thy Holy Will, in imitation of the admirable Heart of Mary, fountain of sweetness and grace, who knew no joy or paradise except to accomplish Thy Divine Will most perfectly.

CHAPTER VI

MARY'S HEART, THE SEA

THE Admirable Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary is not only a fountain, as we have seen, it is also a sea, of which the ocean created by God on the Third Day is a beautiful figure. This is the fifth symbolic picture or representation of Our Lady's immaculate Heart.

St. John Chrysostom says that the heart of St. Paul is a sea: Cor Pauli Mare Est,<sup>(1)</sup> but the Holy Ghost Himself gives this name to the most holy Mother of God, and therefore to her Heart, to which the title is even more applicable than to her person, 'Or we shall show that her Heart is the principle of all the holy qualities that adorn her.

The Holy Spirit declares that Mary, His most worthy Bride, is a sea. A humble and learned writer who, while revealing his brilliant gifts in his excellent commentary on the psalms, has chosen that his name and person remain unknown,<sup>(2)</sup> reaches us that the name of sea is given in Sacred Scripture to the glorious Virgin because she is indeed a sea of purity, vast in extent and in usefulness. We shall consider shortly that Mary is a mean in purity and in extent. As for usefulness, this holy Doctor tells us that just as the sea does not permit the adjoining land to remain sterile, so the souls who approach the Mother of God with true devotion bring forth abundant fruits of benediction, thanks to the graces she lavishly bestows on them. Let us say of her Heart that it is a sea full of great and wondrous riches.

In the order of nature, the sea is one of the greatest marvels of God's omnipotence. "Wonderful are the surges of the sea." (3) God, Who is great everywhere, is especially admirable in the sea. "Wonderful is the Lord in the depths." (4) The holy Heart of Mary is an ocean of wonders and an abyss of miracles. It is the extraordinary masterpiece of essential and uncreated

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Love, in which the effects Of infinite Power, wisdom and goodness shine more brilliantly than in all the hearts of angels and men.

What is the sea? It is the gathering of the waters, says Sacred Scripture, or if you prefer, it is the place where all the waters are gathered. "Let the waters that are under the heaven, be gathered together into one place." (5) And the sacred text adds: "the gathering together of the waters, be called Seas." (6) Now what is the august Heart of Mary? It is the place where are gathered and united the living waters of all graces springing from the Heart of God, as from their first source. St. Jerome says: "Grace is divided among other saints, but Mary possesses the plenitude of sanctity." (7) For the same reason St. Peter Chrysologus calls Mary collegium sanctitatis,<sup>(8)</sup> that is the place where A grace and holiness are assembled and gathered together; and St. Bernard, mare admirabile gratiarum,<sup>(9)</sup> a prodigious sea of graces.

"All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea doth not overflow," says the Holy Ghost.<sup>(10)</sup> Thus also all the streams, all the torrents and all the rivers of heavenly grace run into the Heart of the Mother of Grace, and are readily contained there. All the graces of heaven and earth merge their waters in the great sea of the Holy Heart of the Mother of the Saint of Saints. "In me is all grace of the way and the truth." (11) In Mary's Heart are all the graces of the angels and of men, all the graces of the Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominations, Virtues, Powers, Principalities, Archangels and Angels, all the graces of the holy Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, Evangelists, disciples of Jesus, martyrs, priests and levites, confessors, hermits, virgins and widows, of the Holy Innocents and of all the blessed in heaven. There is no overflow of grace in Mary; she is not overwhelmed, for her Heart is worthy of all the gifts and all the liberalities of God's infinite goodness, and is capable of receiving and using them all for the glory of His Divine Majesty.

St. Bernardine of Siena tells us that all the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost descended into the soul and heart of this heavenly Virgin in such fulness, especially when she conceived the Son of God within her chaste womb, that her Heart forms an abyss of grace which no human or angelic intellect can comprehend. The mind of God, that of her Son, Jesus Christ, and her own, are alone capable of understanding the abundance and perfection of this mean of grace.(12)

The sea does not hoard its waters, but freely dispenses them to the earth through the rivers, which flow into the mean only to come out of it again, that they may water the whole earth and make it bear all kinds of fruit. "Unto the place from whence the rivers come, they return, to flow again." The Heart of our munificent Queen does not withhold any of the graces she receives from the generous hand of God. She returns them all to the first source, and waters the barren earth of our hearts to the extent needed to make them fruitful for God and for eternity. "That we may bring forth fruit to God." (13)

St. Bernard's words on this subject are most beautiful. He tells us that Mary desires to become everything to everyone. In her abundant charity, she denies no man a claim upon her Heart. She opens the door of her mercy and the portals of her generous Heart to all, that all may receive of her fulness. To the captive, she brings redemption; to the sick, healing; to the afflicted, comfort; to the sinner, forgiveness; to the just, increase of grace. She augments the joy of the angels; to the Son of God she gives the substance of human flesh, and to the Most Blessed Trinity glory and everlasting praise. The love and charity of her Heart make themselves felt by the Creator Himself and by all His creatures.(14)

Yes, Mary's admirable Heart is indeed a sea, being, after Our Lord Himself, the basis and sustenance of the Christian world, a sea of charity and love, a sea more solid and firm than that which sustained the feet of St. Peter as he walked upon its surface. Her heart is an mean more strong than the firmament itself, that sea of which St. John speaks in the Apocalypse: "And in the sight of the throne was, as it were, a sea of glass like to crystal; a sea of glass mingled with fire, and them that had overcome the beast . . . standing on the sea of glass, having the harps of God." (15)

Let us study the symbolism of the vision of the Evangelist. Glass is a product which owes its clarity, shape and perfection to moulding in the heat of intense fire. Similarly, the Heart of Mary was fashioned in the all-consuming fire of the Blessed Trinity, the furnace of the Holy Spirit, of which it is the most perfect work. Also, during her life on earth, the heart of Mary was tempered, like glass, in the furnace of suffering.

St. John speaks of glass like to crystal, meaning glass that is both transparent and shining, absorbing and radiating clear light, the most vivid symbol of purity. The sea like unto crystal is the mean of Mary's heart shining in its flawless purity. Glass made by man is dark in darkness, needing light to be luminous, shining most brilliantly in the direct brightness of the sun, reflecting the measure of light it receives. Similarly, the admirable Heart of Mary absorbs and reflects most marvellously the full celestial radiance of the Eternal Sun.

She is the sea of crystal "in the sight of the Throne" that is, directly before the face of the Divine Majesty, her entire existence being to receive and to reflect the image of God, not only as a sea but as a shining mirror.

St. John also speaks of the vision of a miracle, a sea mingled with fire, and thus he explains the inspired words of the Canticle of Canticles: "Many waters cannot quench charity, neither can the floods drown it." (16) These floods represent the torrent of sorrow that engulfed the heart of Mary, the Beloved Spouse, particularly during the Passion of her Divine Son. ". . . O Virgin daughter of Sion, great as the sea is thy deep affliction." (17) Yet even the mean of sorrow did not overwhelm the fire of love in the heart of Mary, but rather caused its flames to glow more brightly.

The Evangelist envisions the saints standing upon the sea of crystal, because their salvation has been founded upon Mary and they have chosen to dwell with her Beloved Son. Because of her, they have won the grace to chant forever the canticle of the Lamb, the hymn of praise, of joy, of victory over evil; therefore they stand upon the sea of her heart, hearing harps.

O adorable Jesus, grant unto us that we may sing with thee, with Thy Mother most admirable, and with the entire company of the saints, this miraculous canticle in praise of the adorable Heart of the Blessed Trinity, which is the source of the countless wonders and perfections enriching the heart of Mary, the ocean of grace and charity.

O Mary, thou sea of love unquenched by sorrow, behold my heart, the least and smallest of all hearts, a mere drop of water seeking to unite itself with thy vast ocean, to become lost in thy depths forever! O Mary, Queen of all hearts consecrated to Jesus, look down upon the tiny drop, my unworthy heart, offered to thee, to become merged forever in the sea of thy glowing love! Mother of Mercy, thou seest us here below, tossed upon a stormy sea of raging trial and temptation. In thy great mercy, deign to be our strength, our guiding-star, our sustenance, that, standing firm upon that crystal sea before the Throne, thy Admirable Heart, which tempests cannot assail, we may sing without fear:

"Thy royal heart is our pure light, our refuge safe. Why should I fear? Her goodness is firm support of our lives. Nothing can trouble our hearts."

MARY'S HEART, THE GARDEN OF EDEN

THE Garden of Eden described in the second and third chapters of Genesis is one of the most expressive figures drawn by the omnipotent and all-wise hand of God to represent the Heart of His beloved Daughter, the Blessed Virgin Mary. His infinite goodness has given us an excellent picture of her immaculate Heart. The earthly paradise of Scripture is the perfect representation of another paradise; it is the paradise of the first man, Adam, excellently portraying the paradise of the Second man, Jesus Christ, Our Redeemer.

To view this picture in its true light, we must consider many aspects Of it.

Let us begin with the name. If we consult Sacred Scripture, we shall learn that the first paradise was called "a paradise of pleasure," (1) "a place of pleasure." (2) The name of the garden of delights can very properly be applied to the admirable Heart of the Mother of God, true paradise of the new man, Jesus Christ. It is a garden of the Beloved, a garden scaled and doubly barred, a garden of delights. The Divine Spirit gives three names to the Heart of His holy bride, and they contain many profound meanings.

In the first place, Mary's Heart is the Garden of the Beloved. Do we not hear the Holy Ghost inspiring her to say: "Let my beloved come into his garden." (3) Who is the beloved of whom she speaks? Is it not her Son Jesus, the single and only object of her love? Into what garden does she invite Him to come, if it be not her virginal Heart, into which He was attracted, as we have said, by her humility and her love? Such is the explanation of the learned Balingham. (4) The Garden of the Beloved, therefore, is the Heart of the Beloved Bride; the Heart of Mary is the Garden of Jesus.

(3). Cant. 5, 1.

(4). In locis commun. Sac. Script. verbo Cor. 4.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

In the second place, the Admirable Heart of the Mother of God is a sealed garden. Her heavenly Spouse says of her: "My sister, my Spouse, is a garden enclosed, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed up." (5) But why does He twice repeat that it is an enclosed garden? He thereby means to teach us that the Heart of His Beloved Bride is absolutely shut against two things: it is shut against sin, which together with the serpent, the author of sin, never entered there: and it is shut against the world and all things of the world, against everything that is not God. He alone has always occupied this garden entirely, and there never existed place in it for anything else.

The third name given by the Holy Ghost has reference to the prophetic figure, the first Paradise, and He calls it a garden of delights, locus voluptatis, (6) paradisus voluptatis. (7) Mary's spotless heart is indeed a garden of rapture for the Son of God a garden where He experienced joys which were His greatest delights after those enjoyed from all eternity in the heart and bosom of His Eternal Father.

If Thou dost assure us, O Jesus, that Thy delight is to be with the children of men, (8) even though they are full of sin, ingratitude and infidelities, what must not have been Thy delight in the most amiable Heart of Thy Blessed Mother, where Thou didst never meet anything displeasing to Thee, but found. Thyself always praised, glorified and loved more perfectly than in the Paradise of the Cherubim and Seraphim? One can easily say that, after the adorable Bosom of the Eternal Father, no place ever was or will be so holy, so worthy of Thy majesty, so filled with glory and contentment for Thy delectation as the virginal Heart of Thy most amiable Mother.

Hence it is, O Saviour, that after hearing the invitation to come into her garden, that is, her Heart, expressed in the words: "Let my beloved come into his garden," (9) thou dost answer her: "I am come into my garden, O my sister, my spouse, I have gathered my myrrh, with my aromatical spices: I have eaten the honeycomb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk." (10) The myrrh represents the mortifications and anguish of thy loving Heart which I have gathered as well as all acts of virtue thou hast practised for love of Me, and I shall keep them in my Heart forever to be eternal joy and glory. I have also eaten honey, and drunk my wine and milk, that is, I find so many delights in this paradise given to me by my Heavenly Father, that I seem to be constantly feasting therein on honey.

These inspired words certainly define for us the name of "paradise."

Do you wish to know the Creator of this earthly paradise? Listen to the Word of God; "The Lord God had planted a paradise of pleasure from the beginning." (11) It was His infinite goodness towards the first Adam, that impelled God to plant this first paradise for men and posterity. If men had been obedient to God, they would have passed from an earthly, temporal paradise to an eternal and celestial heaven.

The unfathomable love of the Eternal Father for the second Adam, namely His Divine Son, Jesus Christ, led Him also to create a second paradise for Christ and all His true children, who will abide therein forever with their all-good Father. He causes them to participate even now as well as for all eternity in the holy and divine delights He there enjoys. For this reason, having told His most worthy Mother that He has come into her garden to eat His honey and to drink His wine and milk, He turns to His children and says to them: "Eat, O friends, and drink, and be inebriated, my dearly beloved." (12)

I see three principal objects in the garden of the First Adam. I see the tree of life and the tree of knowledge of good and evil, planted in the centre of Paradise. I see also many other trees being all kinds of fruit, agreeable to look upon and delightful to taste.

In the second Garden, I behold incomparably better trees, of which the first are but shadows. I see the real Tree of Life, Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, Whom the Father planted in the midst of this divine paradise of the virginal Heart of His most Holy Mother, when the Angel said to her: "The Lord is with thee." St. Augustine thus explains this passage: "The Lord is with thee, to abide first in thy Heart and then in thy virginal womb, to fill thy soul before descending into thy chaste bosom." (13)

Was it not the fruit of this Tree of Life that restored to us the eternal life which we had lost by eating another fruit given to us by a woman whose name was Eve? Was not the fruit of everlasting life given to us by the hands of a celestial woman whose name was Mary? "What didst thou say, O Adam?" exclaims St. Bernard. "The woman whom Thou didst give to me gave me of the fruit, and I did eat." These words tend to increase thy guilt, rather than diminish it. Change this unjust excuse into words of gratitude, and say: 'Lord, the woman thou gavest me, gave me of the fruit of the Tree of Life, and I did eat, and my mouth found it sweeter than honey, because by this precious fruit Thou hast restored me to life.' " Then the Saint adds: "O Marvellous Virgin, worthy of every honor! O woman to whom the highest veneration is due, who are admirable above all others, who hast repaired thy parent's fault and hast imparted life to those who will come after thee!" (14)

Such is the first tree I behold in the second Paradise, the Virginal Heart of Mary, which is more of Heaven than of earth. But I also see there the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, because the luminous and most enlightened Heart of the Mother of God has been filled with the science of the Saints, with the wisdom and science of Jesus Christ, the Saint of Saints. Her Heart is the dwelling-place of the Sun, ever united to Him in Whom all the treasures of God's wisdom and knowledge are hidden. Mary's heart has therefore perfectly known the sovereign good, which is God, and the supreme evil, which is sin. She did not know sin, however, as Adam and Eve knew it, by transgressing the commands of God; she knows sin in the light of God and as God knows it, hating it as God hates it. The fruit of this tree did not harm her as the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge in the first paradise harmed the first man and woman. Adam and Eve lost themselves and their posterity by eating of its fruit, because they ate of it against God's will. But our true Eve, the real Mother of the Living, sanctified herself and contributed to the sanctification of her children by eating of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge which God had planted in her Heart. She ate of it as God does, and as God wished that she should eat, that is, in using her knowledge as God employs His divine omniscience, availing herself of knowledge only to love God as God loves Himself, and to hate sin as God hates it.

God said of Adam, after his sin, in a sense implying his confusion and condemnation: "Behold Adam is become as one of us, knowing good and evil." (15) So also can He say of our incomparable Virgin, but in a sense that contributes to her praise and glory: "Behold Mary is become like one of us, knowing good and evil in the same light as we know them, and thus becoming a clear image of our holiness and perfection."

I see many other trees in our new Garden, that is, in the Heart of Mary, laden with excellent fruits most agreeable to the sight and delightful to the taste of Him who planted them. Does she not have them in mind when she says to her Beloved: "Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat the fruit of his apple trees? (16) Is Her faith, her hope, her charity, her submission to the divine will, are as many holy trees planted in her Heart and bearing an infinite variety of fair fruits.

Her virginal purity is another heavenly tree which bore the fruit of fruits, Christ, the King of Virgins, and later the thousands of virgins who will ever be found in the Church of God. Mary's ardent zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls is a divine tree upholding as many fruits as there are souls in whose salvation she has cooperated. Our Lady speaks of these fruits, which she also calls flowers, when, in the excess of her love for souls, she exclaims: "Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples: because I languish with love." (17) With the flowers she indicates newly converted souls who have just begun to serve God; with the fruits, those souls who have made progress and are more steadfast in virtue.

Such then are the trees to be found in the first and the second gardens of Eden. Are any flowers to be found there? Sacred Scripture does not mention the presence of any blossoms in the first garden; yet who can doubt that a garden of delight must have contained flowers in great abundance? It is certain, however, that the garden of Jesus is filled with heavenly flowers, the most beautiful and sweet-scented imaginable. The Heart of Christ's Mother is a celestial flower-bed dotted with the holy blossoms of all Christian virtues, immortal flowers, which never fade, whose ravishing beauty and delightful fragrance remain in every season. They fill the universe with their sweet perfume and give joy to the Angels, yea, even, to God Himself. They are at once flowers and fruits, for the Holy Ghost inspires the words: "My flowers are the fruit of honour and riches." (18)

The Eternal King adorns His garden with these flowers, and by means of their divine fragrance attracts innumerable hearts to Himself. He cat of these fruits, which are among the choicest viands of His heavenly table, and gives them as nourishment to His children. He assures us, moreover, that He takes His rest and refreshment in the works of mercy which are among the first flowers of His garden: "This is my rest, fresh the weary, and this is my refreshing." (19) So also does He feast with delight on the other acts of virtue which proceed from devoted hearts, and especially from the perfect Heart of His glorious Mother. With them He nourishes and strengthens the souls of His children.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

This is what God meant when He said that He came into His garden, ate His honey and drank His wine with milk, and then invited His friends and children to eat, drink and be inebriated with Him. (20)

Among the flowers in Mary's Garden for her divine Spouse, St. Bernard admires especially the perfume of violets, the whiteness of lilies and brilliant color of the roses. Here are his words: "Thou art an enclosed garden, O Mother of God, wherein we cull all kinds of flowers. Among them, we gaze with particular admiration on thy violets, thy lilies and thy roses, which fill the House of God with their sweet fragrance. Thou art, O Mary, a violet of humility, a lily of chastity, and a rose of charity." (21) We may add: "Thou art, O Mary, a carnation of mercy, a double carnation, because thy wondrous Heart is filled with mercy and compassion, not only for our corporal infirmities, but still more for our spiritual misery, which is infinitely more painful and complex than our bodily ills can ever be. O Mother of Mercy, have pity on all who are miserable, and especially on those who remain unaware of their own misery."

And now I go on to another object to be envisioned in the earthly paradise. In the second chapter of Genesis, we read that God brought to the first man the animals and the birds He had created that Adam might give them suitable names, as a sign of his dominion over them and of their dependence on him. Several learned Doctors are of the opinion that Adam offered some of the animals to God in sacrifice at that time.

We may now ask if any qualities of the Heart of the Queen of Heaven can have been symbolized by such humble things as animals and birds? Yes, and this should not surprise you, since her Son, Who is God Himself, willed to be represented by oxen, sheep, lambs, and several other beasts which, under the Old Law, were sacrificed to God.

What, then, is represented by the animals and birds subjected by God to the dominion of Adam in Paradise? They represent the natural passions that have their seat in the corporal and physical heart of man. These passions are of two kinds, that is, the more earthly and animal instincts, such as anger, hatred, fear, sadness, aversion, distrust, which are represented by the animals, and the more spiritual emotions, such as love, desire, hope, courage and joy typified by the birds.

All these passions existed as we have seen, (22) in the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary, just as they are found in the hearts of all children of Adam, but she enjoyed the great privilege that in her Heart they were completely subject to reason, just as the savage beasts were under the complete control of Adam in the earthly paradise. The spirit of Christ, the new man, reigned so perfectly in Mary's Heart and so absolutely ruled her passions, that they never experienced any motivation contrary to the will of God. She never employed them except under the guidance of God's Holy Spirit and for the glory of His Divine Majesty. She never loved anything besides God; she never desired anything except to please Him; she feared nothing save to displease Him. All the difficult tasks she undertook were accomplished in His service and for His glory, the sole cause of her joy, even as the offence and dishonor afforded Him by sin were the only motives of her hatred, her aversion, and her anger. So truly were her natural passions uplifted and almost annihilated towards the world and all worldly objects and concerns, even with regard to herself and her own interests, that her emotions existed and vibrated only for what was pleasing to Him who possessed, animated and directed them in all thoughts.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

From this we learn that the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary was truly the Earthly Paradise, in which there was no war, trouble or disorder of any kind, but peace, tranquility and marvellous order, combined with ceaseless praise and adoration of the God who had established His throne in this Paradise. All her passions, being entirely subject to reason and the Spirit of God, and perfectly blended together, blessed and praised Him with admirable harmony in the variety of their distinct motions, uses and functions. They were all guided by the same Spirit and all directed towards the same end, to glorify the Divine Majesty.

Now let us study the gardeners. In the first terrestrial paradise, Adam was appointed "to dress it, and to keep it," (23) but instead of cherishing his beautiful garden, he sold it to his arch-enemy the serpent, for a mere taste of the forbidden fruit. Instead of cultivating the Garden of Eden, Adam brought sin into it, filling it with thorns and thistles. What an unfaithful guardian! What a wicked gardener!

But in the second Paradise, the enclosed garden of the Heart of Mary, the gardener is Wisdom, eternal, watchful and faithful, and the three assistant gardeners are Love, which digs and prepares the soil to receive the seed of heavenly inspiration, Grace which sows the seed, and Patience that cultivates it to fruition by perseverance. 'Thus the flowers of Mary's heart grow ever more beautiful, more admirable to us and more delightful to God, while the fruits of her garden multiply a hundred thousandfold.

As for the significance of the events that transpired, I consider that the marriage of our First Parents in the Garden of Eden, a holy union designated directly by God, was symbolic of the hypostatic union between the divinity and humanity of the Eternal Word, and the mystical alliance of Our Saviour and His Church. Yet where was the contract for these divine alliances drawn up, if not in the Garden of the heart of Mary, the handmaid of God Almighty and the beloved Spouse of the Holy Spirit? There took place the secret and ineffable negotiations between the Eternal Father and the Blessed Virgin concerning the mystery of the Incarnation. There she made the offering and surrender of herself to the Divine Will, and gave her consent to have a part in the Divine Espousals, not only between the august Trinity and herself, but between divine and human nature, between the Son of God and Holy Church.

In the original garden of Paradise, God sought for Man, saying "Where art thou?" (24), because sin made Adam seek to hide and blot himself out in fear. In the second Paradise, God sought to hide Himself and His great glory for love, concealing His royal splendour so that the Three Kings, who came from afar to adore Him, had to ask: "Where is he?" It was sin that caused the annihilation of Adam, but love achieved the annihilation of the new Adam, the Son of God, who descended into the garden of Mary to draw us from the nothingness of sin.

In the first garden, God pronounced sentence upon the serpent: "The woman shall crush thy head and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel." (25) In the garden of Mary's heart, this pronouncement was fulfilled. Her Immaculate Conception crushed original sin, her sanctity routed the powers of evil, and her love obtained the commutation of our death sentence, bringing us the Saviour of the world. (26)

Man, having rebelled against God in the first paradise, was driven from that garden and banished forever with all his posterity, and at the gate was placed an angel with a flaming sword in his hand to prevent the children of Adam from re-entering the Garden of Eden. From this we learn that to enter and share the second paradise, namely the pure heart of the Mother of the new Adam, we must cease to be sons of Adam and become children of Jesus Christ, that is, our old life must die.

This death seems fearful; the sword of the cherubim is terrifying; yet actually it is a sword of love, which wounds, or even slays the blessed, in order to heal their souls and make them live the life of God. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (27) says Sacred Scripture, meaning the death that is not death but the beginning of eternal life.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Now that I have shown you, dear reader, the admirable Heart of Mary as the garden of delectation of the God-Man, I would warn you that your own heart must be one of two things, either a hell of torment for yourself, or a paradise of delights for you and for Jesus Christ. If you banish sin and self-love from the garden of your heart, opening wide the door to grace and to the King of Virtue, He will enter in and find repose in that place.(28) If you drive away grace and mortification, letting sin grow in your garden, then the demons will enter and make it their abode, a veritable hell instead of paradise. But if you strive to imitate Mary, your Queen, tending your heart with wisdom, love, grace and patience, God will not refuse you the full measure of His gifts so that you may cultivate your garden fruitfully, and make it, like Mary's, a paradise of delight for your Lord and Saviour, as well as a place of refreshment, deep sweetness and peace for yourself.

CHAPTER I

MARY'S HEART, THE BURNING BUSH OF MOSES

JOHN GERSON, very learned and devout chancellor of the famous University of Paris, when commenting on the Magnificat, Says that Mary's incomparable Heart was prefigured by the burning bush seen by Moses on Mount Horeb. (1) Gerson does not speak thus without good reason. The extraordinary spectacle of a bush burning in the midst of a blazing fire without being consumed is a beautiful representation of the Heart of Mary, which it excellently portrays in Several ways.

First, we should consider that the mountain on whose slopes the bush grew is called in Sacred Scripture "the mountain of God," mons Dei. (2) it is also spoken of as "a holy mountain," for Moses heard a voice saying to him: "The place whereon thou standest is holy ground." (3) We shall easily be convinced, therefore, that it represents the most Blessed Virgin Mary, who is the true mountain of God, a mountain of holiness of whom we can well say with St. Gregory the Great (4) that she is the mountain foretold by the Prophet Isaias as the peak towering above all other heights: "A mountain ... on the top of mountains," (5) because God has raised her in dignity, in sanctity and power above the chief Seraphim and the greatest saints.

Secondly, we ought not to despise this insignificant bush, a lowly shrub, the least of all plants. On the contrary, we should regard it with respect, since God so honored this bush as to choose it in preference to the tallest cedars of Lebanon for this manifestation of His glory, amid the fire and flames of its miraculous blaze. Would you know the reason of this? Listen to the Holy Ghost: "The Lord is high and looketh on the low: and the high he knoweth afar off. (6) I Though God is most high and infinitely above His creatures, nevertheless it delights His divine Providence to look with a kind and loving eye at that which is small and lowly. While He draws near to the humble, He surveys the great and mighty from afar, as though He disregarded and despised them.

Thus was He attracted by the humility of Mary, His handmaid. Respexit humilitatem ancillae suae. (7) St. Bernard speaks as follows of the profound humility of Mary's Heart: "She who in her own mind and heart was the least of all creatures, has rightly been made the first, because, even though she was in fact the first, she considered herself as being the last." (8) This humility of the Heart of Heaven's Queen is represented by the lowliness of the mysterious bush of Mount Horeb.

Thirdly, we must not be frightened or horrified by the sharp thorns which guard this bush on all sides, both outside and inside. This should, on the contrary, make us love it more, because God Himself loves it for this reason. It is obvious that God loves all His creatures and hates none of the works of His hands, for it is written: "Thou lovest all things that are, and hatest none of the things which thou hast made." (9) It is also obvious that God cherished a specially tender love for this little bush, that His Heart was there and that He took pleasure in it. He chose it to be His throne, the place where He would manifest His glory to His servant Moses, where He would speak to His prophet, disclose divine secrets and reveal His providential designs to deliver the Chosen People from Egyptian bondage.

God loved the burning bush because the fire that encompassed without consuming it represented the fire of divine love which filled the Heart of Mary, a love far greater than that of all the hearts of men and angels. The thorns symbolized the bitter sorrow and unspeakable anguish which pierced the Heart of the Mother of God, suffering that she accepted for the love of God and the salvation of mankind.

Moreover, God descended from Heaven into the bush on Mount Horeb and manifested Himself to Moses, "in the flame of fire," to show His love and charity towards his people, and spoke "from the midst of the bush," or according to another version "from the heart of the bush," to declare His intention of delivering the children of Israel from the captivity of Pharaoh through the instrumentality of Moses. In like manner the Son of God, in the excess of His love, descended from the bosom of the Eternal Father into His Mother's Heart, ablaze as it was with love for God and charity towards men, in order to bring about our redemption and to associate her with Himself as the instrument of this great work.

God remained in the burning bush only a short time, but He has always been and will forever abide in the Heart of our glorious Mother. Deus in medio ejus, non commovebitur? (10) God is in the midst thereof, it shall not be moved." According to another rendering, Deus in intimo ejus non amovebitur, "God is in the inmost Heart and shall never depart therefrom."

The principal characteristic we should consider about the burning bush, however, is marked by the words of Moses: "I will go and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt." (11) The sacred text says that Moses saw the bush in the midst of a glowing fire, which nevertheless did not destroy it. "He saw that the bush was on fire and was not burnt." (12)

This is truly a great miracle. Yet it is only a figure of the much greater wonder that took place in the Heart of our admirable Mother. Mary's Heart was a galaxy of marvels, and one of the most stupendous was that, while the Mother of Fair Love remained in this world, her Heart became inflamed with love for God to such intensity that this sacred flame would have consumed her corporal life if she had not been miraculously preserved in the midst of such heavenly fervor. It was, therefore, a greater wonder to behold Our Lady living surrounded by heavenly fire, without being annihilated, than to watch the burning bush of Moses in the midst of fire without being consumed.

From the foregoing we may therefore conclude that the burning bush of Mount Horeb was indeed a significant representation of the most Holy Heart of the Mother of God.

Likewise, dear reader, do not forget that your heart must burn with the loving fire that enkindled the virginal Heart of Mary, the fire that the Son of God came to spread upon earth, or else it must burn forever in the dreadful conflagration prepared for the devil and his cohorts. Oh, what a difference between these two kinds of fire! The devouring flames that torment eternally without consuming, and the delightful, joyous flames that constantly ravish the hearts of the ardent seraphim!

Rejoice, each one of you who reads or listens to these words! Give thanks to God that you are still alive, that yours is still the power to choose which of these fires shall enkindle your heart. Strive earnestly to extinguish the flame of self-love, of worldliness, the burning of anger, lust, envy and ambition. Give your heart entirely to Jesus Christ, asking Him to set it on fire with His love. For this purpose there is no better prayer than the words of St. Augustine:

"O divine fire that burneth always and is never extinguished; O love always ardent and never growing cold, enkindle my being! Set me on fire completely, so that I may become nothing but a glowing flame of love for Thee."

MARY'S HEART, THE HARP OF KING DAVID

THE mysterious harp of King David, mentioned in several passages of Sacred Scripture, is another symbolic picture of the Holy Heart of Mary. It is an excellent representation because her pure Heart was indeed the harp of the true David, namely Our Lord Jesus Christ. He fashioned it with His own hands; He alone always possessed it. No other fingers but His ever evoked its melodies, because her virginal Heart never vibrated with sentiments, affections or impulses other than those inspired by the Holy Ghost.

The strings of this royal harp are the virtues of Mary's Heart, especially her faith, hope, love of God, charity towards her neighbor, religion, humility, purity, obedience, patience, mercy, hatred of sin, love of the cross. On these twelve strings the Divine Spirit played with wondrous harmony melodious canticles of love which so greatly charmed the ears of the Eternal Father that He forgot His anger against sinners, He laid aside the thunderbolts wherewith He vowed to destroy mankind and gave His own Son to be the Saviour of humanity.

Sacred Scripture tells us that King David employed his harp specially on four great occasions and we see Jesus, the Son of David, using His mystical harp to accomplish four infinitely greater achievements.

In the first instance, David, the man of God, by the mere sound of his harp, put to flight the evil spirit which possessed Saul. Similarly, the new David used the Heart of His loving Mother as a sublime harp and consequently freed by its divine music the human race that grovelled under the evil dominion of Satan.

The prophet David also employed His harp to sing many psalms and canticles to the honor and glory of God. Our true David, likewise, sang with His instrument five types of canticles in praise of the Most Blessed Trinity. The first were canticles of love, the strongest, purest, most perfect love that ever was or shall be. The second were canticles of praise and thanksgiving for the benefits of divine goodness on behalf of all creatures, for the Blessed Virgin Mary did not limit herself to thanking

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

God for the infinite favors she received from His hand, but she praised Him unceasingly for the graces He pours on all created beings. The third were canticles of sorrow, of anguish and bereavement at the time of the sufferings and death of her beloved Son. The fourth were canticles of triumph for all the victories won by herself as general of the great King's armies over His enemies and, we may truly say, over Himself, having so often disarmed divine vengeance when it stood ready to destroy the world and punish its innumerable crimes. The fifth were canticles of prophecy to announce the great designs of God for the future, many of which were foretold by the Queen of Prophets in the wonderful canticle she composed when greeting her cousin St. Elizabeth.

The third purpose for which King David used his harp was to praise God and especially to praise Him with joy. In like manner, Christ the second David, not only attuned His holy Mother's Heart to praise and bless His divine Majesty in every way, but He also induced Mary to seek her joy and bliss exclusively in His praises, and in all the acts she performed for His glory and in His service.

King David chose as the fourth function of his harp to excite and attract other men to the praise of God, with hearts full of joy and gladness like his own. So too Christ the King attracts innumerable souls to the love and praise of His heavenly Father by the sweet sound of His precious harp, that is, by means of the blessed Heart of His glorious Mother. The extraordinary virtues of her vibrant Heart resound so loudly and harmoniously throughout the entire Christian Church that numberless persons of all ranks and conditions find themselves urged to imitate the perfections which adorn it, thus beginning to carry out on earth what the angels and saints achieve in Heaven. In other words, they place their entire contentment and felicity in all that concerns the sovereign Monarch in Heaven and earth.

Another point worthy of special mention is that Christ, our adorable David, possesses many other harps given to Him by the Eternal Father to satisfy His boundless desire to hear the praise of God unceasingly in every place, at every time, in all things and in every way.

His first and sovereign harp is His own Sacred Heart. It is this harp that He speaks of when He says: "I will sing to thee with the harp, thou holy one of Israel." (1) On this harp, in fact, He sang continually during His mortal life on earth, and will forever sing in the glory of heaven a thousand canticles of love, praise and thanksgiving to His heavenly Father, in His own home as well as in the name of all His members and of all creatures God has made. But the love that inspires these canticles (1). Ps. 70, 22.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

is infinitely higher, their song is immeasurably holier than those of the canticles He sings on His second harp, which we have just described, namely the Heart of His peerless Mother.

These two Hearts and these two Harps are nevertheless so closely attuned that in a certain sense they constitute one single harp, vibrating in unison, giving forth but one sound and one song, singing the same canticle of love. If the first sounds a canticle of praise, the second echoes it with its own chords. If the Heart of Jesus loves God the Father, Mary's Heart unites in that love; if the Heart of Jesus pours itself out in thanksgiving before the Most Holy Trinity, Mary's Heart sings an identical hymn of gratitude. The Heart of Mary loves and hates all that the Heart of Jesus loves and hates. What rejoices the Son's Heart rejoices the Heart of the Mother as well; what crucifies the Heart of the Son likewise nails the Mother's Heart to the Cross. "Jesus and Mary," says St. Augustine, "were two mystical harps. What sounded on the one, also sounded on the other, even though no one touched it. When Jesus was in sorrow, Mary was in sorrow; when Jesus was crucified, Mary was crucified." (2)

The Eternal Father gave His Divine Son innumerable other harps, namely, the hearts of all the angels and saints, on which to praise and glorify His Almighty Father while they were pilgrims on earth, and forever to praise and glorify Him in blissful eternity. All the glory, honor and praise that ever was or will be rendered to God the Father by the angels and saints was and will be rendered through His Divine Son, Jesus Christ. "By Him, and with Him, and in Him, is to thee, God the Father Almighty, all honor and glory."

These are the harps mentioned in several passages of the Apocalypse, (3) where St. John tells us that God permitted him to behold the Saints all holding harps on which they sang many canticles in honor of the Lamb of God. But a learned author, (4) in his commentaries on the Apocalypse notices a striking difference between these harps and the harp of the Mother of God. The former, while on earth, were often discordant, because of human weakness and frailty, and they sometimes wearied of praising God; hence it was necessary to tune them from time to time and urge them to do their duty.

The harp of the Queen of all Saints, on the other hand, never suffered any weakening or interruption in its song, having praised and glorified the Most Blessed Trinity with a changeless love and the most perfect harmony. Hence Viegas says that Our Lady did not exclaim, as though exhorting herself: Magnificat, anima mea,

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Dominum, but Magnificat "anima mea Dominum"; (5) not "O my soul, magnify the Lord," but "My soul doth magnify the Lord."

The Eternal Father has given His Beloved Son yet another harp, which like the hearts of all Christians is meant to chant the praises of His Holy Name, and this harp is your own heart. Beware lest you follow the miserable example of those who take away from Christ the hearts given to Him by the Heavenly Father and purchased by His Precious Blood. Unlike an ordinary instrument, the harp of your heart cannot remain silent. It must be played either by the hand of God or by the hand of the devil. Either it will sing the divine canticles of Our Lady and of the saints, or it will echo the cursed and unhappy songs of the worldlings here below in dishonour to God's Maker, and vibrate eternally with the blasphemies and horrid dirges of the damned in hell.

To make your heart a harp of Our Saviour, the true David, you must pluck out the strings of vice and replace them with the strings of virtue, which must be set in tune with the peace and charity of the hearts of your fellow-men. Sound your harp in unison with the inspired paeans of true Christians, of the angelic host and of the saints, above all with the sublime Harp of the Heart of Mary, Queen of all saints, joining in the chorus of praise and love of Almighty God, led by the Royal Harpist, Our Lord, "singing with one voice: Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts."

MARY'S HEART, THE THRONE OF KING SOLOMON

Among the many beautiful qualities attributed by the Holy Ghost to the Blessed Virgin Mary, one stands out preeminently. It is contained in these words of the eighty-sixth psalm, which Holy Church and her Doctors apply to the Mother of God: "Glorious things are said of thee, O city of God." (1)

Mary is indeed the great and glorious city of God, the holy city, the city of Jerusalem, the city of peace, the royal city, "the city of the great King." (2) The King of Kings built this city with His own hands; He exempted her entirely from the infamous tribute of sin; He honored her with countless great and extraordinary privileges; He enriched her with inestimable gifts and treasures and He established His first and most glorious abode within her Heart. In her He chose to reveal the rarest marvels of His power and royal magnificence.

O Holy City of God, what high and admirable things must be said and thought of thee! Thou art not only the city of the great King, O incomparable Virgin, thou art also His royal and eternal palace. "Yes," says St. Bonaventure, "this heavenly maiden is the sacred palace of the great God: Sacratum Dei palatium!" (3) Now, if Mary is the palace of the King of Kings, her heart must be the King's imperial throne.

This magnificent throne is perfectly represented by the throne of King Solomon, as described in the Book of Kings. (4) We read there that this great king erected a throne of ivory in his house on Libanus and covered it with brilliant gold. Six steps led up to this throne; the top of it was rounded at the back, and there were two hands on either side to hold the seat, with two large lions standing near, while small lions stood upon either side of the six steps. Never was any similar throne made in any kingdom of the world.

(3). In Carminibus super Salve Regina.

(4). 3 Kings 10, 18-20.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

There is another throne of King Solomon which also represents Our Lady's Heart most perfectly. The third chapter of the Canticle of Canticles describes it as follows: "King Solomon hath made him a litter of the wood of Libanus. The pillars thereof he made of silver, the seat of gold, the going up of purple: the midst he covered with charity for the daughters of Jerusalem." (5)

In the same chapter, immediately before the description of this throne mention is made of Solomon's bed with the following words: "Behold~ threescore valiant ones of the most valiant of Israel surrounded the bed of Solomon. All holding swords, and most expert in war; every man's sword upon his thigh, because of fears in the night." (6)

What does all this mean? Here is the answer.

The throne and the couch of Solomon symbolize the same representation, namely the holy Heart of the Queen of the world, the couch representing the Heart in contemplation, the litter describing in it action. Mary's Heart is at once the throne and the bed of the true Solomon, Jesus Christ, Our Lord. It is the bed on which He rests in the sweetness and calm of contemplation. It is the litter in which love and charity that set Him on this throne, carry Him from place to place, that He may reign everywhere for the glory of God and the salvation of souls. An illustrious commentator expresses a similar thought when he says: "The bed of Solomon represents the heart resting in the sweetness of contemplation. His litter is the heart going about in the exercise of good works." (7)

Who are the valiant ones surrounding Solomon's bed well armed and expert in war? According to St. Bernard and several other learned Doctors, they are the angels and the mightiest among the angels, namely the Seraphim, who armed with God's strength and expert in combat against His enemies, always kept watch around the seraphic Heart of their Empress, in the world's dark night. They kept guard against the fears in the night, that is, they prevented the powers of darkness to approach and in any way trouble the divine Solomon as He rested on this holy couch.(8)

But let us return to Solomon's litter. He designed it with his own hands like the throne of the palace on Libanus: Fecit sibi. (9) In like manner, our adorable Solomon is Himself the author of the incomparable masterpiece of Mary's Heart. He prepared for Himself a throne worthy of His infinite grandeur and eternal majesty in the august Heart of His glorious Mother.

We have good reason to call Solomon's litter a figure of the throne of the King of Kings, namely of the Heart of the most holy Mother of this great King. St. Gregory of Nyssa tells us that this throne of Solomon is "a figure of the heart of every faithful Christian," (10) and a famous Doctor says that "the heart of the true Christian is the litter of the Son of God, because it goes where the one it bears wills that it should go, and never elsewhere." (11) This was fulfilled more perfectly in the Heart of the holy Virgin than in the hearts of even the holiest of creatures. Her virginal Heart never experienced inclinations or affections other than those it derived from the Master who held absolute sway over it.

Solomon's throne was made of incorruptible wood of the cedar of Libanus, to show that the Immaculate Heart of the Mother of God was not only preserved from the corruption of sin, but also that its superabundance of heavenly graces rendered it incapable of sin by grace, as God is incapable of sin by nature.

The four columns of Solomon's throne are the four cardinal virtues, which sustain the throne of the true Solomon, namely justice, prudence, fortitude and temperance. The pillars made of silver denote the candor of innocence preserved in the heart that possesses them. This symbol was eminently verified in the most pure and innocent Heart of the Queen of all virtues.

The gold seat represents free-will transformed by love into the adorable love of God. It can be truly said with David, the Royal Prophet, "Whatever befall me, my soul shall trust the Lord in all things, with humility and submission to His will. From Him is my salvation. He is my God, my stronghold, my living rock, nothing can shake me." (12) Every human will attaining this state of submission becomes the seat of the throne of Jesus, and in the will of His Blessed Mother this was accomplished in a most perfect manner. Therefore St. Peter Damian calls her "the golden seat on which, after the tumult and disorder occasioned by the sins of angels and men, He sought and found

His rest." (13)

The "going up" or back of purple represents ardent desire for the glory of God, for the sanctification of His name and the accomplishment of His will on earth as it is accomplished in heaven. It symbolizes the di vine love that constantly urged the zealous Heart of the Mother of Love upward and onward to do and suffer great things towards the fulfillment of the designs of the Creator.

Finally, our beloved Christ prefigured by Solomon, filled His throne with Charity for the daughters of Jerusalem, that is, for all souls, especially for each Christian soul, and more particularly still for the beloved children of His Blessed Mother's Heart. These are the humble, pure and charitable souls who entertain a singular devotion towards her maternal Heart. Yes, our lovable Solomon filled the virginal Heart with charity towards us, for He did everything for us, as the Apostle St. Paul says: "All things are for your sakes." (14) If He created the world, it was for us; if He became Man, it was for us; if He was born in a stable, it was for our sake. For us He remained thirty-four years in this world, accomplished and suffered so many great and extraordinary things and shed the last drop of His precious Blood. For our sake, He died on the Cross, ascended into Heaven, established Holy Church, confided the sacraments to her care, and especially the most Holy Sacrament of the Altar where He resided in person. All this was for us: Ommia propter vos. In like manner, if He willed to have a true Mother on earth, it was for our sake. If He made her so good, so wise, so powerful, so full of incomparable privileges and extraordinary powers, it was that she might possess the knowledge, power and desire to protect and assist us in all our necessities. He gave her a Heart filled with charity, benignity, zeal, care and vigilance towards us, that we might profit thereby, if we but invoke it in our needs with utmost confidence. He set His throne in her Heart for two purposes, both equally useful and profitable to us; Our Saviour made Mary's Heart a throne of honor and glory and established it as a throne of grace and mercy.

Her Heart is a throne of honor and glory, where Our Lord wills to be honored and glorified more than in the hearts of all angels and saints, even though they also are thrones of glory given to Him by His omnipotent Father. "The soul of the just is the seat of wisdom." It is a throne on which all the citizens of Heaven adore and glorify Him without end. It is the throne of which Holy Church speaks when she says: "Upon a high throne I saw a man sitting, whom a multitude of angels adore singing together: Behold Him the name of whose empire is to eternity." (15) Notice that it is during the Octave of the Epiphany that Holy Church, guided by the Divine Spirit, utters and sings these heavenly words, for the three Kings found and adored the Messiah in the arms close to the Heart of His most worthy Mother as up on His royal throne. "They found the child with Mary his mother." (16) If they had had the eyes of angels, they would have beheld and adored Him enthroned within Her Heart, as well as reposing against it. On this throne, Christ wills to receive our homage and humble respects, and the children of the Church Militant must join those of the Church Triumphant in adoring Bud glorifying Him.

Our Lady's Heart is also a throne of grace and mercy, where Christ absolves all sinners who approach Him in a spirit of humility and penance, where He abundantly dispenses His gifts and graces to those who ask Him. Our Lord grants with extraordinary goodness the requests presented by those who render to Him, in the Heart of His most honored Mother, the homage He desires to receive there. He wishes to be praised and glorified in the hearts and even in the bodies of His saints and "Glorify and bear God in your body." (17) How much more, then, should we not honor and magnify Our Saviour in the Heart of His Blessed Mother?

Let us approach with humility, respect and confidence this throne of grace and mercy, and the Son of God will grant us every blessing we ask through the Heart of His glorious Mother. "Let us go therefore with confidence to the throne of grace: that we may obtain mercy, and find grace." (18)

CHAPTER IV

MARY'S HEART, THE TEMPLE OF JERUSALEM

IN THE time of the Mosaic Law one of the greatest wonders of the world was the temple of Jerusalem. Yet this stupendous temple was merely a figure and an image of the multitude of temples to be found in the Christian world. It prefigured particularly the Sacred Humanity of the Son of God, for Christ referring to His own body said to the Jews: "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up." (1)

The temple of Jerusalem was a figure of Holy Church and a figure of each Christian. It prefigured our churches and cathedrals, but was also a representation of a temple far more holy and august than any material structure. What then is the true temple? It is the Holy Heart of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary. The Church says of her person that Mary is "the temple of the Lord, the sanctuary of the Holy Ghost," and we can apply these words with still better reason to her admirable Heart, having seen that it is the source of all the qualities and excellences with which she is adorned. If, according to the divine Word, the body of each Christian is the temple of God, (2) who will dare to deny this characterization to the most worthy Heart of the Mother of all Christians? I affirm, therefore, that the Holy Heart of Mary is the true temple of the Divinity, the sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, the Holy of Holies of the Blessed Trinity.

This temple was not like Solomon's built by a host of workmen, but by the Almighty Hand of God, Who can achieve greater wonders in a single instant than all the powers of Heaven and earth can accomplish during the whole of eternity.

The temple of Mary's Heart was consecrated by the Sovereign Pontiff, Our Lord Jesus Christ Himself. It was never profaned by the slightest sin and stood adorned with a tremendous wealth of ordinary and extraordinary graces, and by all Christian virtues practised in the highest degree.

(1). John 2, 19.

(2). 1, Cor. 6, 19.

THE HEART OF GOD THE FATHER

Not only is her Heart entirely covered with King Solomon's gold, but it is itself wrought of the finest and purest gold, of a metal infinitely more precious than all the material gold to be found in the universe. The Heart of our amiable Mother is filled with love of God and charity towards us. It is entirely transformed into love and charity, and completely identified with the purest love and the most perfect charity. Its love is more ardent, more pure and divine, its charity more fervent, holier and more excellent than the love and charity of all the Seraphim. The temple of Mary contains all the riches of God together with all the treasures of Heaven and earth because it keeps within its cloister all the mysteries of the life of the Son of God. "His Mother kept all these words in her heart." (3) Her Heart possesses the very Son of God Himself, the treasure of the Eternal Father, Who encompasses all the wealth and beauty of the Most Holy Trinity.

In this temple Christ, the Sovereign Priest, offered His first sacrifice at the time of the Incarnation. Christ, the Doctor of doctors and the Preacher of preachers, Who taught and preached so often in the temple of Jerusalem, imparts to us from the temple of His Mother's Heart as many instructions and lessons as there we virtues exemplified in this virginal Heart.

In this temple God is adored more profoundly and worthily, praised and glorified more perfectly than in all other material or spiritual temples that ever were and shall be in Heaven and on earth, the sacred humanity of Jesus alone excepted. The smallest acts of virtue and even the prayerful thoughts of Mary's holy Heart are more agreeable to the Divine Majesty and render God greater honor and glory than the greatest actions of the foremost among the Saints.

The Heart of the heavenly Mary is indeed a temple and a temple filled with rarest marvels. God entrusted to King David a description of the temple of Jerusalem written by His own hand, as recorded in the words: "All these things came to me written by the hand of the Lord." (4) The Eternal Father willed to place several remarkable objects in this temple to foreshadow and represent many great and wondrous mysteries that were to be found in the admirable Heart of His holy Mother. Among them I notice seven principal objects that add significance to this symbolic picture, namely: the golden candlestick, the table with the loaves of proposition, the altar of perfumes, the Ark of the Covenant, the Tables of the Law, the Propitiatory and Oracle which reposed on the Ark, and the Altar of Holocausts.

(3). Luke 2, 51.

(4). Par. 28, 19.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

St. Epiphanius' and St. John Damascene, (6) together with several other Doctors, tell us that the golden candlestick is a figure of the Holy Mother of God. Next to Jesus, her beloved Son, Mary is the most luminous torch and the brightest light of the House of God. "O virginal candlestick," says St. Epiphanius, "which enlightened those who sat in the shadow of death [O virginal torch, which dissipated the gloom of hell, and caused the brilliance of heaven to shine in our souls! O radiant lamp, ever filled with the oil of grace and light, with the fire of divine love, lighting our minds and inflaming our hearts! This virginal light has spread its splendour throughout the world!" (7)

O admirable Virgin, thou art truly the golden candlestick of the chosen temple of God, which is His Church! With excellent reason does Holy Church salute thee and recognize thee as the portal through which the light came into the world: "Hail, gate of morn, whence the world's true Light was born." (8) But this parallel can best be applied to thy most holy Heart, and especially to thy spiritual Heart, which comprises the three faculties of the superior part of thy soul. Thy shining Heart is the seat of light, of the light of reason, of the light of faith, and of the light of grace. It is the throne of the Eternal Sun and is itself a sun filling Heaven and earth with its radiance.

The remarkable table in Solomon's temple, described in the twenty fifth chapter of Exodus, was made by divine command from the wood of Setim, not common variety of cedar, but according to the Septuagint, a most rare and altogether incorruptible wood. The table was completely covered with gold-plate and edged with a gold-plated cornice or border surrounding it like a crown while two additional golden crowns embellished it. It was designed to hold the loaves of proposition that were offered to God daily by the priests, and were thus named because they lay in the temple as a perpetual sacrifice proposed or exposed to the Divine Majesty. Afterwards they were consumed by the priests.

The Fathers of the Church all agree that the loaves of proposition were a figure of Our Lord Jesus Christ, the royal bread that came down from Heaven. Christ is the bread of the angels, the bread of God, the bread of the children of God, a bread which is the nourishment and life of the Christian soul, and all Christians are called priests in Sacred Scripture: Fecisti nos Deo nostro sacerdotes. (9) Some are priests by office and bear the special character of consecrated priesthood; others share it by participation.

What is the table bearing this divine bread, prefigured by the table carrying the loaves of proposition? St. Germanus, Patriarch of Constantinople, answers that it was the Blessed Virgin Mary(10) and St. Epiphanius confirms his words.(11)

Is not the table designed to receive the bread and food laid on it? Is it not true that the Heart of the Mother of God was the first to receive Our Lord as He came forth from the bosom of the Eternal Father? Did she not receive Him in order to give Him to us? Is it not true that the Eternal Father carries His Beloved Son in His all-glorious Heart from all eternity and that the Blessed Virgin will carry her Son in her Heart for all eternity? God the Father has revealed that His paternal Heart gave us His well-beloved Son, the Divine Word, in the Incarnation, and still gives Him to us daily in the Eucharist: Eructavit or according to another version, Effudit Cor meum Verbum bonum. "My heart hath uttered a good word." (12) In like manner, the Blessed Virgin refers to her maternal Heart, and Holy Church often represents her as speaking in unison with the Eternal Father: Eructavit Cor meum Verbum bonum. Hence we hear the words which the Holy Ghost puts on Mary's lips: "I was with him," that is, with the Eternal Father, "forming all things." (13) In the Hebrew version this passage reads: "I was with Him and near Him as a nurse," which reveals Mary's role as the Mother who gives nourishment to mankind.

Our Lady says: "I was intimately united to Almighty God in will, mind and heart, possessing only, as it were, one will, mind and heart in common with Him, and a heart ablaze with love for men. This love induced God to give mankind His well-beloved Son; a similar love urged me to give this same Son, who is my own as truly and really as He is the Son of God, so I gave Our Divine Son, the fruit of His Father's Heart and of my own, to be the bread of men's souls and the life of their hearts."

Several learned interpreters of Sacred Scripture teach us that the altar of perfumes of the Mosaic temple represents the hearts of the faithful, which are symbolized as altars on which each one should offer a perpetual sacrifice of prayer and praise to God. Now if the hearts of the children of God were figured by this altar, how much more truly does it symbolize the Heart of the Mother of God, which is after the Heart of Jesus, the first and holiest of all altars? It is "the golden altar, which is before the throne of God," mentioned in the eighth chapter of the Apocalypse.(14) On this altar the Mother of the Saviour offered to God a sacrifice of love, adoration, praise, thanksgiving and prayer far more to His Divine Majesty than all the sacrifices that ever were or ever shall be offered on all other altars.

If we consult the Fathers of the Church we learn particularly from St. Ambrose that the Ark of the Covenant was a figure of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and therefore of her most holy Heart, the holy Heart, the first and noblest part of her person. "Yes," exclaims the seraphic St. Bonaventure, "the Ark of Moses was merely a reflection of the Virgin's Heart. Her Heart is the true ark containing within itself the secrets of the divine Word and the treasure of the law of God." (15) A holy Abbot(16) of the Cistercian Order calls Mary the Ark of Sanctification, containing revelations written by the hand of God. She is the holy Ark of the Covenant, the Covenant by which God reconciled us with Himself and pledged His alliance with us forever.

What more shall we say of the Ark of Moses? We may regard it as an image of the Blessed Virgin's most holy Heart inasmuch as it contained the essential treasure, the chief glory and the holy joy of the Jewish people, the principal mystery of their religion, the bulwark of their defence and the terror of their enemies, even as the admirable Heart of our Queen is the glory, treasure and joy of Christendom. Next to God, Mary's Heart should be the first object to which we look up when we pray. Her Heart is an impregnable stronghold, turris fortissima Car Mariae, for the true children of this heavenly Mother. This tower is strong, so well fortified with defensive and offensive weapons that the soldiers fighting under the banner of Mary, leader of the armies of the Most High, find there a mighty defence against the heaviest assaults of hell. Yes, her mighty Heart is more formidable to the enemies of her children than any army terrible in battle. Terribilis ut castrorum acies ordinata. (17)

Let us, then, withdraw into this invincible fortress; let us entrench ourselves in the impregnable tower of Mary. May we ever dwell there, and never depart from its walls.

But let us remember that the Heart of Mary is a tower of ivory, turris eburnea, which does not suffer within its Precincts anything defiled and unclean. It is the tower of David, open only to those who follow the meekness of Jesus Christ, the true David. It is a tower built and adorned with all kinds of precious stones: Turris Jerusalem gemmis aedificabuntur, (18) that is, with perfections of every kind. He who seeks to dwell therein must renounce sin and imperfection; he must undertake wholeheartedly the practice of every Christian virtue.

St. Gregory of Nyssa states that the Tables of the Mosaic Law kept in the temple of Solomon were a figure symbolic of the hearts of the Saints. (19) Hence, St. John Chrysostom affirms that the Heart of St. Paul was the table of the Holy Spirit and the book of charity, a living book in which divine charity inscribed with letters of gold the evangelical law of love and charity. (20)

Now, if the hearts of the Saints are real tables of the evangelical law, what shall we say of the holy Heart of the Queen of Saints, who is the Mother of the Saint of saints? Her glorious Heart is the first and holiest table of the Christian law. It is not made of stone, but of gold, or better still, of diamond; it is not dead but living; not breakable like the tables of Moses but indestructible. On it the Holy Ghost, the finger of God, has written and engraved in golden letters, not merely the will of God and His laws, but all the counsels, maxims and truths of the gospel as well. They are so deeply engraved that the united forces of hell and of earth could more easily snatch the sun from the sky and destroy the world than remove a single iota or tarnish a single letter of this sacred writing.

Mary's incomparable Heart is not only the true table of God's Law, but also a living and admirable book in which the Holy Ghost has stamped all the mysteries of the Deity, all the secrets of eternity, every Christian law, each maxim of the gospel and all the truths drawn by the Son of God from the Heart of the Almighty Father and poured forth abundantly in the Heart of His Immaculate Mother. St. Augustine (21) assures us that the books mentioned in the twentieth chapter of the Apocalypse represent the hearts of the Saints, in which are engraved God's will and His laws; how much more truly must this be said of the most holy Heart of the Mother of Him who is holiness personified?

The Propitiatory (22) is regarded as another figure symbolic of the glory

ous Virgin because by her intercession the flame of God's wrath was extinguished, His Divine Majesty was turned to look upon mankind with favor and His infinite mercy moved Him to compassion for our infirmities. For this reason St. Ildephonsus calls the Mother of Grace; Propitatio humanae salutis. "The propitiation of man's salvation." (23) St. Andrew of Crete styles Mary: Universi mundi commune propitiatorium. "The universal propitiatory of the entire world." (24) Lastly, St. Epiphanius proclaims her: Admirandum propitiatorium. "Admirable propitiatory." (25)

Now this qualification applies most properly and principally to her merciful Heart. It is this gentle Heart which is the admirable Propitiatory. Whence does her compassion for sinners spring, if not from her Heart full of mercy? What urged Mary to become our advocate before the throne of divine justice, if not the loving kindness of her Heart? What could be more symbolic of Our Lady's holy companionship with the angels than the golden cherubim designed to guard the Propitiatory?

St. Augustine, (26) St. Gregory the Great, (27) and several other Fathers say that the Altar of Holocausts also symbolized the hearts of all the Saints, who are the real altars on which God is honored by the spiritual sacrifices offered day and night to His Divine Majesty. Yet much more truly can this be said of the Holy Heart of Mary. "Her Heart is the true altar of holocaust," says the illustrious John Gerson, "and on it the sacred fire of divine love blazed day and night." (28)

The Mother of the Sovereign Priest constantly offered to God sacrifices of love, praise, thanksgiving, expiation for the sins of the world and every possible sacrifice. On the altar of her Heart Mary sanctified to God all the things of the world and every creature of the universe as so many different victims. She sacrificed her being, life, body, soul, all her thoughts, words and actions, the employment of her senses and faculties, and in general, all that she was, all that she possessed and every power of her soul. She offered to the Divine Majesty the very sacrifice that her Son Jesus Christ offered on Calvary. Our adorable Saviour offered Himself to the Eternal Father only once on the altar of the Cross, but His holy Mother immolated Him ten thousand times on the altar of her pure Heart.

What veneration is then due to this sacred altar! Be thou blessed, O God of my heart, for having consecrated this most worthy altar to the glory of thy most adorable majesty. Deign to transform our cold hearts into glowing altars on which we may offer Thee an unremitting sacrifice of praise and love.

MARY'S HEART, THE FIERY FURNACE OF BABYLON

ANOTHER symbolic picture of the admirable Heart of the most Holy Mother of God is the miraculous furnace described in the third chapter of the Prophet Daniel. St. John Damascene and many other holy Doctors affirm that the fiery furnace was a figure of the sinless Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary and its burning fire a reflection of the heavenly fire in the holy breast of the Mother of Fair Love. Here are St. John Damascene's words: "Is it not true," he says addressing Our Lady, "that this furnace, filled with a fire at once burning and refreshing, was a faithful image of thee and an excellent picture of the divine and eternal fire dwelling within thee?" (1)

But you may well ask how anything so noble and holy as the Heart of the Queen of Heaven could be represented by the furnace of Babylon, an instrument of torture designed by the wickedness and cruelty of King Nabuchodonosor? Remember that the three young men, Sidrach, Misach and Abdenago, thrown into the furnace to be burnt to ashes, belonged to the people of Israel, and everything that happened to the Israelites was a figure and a foreshadowing of the great miracles that were to be fulfilled in Christianity, and in the Father and Mother of Christians, "All these things happened to them in figure." (2) Remember also that St. Augustine (3) and St. Gregory the Great (4) tell us that Sacred Scripture mentions many objects which though profane and wicked in themselves, are nevertheless a representation of good and holy thoughts.

What can be more profane than a malodorous he-goat or a venomous snake? Yet the Holy Ghost employs them both to represent the Lamb of God laden with the sins of the world. (5) What could be worse and more reprehensible than the sensual and inordinate love of King Solomon for strange women or the immoral marriages he contracted, which were absolutely forbidden by God's law? The Holy Spirit makes of them, nevertheless, a figure of the adorable love of the King of Angels for sinful souls, and of the divine union His infinite goodness seeks to contract with the hearts of men. (6) What resemblance can we find between an Egyptian woman, dark like all those of her race, in contrast to the Jews, as she herself admits: "I am black," (7) and the peerless Queen of all women? The Egyptian woman springing from a barbarous and heathen people, was the daughter of an infidel and idolatrous king, and the spouse of one who recognized the disorders of his dissolute life, confessing himself to be the most foolish of men; (8) Mary was fair as the moon, bright as the sun, born of God's chosen people, the daughter of King David, the Spouse of the King of Kings, the Mother of God Himself. Nevertheless, the Sacred Canticle, written under the inspiration of the Spirit of God, presents the Egyptian queen to us as an image and likeness of the Virgin Mother? (9)

A passionate lover delights to write the name of his beloved and sketch her image wherever he happens to be, not only on paper or canvas, but also on trees, stones and whatever else comes under his hand. Similarly, the incomprehensible love of God, Father and Spouse of the most perfect and lovable Virgin Mary, causes Him to take pleasure in picturing her Heart even in the burning furnace of Babylon.

Certainly that furnace was the product of Nabuchodonosor's impious rage, but divine Providence, without whose order and permission nothing can happen, designated it to show the extent of the power of God and the marvels of His goodness, through the miraculous protection given to His faithful friends. God also willed that the fiery furnace should give us a glorious picture of the ardent Heart of the Queen of Heaven, which is indeed a furnace of love and charity.

In the furnace of Babylon we behold many marvels wrought by God's omnipotence. Consider that in the midst of the furnace filled with fire and flame, there should be a refreshing wind, likened to fragrant dew. "The angel made the midst of the furnace like the blowing of a wind bringing dew." (10) What a marvel it is to behold a burning furnace whose flames protect those inside its crucible, while they destroy those who remain outside! What a miracle to see fire comforting and refreshing those cast into the sevenfold beat of its flames, while burning to death those standing at a safe distance! How miraculous for three young men to survive in a furnace whose flames leapt to a height of forty-nine cubits, not suffering injury but walking about with joy as in a place of delight! The three gladly sang the praises of Almighty God and emerged from their ordeal with greater strength and vigor than before while the fire could not so much as singe a single fibre of their clothing. Great indeed are the marvels to be found in Babylon's furnace; yet they merely foreshadow the miracles which we find in the furnace of the glowing Heart of the Queen of Angels.

It is a great miracle to witness fire and water subsisting side by side in the furnace of Nabuchodonosor. The fire did not turn the cooling water into steam nor did the water quench the burning beat of the fire. What manner of fire is this? It is the fire of divine love burning in the Virginal Heart of Mary. What is the cooling dew? It is the water of tribulation, which so often flooded the holy Heart of the Mother of Sorrows. The fire of love did not dry up the waters of affliction; and the waters of tribulation were unable, I shall not say to extinguish, but even to diminish in the least degree the divine ardor of that heavenly fire: "Many waters cannot quench charity." (11) On the contrary, the excess of love produced the abundance of affliction and the waters of tribulation were like inflammable liquids that augmented still further the fire of her love.

Is it not a great miracle to see a fire possessing at once the virtue of fire and the properties of water? Love has the virtue of fire, that it may unceasingly inflame the Virgin Mother's purest Heart with its sacred ardour, and also the properties of water, as it extinguishes entirely the fire of self-love and of attachment to vain and perishable things.

Is it not a great miracle to behold a fire refreshing, consoling and fining with joy the children of the Mother of God, while it pursues, burns, devours its enemies? Her virginal Heart, which is ablaze with love for her true children, directs the fire and flame of its anger against those who injure or scandalize her loved ones.

Only three Hebrew boys were thrown into the furnace of Babylon, but all children of the admirable Mother of God can enter the furnace of her Heart and dwell there as in a paradise of delights where they praise and glorify God forever in company with their heavenly Mother, and their hearts are filled with joy and consolation. "Me dwelling in thee is as it were of all rejoicing," (12) O holy Mother of God.

Three Hebrew children walked safely in the first furnace; yet the prophet saw there four, and the fourth was like the Son of God. "The form of the fourth is like the Son of God." (13) Actually it was an angel, representing, according to Daniel, the Only-begotten Son of God in the Babylonian furnace, but this same Son of God resides and dwells in person in the glowing Heart of His most holy Mother. He is all fire and flame of love and charity. "The Lord thy God is a consuming fire." (14) He possesses a throne of fire. "His throne like flames of fire," (15) and a "fiery chariot." (16) In like manner, He wills to have a dwelling of fire and flame in the Heart of His most worthy Mother. This dwelling-place was depicted in the words: "The house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame," (17) which means that the abode of Jesus Christ, prefigured by Jacob and Joseph, shall be an abode of flaming fire.

We also notice that the three young men were bound hand and foot when thrown into the furnace, but immediately their bonds were consumed by the fire and they were freed within the furnace. Come, come, poor slaves of sin and of the world! Come, slaves of passion, of self-love and self-will, chained in the irons and fetters of Babylon! Fear not to plunge into our sacred furnace!

These flames will not harm you; instead they will destroy your fetters and establish you in the holy liberty of the children of God and of His loving Mother. They will inflame your hearts with the fire of heavenly love, they will transform them into divine fire itself. Your hearts will become holy furnaces heated seven times with the fire and flames that leap from the Heart of your heavenly Mother. Your hearts must become furnaces of eternal love, if they would avoid being ranked with the miserable hearts of the wicked against whom the terrible sentence was uttered: "Thou shalt make them as an oven of fire, in the time of thy anger." whom Thou didst create to love Thee, whose obligations to love Thee are boundless, yet who have loved everything but Thee, and have even kindled fires of insult and heaped outrages upon "Thee? Thou shalt make of them furnaces of wrath, in the time of Thy terrible vengeance. Thou shalt hurl them into the eternal fire prepared for Satan and his minions, where they will be swallowed, burned and penetrated by the infernal fire. In life these souls would not permit the sweet and radiant flames of Thy holy love to burn within them, so they shall be yielded to the eternal torments of devouring fire in endless hell.

Would you avoid this tragedy, the greatest of all misfortunes? Then give your hearts to your admirable Queen, imploring her to offer them to her beloved Son with the prayer that He may kindle in them the fire He came to spread on earth, the fire He so greatly desires should be lighted. On your part, correspond by removing every obstacle from your hearts, and if this sacred flame is already burning there, make every effort to increase it more and more, by the practice of Christian virtues, the meditation of the gospel and especially the exercise of divine love and charity.

Be not satisfied with doing simply this. Seek to share actively in the ardent desire of the Son of God that the entire world should be illuminated with heavenly fire and to cooperate with him in spreading it everywhere. Nothing could be more agreeable to His Divine Majesty. All Christians who would please God should exert themselves towards this end but more especially should those whom He has chosen to be His cooperators in the salvation of souls. Take, then, a torch in your hand and, if possible, set the entire world afire with love. (19)

If you ask me what this torch should be, I shall answer that is yourself. Each one is a torch. Have you not heard the Holy Ghost say of the Prophet Elias that he rose up like fire, and that his words were like a burning torch? "And Elias the prophet stood up, as a fire: and his word burnt like a torch." (20) And does the Son of God describe St. John the Baptist as "a burning and a shining light"? (21) When speaking through Zacharias of the time at which He shall work great wonders in His Church and in the entire world, God describes the leaders of Juda, namely, the Apostles and the other participants in the fulfilment of His desire to enkindle the earth with the fire of heaven, stating that they shall be like a furnace of fire and a burning torch, consuming and devouring peoples to the right and to the left like fire which devours wood and hay. This means that His disciples will enkindle everything, fusing earthly and carnal-minded men into heavenly and spiritual beings, aglow with love of God and charity towards their neighbor. "In that day I will make the governors of Juda like a furnace of fire amongst wood, and as a firebrand amongst hay; and they shall devour all the people round about, to the right hand, and to the left." (22)

This is what you must become if you profess a particular obligation to work for the salvation of souls. You must be made of fire like Elias, and of flame like St. John the Baptist. Each of you must be a burning furnace, a fiery, radiant torch; aglow within, shining without; ardent before God, and shining before men: ardent in prayer and brilliant in action; ardent with the love of God, and luminous with charity for your neighbor.

But where will you light your torch and obtain the fire which you must kindle in the hearts of men? It must be in the furnace of the Holy Heart of the Mother of Fair Love. To this end, approach the holy furnace of her Heart more frequently with respect and veneration. Concentrate upon the divine fire inflaming her Heart; imitate its all-glowing love and charity and humbly beg of our Mother most merciful that she may kindle in your hearts sparks of the celestial fire which burns in her own.

Having lighted and seized your torch, you will set everything on fire to the right and to the left, that is, you will inflame the hearts of the just, and at the same time set fire to the hearts of sinners through the ardent example of your actions, the bright fervor of your prayers and the light of your teaching.

O divine fire that burns in the noble Heart of our glorious Mother, come, come into the hearts of all men! Extinguish every other fire, destroying whatever would resist Thee. Burn, inflame, set on fire, transform into Thyself the hearts of men that they may become all fire and flames of love for Him Who created them that they might love Him and Him alone! Grant that we may say with St. Augustine and in as holy a frame of mind: "O sacred fire, how sweet and pleasant is thy heat! How intimate and penetrating thy light, how amiable and desirable thy burning coals! Woe to them on whom thou shinest not, to them whom thou dost not burn!" (23) Happy they who are illuminated by the light and burned with thy sacred flame!

Come, then, most holy fire; come, heavenly flames; come divine furnace come, torrents, come flaming floods of the adorable fire of eternal love! Sweep over us and over every rational creature in the world! Burn everything, set all things on fire, that everything may be melted and fused into an eternal fire of love and charity towards Him Who is all love and charity towards us. St. Augustine adds these words: "O fire ever burning and never dying out! O love always ardent and never weakening, inflame my entire being that I may love thee with all my heart."

MARY'S HEART, THE HILL OF CALVARY

LAST in my series of symbolic pictures of the holy Heart of the spotless Virgin I show you Calvary, as it reveals the Sorrows of the crucified Heart of Mary at the time of her Son's Passion.

What is Calvary? It is a mountain, the most important and notable mountain of the Holy Land. What is the Heart of the Mother of God? Is it not also a mountain, the most illustrious mountain of that blessed land referred to in these words of Sacred Scripture: "Lord, thou has blessed the land." (1) This land is the Blessed Virgin Mary, and her Heart is the noblest and highest peak of her body and of her soul.

What is Calvary? It is Mount Moriah on which God commanded Abraham to slay his son, Isaac. The Hebrew rendition of the twenty second chapter of Genesis reads: "Go into the land of Moriah," instead of the usual version: "Go into the land of vision." (2) It is the place where King David raised an altar and offered Sacrifice that God might stop the plague that ravaged his people, and also the site on which Solomon erected the Temple of Jerusalem, for Mount Sion is the same as Mount Moriah, and Calvary is part of the same chain of hills.

We have already seen that Christ, the true Solomon, established His foremost temple and holiest altar in the Heart of the most worthy daughter of Abraham and of David. In this temple, on this altar she immolated, not merely in desire like Abraham, but in very truth, Her dearest and most adorable Son, her Isaac.

What is Calvary? It is the place where the Cross of Jesus was raised. And was the Cross of Salvation not raised first of all in Mary's holy Heart? What is Calvary? It is the place stained with the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ. But Mary's Heart was bathed with It through love and

(2). Gen. 22, 2.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

compassion and the Precious Blood of her beloved Son penetrated and impregnated His Mother far more than it soaked the soil of Calvary.

On Calvary, we behold the thorns that wounded the adorable head of our Saviour, the nails that pierced His hands and feet, the lance that opened His Heart, the ropes that bound Him, the gall and vinegar He was given to drink, and the wounds which covered His body from head to foot. We can see the same wounds in the maternal Heart of His saintly Mother. "The Cross and the nails which crucified the Son's body, crucified the Mother's Heart as well." (3) St. Jerome quotes St. Sophronius, Patriarch of Jerusalem, as saying: "All the wounds which covered the body of Jesus, had their counterpart in Mary's Heart. The whips, the thorns, the nails which pierced and tore the Saviour's body, ran through His holy Mother's Heart and shattered it. Every blow rending the body of the Son had its cruel echo in the Heart of His Mother." (4)

"O my Queen," exclaims St. Bonaventure, "Thou art not only standing near the Cross, but thou art with Thy Son on the Cross; Thou dost suffer, thou art crucified with Him, the only difference being that while He suffers in His body, thou dost suffer in thy loving Heart. All the wounds scattered over His body are united in thy Heart, because the sword of sorrow has pierced thy very soul. Thy virginal Heart, O my sovereign Lady, is wounded by the lance, pierced by the nails and thorns, heaped with opprobrium, ignominy and imprecations, saturated with vinegar and gall. Why wouldst thou, most honored Lady, be immolated for us? Is not our Saviour's Passion sufficient for our salvation? Must the mother also be crucified with her Son? O sweetest Heart, so full of love, must thou then be changed into bitter sorrow? I seek to behold thy loving Heart, my dearest Mistress, but it seems to have vanished and in its place I find only the bitterness of gall, myrrh and absinth. I seek the Mother of God and I find only thorns, nails, a lance, a sponge and vinegar. I look for Mary on the Cross, and I see only spittle, insults, lashes and wounds, so truly has she been overwhelmed by outrages." (5)

I see my Redeemer crucified, suffering, agonizing, dying and finally dead on Calvary. I also behold His sorrows, suffering, agony and death in His Blessed Mother's Heart. "She had lived of her Son's life, and when He died on the Cross, she died with Him," says a holy Premonstratensian Abbot.(6) "Both Mother and Son were nailed to the Cross, the Son in the body, the Mother in her Heart," exclaims St. Lawrence Justinian,(7) the sainted Patriarch of Venice. "Could not Mary die in her Heart, as Jesus died in His body?" asks St. Bernard.(8)

Among the great miracles wrought by Our Saviour on Calvary the most remarkable, according to St. Augustine, was the miracle of goodness and charity on behalf of His executioners, when He besought His Heavenly Father to forgive them. At the same time, living in His holy Mother's heart, He communicated to her the charity which filled Himself, inducing her to imitate His sublime example of mercy. We hear His kind voice pleading with the all-just Father, and then we seem to hear the echo of His words in the Heart of His holy Mother repeating: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."(9)

On Calvary, the only Son of Mary gave us an inestimable gift, when in the excess of His incomprehensible goodness He addressed Himself to each one of us in the person of St. John and speaking of His holy Mother, said to us: "Behold thy Mother:(10) And from Calvary, the Mother of Jesus, whose sentiments and will are one with those of her beloved Son, gives herself to us to be our Mother with the same Heart and with an equal love. Having enshrined the words of her Son in her maternal Heart, she echoes them again, and adopts each one of us in particular. Thus. both Jesus and Mary my to us: "Behold thy Mother."

On our part, we should unite with Jesus in saying to this supremely good Mother: "Behold thy Son." Yes, O Mary, each one of us is thy child, who desires to love, honor and imitate thee as His Mother. Vouchsafe to look upon us, O most amiable Mother, and to love, protect, guide and treat us as thy children in spite of our extreme unworthiness.

We also behold on Calvary the author of life grown cold in death and we see the gloom of the sepulchre in the garden of Joseph of Arimathea, a part of Calvary's hill. But we can behold Him buried in the Heart of His loving Mother more truly than in the tomb. Her marvellous Heart is a living and life-giving tomb. Having cooperated in the Incarnation of the Son of God by the ardor of her love, the fervor of her desires and the power of her prayers, Mary's Heart also contributed to His resurrection, as we shall explain further on. Jesus arose in the sepulchre, but left it immediately.

He likewise came back to life in Mary's Heart, but there He remained and will remain forever. Of this living sepulchre, rather than of the inanimate tomb, can we say with good reason: "And his sepulchre shall be glorious," (11) in the sight of angels and men, for time and for all eternity.

Finally, it was on Calvary that our Redeemer accomplished and consummated the work of our salvation, in which His Mother's Heart cooperated so faithfully.

You see therefore that Calvary is a most excellent picture of the admirable Heart of the Mother of our Crucified Redeemer. Do you wish your own heart to bear some faint resemblance to the Heart of your heavenly Mother? Then plant in its center the Cross of Christ, her Son: or better still, implore her to obtain for you the grace that Our Lord Himself may fix it there, and engrave on your heart a great love for His Holy Cross. May His love make you embrace, cherish and bear all the crosses that will be sent to you, in a spirit of humility, patience and submission to the Divine Will, and all the holy dispositions with which the Son of Mary and the Mother of Jesus carried their heavy cross.

These symbolic pictures are but twelve of the many figures by which the Eternal Father has illustrated for us the glory of the admirable Heart of Mary. I have chosen them to reveal how unmistakably is the Divine Heart of God the first author and origin of devotion to the virginal Heart of the Mother of His beloved Son. Almighty God enriched the heart of Mary with surpassing beauty and incomparable treasures so that our hearts would be stirred to venerate and love her with fitting devotion. Having begun to study the tributes of the Most High to His immaculate handmaid, how can we possibly refrain from pouring out our admiration and honour of Mary, and our humble praise of God for the countless favours He has heaped upon her Admirable Heart?

O Divine Painter, grant us the grace to praise and thank Thee for having, in these twelve pictures, portrayed the heart of our glorious Queen and Mother in symbols so colorful, rich and expressive, that even such as we can learn to understand, to love and to imitate her. We implore Thee now to take our hearts and make each one of them yet another symbol to depict forever some measure of the love, humility and purity of the other virtues of Thy infinite glory as they are manifested so magnificently in the Heart of Mary, Mother most admirable.

CHAPTER I***

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, TEACHER OF THE DEVOT- TION TO THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

WE HAVE every reason to consider the adorable Heart of Jesus as the second foundation of the devotion to the admirable Heart of Mary. The supremely ardent love for the Heart of His dearest Mother, burning in the Sacred Heart of Jesus, makes Him the herald of this devotion, which He teaches to us both by word and example.

Would you know how the Only-begotten Son of God, who is also the Son of Mary, exhorts us to venerate His glorious Mother's loving Heart? Listen to what He revealed in 1300 to St. Mechtilde, one of the most glorious daughters of St. Benedict, whose writings have been approved by learned and devout doctors. One day during Advent, as the Saint sought to salute the Mother of God in a most pleasing manner, Our Lord Himself deigned to instruct her as follows:

"Thou shalt salute my holy Mother's virginal Heart as an ocean replete with heavenly grace and a treasure filled with myriad blessings for mankind.

"Thou shalt honor it as the purest Heart after mine own because she was the first to take the vow of chastity.

(*). Comprising Chapters I and 2 of the original edition.

106 - THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

"Thou shalt hail it as the humblest Heart of any simple creature, for her humility drew me from my Father's bosom and rendered her worthy to conceive me in her chaste womb by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"Thou shalt reverence her Heart as supremely devout and most ardent in its desire for my Incarnation and birth on earth, because the fervor of her desires and of her longing attracted me to her and became the cause of man's salvation.

"Thou shalt honor her Heart as most glowingly inflamed with love for God and man. Thou shalt salute it as the wisest and most prudent, for she kept in her Heart the memory of each event of my childhood, youth and adult life and made a most holy use of this remembrance.

"Thou shalt greet her Heart as the most faithful, for she not only consented to permit me, her only Son, to be sacrificed, but she also offered me to my Eternal Father as a sacrifice for the redemption of the world.

"Thou shalt salute her Heart as the most vigilant and most zealous for the interests of the nascent Church, for the care she took to pray unceasingly could not be disregarded.

"Thou shalt glorify her Heart as raised to the highest degree of uninterrupted contemplation, for no tongue can worthily speak of the graces and favors that men owe to the power of her intercession." (1)

Thus did Our Lord speak to St. Mechtilde, revealing clearly how pleasing to His Divine Majesty is the devotion to His Blessed Mother's Holy Heart and how profitable to those who practise it.

But if we shall further lend our ears to Jesus, the great teacher of the devotion to Mary's august Heart, He will impart to us many other edifying and consoling truths. Let us listen.

I alone, Our Lord tells us, can worthily proclaim the devotion which the hearts of all who love me shall cultivate towards the Heart of my holy Mother, for I am the source and principle of all the great and marvellous qualities to be found in this abyss of wonders, and I alone have a perfect knowledge of the eminent perfections of her Heart.

I am the eldest Son of this maternal Heart and am therefore filled with the most tender and filial love for it. I am the first-born of my most worthy Mother's incomparable Heart, as I am the first fruit of the adorable Heart of my Eternal Father. My admirable Mother formed me and carried me in her Heart more holily, longer and sooner than in her womb. (2) For the Sanctity of her blessed bosom has its origin in the charity and purity of her most holy Heart, and she became worthy to form me.

to bear me in her womb because by humility, purity and love she first formed and carried me in her Heart. She bore me in her bosom for nine months only, but she always held me and will forever hold me in her Heart. I am, therefore, in a way, more truly the fruit of her Heart than of her womb.

O admirable mystery! Her incomparable Heart is, among created beings, the masterpiece of my Almighty Goodness; yet by an unfathomable miracle I am myself the excellent product of her humility, whereby she drew me from my Father's adorable bosom, where I was born before all ages began, that I might be born of my virginal Mother in the fulness of time.

I have always been and shall forever be the most singular object of all the affections of her Holy Heart, as she herself has always been and will forever be, after my Eternal Father, the first object of my love.

All who truly love me must, therefore, be particularly zealous in honoring and teaching others to honor the Heart that I love more and that gives me greater glory and love than the hearts of all the angels and men together.

For all these reasons, I myself have willed to be the teacher of this devotion practised by many of my saints during the past centuries, a devotion still observed in many churches today; and I personally taught the first principles of this devotion to St. Mechtilde.

It is I, my dearest children, who have made it flourish again in your hearts. I am now addressing those who have a special veneration for the most worthy Heart of my virginal Mother. I myself have rooted in your hearts your ardent desire of honoring Her Heart as I wish it to be honored.

I know that, as her Heart is the first object of the love of my Heart, after the Eternal Father, it is likewise, after God, the first object of your most tender and holy affection. Therefore have I given it to you to be an inexhaustible fountain of blessings in your midst.

I have given my Mother's Heart to you as a divine Sun to enlighten you through the darkness of the world, to warm you in the frosts of mortal life, to gladden and to comfort you in the sorrows, pains and miseries of earth, and to vivify and strengthen you against the decline and weakness of human frailty.

I have given her Heart to you as a beautiful mirror, into which you should often gaze in order to see the stains that tarnish your Souls, so that you may cleanse them. With the aid of this celestial mirror, you should array your Souls with becoming ornaments that they may become pleasing in the sight of my divine majesty.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

I have given the Heart of My Mother to you as an unshakeable tower and impregnable stronghold in which you may take refuge and seek shelter against the machinations of the enemies of your salvation.

I have given it to you as a burning furnace of divine love into which you are to throw yourselves and be consumed, that you may turn into fire and flames of love for Him who is all fire and flaming love for you.

I have given her Heart to you as a perfect pattern of the respect, love and obedience that you must entertain for those who hold God's place on earth. I have given it to you as a fountain of wine, milk and honey, whence you may draw the charity, kindness and meekness with which you should treat one another.

I have given her Heart to you as a heavenly chronicle and book of life, that you may study its pages unceasingly, and learn to know perfectly and to love ardently the ravishing beauty of those Christian virtues whose faithful practice gives eternal life. But what you should learn above all from this book are the marvellous merits of holy humility and the means to practice it, so as to crush in your hearts the cursed serpent of pride and vanity that wreaks such havoc, not only in the Souls of children of perdition, but in my own children's hearts as well.

I have given the Heart of my incomparable Mother to you as a holy Rule that will enable you to become saints, if you faithfully observe it. It is the rule of the divine life you should lead, of the high qualities and habits you must assume, of the evangelical teachings you are to follow. By this rule you must measure the holiness that should permeate all your actions, the Sentiments and affections that should fill your hearts. It is the rule of the love and hatred, the joy and sorrow, the desires and fears that must be yours, if you are to please me and sanctify yourselves.

I have given her Heart to you as a vast ocean of graces of every kind, from which you must draw the graces you need at every hour, every moment, every place and every occasion, to avoid the manifold snares of Satan, which cover the entire earth, and to be able to Serve God in justice and holiness all the days of your lives.

I have given her Heart to you as a precious vessel, filled with manna from heaven and the nectar of paradise, to nourish your hearts with the meat of the angels, even in this world, and so to inebriate them with heavenly wine, that the things of the earth and time may be forgotten entirely and the sole delight of your hearts rest in those things which are heavenly and eternal. Such was always the life of my holy Mother, who is also your beloved Mother, and such were the affections of her Holy Heart.

I have bestowed upon you the royal Heart of your great Queen to be regent of your hearts, to rule and govern them according to the most adorable will of my heavenly Father that you may be entirely fashioned according to His Heart.

I have likewise given you the admirable Heart of my most worthy Mother, which is identified with my own Heart, that it may be your true Heart as well; that my children may possess only one Heart with their Mother, and my members the same Heart as their Head. Thus you may serve, adore and love God with a Heart worthy of His infinite goodness: Corde magno et animo volenti, ( 3 ) that is, with an immense and measureless Heart, with a Heart all pure and holy, so that you may sing His divine praises and accomplish all your actions in the spirit, love, humility and all the holy dispositions of her admirable Heart. But in order to make this come true, you must renounce entirely your own heart, that is, your mind, your will and your love of self. Strive, therefore, to rid yourself of your earthly heart that is depraved and wicked, and you shall receive an entirely heavenly, holy and divine Heart.

I have finally given this marvellous Heart as an inestimable treasure containing every possible blessing. It is for you, beloved children, to engrave in your hearts a high esteem, a profound respect and a particular affection for so rich a treasure, and to preserve it jealously by the continuation and increase of your veneration for a Heart so holy and amiable.

It is to encourage you to do so that I have said these things. Set down my words in your hearts and practise them faithfully. In this way, you will become the true children of my holy Mother's Heart, and you will live according to my own. My eyes and my Heart shall ever watch over your necessities. I will carry you in my innermost Heart. You will yourselves be my Heart, my joy and my delight. I will love you as my own Heart, and I will prepare a glorious habitation for you throughout eternity in my Heart and in the Heart of my blessed Mother, which is one with my own. You shall abide forever in our Hearts, and live by their life, you shall possess all the treasures enclosed in our Hearts, and be immersed and buried in their joys. Our Hearts shall be your paradise, the life of your life, the Heart of your heart.

In the love of these Hearts, or rather, this one Heart, you will eternally love, bless and glorify my holy Mother and the Sovereign monarch of all hearts, which is the adorable Heart of the most Holy Trinity. May It be forever praised, adored, and loved by all the hearts of angels and of men

After listening to the divine words of Our Divine Saviour encouraging us to love and honor the most amiable Heart of His Blessed Mother, we shall now contemplate the operations of His adorable Heart towards the maternal Heart of Mary, whereby He teaches us even more effectively than by His eloquent words. Oh, who could worthily describe the least spark of the Divine Heart of Jesus, that furnace of love, towards the Heart of His admirable Mother?

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Our Lord has so loved and honored her maternal Heart that He has exalted it above all the hearts of the universe, and made it the most august empire of His glory and the glorious triumph of His love. He has so loved and honored her Heart as to constitute it a Heaven higher and more brilliant than all the heavens in which He is glorified and loved more ardently than in the empyrean heaven.

God has loved and honored His Mother to such an extent that from the first instant in which He gave her blessed Heart its being, He worked in it countless great miracles, imparting the most abundant communication of His own divine perfections, and rendering it most worthy, noble, perfect, mighty, wise, holy, just, merciful, kind, liberal; He has made it the richest, happiest, most glorious, most amiable and most admirable of all hearts.

To understand this perfectly, you must recall that St. Dionysius teaches us that divine love reflects the divine attributes in the hearts of the angels as in so many beautiful mirrors, according to the nine Orders of the blessed Spirits. (4)

Now what Divine Love accomplishes in angelic hearts, Mary's only Son, so filled with love and tenderness for His beloved Mother, has certainly accomplished in her Heart also but in a far more excellent manner. He gathers all the perfections of His divinity, divided as it were among the Orders of the angels, and brings them together in the Heart of the august Queen of all angels. It is fitting that, having chosen Mary to be His Mother, and having become her Son, Our Lord should establish such a perfect resemblance between Mother and Son. The Divine Son seeks to render her similar to Himself in His divinity, just as His exalted Mother caused Him to resemble her in His humanity. As the Eternal Father unceasingly communicates all the divine attributes to His Only-begotten Son with such fullness that He is called the figure and type of His substance and the image of the invisible God, similarly the Son makes His Mother's virginal Heart participate in all the perfections He Himself received from His Heavenly Father, with such plenitude that her most blessed Heart bears a marvellous resemblance to all the excellent qualities found in our adorable Saviour.

THE HEART OF GOD THE SON

Yes, the incomparable Heart of Mary, Mother of our Redeemer, is a most precious and radiant mirror in which Jesus, the eternal Sun, reflects Himself in perfect manner, with all His beauties and perfections, and thereby renders her holy Heart so admirable, so amiable and so praiseworthy that it should be, next to the God-Man, the principal object of our devotion on earth, even as it is the first object of veneration for the happy inhabitants of heaven.

CHAPTER 11

SOME ESSENTIAL DIVINE PERFECTIONS(1) MIRRORED
IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Among His countless words in praise of the most Blessed Virgin Mary, the Holy Ghost honors His spotless Bride with the glorious tribute of proclaiming that she is clothed with the Sun: "A woman clothed with the Sun." (2) What is this Sun? It is the Sun of Divinity and of the divine perfections, according to the explanation of Several holy Fathers. Our Lady is not merely clothed with and surrounded by this Sun; she is completely filled and penetrated by it. St. Andrew of Crete praises the incomparable Virgin Mary with appropriate dignity when he calls her "the compendium of God's incomprehensible perfections." (3)

Now if this is true of the Blessed Virgin's sacred person, it is still more true of her holy Heart, the noblest part of her being, the source and sanctuary of the virtues of humility, obedience and charity which elevate her to the sublime and divine state that she personally revealed to St. Brigid. (4) Her glowing Heart is the perfect expression and marvellous compendium of all the attributes of the Divine Essence. It is the beautiful mirror in which the ardent love of Jesus Christ for His most amiable Mother reflects so excellently all the perfections of His divinity and His humanity.

In the first place, His divine love most perfectly draws its own image in His Mother's amiable Heart. Next to the infinite love burning in the immense furnace of the adorable Heart of Jesus, there never was and never shall be a love so strong, exalted, extensive, ardent and pure, as the love which always possessed, filled and inflamed the virginal Heart of

(1). The essential perfections or attributes of God are those which belong to the integrity of the Divine Essence or Nature. Other attributes expressing a relation between creatures and God, such as Creator, Redeemer and Rewarder, are not essential because these relations are not in God but outside Him. Cf. His Mother. This all compassing love in turn stamps upon her a perfect image of all the other divine attributes.

Her admirable Heart is, first of all, a living image of divine Unity. God is alone and unique in the infinite eminence of all His grandeurs. He is the only mighty, (5) the only good, (6) the only wise, (7) merciful (8) just, (9) immortal and blessed Being, the King of kings and the Lord of lords. (10) Likewise there is in the whole universe only one Heart of the one Mother of God, unique in dignity, excellence and perfections. It surpasses in power, wisdom, goodness, Mercy, piety, love, charity and every other virtue and eminent quality the most perfect heart of any angel or saint.

The unique Heart of Our Lady never knew any love other than the purest love of God. It never suffered from the multiplicity of superfluous thoughts, aimless desires and vain affections which usually fill and divide the miserable hearts of the children of Adam. Her heart held one thought, one purpose, one will, one intention, one single affection and one desire only: to please God and to fulfil in all things and everywhere His adorable will. Thus did this heavenly Spouse wound, ravish and possess completely the Heart of her adorable Bridegroom, as He Himself declares: "Thou has wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse: thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes, and with one hair of thy neck," (11) that is, by loving and seeking me in all things, and in having in thy Heart but one thought, intention and affection, to do everywhere and at all times the things that are most pleasing to me.

The admirable Heart of our great Queen bears a true resemblance to divine simplicity. Duplicity, disguise, deceit, falsehood, curiosity, singularity, worldly wisdom, mundane prudence, the self-love which prompts so many faulty thoughts and reflections concerning ourselves and our actions, these and all other things contrary to holy simplicity never had the least part in the Heart of the heavenly Dove. She was always filled, possessed and animated by the spirit of truth, sincerity, candor and simplicity, that her Son bade us follow when He said: "Be ye . . . as simple as doves." (12)

The incomparable Heart of the Mother of God enjoys marvellous participation in and resemblance to the infinity and incomprehensibility of God Himself, because the almost infinite dignity of the Mother of God ennobles and raises to the highest degree even the smallest details concerning her. This is particularly true of her incomparable Heart, the source of innumerable blessings and the principle of all that is great in her, loaded with numberless gifts and heavenly graces. St. Bernardine of Siena tells us that when Our Lady became the Mother of God she was raised to an almost infinite dignity, which rendereth her like unto God, as she is the Mother of the Son whose Father is Almighty God. This miracle was accomplished by the well-nigh infinite graces, and perfections bestowed upon her, graces so excellent and sublime that only God can know perfectly their boundless extent. (13)

Mary's admirable Heart also received an abundant communication of the immensity, of God, a singular faculty to express His immeasurability. Let us listen to St. Bonaventure. "O Mary," says the Seraphic Doctor, "I behold in thee an immense grandeur and capacity. Tu Maria immensissima. I see in thee three kinds of immensity. The first is the immensity of thy blessed womb, which enclosed Him who is immense and infinite, whom the Heavens and the entire universe cannot contain. The second is the immensity of thy mind and heart, for thy virginal Heart is more vastly immense than thy sacred womb. The third is the immensity of thy grace and charity, because thy Heart being immense, replete with grace and charity, the charity and grace that fill it must necessarily be immense." (14)

Yes, Mother of Fair Love, thy charity knows no bounds or measure; it not only reaches all ages, all places and everything that God has made, but it is so vast and great that it would encompass a countless number of worlds!

The most constant Heart of the Queen of Angels is likewise an excellent representation of divine stability and immutability. It remained always steadfast, firm, unalterable and resolute in its perfect love of God and all the holy dispositions which render a heart entirely pleasing to God.

"O my Jesus, I beseech Thee, by the invariable love which the maculate Heart of Mary has always borne and will forever bear to Thee, deign so to establish and strengthen our hearts in Thy holy love that we may truly my with St. Paul: "Who then shall separate us from the love of Christ? . . . Neither death nor life . . . nor any . . . creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." (15)

The holy Heart of our great Princess is a beautiful representation of the eternity of God, not only because her affections were always entirely free from temporal attachments and securely fixed upon eternal things, but also because Mary was filled with the spirit of prophecy, which is a participation in the Eternity that renders all things present in the sight of the divine Majesty of God. God communicated this divine perfection to many Saints, so we cannot doubt that the Queen of all Saints also participated highly in this privilege, as she possessed eminently all the gifts and graces that God has bestowed on other Saints. St. Albert the Great (16) says that whoever loves the most amiable Mother of God, must hold it for an infallible rule that whatever there is of goodness and beauty in all the other Saints is to be found in Our Lady in a still higher degree; nay, that it is through her intercession that the other Saints have received their great endowments. Therefore does the Holy Ghost give Our Lady the name and title of Prophetess saying: "I went to the prophetess." (17) St. Basil (18) and many other saints refer these words to Mary.

The blessed Heart of the Queen of Heaven displays a perfect imitation of the plenitude and self-sufficiency of God, who bears the name of Saddai, meaning precisely self-sufficient. (19) Almighty God has need of nothing, being filled with every good. The Son of God, speaking to His Father, exclaims: «Thou art my God, for thou hast no need of my goods.» (20) In like manner, the virginal Heart of the Mother of God, loving God alone, being always free and empty of every alien affection, was constantly filled with God much more perfectly than the Ephesians, to whom St. Paul wrote that he bowed his knees to the Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ to obtain for them the grace that they might «be filled unto all the fulness of God.» (21)

The blessed Heart of Our Lady never desired, sought or found any delight or satisfaction outside of God. Her Heart always enjoyed imperturbable rest and peace because being filled to capacity with the plenitude of God, it remained always fully satisfied and incomparably happier and content than the heart of a man possessing a million possible worlds.

Consider well, dear reader, how perfectly the Admirable Heart of your Queen fulfils the mandate to "seek but one thing" and to make God her portion and her heritage for ever. To be happy, give and offer your heart constantly, exclaiming with Mary, St. Thomas and St. Francis: "My God and my All."

PURITY AND SANCTITY OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

IN THIS Chapter I shall show how Mary's Heart bears a striking resemblance to divine purity and sanctity. The most pure and holy Heart of Our Lady is a living image of those two adorable perfections, which are one and the same, for St. Dionysius tells us that sanctity is perfect purity,<sup>(1)</sup> purity meaning freedom from the slightest imperfection.

The most holy Heart of Mary is indeed an excellent image of divine purity and holiness. Not only was her most pure and holy Heart always far removed from every kind of sin, but it was entirely free from attachment to created things, and intimately united to God by its pure and holy love for Him together with the eminent practice of all the other virtues which Mary's Heart possessed in so high a degree. The Queen of Virtues is called by St. John Damascene "the abode and the sanctuary of all virtues." (2) Even though Our Lady dwelt for years in this world full of filth and abomination, poisoned by the venom of sin, and among wicked and perfidious Jews, her most holy Heart never contracted the least stain or blemish, was never attached by an inordinate affection to any creature nor even to God's gifts and graces. The Blessed Virgin remained always intimately united to God, as though nothing else existed save God and herself. Thus were the divine words most perfectly fulfilled in her divine Heart: «Let my heart be undefiled in thy justifications,»<sup>(3)</sup> that is, let my heart be immaculate by its union and adherence to 'my divine Will, which justifies, sanctifies and even deifies the hearts that love it and perfectly follow it.

The most holy Heart of the Queen of all Saints remained forever immaculate, preserved in eminent purity and holiness, and entirely filled with the purity and sanctity of God Himself. Her being was transformed and submerged in divine purity and holiness, to the surpassing extent that her Heart merited to obtain the world's salvation. As St. Anselm expresses it: "The pure sanctity and holy purity of Mary's devout Heart, surpassing by far the purity and sanctity of all other creatures, merited for her the sublime dignity of becoming the Restorer of the world wrapped in perdition."<sup>(4)</sup>

If you would find a place in the sanctuary of Mary's admirable Heart, which so perfectly mirrors the purity and sanctity of the Most High, you must purify your heart and realize the meaning of the words: "This is the will of God, your sanctification." (5) These words are not meant just for souls specially consecrated and set apart. You must apply them to yourself, you who bear the name and imprint of Christ and membership in His mystical Body. The sanctification of your spirit, heart and body is more than a commandment; it is a privilege, a participation, granted to you through the purity and sanctity of the heart of Mary, Mother of the Redeemer and your own Mother.

CHAPTER 1V

STRENGTH AND POWER OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

THE principal and most common appellations given to God in Sacred Scripture are the words strong and mighty. He says of Himself: "I am the most mighty God" (1) and "I am God Almighty." (2)

If you should ask how these two attributes differ from each other, I would answer that in God power and strength are one and the same perfection; yet there is some difference between their effects. It belongs to all- powerfulness to work great and admirable wonders and the characteristic of strength is to accomplish all things easily, without pain or fatigue.

Let us now see the strength and power operate in the Heart of our august Queen. I visualize their image engraved on her pure Heart most perfectly. Consider the power which the Heart of the Mother of the Almighty exerts over Him Who has chosen to obey her as His Mother: "And he was subject to them." (3) The maternal authority and power God has given Mary over Himself will never be separated from her divine maternity, for the Son of Mary will never relinquish the nature He assumed in His Beloved Mother's womb and never will He withdraw the privileges He once conferred upon her.

If the heart of the faithful Christian, who believes in Jesus Christ, finds everything possible according to His holy word: "All things are possible to him that believeth," (4) what can be impossible for the maternal Heart of Mary who conceived the Son of God in her sacred womb, gave Him birth, nourished Him, took care of Him in childhood, accompanied Him in all labors and sufferings, and loved Him more than all the hearts of Heaven and earth put together?

"If all things are possible to him who believes, how much more must this be true of her who loves Him?" says Gerson. "And of her who bore Him," adds St. Bernardine of Siena.

If the Apostle St. Paul says that he can do all things "in him who strengtheneth me," (5) what must be the power of the maternal Heart of the Queen of Apostles bearing eternally within itself Him who is called in Sacred Scripture, "Christ, the power of God?" (6) Her Heart is filled and animated by the power and strength of the Most High. Cannot we then say that her virginal Heart is all-powerful in Him who is her strength and power, as He is her soul and her spirit?

Hers is the Heart of the valiant woman spoken of by Solomon, always inspired with Vigorous and manly virtue, through which she accomplished all things with sovereign perfection and without the least defect. INS valiant woman's Heart bore the sharpest pain and the most violent anguish with marvellous constancy and unshakeable fortitude. Her in. trepid Heart critsbed the infernal dragon's head, that is, sin, prefigured by Holofernes, and the powers of hell fear the Immaculate Heart even as an army in battle array (7) because Our Lady fought courageously against all God's enemies and obtained a glorious victory.

But what is more, she vanquished, so to speak, the Almighty Himself. For I hear an angel saying to Jacob: "Thou shalt no longer be called Jacob, but thy name shall be Israel," which means according to St. Jerome and the Septuagint "strong against God." (8) This interpretation agrees with the Angel's own explanation, for after having said: ... Thy name shall be Israel," he adds; "for if thou hast been strong against God, how much more shalt thou prevail against men?" Jacob had overcome Only an angel, but that angel represented God; hence he was told he had overcome God Himself.

Jacob's holy daughter, the worthy Mother of Christ, has, in a way really overcome God Himself. How often has she not, through the efficacy, of her prayers and merits, and by the power of her love, disarmed the anger of God and arrested the torrent of His indignation, which would otherwise have flooded and destroyed the world because of its innumerable crimes? How many times has Our Lady besought divine vengeance to lay aside the thunderbolts ready to be hurled against criminal mankind? How often has her Heart's incomparable charity clasped the hands of God's terrible justice and stopped Him from punishing men as they deserve? "How powerful is her love," says Richard of St. Victor,

"since it overcomes the Almighty." (9) Yes, the love and charity of Mary's Heart are powerful, and have as it were vanquished God Himself!

History is filled with instances where Our Lady has shown her incomparable power on behalf of those who invoke her protection, manifesting publicly to armies and nations the strength that she also extends to each Christian in his own inner struggle against sin. But her strength is for those who invoke, love, honor and venerate her heart.

O Glorious Queen of the World, make us sharers in the divine power which fills thy holy Heart and give us strength against the enemies of thy Divine Son, who is all and does all in thee!

CHAPTER V

WISDOM AND TRUTH OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

DIVINE wisdom and truth are communicated to the holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary in no lesser degree than Divine power and strength.

If the Holy Ghost assures us that the soul of the just Man is the seat of Divine Wisdom, we can well say that the Heart of Mary, Mother of Jesus, is the throne of this same Wisdom, the highest and most magnificent throne that it ever had or shall have on earth and in heaven.

The Heart of Mary is not merely the throne of Wisdom, but its living image, for it is the Heart of the Mother of Him whom Sacred Scripture calls "the wisdom of God." (1) In Christ are all the treasures of the wisdom and knowledge of God, and He certainly dispensed them in an incomparably higher manner to His Mother than to King Solomon and all the sages and wise men of the universe.

Mundane prudence and the wisdom of the flesh never found admittance into her wise Heart, which was and still is an inexhaustible treasure and bottomless abyss of angelic prudence, holy science, heavenly light and wisdom divine, because her luminous Heart always was and ever shall be the abode of the Eternal Sun and of Uncreated Wisdom, Who has always dwelt therein. It is the city mentioned by the Prophet Isaias: "One shall be called the city of the Sun." (2)

St. Bernardine of Siena expressly states that Our Lady was so completely filled with the light of Divine Wisdom from her mother's womb that from the initial moment of her existence she possessed a perfect general knowledge of the Creator and of all irrational, rational and intellectual creatures (3) Our Lady knew all these things in God, as in their first and universal cause, for God was the single object of her gaze as well as of her love. She saw God in all things, and all things in God. She beheld God in all creatures, as the principle, end, center, exemplar, author and preserver of every created being, and she saw every creature in God as participating in His Sovereign Being and divine perfections. God loves all that is, and hates nothing that He has made, according to the divine word: "Thou lovest all things which thou hast made," (4) so also the Holy Heart of the Mother of God was always filled with affection and even respect for all God's creatures. She looked upon the reasonable and intellectual beings as images and semblances of God; she considered the irrational and insentient beings as marks and vestiges of God; in a word, she saw in all creatures the expression of the wisdom of God and participations in His Divinity. If the Heart of the Mother of the Eternal Sun was thus bathed in divine splendors from the beginning of her life, judge of her progress and her end. As her heart ever grew in grace and love, so also it increased in light and wisdom.

"Mary is rightly represented as clothed with the sun," says St. Bernard, "for she has penetrated into the profound abyss of divine Wisdom more deeply than we can think or believe, to such an extent, indeed, that she seems to have become immersed in that inaccessible light, so far as it is possible for a creature who does not have a personal union with God." (5)

Since our incomparable Mother is in heaven, entirely absorbed in the ocean of eternal wisdom and knowledge, and as God has made her partaker of His empire and associated her in His divine kingship, establishing her Queen and Empress of Heaven and earth, and communicating to her His own dominion over every creature, so has God filled her Heart with the light of His adorable wisdom, that she may know all the subjects under her authority, and rule and govern every creature according to the necessities of each and the dispositions of the Divine Will.

Our Lady possesses a special knowledge of those who are most devoted to her; she knows God's designs concerning them, the road they should follow to reach God, the state and dispositions of their souls, all the accidents that befall them, all their possible perils, the pains they suffer, interiorly and exteriorly. She knows the temptations that assail them, the evil Schemes of their enemies and all their corporal and spiritual needs, so that she may assist, protect, defend and strengthen her faithful followers, obtain from her divine Son the help they need most, and be herself the best of mothers to them. From this you can estimate the happiness and advantages enjoyed by those who make themselves worthy to be numbered among the true children of Our Lady's loving Heart.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Such are mine of the effects wrought by Divine Wisdom in this admirable Heart. We shall now contemplate in it the workings of the Eternal Truth of God.

Divine veracity stamps its image most excellently on the Blessed Virgin's Heart. As God is paramountly the God of all truth and calls Himself the Holy and True One, (6) so is the Heart of the Mother of God filled with truth. Only of the Heart of Mary can it be said, speaking of simple creatures, that truth always filled it, because it was the only Heart ever completely faithful to its divine role and exemplar, the Heart of God Himself. Give me all the hearts of the children of Adam, and I shall repeat of them all the words of the Holy Spirit: "Their heart is vain," (7) for none will be found who were always truthful and faithful to God. Only of the Heart of the Mother of Him who is essential and uncreated Truth, could it be said from the first to the last moment of her life: "The Heart of Mary is holy and truthful," because it always conforms to God's eternal decrees. "Whatever was done in her," says St. Jerome, "was all purity and simplicity, sanctity and truth." (8)

Furthermore, as God is infallible in His judgments and knowledge and can commit no error, knowing and judging all things in His own truth, (9) so also He gave the Blessed Virgin Mary a knowledge of the truth which enlightened all her judgments. Her Heart was ever filled and possessed by the spirit of truth, which guided her with the infallible light of faith that can truly be called a participation of divine truth.

Finally, as all the actions and words of God are imbued with Truth itself, in like manner were the words and actions of God's Mother always truthful, that is, they were always conformable to the holiness, perfection and truth of the deeds and words of God. This was because they stemmed from a Heart most holy, perfect, and truthful, and the Son of God Himself teaches us that man's heart is the principle of all his thoughts~ words and actions, be they good or bad. (10)

All these considerations make us understand that the Holy Heart of Mary is a living portrait of the wisdom and veracity of God, given to us that we may invoke her guidance against the folly, deceit and falsehood of the flesh and of the world.

CHAPTER VI

GOODNESS AND PROVIDENCE OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

SACRED theology distinguishes in God three kinds of goodness, which are fundamentally one and the same: natural goodness, moral goodness and goodness of benevolence or bounty, which is sometimes called benignity. Natural goodness is none other than the perfection and beauty of divine nature, containing the infinite excellences of the Godhead. Moral goodness comprises all the moral virtues that God possesses so eminently and in so high a degree that they are infinitely beyond what a created spirit can think or express.

The goodness of benevolence or bounty is God's infinite inclination to communicate Himself and it proceeds from His natural goodness. As a vessel brimming with a precious liquor tends to overflow, so a being filled with perfection has a natural inclination to communicate its fulness. God is an immense ocean, filled to overflowing with infinite good and divine perfections, and He possesses an unutterable and incomprehensible propensity to communicate them. This He does in two ways, with an outpouring of liberality worthy of His divine magnificence, within and outside Himself. Within Himself His perfections flow in a natural and necessary communication of the divine nature and all its inherent marvels from the Father of His Beloved Son, and from both to the Holy Ghost. Outside Himself this benevolence is a free communication, whereby God confers, not indeed His nature and His essence, but His image, semblance, shadow, or mere reflection of His being on creatures in the order of nature, of grace and of glory.

In the order of nature God communicates His being to all existing things, His life to all living things, whether their life be rational or merely sensitive and vegetative. His power is communicated to all things possessed of power, His wisdom to all intellectual beings, His goodness to all things good and kind. The beauty of God is transfused to things that are beautiful, His light to luminous bodies, His firmness and stability to things firm and stable, His immortality to immortal souls, God also imparts His happiness and felicity to such as possess not only being, but well-being, which consists in a measure of natural enjoyment or satisfaction. God communicates Himself and His divine perfections in general to all things pertaining to the natural order, through His creation, preservation and government of all beings according to their nature.

In the order of grace Almighty God communicates Himself much more abundantly to rational and intellectual creatures, through the adorable mystery of the Incarnation and all the other mysteries of His Divine Son, Jesus Christ, Our Redeemer. Through the Sacraments He has instituted in His Church, especially the Holy Eucharist, and all the other spiritual channels, He pours grace into our souls, provided there be no obstacle on our part.

In the order of glory God communicates Himself most fully and perfectly to all the souls in heavenly bliss, clothing them in His radiant glory, surrounding them with His felicity, enrapturing them with His holy joys, and making them partakers of all the goodness He Himself possesses.

Finally, as the Sun, to quote St. Dionysius, (1) enlightens everything that can participate in its light, which is marvellously diffused, unfolding throughout the world the glittering of its rays, in the highest as well as in the humblest spheres, so that nothing visible can escape the sovereign grandeur of its brightness, so too does the divine Essence extend Its beauty to all beings, as their principle, preserver and end, as the universal cause, the common and infinite good, whence all things derive their being and well-being, wherein they are established, enclosed and preserved.

The superlative Goodness communicates Its adorable perfections to the holy Heart of Mary with much greater abundance and plenitude than to all other creatures put together. Next to the Heart of God, there never was and never shall be a heart so good, liberal, benevolent, magnificent and so replete with kindness as the most admirable Heart of Mary.

The Heart of Mary is so full of goodness that St. Bernard thus speaks of her: "Why does a human weakness fear to come unto Mary? Nothing in her is austere, nothing frightful, for she is filled with sweetness. Go over the Gospel story with the greatest attention; if you find therein the least mark of harshness or severity on Mary's part, the least sign of indignation, you may well fear to appear before her. But if, on the contrary, you find (as you surely will) her virginal Heart full of love, piety, sweetness and goodness, then give thanks to Him who in His infinite mercy has provided such a mediatrix for us." (2)

THE HEART OF GOD THE SON     127 -

"Her Heart is so alive with pity that she never rejects any Suppliant coming to her with humility and confidence," says Raymund Jourdain.<sup>(3)</sup> It is this loving confidence that we express as often as we recite that beautiful prayer, attributed by many annotators to St. Bernard, and by others to St. Augustine: "Remember, O most gracious Virgin Mary, that never was it known that anyone who fled to thy protection, implored thy help and sought thine intercession, was left unaided." (4)

Her Heart is so filled with bounty that she readily grants whatever we ask of her. St. Bernard says: "O blessed Mary, whoever loves thee honors God; who serves thee pleases God; who invokes thy holy name with a pure heart, will infallibly receive the object of his petition." (5) "Who has ever invoked Mary without being heard?" says Pope Innocent III (6) The venerable Abbot Blasius adds: "She rejects no one but lends a favorable ear to the petitions of all." (7) "Heaven and earth would sooner perish, than Mary refuse her help to such as invoke her seriously and with affection," reiterates St. Bernard, adding: "Let him be silent in praise of thy mercy, O most Blessed Virgin, who having invoked thee in his necessities, should remember not having received thy help." (8)

Her Heart is so good and merciful that she extends her kindness not only to the good but also to the wicked, not only to the faithful but to sinners as well. "In this life, thou art a help to the just and unjust," says Raymund Jourdain. "Thou dost aid the just man and the sinner; the former by keeping him in the state of grace, wherefore the Church calls thee the Mother of Grace; the latter by bringing them back to divine Mercy, for which thou art named the Mother of Mercy." (9)

Our Lady's Heart is so kind and gentle that she helps not only those who implore her aid, but even the careless souls who neglect to invoke her. Listen again to St. Bernard: "Why should we marvel to see her stretch a helping hand to such as beseth her, if she assist even them who do not pray to her?" (10)

The holy Abbot Blasius has written: "Mary spurns no one; to nobody does she refuse her aid. She comforts and relieves all who seek her assistance;

ance; she opens her bountiful Heart to all who implore her intercession; she readily succors all who have recourse to her charity and, by an excess of goodness, she often shows her kindness to persons who do not think of her and have no devotion, gently and effectively drawing them to God by means of the graces she obtains on their behalf. Thus did Divine Bounty constitute Our lady as a supreme gift to mankind, that all might have recourse without fear and with complete confidence." (11)

Her Heart is so merciful that she loves even those who hate her. Mary always renders good for evil because she willingly sacrificed her own beloved Son to save the reprobates who crucified Him.

Other Fathers of the Church express the same thoughts and assure us that the almost boundless charity of the Heart of Mary extends to all places, times and things in general, through a most abundant communication and eminent participation of God's infinite goodness and likewise of His divine providence.

As this adorable providence governs and regulates all things created, from the greatest to the least, both in general and in particular, so also does God's most powerful and merciful Mother, Queen of the Universe, bestow the affections and care of her royal Heart on all things within her realm and subject to her rule. She leads all created things to the last end for which God made them, namely the glory of His Divine Majesty. But her special care is the guidance of rational beings, above all, of Christians, and most particularly of her own devout children, who strive faithfully to honor, serve and imitate her.

Her maternal Heart protects and cherishes her devotees in a unique manner, having her eyes ever intently fixed upon them. She preserves and guards them as the apple of her eye, and assumes the guidance and conduct of their entire life and actions. She leads them by the hand in all their ways, removing from their path the obstacles and hindrances which might make them stumble, or retard their progress. She obtains the assistance and the means whereby they will receive strength and advance more rapidly. She bears their scull in her arms and on her virginal breast through the dangerous crises where their peril is greatest. She assists them most lovingly in the dark passage from this life into the next world, protecting them valiantly from the efforts and snares of the enemies of salvation. She receives their souls in her sweet and gentle hands at the moment of death, and lovingly folds them in her most charitable Heart. She finally bears them upward to Heaven with unutterable joy and presents them with all-surpassing kindness to her beloved Son.

THE HEART OF GOD THE SON 129 -

If such is the miraculous goodness of Mary to those who love and venerate her, how can there possibly be any Christians who hold back from devotion to the center and principle of her benignity, her Admirable Heart?

Praise, honour and glory be forever to the Most High, who has thus caused the Heart of this incomparable Mother to reflect to mankind the perfect image of His goodness and all-merciful providence!

CHAPTER 1

MERCY OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

DIVINE Mercy is a perfection directed towards the miseries of creatures, tending to alleviate them and even to free them from created things when such a liberation enters into the designs of Divine Providence, which does all things with measure, number and weight.(1)

This adorable mercy extends, like goodness itself, to all God's works: "His tender mercies are over all His works." (2) God's mercy overshadows the works of nature, the works of grace and the works of glory.

Mercy supervises the works of nature, because God has created out of nothing all things contained in the natural order. It overshadows the works of grace, because man had fallen into the horrible abyss, and divine mercy not only drew him from its depths but reestablished man in a state of grace so Godlike and noble that from being a member of Satan (as he was by his crime) he became a member of Jesus Christ.

God's mercy permeates the works of glory, because God was not content simply to raise man to the supernatural and sublime state of Christian grace, making him thus partaker of the divine nature. The Creator further designed to withdraw man from the baseness, miseries, imperfections and perils which surround him here below, and to elevate him to Heaven, even to the throne of God, to grant participation in His ever lasting glory and the enjoyment of His eternal happiness. God has willed to share all His possessions with man, His creature.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Among the effects of divine Mercy, we must enumerate three principal realities, which in turn embody numberless effects. The first is the Incarnation of the God-Man; the second, His Mystical Body, namely Holy Church; the third is the Mother of the God-Man, namely the Most Blessed Virgin Mary. These constitute three admirable masterpieces of divine mercy.

In order to save us from the deepest possible abyss of misery and malediction, and to raise us to the highest conceivable degree of happiness and grandeur, God willed that His Divine Son should become man, mortal and capable of suffering like ourselves; that He should descend to earth, to abide and converse with us, and teach us a heavenly and divine doctrine by His own sacred lips. God willed His Son to give us a most excellent and holy law, and to teach us to observe it by His own divine example. God willed that His Only-begotten Son should suffer and perform great miracles for our sake, while in this world; that He should die on the cross, be buried, rise again the third day and remain forty days longer on earth; that He should found a Church, establish therein a sublime priesthood, an admirable sacrifice and seven divine sacraments; that, having ascended into heaven, He should send His Holy Spirit to govern His Church, to rule her in all things and to abide with her forever.

All this, namely the numerous episodes and mysteries of the God-Man, His thoughts concerning our salvation, the words He spoke in preparation for this great mission, the thanksgiving He offered, the sufferings He endured, every drop of blood He shed, the sacrifices He offered and continues to offer daily and hourly in His Church, all the Sacraments established by Him, all the enlightenment and sanctification that He accomplished in human souls, under the Old as well as under the New Law, by virtue of His mysteries, sacrifices and sacraments, and whatever other graces communicated to men, all this, I repeat, emanated from the manifold operations of the divine attribute of mercy.

Beyond this, God not only willed to become man that men might become partakers of the divine nature, but He willed that His only Son should become the Son of Man that men might become sons of God. God willed that His Son come into this world by being born of the seed of Adam and of a daughter of Adam that we might have the God-Man for our brother and the Mother of God for our mother. Thus we have the same father and the same mother as the Son of God Himself. We are

His brothers, and as He is our mediator with His Father, so His heavenly Mother is a mediatrix between Himself and us.

In order to render His admirable Mother paramountly able to exercise her double office of Mother and Mediatrix, so that she might protect, favor and assist us with greater efficacy in all our needs, Divine Mercy constituted her, first of all, most agreeable and holy. Secondly, Mercy gave her dominion over everything in heaven and on earth. Thirdly, it gave her the mildest, sweetest and most loving heart save that of the God-Man. To the Heart of Mary God communicated in great abundance His merciful inclinations and established in it the throne and reign of His Mercy more gloriously than in the heart of any other creature, save the sacred humanity of Christ.

Divine Mercy reigns so perfectly in Mary's Heart that she bears the name of Queen and Mother of Mercy. And this most loving Mary has so completely won the heart of God's mercy that He has given her the key to all His treasures and made her absolute mistress of them. St. Bernard says: "She is called the Queen of Mercy because she opens the abyss and treasure of divine mercy to whom she chooses, when she chooses and as she chooses." (3)

Divine Mercy holds such complete sway over Mary's Heart and fills it with so much compassion for sinners and for all persons in need that St. Augustine addresses her thus: "Thou art the sinner's only hope," (4) after God. "My dearest children," says St. Bernard, "her heart is the ladder by which sinners go up to heaven; this is my reliance, this the only reason of my hope." (5) Euthymius, one of the ancient Fathers who lived over Seven centuries ago, adds: "O most merciful Virgin, deign to cast thy pitiful eyes on thy poor servants, for, after God, we have placed all our hope in thee who are our life, our glory, and, as it were, our substance and our being." (6)

Holy Church, animated and guided by the Spirit of God, exhorts us to salute and honor this prerogative of Mary in that admirable prayer: "Hail, holy Queen, Mother of Mercy, our life, our sweetness and our hope, all hail!" And the same Divine Spirit puts into Mary's mouth the words which Holy Church repeats in her Office: "In me is all grace of the way and of the truth; in me is all hope of life and of virtue." (7)

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

St. John Damascene tells us that Our Lady is the only relief of the afflicted, the sovereign comforter of anguished hearts;<sup>8</sup> and St. John Chrysostom declares her to be a boundless mean of mercy (9).

Would you know in what further manner divine mercy lives and reigns in the Heart of the Mother of Mercy? Listen to St. Bonaventure: "Great was Mary's mercy towards the wretched while she was living in exile here below; but immeasurably greater still now that she is happily reigning in heaven. She manifests this greater mercy through innumerable benefits, now that she possesses a clearer insight into the numberless woes of mankind. She does not require past merits, but grants the petitions of all men, out of charity, and opens the bosom of her clemency to everyone. She relieves every need and necessity with an incomparable affection and tenderness of heart." (10)

Her gentle Heart~ is so filled with mercy that it overflows on all sides and spreads itself in heaven, on earth and even in hell. Let us again listen to St. Bernard proclaiming this truth: "Who can comprehend, O Blessed Virgin, the length, the width, the height and the depth of thy mercy? Its length extends to the last day in the life of those who invoke thee; its width encompasses the whole world; its height reaches to heaven, there to repair the losses of the heavenly Jerusalem; its depth has penetrated hell to obtain the deliverance of them that sit in the darkness and shadow of death." (11)

The virginal Heart of the Mother of Grace is filled with such exceeding mercy that she exercises it not only in favor of sinners who wish to be converted, but also towards many persons who never think of their eternal salvation. She implores her Blessed Son to inspire them, to excite in their hearts sentiments of fear of God and terror at the thought of His judgments. She asks Him to chastise them in divers ways, to raise in their midst persons leading holy and exemplary lives, whose example will draw them to Himself, and to use all other means of obtaining their conversion, or at least, if they will mend their ways, to prevent them from multiplying their sins, that their damnation may be less terrible.

But what is even more, the Heart of Mary is so full of mercy that, using the extraordinary privileges God has granted to her alone, and out of her incomparable goodness, she often saves from eternal perdition souls who in the ordinary course of divine justice would have been cast into hell. Such is the mind of that ancient and excellent author, Raymund

Jourdain, who succeeded in hiding his name, but not the extent of his learning and holiness: "The Mother's mercy often Saves many whom the justice of the Son would have otherwise condemned."
(12)

Hence St. Germanus, Patriarch of Constantinople, addresses these beautiful words to Mary: "O purest, best and most merciful Lady, help and relief of the faithful, powerful comforter of the afflicted and assured refuge of sinners, forsake us not, but keep us ever under thy protection. if thou forsake us, to whom shall we have recourse? What would become of us without thee, most holy Mother of God, who are the spirit and life of Christians. Even as respiration is an infallible sign of life in our bodies, so is thy holy name, when it is constantly on the lips of thy servants, on all occasions, at every time and in all places, not only a sign, but a veritable cause of life, happiness and protection." CHAPTER 11*MEEKNESS, PATIENCE AND CLEMENCY OF GOD
MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

God's meekness, patience and clemency are three divine perfections which are joined with mercy to form one and the same perfection, although their effects are different.

Mercy regards the misery of creatures in general, to relieve and to deliver them from its fetters. The first and greatest of miseries, the source of all wretchedness is sin. When man is so unhappy as to offend God mortally, he at once becomes the object of God's wrath which would crush him the very instant he consents to sin, as he infinitely deserves to be. But divine meekness prevents the destruction and arrests the torrent of God's just anger, ready to pour upon the sinner. If man perseveres in his crime, he deserves to be cast upon divine vengeance, but divine patience interposes and persuades God to suffer the sinner to await his repentance with admirable goodness.

These are the effects of divine meekness and patience. God's clemency is manifested by remitting entirely or in part the punishment due to sin.

Whoever is in mortal sin deserves the eternal punishment of hell, divine clemency often sends temporal affliction to those who are in this miserable state, to oblige them to struggle out of it, and thus become delivered from eternal suffering. If they will be converted at the very instant they feel sentiments of true remorse, divine mercy effaces the guilt of sin from their souls.

Although the actual guilt is thus effaced, it remains true that divine justice still pursues the sinner to exact the penalty his offences have deserved, but divine clemency commutes first of all the eternal penalty into a temporal punishment.

Furthermore, God's marvellous clemency seeks to deliver the sinner from even this temporal punishment, or at least to diminish it, and sends further afflictions, by means of which sinful man may satisfy divine justice.

THE HEART OF GOD THE SON

This sweetest clemency offers him still other means of paying his debt to the justice of God, for example, jubilees and indulgences. It induces the repentant sinner to assist with devotion at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, the supreme means of satisfying all our obligations to God, and at the same time it urges him to receive the Blessed Eucharist frequently with holy dispositions and to perform various other good works.

If the sinner dies before he has tendered full satisfaction, his imperfectly purified soul is sent to Purgatory to complete its purification, which is yet another effect of divine mercy.

If it is true that the sufferings of Purgatory are greater than we can describe or imagine, divine clemency has nevertheless found several means of mitigating and shortening them. It hastens the deliverance of suffering souls by the application of indulgences, and by the prayers, fasts, alms and sacrifices of the faithful on earth, as well as the suffrages of the Saints in heaven.

These are some of the effects of the meekness, patience and clemency of God.

Now these three divine perfections live and reign in the Heart of the Mother of Mercy, communicating their own divine inclinations most excellently. After the Heart of God Himself there never was and never shall be a heart so full of meekness, patience and clemency as the noble Heart of Mary.

While she dwelt on earth, she beheld the world filled with idols and idolators. With the exception of a very small number, men generally were armed against God, trying, if possible, to dethrone Him, to put Him under their feet and annihilate Him. They would set His enemy in His place and sought to procure for the usurper the adoration and honor which belong to God alone. As the Most Blessed Virgin Mary loved God with a love so great that we cannot describe it, she experienced an indescribably great sorrow at the sight of the crimes committed against His Divine Majesty.

But who can appreciate her greater grief over the atrocious torments inflicted on her beloved Son by the perfidy of the Chosen People? She knew Him to be Innocence and Sanctity incarnate; yet she saw Him persecuted and tormented as though He were the greatest of criminals. She watched Him bound and tethered like a thief, dragged through the streets of Jerusalem like a scoundrel, beaten, bruised, mocked, spit upon, clothed in the white garment of a fool, given up to the mockery, insults and outrages of a band of insolent soldiers, reviled, spurned in favor of Barabbas, scourged and torn with whips from head to foot, crowned with thorns, exposed to the gaze of an enraged crowd crying: "Away with him; away with him: crucify him." (1) She saw her dear Son condemned to a cruel death, carrying the heavy Cross to be the instrument of His torture, stripped, nailed and fastened to the Cross with great nails that pierced His gentle hands and feet. She watched His adorable lips, in the torment of thirst, given gall and vinegar to drink, His sacred ears filled with curses and blasphemies, all the members of His body dislocated so that one could count His very bones: "They have numbered all my bones." (2) She beheld the body of the God-Man, her Son, covered with wounds, experiencing inconceivable pain, His blessed soul lacerated with anguish and torment. Finally, she watched Him die the cruelest and most shameful death that ever happened.

Now what did she do, the Mother of Sorrows, as she beheld her treasure, her most innocent Lamb torn, flayed and slain? She loved Him with a peerless love. Did she cry out against His pitiless Murderers? Did she lament of the wrong and injustice wreaked upon Him? Did she implore the Eternal Father's justice? No. She remained silent; not a word was heard from her lips; only her stifled sighs, her tears alone were seen. Her most gentle Heart fought against the entry of any sense of injury or movement of impatience, or aversion or bitterness towards her cruel tormentors. Her Heart abounded with meekness, patience and clemency, so that she imitated her Son, Jesus, and sought to excuse the men who with such distorted rage were killing Him, repeating in her Heart the words He uttered with His lips: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." (3) She offered for their salvation the very Blood they shed, the sufferings they inflicted upon Him, the cruel death they perpetrated. She was prepared, if necessary, to sacrifice herself together with her Son, to obtain mercy for those wicked men.

Nor is that all. The glorious Virgin now reigning in heaven can see much more clearly the numberless multitude and frightful enormity of the sins committed against God. She sees this earth of ours which should be a paradise since the God of Heaven honored it with His presence and made it His dwelling place; yet it is filled with sinners and enemies of God, who blaspheme and dishonor Him without ceasing, even more than the devils and the damned in hell. For the devils, being deprived of liberty, cannot add to their sins, whereas living sinners heap crime on crime, impiety . on impiety, murder upon murder, abomination upon abomination: "Blood hath touched blood." (4)

Our Lady knows that her Son, the Son of God, came into the world to save all men; that salvation cost Him infinite labor, ignominies, tears and blood to deliver mankind from the bondage of the devil and hell, and reconcile them to His Father. And yet she sees men turning their back on God, denying and forsaking Him, to side with Satan and cast themselves headlong into hell. She Sees innumerable atheists and blasphemers making every effort to exterminate the Holy Church founded by her Jesus Christ through the shedding of the last drop of His Blood, and to render His sacred name despicable, abominable and odious to the entire world: "They have set me an abomination to themselves." (5)

Our heavenly Mother perceives all these crimes and all the wickedness most clearly, and her inconceivably great love for God and for her Son is wounded beyond anything we can imagine, even though she is glorious and incapable of suffering. She is Queen of Heaven and earth, and God has given her sovereign power over all created things; therefore she would not lack the power, if such were her will, to avenge most justly the many atrocious insults offered by men to their God and Saviour. But far from doing this, she permits herself to be induced by her very patient and gentle Heart to use the power of her merits and intercession in order to halt the just fury of divine vengeance, and to arrest the torrent of God's wrath ready to burst on the hapless heads of sinners. She obtains from His divine Majesty that He punish them not as enemies but as children, not like a severe judge but as a merciful father, not to exterminate them but to correct and convert them.

True the Blessed Virgin Mary does not entertain the same sentiments for all sinners, nor does she treat them all alike. She distinguishes between those in Hell, whom she knows to be irreconcilable enemies of God, and those on earth, whom she considers still capable of being reconciled to His divine Majesty. Hence her Heart is filled with very great and just indignation towards the wretched creatures in hell, for she is most perfectly united to God, and therefore shares in all His adorable inclinations. She loves what God loves and hates what He hates, approves what He approves, and condemns what He condemns. As the damned will forever be the object of God's wrath: "They shall be called the people with whom the Lord is angry forever," (6) so shall they forever be the object of the anger of God's Mother. Her love and charity for God and the friends of God are greater than the ardor of all angels and saints together, so also is her hatred of God's irreconcilable enemies greater than that of all the denizens of heaven.

But towards sinners who are still in this world, which is a place of mercy where our all-bountiful Mother has established the throne and empire of her mercy and clemency, her Heart is so filled with sweetness and benignity that the venerable and holy Abbot Blossius declares: "The world does not hold any sinner so detestable that this pious Virgin should not be disposed to open to him the arms of her clemency and her most merciful Heart. Provided he seek her assistance, she will always have the power and the will to reconcile him to her Son.,' (7) Blossius says further: "As long as the time of grace endures, this merciful Mother cannot avert her eyes from miserable sinners who invoke her with a sincere desire of conversion. With the Heart of a Mother and a sister, she continually offers up her prayers to God on behalf of men, and takes special care of their salvation. No one who shall invoke this Mother of grace with devotion and perseverance, can possibly perish forever." (8)

"O sweetest and most holy Virgin, look down with the eyes of thy mercy on all the afflictions and all the afflicted that fill the earth. Behold the many poor people, the many widows and orphans, the sick troubled with so many diseases, the captives and prisoners, the thousands who are cursed and persecuted by the malice of men, the defenceless persons oppressed by the strong and the mighty, the seafarers and pilgrims struggling against perils on sea and land, the missionaries exposed to countless dangers in their task of saving endangered souls. Look down upon the number of afflicted minds, of anguished hearts, of souls tormented by manifold temptations, and of souls suffering the frightful penalties of Purgatory. But above all, have pity on the countless Souls that are in the state of sin and perdition and are groaning under the tyranny and the bondage of hell.

"Finally, O gentlest of Virgins, take pity on the great number of wretches who people the universe, whose innumerable miseries are so many voices crying to thee: O Mother of Mercy, comforter of the afflicted, refuge of sinners, open the eyes of thy clemency to see our desolation. tion, the cars of thy bounty to hear our supplications. from the house of their heavenly Father, groaning and weeping in this valley of tears, have recourse to thine incomparable benignity. Hear our sighs and our cries; behold our weeping and our tears. ### CHAPTER III

JUSTICE OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

MERCY and justice resemble two sisters, inseparable and holding each other by the hand. Wherever mercy is, there also is justice; where justice goes, mercy follows. Hence King David sang to God: "Mercy and judgment I will sing to thee, O Lord." (1) He mentions them together and does not separate these qualities.

We have studied how divine mercy reigns and triumphs in the gentle Heart of Mary; we shall now contemplate divine justice establishing therein the throne of its glory. "In this perfect Heart," says Richard of St. Lawrence, «mercy and justice gave each other the kiss of peace.» (2)

In God there are two kinds of justice: the first, is distributive; the second, vindictive justice.

"Distributive justice," says St. Dionysius, "gives to each one what belongs to him, according to his rank and merit. It allots and dispenses to each thing the proportion, beauty, arrangement, good order and all other things proper to it within the bounds and limits that are just and equitable." (3)

The chief characteristic of vindictive justice is infinite hatred of sin and a desire to destroy it in the souls of men, thereby delivering them from its cruel tyranny.

Now these two types of justice have ever held sovereign sway in the most just Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. In the first place, she always rendered to God and to all God's creatures, in a most faithful and perfect manner, what she owed to them. To God, she accorded adoration, fear, dependence, gratitude, honor, glory, praise, love and the sacrifice of all she possessed and of her very self. She observed all the Mosaic laws very devotedly and with exact obedience. She exercised respect, veneration and humility towards her parents, St. Joachim and St. Anne, towards the persons who had charge of her while she dwelt in the Temple of Jerusalem, and towards St. Joseph, her most worthy spouse. She punctually obeyed even the edicts of Emperor Augustus, though he was a pagan idolator. She held her own self in very low esteem and in great contempt, knowing she was a creature drawn from nothing and a daughter of Adam, who would have come under the curse common to all his children, if God had not preserved her from it. In a word, she faithfully practised the words of the Holy Ghost even before they were spoken by St. Paul: "Render therefore to all men their dues. Tribute, to whom tribute is due; custom, to whom custom: fear, to whom fear: honor, to whom honor. Owe no man anything, but to love one another." (4) This last is a debt which no one can ever finish paying.

In the second place, divine justice had so completely filled her Heart with such an unfathomable hatred for sin that this holy Virgin was always ready to undergo the sufferings of as many hells as God's omnipotence could create rather than commit the least venial sin.

What is still more admirable, however, is that, having the same Heart and mind as the Eternal Father, according to the inspired words: "He who is joined to the Lord, is one spirit," (5) Our Lady united her will to His concerning the Passion of her Son, and gave her consent to the painful death of her dearly Beloved so that He might destroy sin. This sacrifice demonstrates a hatred of sin greater than suffering the torments of all imaginable bells to cooperate in its destruction; for it cannot be doubted that if Our Lady had given her choice, she would have preferred all such sufferings for herself rather than see the treatment inflicted on her beloved Son at the time of His cruel and ignominious Passion.

If the Holy Hurt of Mary is filled with such terrible hatred of sin that she consented to the cruel death of her beloved Son, because she saw Him loaded with the sins of men; if she readily sacrificed Him to divine justice in order to crush the mortal enemy of God and men, who can doubt that she still hates the infernal monster wherever she finds it? She hates sin to the point of sometimes uniting herself to divine vengeance in order to destroy it in souls, especially in those souls who are their own enemies to the extent of supporting evil and opposing its destruction. They force their sweet Mother, as it were, to relinquish the tenderness of her maternal love and to participate in the severity of divine justice in order to punish the obduracy of a rebellious soul hardened in malice.

O most holy Virgin, since thou hast but one Heart and one spirit with thy divine Son and since thou hast no other sentiments Save His, thou dost love what He loves and thou dost hate what He hates. Hence, as Christ has an infinite hatred for sin, thou also dost hate it beyond all thought and words. Thy hatred for the infernal monster is equal to the love thou hast for God.

O Blessed Mother, thy love of thy Heart for God is infinitely greater than that of all the hearts of the angels and saints. Consequently, there is in thy Heart more hatred against God's enemy, sin, than in the hearts of all heaven's citizens. Make us sharers, O Mary, in this love and hatred so that we may love our Creator and Saviour as thou hast loved Him, and that we may hate sin as thou hast hated it.

ZEAL OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

EVERYTHING in nature, grace and glory, all the effects of power, wisdom, goodness, mercy and justice of God, all the mysteries, actions and sufferings of the God-Man, all the sacrifices, sacraments and functions of God's Church, in a word, all things in heaven, on earth and even in hell, are like so many voices proclaiming God's ardent zeal for His own glory and for the salvation of souls.

In the first place, God does everything for Himself and for the glory of His divine Majesty: "The Lord hath made all things for himself." (1) Being the first principle and the last end of all things, it were impossible for Him to act otherwise. This zeal for His own glory fills Him with an infinite hatred of everything that is contrary to it, that is, every kind of sin, especially vanity, presumption and pride. Whereas the humble render honor and glory to God in all things, the pride are like thieves who would take for themselves the honor and glory which belong to God alone. This same zeal for His honor leads God to derive His glory from all created things, even from the greatest evils. He would never permit such evils to exist if He did not have the power to turn them to His greater glory. As St. Augustine expresses it: "He has deemed it preferable to derive good from evil, than to prevent evil altogether." (2) Finally, the zeal of the Son of God for His Father's honor induced Him to assume human nature, to be born in a stable, to live thirty-four years on earth amidst tribulations and sufferings, and to die on the Cross, that He might atone for the insults offered by sinners to God the Father and to glorify Him in a manner worthy of His infinite Majesty.

In the second place, God's ineffable goodness and immense love for the souls created to His image and likeness enkindles in His Heart a most ardent zeal for their salvation. It is this zeal that induces Him to

(1). Prov. 16,4.

(2). In Enchiridio, cap. 26 and 27

148- THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

avail Himself, in order to save souls, of His Divine Essence, His power, wisdom, goodness, love, charity, mercy, justice and all His other perfections. The three Divine Persons, their thoughts, words and actions, the life, passion, precious blood and death of the Son of God, the angels, the saints, the entire Church with the sacraments she administers, all God's works, all He is, everything He has, everything is employed to procure the salvation of souls.

Now this divine zeal likewise inflames the virginal Heart of the Mother of God in a wonderful manner. The Holy Heart of Mary was ever on fire with such zeal for the glory of God and the Salvation of souls that she never allowed anything contrary to the honor of the divine majesty to come near her. Not only were her actions performed with sovereign perfection for God's glory alone, not only did she employ all the powers of her soul and body to serve and honor Him, but she was ever ready to sacrifice to this end her life and her very being, and to suffer all conceivable torments.

What is more, she sacrificed her well-beloved Son. Why did she offer Him up to God? For His glory and the salvation of souls. She immolated Christ Her Son to destroy everything contrary to the honor of the divine Majesty and the eternal salvation of men, to render to God a glory worthy of His infinite grandeur, to repair the offence given to God by the sins of the children of Adam, to deliver all souls from the tyranny of hell and to enable them to glorify God eternally in heaven.

St. John Chrysostom, Theophilactus, Oecumenius, St. Bernard and Rupert comment on these words of Moses in the thirty-second chapter of Exodus: "Either forgive them this trespass or strike me out of the book of life," by explaining that this holy prophet, Moses, inflamed with zeal for the salvation of his brethren, asked God to deprive him of eternal felicity and to impose this penalty on him forever that the people might be delivered from damnation. (3)

(3). St. John Eudes is here the echo of Cornelius a Lapide who, in his commentary on Chapter 32 of Exodus, 31, 32, after having quoted Rupert's commentary on the passage, adds: "Therefore Chrysostom commenting on Rom. 9, teaches that Moses and Paul, going beyond the heavens and the very angels, despised all invisible things, and out of love for God not only requested, but really and seriously desired to be deprived of the enjoyment of God and ineffable glory." Unde S. Chrysost., in c. (ad Rom. Docet Moysen et Paulum ... caelos et Angelos supergredientes, omnia invisibilia sprevisse, ac pro Dei amore ab ipsa Dei fruitione, beatitudine et ineffabili gloria excidere non tantum petisse, sed revera et serio optasse. Thus St. Chrysostom, Theophil., Oecumen., on chapter 9 of the epistle to the Romans; Cassian, Collat. 32, chapter 6; Bernard, Serm. 12 in Cant. These are precisely the references given here by St. John Eudes.

Explaining the words of St. Paul: "I wished myself to be anathema from Christ, for my brethren," (4) St. John Chrysostom and many other holy doctors say also that we must understand this text to refer to the eternal torments, but separated from sin. In other words, the zeal of the holy Apostle for the salvation of his Brethren was so ardent that he desired for their sake to suffer the eternal punishment of hell, provided there was no sin on his part. "He wishes to be lost forever," says Chrysostom, "that many, nay all, may love and praise Christ ... .. He desires to suffer eternal torments," says Cassian. "Because we are so far removed from such charity," adds Chrysostom, "we cannot understand these words." "We should not marvel," observes Origen, "to see the servant desiring to be anathema for his brethren, since the Master deigned to become malediction for his servants, 'being made a curse for us.'" (5)

Cornelius a Lapide, in his commentaries on this thirty-second chapter of Exodus, relates that Blessed Jacopone, of the Order of St. Francis, possessed the most ardent desire of suffering in this world all imaginable sorrows, afflictions, pains and hardships, and after this life he would fain have been thrown into hell to suffer eternal torments out of love of Our Lord and in satisfaction for his own sins and to atone, if possible, for the sins of all mankind, including the damned and the demons. (6)

We read in the tenth chapter of the life of St. Mary Magdalen de Pazzi, a Carmelite nun, that God showed her a place (which she calls the Lion's Lake) where she saw a numberless multitude of demons having a most frightful appearance. She was told that she was to enter the lake and remain there five years, suffering atrocious pains, in order to help in the salvation of many souls. She readily consented, and actually entered this Lion's Lake, which was a veritable hell. There the malice and rage of the demons inflicted the greatest torments on her, both interiorly and exteriorly, during the space of five years.

These prayers, desires and sufferings of Moses, St. Paul, Blessed Jacopone and St. Mary Magdalen de Pazzi, are irrefutable proofs of a great love for God and a supernal charity towards men. But what is this compared to the peerless zeal of the most charitable Heart of the Mother of God? It is but a spark compared to a burning furnace. Divine zeal is only the ardor of divine love, or divine love in its greatest ardor; therefore it follows that the measure of this holy love is likewise the measure of the zeal, and that a heart is filled with zeal in proportion to its love of God. Now it is certain that the Heart of Mary, the Mother of God, was always filled with greater love of God and men than the hearts of all the prophets, patriarchs, apostles, martyrs and other saints whence it follows that her Heart was inflamed with a zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls far greater than the hearts of all the saints put together.

- (4). Rom. 9; 3

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Our Lady can well say with the Prophet David and several other mints, but more truly and perfectly than any of them: "My zeal hath made me pine away; because my enemies forgot thy words. My eyes have sent forth springs of water: because they have not kept thy law." (7) "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up," (8) I that is, zeal for the salvation of souls, created by God for His eternal indwelling.

So it is that the Mother of Fair Love accomplished more for the salvation of souls and the glory of God by sacrificing her Beloved Son to His Heavenly Father when she stood at the foot of the cross, than was done or could have been done by all the saints together, even if each had suffered all the torments of hell for that end.

We can now judge of our obligation to honor the Maternal Heart of our Mother most admirable so filled with affection and zeal for our interests. But do not say that we have a true devotion to this heavenly Virgin, if our hearts do not share the holy inclination of her Heart, if we do not love what she loves and hate what she hates. Our Lady's love is the greatest for all things that contribute to the honor of God and the salvation of souls, and her hatred deepest for everything opposed to God.

Let us enter into these sentiments, and employ our mind, heart, thoughts, affections, words, actions to glorify the divine Majesty in every way, and to procure the salvation of souls, above all, our own. Consider that salvation as the great and only business of God, of the God-Man, of the Mother of God, of all the angels, of all the saints and of the entire Church.

CHAPTER V

DIVINE SOVEREIGNTY MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

AMONG the several names given to God in Sacred Scripture, none occurs more frequently than that of Lord. It is the name His Divine Majesty constantly assumes when speaking to men. "I am the Lord." (1) He wishes to impress upon our minds and in our hearts a most high esteem, a profound respect and a complete submission towards the supreme authority of His adorable Sovereignty.

What then is this divine Sovereignty? It is a perfection that gives God absolute and, infinite power over all the works of His hands. He can give life or death when He pleases, in the place and manner He chooses; He can hurl us into the abyss of nothingness, or withdraw us therefrom. He can throw us into hell and deliver us from it. "The Lord killeth and maketh alive, he bringeth down to hell and bringeth back again." (2) In a word, God can dispose of all His creatures, from the least to the greatest, as He pleases, and no one may ask Him: "Why dost Thou act thus?"

Having chosen to make the Queen of Angels and men the most noble image and the most perfect picture of His divine attributes, God likewise chose to communicate to her His adorable sovereignty in a very sublime degree.

God is called Lord, and He wishes Mary to be called Lady. He is universal Lord of all things, and He wills her to be sovereign Lady of the universe. He is "King of kings and Lord of lords," (3) and she is the queen of queens and sovereign of sovereigns. He has absolute power to do whatever He wishes; and having given Mary a Mother's authority over His Son, who is God Himself, He has consequently given her marvellous power over everything that is subject to her Son. In other words, God possesses the dominion of a God over all things created by Him, and can dispose of them as He pleases. Mary, on the other hand, has the power of the Mother of God over all things that depend on her Son, and she can do with them what she chooses.

I hear Jesus Christ, the Son of Mary, saying: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth," (4) and I hear Mary, the Mother of God, exclaiming: "My power is in Jerusalem." (5) God has given me power over the great city of Jerusalem, its suburbs, villages and dependencies, that is, over the entire Church, Triumphant, Militant and Suffering, as well as over all the other parts of the world, which are, as it were, the suburbs, villages and appurtenances of this marvellous city. "In every people and in every nation I have had the chief rule," (6)

But let us listen to the voice of the holy Fathers, or rather to the Holy Ghost speaking through their lips. "When Mary became the Mother of the Creator, she was established sovereign Lady over every creature," says St. John Damascene. (7) And he adds: "The Son of Mary put all things under the sway of His Blessed Mother." (8) "O most Holy Virgin," exclaims St. Anselm, "God Almighty has wished to make all things possible to thee, as they are to Himself!" (9) "Having made her the Mother of His Son," says the commentator Eusebius Emisenus, "God raised her to the dignity of Queen of Angels and men, and gave her sovereign author. authority, after Himself, in heaven and on earth." (10) "Nothing is capable of resisting thy power," observes St. Gregory, Archbishop of Nicomedia, "nothing can withstand thee. All things comply with thy commands, all things obey thy way; thy Sovereignty is over everything." (11) "God has given her absolute power in Heaven and on earth," remarks St. Bernard. "He has placed our life and our death in her hands." (12)

Other writers assure us that the power of the Blessed Virgin Mary has no limits, when she wishes to help those who invoke her with good dispositions. "Her help is omnipotent." (13) Her intercession with her Son possesses never-failing virtue. St. Peter Damian says that when she appears before the dread tribunal of the Divine Majesty, her Son does not regard her as His servant, but as His Mother, having all power over Him. He therefore receives her prayers, not as petitions, but as commands. "For how would it be possible, O Blessed Virgin," adds the Saint, "that He whom thou didst bring forth, even though He is almighty, should resist the maternal authority He has given thee over Him?" (14)

Another Father of the Church (15) says: "The Son of Mary is pleased exceedingly to have His Mother ask for anything on our behalf, for He desires to give her whatever He vouchsafes to grant us through her intercession. He is most happy to be able thus to show her some gratitude for all He has received from her in His Incarnation." St. Bonaventure tells us that the very name of Mary is, after God, all-powerful. (16)

We should not marvel at this. The Archangel Gabriel said to her: "The Lord is with thee," (17) and Mary contracted a new alliance with the Son of God, who thus became her own. Their union is so intimate that they have but one flesh, one mind and one will. "One is the flesh of Mary and of Christ, one their mind, their will and their energy." Mary's Son is the sovereign Lord of Heaven and earth; the Mother of Jesus Christ is the absolute mistress of earth and heaven, and her sway is over all things. "Christ is the Lord, Mary the Lady; she has been placed over every creature." "Whoever prostrates himself before the Son to adore Him, bends the knee to honor the Mother and implore her help." Thus speaks the learned and devout Arnold of Chartres, who lived in St. Bernard's time, being his disciple and friend. (18)

Let us listen again to St. Peter Damian: "He who governs all things with Sovereign authority subjected Himself to His Mother. A simple maid can give orders to Him whom all things obey." (19)

"All things," says St. Bernardine of Siena, «are subject to the divine power even the Virgin Mother. All things and God Himself are subject to Mary» (20) For it is written that her Son obeyed her: "And he was subject to them." (21)

"Behold two great prodigies," writes St. Bernard, "which must fill Heaven and earth with admiration. It is a marvellous thing to witness God's supreme Majesty lowered and humbled to the point of obeying a woman; there is no other example of such a prodigy of humility. And it is most admirable to behold a woman raised to such greatness that she is endowed with the right to command God Himself; so marvellous a dignity knows no peer." (22)

"Every creature," says St. Peter Damian, "should remain profoundly and respectfully silent, trembling at the sight of so wonderful an object, and not daring to look up to the sublime height and immensity of such great dignity and so exalted a power." (23)

By all these pronouncements see that we have a Queen and a Mother who, after God, is all-powerful in her person, in her name and in her prayers. She holds sovereign sway over every creature, and wields a marvellous power over the Creator Himself.

Thus does the Sovereign Lord of all things communicate His adorable Sovereignty to the great Queen of the Universe, and consequently to her royal Heart. For if she be Queen, her Heart is King; if she be Sovereign, her Heart is Sovereign like unto herself; if she have all power in heaven and on earth, so does her Immaculate Heart.

O admirable Heart of my Queen, what honor is due to the eminence of the exalted dignity! What praise thy profound humility commands, when it caused God to exalt thee so, high! Thou didst humble thyself beneath all things, and God not only raised thee above every creature, but conferred on thee a marvellous power over Himself. May He be blessed forever!

O most amiable Heart of my Mother Mary, I am filled with joy, and I give thanks to God for having so abundantly communicated His divine Sovereignty to thee, and having made of thee the Sovereign of all Hearts. But I feel unutterable sorrow in seeing that the hearts of the children of Adam usually prefer to be subject to Satan's horrible tyranny, rather than to allow thee to reign over them. Whence comes this calamity? From sin, its cause. The enormous ingratitude and abominable wickedness of the human heart proclaim by their countless crimes that they refuse to be governed by thee, O detestable sin, how frightful must thy malice be, if thou canst withstand the omnipotent Heart of the world's Sovereign Lady!

Mother of Mercy, take pity on such great misery. Thou seest, alas, that the earth is crowded with miserable hearts slaved by Satan, hearts that do not feel the extreme misfortune in which they are plunged! Mother of Grace, I offer thee all these slaves of hell; by thy most compassionate Heart, I beg thee to take pity on them. Break their chains asunder; implore thy Beloved Son, Who came into the world to enlighten all men, that He deign to give sight to the blind, and to remove from the sinners their hearts of stone, replacing them with hearts obedient to the inspirations of the Holy Ghost.

Mother of Fair Love, I also offer thee the hearts of those of thy children. who are faithful, who love and honor thee as their cherished Mother. Preserve and increase the precious treasure which is theirs, that they may move thee more and more, and become more worthy to be the true children of thy Heart.

Queen of my heart, suffer me to offer my own miserable heart to thee. I beseech thee, by the ineffable goodness of thy admirable Heart to employ the entire strength of the power God has given to thee, to crush and destroy in my heart at any and every cost, all that displeases thy divine Son. Establish in me the Sovereign empire of His Heart and thy own. May these two Hearts, which are one and the same, reign within me unceasingly, sovereignly and forever, for the greater honor and glory of the Most Blessed Trinity.

CHAPTER VI

PEACE OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

THE Peace of God is another divine perfection completely realizing its faithful image in the admirable Heart of the most holy Mother of God. But before studying the reflection, let us gaze at the original and consider this adorable perfection of the peace of God Himself.

What is the peace of God? It is a divine perfection consisting, according to St. Dionysius, in the ineffable union of God with Himself.(1)

God is unutterably united with Himself, first of all, by His incomprehensible love for His Divine Self. Secondly, by His infinite sanctity, which raises Him immeasurably above anything that could affect His peace, if this could ever be affected. Thirdly, by His admirable simplicity, which renders all His perfections one single united perfection, which is the equivalent of the divine essence itself.

Fourthly, the infinite peace of God is maintained by the union which reigns between the eternal Persons, who share one spirit, one heart, one will, one purpose, one Power, one wisdom, one goodness, and the same essence. This essence is eternal, impassible, invariable; hence nothing that happens in heaven, earth or hell can ever trouble its peace. God's peace is God Himself, who is ever tranquil and unutterable. He is the first and Sovereign principle of peace and entertains an unspeakable horror of all discord and division. He sent His only Son, the Prince of Peace, into the world to extinguish all our enmities with His Precious Blood, "killing the enmities in himself,"(2) to reconcile us to His Heavenly Father, as well as to our brethren and to ourselves, and to be Himself our peace: "For He is our peace." (3) Our Saviour accomplished this by destroying sin, the only source of division, and pacifying all creatures in heaven and on earth: "He made peace through the blood of his cross, both as to the things that are on earth, and the things that are in heaven." (4) Such is the peace of God which St. Justus called the silence of God.(5)

Now this adorable peace of God has impressed an excellent image of itself on the Heart of the Mother of Peace. In the first place, sin, the sole enemy of peace and the only cause of discord, never possessed the slightest power over the most holy Heart of Mary.

Secondly, divine grace, which always reigned within her Heart, kept the passions, senses, and all other faculties of the body and soul of the Mother of Grace under the rule of reason and the laws of God's spirit.

Thirdly, the most profound humility of Mary's Heart endowed her with a passionate love of suffering and humiliation, and enabled her to endure them in peacefulness.

Fourthly, the extraordinary love of her admirable Heart for holy poverty induced her to bear with equanimity the sorrows and discomforts which invariably accompany it.

In the fifth place, her ardent love of the Cross made her find refreshment even in trials and tribulations. In the sixth place, the invincible patience which strengthened her in the troubles, tempests and changes of our miserable earthly life, gave her complete possession of the most profound peace.

In the seventh place, the inconceivable charity towards mankind, which filled her gentle Heart, allowed no sentiment of aversion or enmity to sway her, even towards those who betrayed, sold and crucified her dearly beloved Son. Nay more, she herself offered Christ to the Eternal Father in expiation of their crime, and to re-establish an everlasting peace between God and man. That is why the Holy Ghost inspires her to say that she "found the precious treasure of peace that man had lost through sin." (6)

In the eighth place, her virginal Heart never having followed any will but the will of God, she always possessed God's own peace in a most eminent degree.

Finally, divine peace so completely filled and permeated this peaceful Heart that it became a haven of peace, and a source of tranquillity for all who, troubled and shaken by the storm of adversity, passion and temptation, have recourse to her incomparable benignity with humility and confidence. O Queen of Peace, grant that our hearts may bear an image of the holy peace that reigns in thine!

CHAPTER V11

GLORY AND FELICITY OF GOD MIRRORED IN THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

THE glory of God is a perfection consisting in His most clear knowledge of His divine perfections, the sum of which, being perfectly understood by His divine intelligence, constitutes the essential glory of His adorable Majesty.

Felicity is another divine perfection, consisting partly in God's knowledge, partly in His love of Himself. The union of these two spiritual activities constitutes the incomprehensible and ineffable bliss of His Divine Majesty. The divine Eternity of God maintains Him at every moment in full possession of all the grandeurs, glories, joys and felicities He has ever enjoyed or ever will enjoy while the ages course along.

Now I not only find an image of these divine attributes in the Heart of the Virgin Mother, but I behold therein this marvellous glory and incomparable felicity, in a certain sense, as they are in God Himself.

To understand this, we must remember that it is characteristic of love, more especially of supernatural and divine love, to transform the lover into the object of his love, as the fire changes iron into fire, leaving it its nature and essence of iron, but endowing it with the qualities and perfections proper to fire. As it is quite certain that there never was and never shall be a love equal to that which inflamed Mary's virginal Heart, we cannot doubt that divine love so completely transformed her, even while she remained on earth, that she had but one mind, one heart, one will and one love with God Himself. She loved only what He loves, hated nothing but what He hates. She had no interests save His, no glory or honor, no contentment or happiness save only God's. Thus did the glory and felicity of God ever abide in her Heart.

But did not all the ignominies and sorrows she suffered here below, especially at the time of her Son's Passion, bereave her of this bliss and glory? Nay, rather they increased it. Do you not know that the Holy Ghost, speaking of the Passion of the Son of God, calls it the day of His

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Heart's rejoicing: "In the day of the joy of his heart." (1) Speaking of His Passion Our Lord Himself calls it His Father's glory and His own. Thus St. Ambrose, (2) St. Hilary, (3) St. Augustine and other doctors explain the words spoken by Our Saviour on the eve of His death: "Father, glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee." (4) The Passion of the Son of God represents, in fact, the greatest glory of God, for it most abundantly repaired the injury done to God by all the sins of the world, and glorified the Creator in a manner worthy of His infinite grandeur. When the Church sings: "We give thee thanks for thy great glory," she means to thank God for the Passion of His Divine Son as well as for His own essential glory.

Now we know that the Mother of Jesus had no sentiments other than those of her Son, and she realized that nothing in the world can give greater glory and honor to God than sufferings and humiliations endured for the sake of His love. Hence, just as her Son calls His ignominious and most bitter Passion His glory and joy, so did she find her greatest glory and most perfect joy in supreme humiliation and the most poignant sorrows, for her honor and happiness consisted in the things which give the greatest honor to God and please Him best.

We should not believe, however, that this contentment of hers prevented her from suffering. Not in the least, for it is certain that no one on earth, after her beloved Son, suffered as much as she. But in Christ, joys and sorrows were joined together in such fashion that the joys possessing the superior part of His soul did not destroy the sorrows that ruled the inferior part. So when the Mother of Jesus was crucified and reviled with her Son, the bitter anguish and inconceivable torments she endured in her senses and in the inferior part of her soul did not prevent her from enjoying in her spirit and in her Heart, a profound peace and an unutterable contentment, for she knew that such was God's will and His good pleasure.

Thus did the glory and felicity of the Most High dwell in the Blessed Heart of the glorious Virgin while she was on earth, but in Heaven, her incomparable Heart is so completely lost and absorbed in the infinite glory and boundless joy of the Divinity, that this divine joy and implore. mortal glory transform it entirely and fill it with greater glory and happiness than the hearts of all the angels and saints put together.

O most holy Mother, my heart is transported with joy to contemplate thine own Heart so overwhelmed with grandeur and unspeakable felicity, which never shall end. I would dare to say with the grace of thy beloved Son, that if my heart possessed all these gifts instead of thine, I would, if possible, strip my heart and give them to thee. Yes, I would sooner be annihilated forever than to see thy holy Heart lose any of the treasures wherewith Divine Goodness has so profusely adorned it.

CHAPTER V111

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY: COMPENDIUM OF THE LIFE OF GOD

LIFE and vision, in a Christian soul, constitute the same principle. According to God's Word, Christian life and vision are one and the same thing, since faith, which is the light and vision of the just man, is also his life, as it is written: "The just man liveth by faith." (1) Eternal life consists in knowing God, as His Son Jesus Christ teaches us when He addresses His Heavenly Father, saying: "Now this is eternal life: That they may know thee, the only true God." (2) Since the life of God abides in His knowledge and love of Himself and of His divine perfections, so the life of the children of God consists in knowing and loving the Eternal Father. Those who know God by the light of faith, and love Him with a supernatural love, are alive with God's own life, and God is living within them. He is the life of their hearts and of their souls.

God always lived thus in the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and her immaculate Heart always lived in God and partook of God's life in a much more excellent manner than any other human heart.

The life of God consists in the very sublime and clear knowledge that His boundless wisdom gives Him and in the infinite love He bears Himself. Now the Blessed Virgin's Heart is filled with God's wisdom and love more than all other hearts; consequently it expresses and represents God's life better than any of them.

Two kinds of life exist in God: the interior life known only to Him, self, and the exterior or visible life, which manifests itself in the humanity of His Son, in His saints, especially while they are still on earth, and in all living creatures. In like manner, there are two kinds of life in the Heart of the Mother of God: the interior life, hidden in God and visible to Him alone, and the exterior, visible life, manifested in the body and external actions of Our Lady, having its origin in her Heart. Both these lives are entirely holy and deserving of eternal honor.

(1). Rom. 1, 17.

(2). John 17, 3.

THE HEART OF GOD THE SON

163-

To this we must add that God is not only life, but the source of life, animating the natural and the supernatural life of all living creatures, and therefore the Heart of the Mother of Life is not only alive with God's life, in which it participates in an eminent degree which knows no equal, but it is itself a principle of life.

God, however, lives in our hearts with different degrees of perfection, He does live in those who love Him tepidly, and serve Him with weakness, cowardice and negligence, but His life in these souls is imperfect, languishing and half dead.

God also lives in those who love Him more ardently and serve Him with greater fervor. Here His life is nobler, more vigorous and more perfect. If these hearts remain firm and stable in the ways of divine love, they shall be numbered among those of whom it is written! "Their hearts shall live forever and ever." (3)

In other hearts God not only lives but reigns perfectly. Who are these souls? They are those who have destroyed self-love and self-will, those who in this world and in the next are desirous only of pleasing God in all things. Their sole satisfaction and joy consists in doing His adorable will at all times and in all places.

Such is the virginal Heart of the Queen of Heaven, in which God always lived and reigned most sovereignly, to which He granted Mary perfect resemblance to His own life. For so great a gift, may His divine Majesty be eternally praised and blessed.

"O most holy Mother, how my heart rejoices to contemplate thy Heart living so noble, holy and perfect a life, a life never in the least impaired by sin, a life most admirably united with the life of the adorable Heart of Jesus. Would that all hearts and tongues would cry with me: Hail Jesus and hail Mary! Glory to the amiable Hearts of Jesus and Mary! Live all hearts who love and honor these admirable Hearts! May their hearts live forever and forever!

O Mother of my life, let my heart die to every life and live of thy life. Let my life be animated by the spirit and inflamed with thy love, that together with thee, it may forever bless, love and praise Him Who is life essential, the first and sovereign principle of all life, whose infinite desire it is to communicate it to all men!

CHAPTER I

"ALL THE GLORY OF THE KING'S DAUGHTER IS WITHIN"

Infinite goodness compels God the Holy Ghost to disclose to us the inestimable treasures hidden in the marvellous Heart of Mary and to proclaim them through Sacred Scripture, the inspired word of God. The first significant text that I shall point out is taken from the forty-fourth psalm: "All the glory of the king's daughter is within", (Ps. 44, 14) where the Holy Ghost reveals that the admirable Heart of Mary is a source of benefactions without number and of every kind.

To explain this truth, I shall stress three thoughts that are most glorious for the magnificent Heart of our great Queen and founded on these divine words: "All the glory of the king's daughter is within," and from her Heart.

Who is this daughter of the King? We know full well that she is the Queen of Heaven and earth, the daughter of the King of kings. But why does all her glory proceed from her Heart? It is because her Heart is the source and principle of all the grandeur, excellence and prerogatives that adorn her, of all the eminent qualities that exalt her above every creature, namely her position as eldest daughter of the Eternal Father, as

(*) This section has been considerably shortened.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Mother of the Son, as Spouse of the Holy Ghost, as the Temple of the most Holy Trinity, as Queen of angels and men, as the Mother of Christians, and as Empress of the Universe. It also means that this most holy Heart is the source of all the graces that accompany the privileges bestowed on her, of the holy use she made of those graces, and of all the sanctity of her thoughts, words, works, sufferings and of the other mysteries of her life. It means, finally, that her Heart is the source of the eminent virtues she practised on earth, of her perfect exercise of the faculties and powers of her soul and of her body, and of the glory and felicity she now enjoys in heaven.

How is her Heart the source of all these things? In the following ways. We know that the humility, purity, love and charity of her Heart have rendered her worthy to be made Mother of God, and consequently have enriched her with all the advantages and privileges that belong to so high a dignity. We know further that the Heart is the Seat of love and charity, and that love and charity are the principle, rule and measure of all the sanctity on earth, and therefore of all glory in Heaven. Hence, God, Eternal Truth, tells us in the Gospel that, as the heart of man is the origin of all evil, so it is also the source of every good. The Son of God teaches us that from the heart proceed evil thoughts, homicides, and blasphemies, (1) Our Saviour further tells us that the heart of the good man is a treasure from which He draws all sorts of good things, and the heart of the wicked man a treasure from which He draws all evil things. (2) We may conclude therefore that the supremely good Heart of God's most loving Mother is the source of all that is great, holy, glorious and admirable in her.

I say further, and this is the second of the three thoughts I promised you, that Mary's Heart is the source, after God, of all the excellence, Sanctity, glory, felicity and other great and precious marvels to be found in the Church Militant, Suffering and Triumphant.

The reason of this is clear. We all agree that every grace and blessing possessed by the Church, all the treasures of light, holiness and glory that abide in her, on earth as well as in Heaven, are due to the intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary. "All graces," says the learned and devout Abbot Rupert, "every gift that the world has received from Heaven, are as streams which issue from that sacred fountain, as fruits belonging to that holy tree." (3) "It was decreed by God in His eternal counsel," writes St. Bernard, "to give nothing to anyone except through Mary's hands.

THE HEART OF GOD THE HOLY GHOST

Through her He was pleased to give us every good. Yes, indeed, because through her He gave the first principle of every good, Jesus Christ, Our Lord." (4)

But how did Mary make herself so holy and so pleasing to the divine Majesty, that He should choose her to be the intermediary of this infinite gift, from which are derived all the other gifts ever made to His Church? It was by the sanctity of her most humble, pure and charitable Heart.

Let us acknowledge, then, that her Heart is the origin of everything noble, rich and precious in all the holy souls which form the universal Church in Heaven and on earth. We can therefore say of her marvellous Heart, and with greater reason, what St. John Chrysostom says of the heart of St. Paul, when he calls it the fount and principle of numberless graces: Fons et principium innumerorum bonorum. (5)

Shall we stop here? No, we must go further and explain the third truth that I promised you, which is that the Heart of the Mother of the Saviour is, in a certain sense, the fountain and source of all that is holy, and admirable in the life and the successive mysteries of our Divine Redeemer Himself.

Was not this represented by the river described in the second chapter of Genesis, which came out of the fountain created by God at the beginning of the world. (6) This fountain is a figure of the Holy Heart of Mary, and Jesus, the Son of Mary, is designated by the river springing from the fountain. Do we not hear Eternal Wisdom, that is, the Son of God, saying: "I came out of paradise," out of the Virginal Heart of Mary, which is the true paradise of the new Adam, "like a channel of a river,"

(7) that is, like the river that flowed out of the earthly paradise.

Let us acknowledge, then, that her admirable Heart, being the fountain from which that great river originated, is the miraculous Source of all the treasures and of the great and priceless wonders contained in that divine stream. We must conclude that Our Lady's Heart is the fountain and principle of numberless goods: Fons et principium omnium bonorum. St. Irenaeus asking why the mystery of the Incarnation did not take place without Mary's consent, answers that it was because God sought her to be the principle of every good. (8) What does he mean by that, if not that the Sort of God wished the Heart of His Blessed Mother to be the source and origin of all the blessings and graces derived from the Incarnation, and that He wished to become man only by her consent? "She is the perennial fount of every good," declares St. Andrew of Crete. (9)

O most loving Heart of Mary, O abyss of miracles, who can tell the unfathomable marvels that God has worked in and through thee! O boundless Sea, God alone can know the inestimable riches hidden in thee! O Heart most Holy, thou art Heaven's own heaven, for, after the Heart of the Eternal Father, thou art the most magnificent and glorious abode of Jesus, who is Himself the highest Heaven: "The Heaven of heaven is the Lord's." (10) In Next to the Heart of Jesus, thou art the highest throne of glory and majesty of the Blessed Trinity. What honor and praise should be rendered unto thee! Oh, may every human and angelic heart recognize and honor thee as its Sovereign after the adorable Heart of our Saviour!

Dearest Jesus, what thanks we owe thine infinite goodness for having given thy Blessed Mother to us, and for having endowed her with a maternal Heart so full of love and tenderness towards her most unworthy children! Grant, dear Saviour, that we may have truly filial affection for so good a Mother, and may the hearts of her children bear the image and likeness of the love, charity, humility and all the other virtues that reign in the Heart of their most loving Mother!

CHAPTER 11

"A BUNDLE OF MYRRH IS MY BELOVED TO ME"

"A BUNDLE of myrrh is my beloved to me; he shall abide between my breasts." (1) These words are taken from the first chapter of the Canticle of Canticles, which is referred entirely to the Blessed Virgin Mary by many serious and learned authors. We can therefore say that it is the book of the Virginal Heart of Mary and of her ardent love. It is a book filled with inspired words, revealing that her incomparable Heart is ablaze with love of God and filled with charity for men.

"My beloved is like a bundle of myrrh to me: he shall abide between my breasts," and in my Heart. Who utters these words? The Most Blessed Virgin Mary. Who is the Beloved of whom she speaks? It is her only Son, her well-beloved. Why does she call Him a bundle of myrrh? Because she beholds Him crucified and plunged in an ocean of contempt, insults, ignominies, anguish, bitterness and most atrocious torments. This fills her maternal Heart with so much bitterness, pain and suffering that she can truly call her desolate Heart a sea of anguish and tribulation, according to the words which can be applied to both Jesus and Mary: "Great as the sea is thy desolation." (2) Thy sufferings, O Jesus, are immense, boundless and bottomless like the sea. And thy dolors, O Mother of Christ, are so exceeding great that all the afflictions and desolations of the world are as nothing compared to thine, as the waters of all fountains and rivers seem but a drop beside the boundless ocean.

To understand this truth perfectly, one would have to comprehend the immense and ardent love of her Son that constantly inflamed the ineffable Heart of our Saviour's Mother. For a mother's sorrow over the sufferings of her son exists in proportion to her love for Him, and the love of our Redeemer's Mother was, in a sense, measureless. The Eternal Father had made her share in His divine Paternity and chosen her to be the Mother of His own Son; He therefore communicated to her something of His own inconceivable love, a love befitting the sublime dignity of her divine maternity.

(1). Cant. 1, 12.

(2). Lam. 2, 13.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

How great is the love of the incomparable Mother for the most perfect of Sons. This Mother holds the place of father as well as mother towards her Son, and her Heart is miraculously filled with paternal as well as with maternal love towards Him. His love is so great, that if the love of all the human fathers and mothers that ever have been or shall be were concentrated in a single heart, it would be but a small spark compared to the furnace of Mary's love for her beloved Son. He is an only son, the sole object of His Mother's affection. He is an infinitely lovable and loving son and she loves Him without measure. He possesses all that is beautiful, rich, desirable, admirable and lovable in time and eternity. This son is everything to His mother; He is her son, her brother, her father, her spouse, her treasure, her glory, her love, her delight, her joy, her heart, her life, her God, her Creator, her Redeemer and her all.

From this we may fathom the love of such a mother for such a son, and consequently the most torturing and painful martyrdom of her maternal Heart when she sees Him bathed in blood, covered with wounds from head to foot, and so filled with pain in body and Soul, that the Holy Ghost, speaking through Isaias, calls Him the "Man of Sorrows," (3) the man entirely transformed into sorrow.

We shall therefore not be surprised to hear St. Anselm thus addressing the Mother of Sorrows: "All the torments which the martyrs underwent are as nothing, O Virgin, when compared to the immensity of the dolors, which transpierced thy soul and thy most loving heart." (4) O sweetest Heart of Mary," exclaims St. Bonaventure, "Heart transformed by love, how art thou now changed into a Heart of sorrow, satiated with gall, myrrh, and absynth?" (5) "O admirable prodigy," he adds, "thy heart and mind are plunged in thy Son's gaping wounds, while thy crucified Jesus dwells and lives in thy inmost Heart." (6)

We should not be surprised, therefore, at the revelation to St. Brigid, that the Blessed Virgin would have died of sorrow during the Passion of her Son, if He had not miraculously preserved her. And Mary herself, speaking to the Same St. Brigid, says: "I can presume to say that my Son's sorrow was my sorrow, because His Heart was my Heart." (7) O my Queen," says St. Bonaventure, "thou art not only standing by the cross of thy Son, juxta crucem, but thou art on the cross suffering with Him: In cruce cum Filio cruciaris. He suffered in His body and thou didst suffer in thy Heart, and the wounds scattered over His body were gathered together in thy Heart." (8)

Finally, just as the love of Mary's maternal Heart for her Son Jesus Christ is past all that can be imagined, so the most painful martyrdom of her amiable Heart is beyond what thought can conceive or words express.

CHAPTER III

"I SLEEP, AND MY HEART WATCHETH"

"I SLEEP, and my heart watcheth." (1) It is the glorious Virgin Mary who speaks, or rather the Holy Spirit who utters these words through her virginal lips and reveals to us five mysteries most gloriously perfected in her blessed Heart..

The first of these mysteries is the death of Our Lady's Heart to whatever is not God, through self-denial. This is signified by the words: "I sleep." The second mystery expressed by the words: "I sleep," is the admirable contemplation of her Blessed Heart. The third mystery contained in the same words is the most intimate and perfect union of the most holy Heart of Mary with the adorable Will of God, whose commandments were so dear to her, that not only did she desire everything He wanted, not only did she shirk from whatever He forbade, but she found her entire rest, contentment, felicity and joy in observing the commandments of God.

Blessed are the hearts who strive to imitate this entire and perfect conformity of the admirable Heart of the Mother of God to His divine Will. This adorable Will being our end, our center and our sovereign good, those who obey it with all their hearts shall never fail to find in it peace, rest, felicity, and a real paradise for their souls. Outside of God's will one experiences only anguish, troubles, embarrassment, torture and a veritable hell.

The fourth mystery designated by the words: "My heart watcheth," contains a truth according to the highest honor to Our Saviour's Mother, namely, that her Son Jesus is her true Heart, for it is of Him that she speaks when she says: "My Heart watcheth." It is as though she said: «While I devote myself to contemplating and to loving the grandeurs of God and His adorable mysteries, and while I perform the duties and obligations of my divine maternity, my Son Jesus, being my Heart, is ever occupied in watching over all that concerns my body and my soul. His

(1). Cant. 5, 2

THE HEART OF GOD THE HOLY GHOST

infinite love for me makes Him take unceasing care to Protect me from the snares of the enemies of my Soul. He enlightens me with His own divine light; He guides my steps along the path to Heaven; He grants me all the graces I need to lead a life worthy of the Mother of God, and He constantly inflames me with the sacred fire of His divine love.»

The fifth mystery marked by the words: "My Heart watcheth," embodies the vigilance of the most holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. What is watchfulness? If we consider it first in God, before considering it in her marvellous Heart, we shall find that watchfulness is a perfection which constitutes, as it were, the strength and vigor of the divinity of God, and makes Him incapable of experiencing weakness or fatigue. It is like the torch of His divine Essence, in whose radiance He forever contemplates Himself. It is the eye of His bounty, mercy, justice, zeal, and all His other divine perfections. The Royal Prophet, David, indeed proclaims the watchfulness and care of divine Providence when he says: "Behold he shall neither slumber nor sleep, that keepeth Israel," (2) but he remains ever watchful and attentive to protect His people.

Now this adorable vigilance has established its throne and its reign most excellently in the noble Heart of the Mother of God. Consider that the Holy Ghost causes her to say: "I sleep, and my heart watcheth."

These words teach us that even when her virginal body was taking its necessary sleep and rest, her Heart never slept but kept constant vigil. Yes, her Heart, so full of love for God, watched day and night to study His adorable Will, and to accomplish it most perfectly. Her Heart, filled with tenderness for her divine Son, attended faithfully to His every need and necessity, providing for Her all-precious Child, with the utmost care fulfilling all the duties of a loving Mother to so perfect a Son. Her Heart, filled with esteem and peerless veneration for each successive event unfolding in the admirable life of the Redeemer, watched over His development, His miracles and mysteries, His actions, sorrows, words and gestures, so that she might gratefully adore and praise the manifestations in the name of all mankind, and preserve them as an infinitely precious treasure which would one day enrich the Church and encompass her true children with numberless blessings.

The Heart of our Lady, inflamed with love towards men, was always attentive to fulfil the obligations of charity, the queen of virtues and was ever watchful so as not to miss one single occasion of practising it.

Finally, the holy Virgin's Heart exercised perpetual vigilance over her own thoughts, words and actions, over her passions and inclinations, over all her interior and exterior senses, and over all the powers of her soul, that she might drive far away from herself anything that could possibly displease God and to use her faculties as perfectly and as virtuously as possible.

O most charitable Mother of God, by thy powerful intercession, grant that we may imitate the most holy watchfulness of thy faithful heart so that we may be numbered among those who merit the happiness to see the face of God in blissful eternity, to behold the glory of the God-Man and the grandeur of His Mother in that blessed company of souls who never weary of praising, loving and glorifying the most Holy Trinity together with Jesus, Mary and all the angels and saints. To the Triune God be honor, glory and empire for all eternity.

CHAPTER IV

"MY BELOVED TO ME, AND I TO HIM"

"MY BELOVED to me, and I to him." (1) "I to my beloved, and my beloved to me." (2) "I to my beloved, and his turning is towards me," (3) with His mind, His heart, His affection and His whole being.

It is not without mystery that the Blessed Virgin Mary repeats the three foregoing verses under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, speaking in the sacred Canticle, which is so mysterious and full of eternal verities. The preceeding three verses admit of nine explanations, each revealing to us the incomprehensible love of the Almighty for the peerless Virgin and the ardent love of her virginal Heart for God, Her Creator.

1. The all-surpassing love of God for Mary causes Him to become entirely hers: "My beloved to me;" by His thoughts, words and actions. By His thoughts, because she has been from all eternity the first object of His love, after the sacred humanity of His Word, and the first and worthiest subject of His thoughts and designs: "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways." (4) By His words, because St. Bernard declares that the whole of Sacred Scripture was written "for Mary, about Mary and on account of Mary." (5) By His works, because everything that God has done in the world of nature, grace and glory, and everything He has accomplished in the God-Man and through Him is more for the sake of this admirable Virgin, than all other creatures together as He loves her alone above all His creatures.

Similarly, the ardent love of Mary's privileged Heart obliges her to belong entirely to God: "I to my beloved," by her thoughts, words and actions. By her thoughts, she never entertained a single thought which was not centered in God or for God. All her thoughts were so holy and so inflamed with divine love, that they became like so many fiery darts wounding the Heart of His divine Majesty. As we have seen already, this is the explanation given by many great authorities to the words: "Thou hast wounded my heart . . . with one hair of thy neck." (6) By her words, she carried out most perfectly what St. Peter the Prince of the Apostles says: "If any man speak, let him speak as the words of God." (7) By her actions, the Blessed Virgin Mary performed all things for God's glory, in faithful obedience to the inspired counsel: "Whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do, do all to the glory of God." (8)

2. The ineffable love of God the Creator for Mary causes Him to belong entirely to her, "My beloved to me," by His power, His wisdom and His goodness. He is hers in a much nobler and more glorious manner than His possession by all creatures together, for the Father communicated His power to Mary so fully that she alone is mightier than every other power in the universe.

The Divine Son makes her participate in His wisdom with such plenitude that, next to His own Sacred Humanity, His Mother possesses all the treasures of God's knowledge and wisdom more excellently than every other human or angelic intellect.

The Holy Ghost pours His love and charity into Mary's virginal Heart with such abundance that He makes of it a boundless and bottomless ocean of mercy, liberality and benignity, flooding heaven, earth and purgatory, with its sweet graces and comforts.

On Mary's part, the inconceivable love of God flaming in her Heart, consecrates her entirely to His divine Majesty by holy use of her memory, her intellect and her will under its inspiration. From the first instant in her life she gave and consecrated her whole memory to the divine Person of the Eternal Father, her intellect to the adorable Person of her Son, and her entire will to the most lovable Person of the Holy Ghost. From the first moment until the end of her mortal life she never used the three faculties of her soul except for the honor and Service of her Creator.

3. Mary belongs to Jesus, "I to my beloved," as to her Creator, Preserver and Redeemer, who saved her, not by delivering her from sin, which never had any part in her, but by preserving her from every sin, original and actual. Jesus belongs to Mary, "My beloved to me," because she formed Him in her blessed womb with her own pure blood. She preserved, nourished and brought Him up, and when Herod's fury sought to destroy the Holy Child, she saved and delivered Him.

(8). 1 Cor. 10, 31.

THE HEART OF GOD THE HOLY GHOST 179 -

4. The Son of God is Mary's Son from all eternity, in the fullness of time, and for all eternity: "My beloved to me." From all eternity, He regarded her as His chosen Mother; in the fullness of time, because she became the instrument for the accomplishment of the ineffable mystery of the Incarnation; for all eternity, because Christ will forever regard, honor and love her as His most worthy Mother. For the same reason, Mary is the Mother of her Beloved Son from all eternity, in the fullness of time and for all eternity, "I to my beloved."

5. Mary belongs to Jesus, "I to my beloved," according to nature, grace and glory because everything she possesses in nature, grace and glory comes to her from her Divine Son; and Jesus belongs to Mary, "My beloved to me," according to nature, grace and glory, because, in the Incarnation, she gave Him His nature as man. She gives Him daily the life of grace in His members: "Mother of grace; life is given to us through the Virgin." Mater gratiae; vitam datam per Virginem. She has also given Him the life of glory in His members, because after Him she is the Source of all graces upon earth and of all glory in Heaven.

6. The Eternal Father belongs to Mary: "My beloved to me," as the only creature to whom He communicated, so to speak, His Divine Paternity, that she might become the Mother of His own Son. The Son belongs to Mary, as to the only one He has chosen to be His Mother. The Holy Ghost belongs to Mary as to the Bride He chose that He might work in her His admirable masterpiece.

Mary, on her part, belongs to the Eternal Father, "I to my beloved," as to Him with whom she is one, in a certain admirable manner, as she shares with Him the virtue of His divine and adorable fecundity, being the Mother of the Only-begotten Son whose Father He is. She surrendered to the Almighty her Heart and her will, her most pure blood and her virginal substance, to bring forth the God-Man, of whom it can truly be said that He was begotten of His Father's substance before all ages and born of the substance of His Mother in the fullness of time.

Mary belongs to the Son of God, as the only one who gave herself to Him to be His Mother, when she uttered the words: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done unto me according to thy word.» (9)

Mary belongs to the Holy Ghost, for she gave herself to be His Bride, that she might become the Mother of God made man without ceasing to be a Virgin, after hearing the divine words spoken by the angelic Messenger: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee." (10)

7. The intellect of the Eternal Father belongs to Mary, "My beloved (9). Luke 1, 38

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

to me," for He produces His Word, He engenders the Son in His adorable bosom and gives Him to Mary, to cause Him to be born of her chaste womb, to make of Him the flower and fruit of her virginal bosom and of her holy Heart.

The will of the Only-begotten Son belongs to Mary, because together with His Father, the Son generates the Holy Ghost, and gives the Divine Spirit to Mary, that He may, in a most excellent manner, become her Spirit and her Heart, and that she may, in a certain sense, have but one Spirit and one Heart in common with the Father and the Son.

The charity of the Holy Ghost belongs to Mary, for in her only, from her, with her and through her, has He performed the most stupendous miracle of His love, the incarnation of the love of all loves, who is Jesus Christ.

On the other hand, just as the Eternal Father imparts to the incomparable Mary the first and unique fruit of His intellect and of His adorable bosom, so also, as soon as this ineffable fruit has been formed in her virginal womb, does she offer, give and sacrifice Him to the Creator who gave Him to her: "I to my beloved."

As the Son endows Mary with the fruit of His will, who is the Holy Ghost, so does she give Him all the inclinations and desires of her will, so perfectly and entirely that He always disposes of them absolutely and in the manner most pleasing to Himself, for the Mother of God never possessed the slightest will other than that of her all-glorious Son.

And as the Holy Ghost accomplishes in her alone the greatest wonder of His love, namely, the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, so also did this Spirit of love and charity establish in her Heart the empire of the holy love and divine charity so perfectly that they have ever reigned and will reign there more absolutely than in all other hearts save that of Christ.

8. The Mystical Body of Christ belongs to Mary: "My beloved to me." By this is meant that the Church Triumphant, Militant and Suffering belong to Mary, or better still, Jesus Christ combating against hell on earth, Jesus Christ triumphant in heaven, and Jesus Christ suffering in Purgatory in His members, belongs to Mary because Our Divine Saviour gave His holy Mother all things together with Himself.

Mary likewise belongs to the Church Militant, Triumphant and Suffering, "I to my beloved," for His Son Jesus Christ has given her to the Church Militant, that she might be the general of her armies. He has given His Mother to the Church Triumphant as a resplendent Sun filling the hearts of the blessed in heaven with incredible joy, second only to the joy they experience from the beatific vision of the face of God. Christ has given her to the Suffering Church as a mother of mercy and comforter of the afflicted, who is ever spreading comfort and refreshment among those scorching flames of divine justice. Mary herself assured St. Brigid that every pain suffered in Purgatory was rendered more bearable by her intervention.

9. The Heart of the Divine Father belongs to Mary, as the heart of the most loving of fathers to the most devoted of daughters: "My beloved to me." The Heart of the Redeemer belongs to Mary, as the heart of the most affectionate of sons to the worthiest of all mothers. The Heart of the Holy Ghost belongs to Mary, as the heart of the most perfect spouse to the most dearly beloved of all bridegrooms. The Heart of Mary likewise belongs to the Father of Mercies, "I to my beloved," as the heart of the peerless daughter to the best of fathers. The Heart of Mary belongs to the Son of God, as the heart of the most loving mother to the incomparable son. Finally, the Heart of Mary belongs to the Holy Ghost, as the heart of a bride, who is a furnace of the holiest and most ardent fire that ever existed, to a spouse who is Himself uncreated and essential love, a God of love, infinite, eternal and immense.

Thus does Mary's Beloved belong entirely to her and in every way, and thus does Mary belong to her Beloved. Immense and infinite thanks we render to thee, O my God, for all the marvels of Thy love towards Thy beloved daughter, Mother and Bride! Everlasting praise to thee, beloved Daughter of the Father, most worthy Mother of the Son, dearest spouse of the Holy Spirit, for all the love and all the glory that thy admirable Heart has rendered and will forever render to the most Blessed Trinity.

O Mother of fervent love, deign to obtain by thy holy prayers, that, as the Father, Son and Holy Ghost have given themselves to us in an excess of unspeakable love, they may also take full and irrevocable possession of our bodies, our hearts, our souls and of all that is in us, to the end that there may remain in us nothing that is not totally consecrated to their love and glory, alone and forever!

CHAPTER V

"PUT ME AS A SEAL UPON THY HEART"

CHRIST gave all Christians this command: "Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a Seal upon thy arm," (1) that is, impress upon yourself inwardly and outwardly the image of my interior and exterior life. "For love is as strong as death, jealousy as hard as hell," which means, as I have died a most cruel death to turn your love back to me, so if you love me, you must likewise die to sin, to yourselves, to the world and to all things, in order to live only in me and for me. As my infinite love for you would have made me suffer even greater torments if such had been necessary to save you from hell, so also, if you love me, you must be ready to suffer the pangs of hell rather than offend me!

Such is the command of the Son of God to every faithful soul, but no one has ever kept it perfectly except the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Would you see how she observed this command of her Son? Notice that our Redeemer does not tell her: "Put my seal on thy Heart and on thy arm;" but He says: "Put me, myself, as a seal upon thy heart and upon thy arm. As I am the perfect image of my heavenly Father and the divine character of His substance, make thy Heart also a living image of myself; make it live of my life; make it be animated by my spirit, filled with my sentiments, inflamed with love and charity for me, and adorned with all virtues. Put me also as a Seal on thy arm, which means, let thy exterior person be an image and likeness of my own exterior, of thy modesty, humility, meekness, affability, mortification of my senses and holiness of all my outward bearing."

The Blessed Virgin Mary accomplished all these things most excellently and with an inconceivable love. "Love is as strong as death," and stronger still, for it vanquished the Almighty Himself and caused the Immortal One to die, Him who is beyond the scope of death. The Heart of the glorious Virgin Mary was so filled with love for God that she would rather have suffered every conceivable torment and death, than to do, say or think anything displeasing to His divine Majesty. (1). Cant. 8, 6.

THE HEART OF GOD THE HOLY GHOST

"Love is as hard as hell." Witness the infinite love our Saviour bears us, a love so admirable that He revealed to St. Brigid: "I am charity itself; and if I could endure as many deaths as there are souls in hell, I would do it most willingly and with perfect charity. I am ready to suffer for a single soul the very passion and death that I suffered for all mankind." (2) I read in a trustworthy author (3) that, when our most merciful Redeemer is obliged, by His justice, to chastise sinners, His infinite love for His creatures would make Him endure pain comparable to those of hell, if He were still capable of suffering.

So also was the Blessed Virgin Mary filled with love for her Creator and with charity towards souls, that she would gladly have suffered the pains of a thousand hells rather than consent to the least sin, and that she would willingly have undergone even more sorrow and suffering, if possible, in this world or in the next, in order to cooperate in the salvation of a single soul. We have also seen many saints inspired with this same readiness.

With much reason, therefore, does the Holy Ghost say, speaking of the love and charity of the Mother of God: "The lamps thereof are fire and flames." (4) All her thoughts, words and actions were like fiery flames leaping from the furnace of her Heart and flaring up to highest heaven, where they kindled an even greater love in the hearts of the seraphim themselves.

But let us return to the divine words of the only Son of Mary to His Blessed Mother: "Put me as a seal . . ." and let us see how they show us a most glorious privilege of our-admirable Mother. What greater favor can a ruler bestow on one of his subjects than to entrust his seal to him, saying: "Behold my seal; I place it in your hands together with my entire governing power, that you may use it as you see fit in scaling letters of every sort and kind."

This is the signal favor with which the King of Kings honors His glorious Mother when He says to her: "Put me as a seal upon thy Heart, as a seal upon thy arm," as though He were saying: "Thou hast had a very great share indeed in the sufferings and ignominies of my Passion; in like measure do I now wish to make thee participate in my dignity and kingly power.

Jesus speaks thus to the admirable Heart of Mary: 'I give myself to thee, O my peerless Mother not as a lifeless and material seal, but like one that is living and divine. Put me as a seal, yet, put me myself as a seal on thy Heart and on thy arm, that all thoughts, intentions, desires and affections emanating from thy Heart may have the same virtue and effect as those proceeding from my own Heart; as also that thy hand and arm may possess, in a way, as much strength and vigor as my own, to sustain, defend, protect, assist and favor thy children and all who shall have recourse to thee. Finally I place my seal and my regal power in thy hands, that thou mayst dispose of them as thou wishest and as I would dispose of them myself, namely, to grant petitions, to make liberal gifts, to dispense graces, for whatever end thou mayest choose. It is I who shall do whatever thou dost, and wherever thou dost place thy seal, I shall place mine."

After all this, do not be surprised if the Fathers of the Church declare that the admirable Mother of our Saviour possesses all power in Heaven and on earth, and that God grants her every request. "All power is given to him in Heaven and on earth," says St. Peter Damian.' (5) "The all-merciful and almighty God hath raised thee so high," asserts St. Anselm, "that thou art become all-powerful with Him." (6)

Infinite and eternal thanks be given to thee, my dearest Jesus, for having granted thy holy Mother so great a power. We are bound to express as much gratitude to thy infinite goodness, as though thou hadst granted the power to each one of us in particular, for thou hast given it to Mary that she may help, defend and assist us in all corporal and spiritual necessities.

O Mother of perfect love, behold my miserable heart, together with the hearts of all my brethren; take full and entire possession of them; destroy whatever is displeasing, unite them to thine and make them, after the example of thy admirable Heart, glow as ardent lamps of fire and flame.

CHAPTER VI

«MARY KEPT ALL THESE WORDS, PONDERING THEM IN HER HEART»

Devotion to the admirable Heart of Mary is by no means new, for it springs from the adorable Heart of the most Holy Trinity, and it is as old as the Christian religion and the gospel itself. St. Luke the Evangelist bears witness to this in one chapter of his gospel by making twice a particular mention of her most holy Heart. In the nineteenth verse of chapter two he says: "But Mary kept all these words, pondering them in her heart;" and in the fifty-first verse: "And his mother kept all these words in her heart."

The devotion, therefore, has its origin and foundation in the holy Gospel itself. The Holy Ghost inspired the Evangelists and willed that one of them should speak with such particular honor of the virginal Heart of the Saviour's Mother, representing it as the sacred depository and faithful custodian of the ineffable mysteries and inestimable treasures contained in the life of Our Lord. This must have been written that we might likewise honor her august Heart, so worthy to be honored forever.

To incite us to this devotion, let us consider this inspired text: "But Mary kept all these words, pondering them in her heart:" To understand the full significance, we must remember that, according to God's language, verba, does not signify words only, but also deeds as will be seen in the following passages: Ecce ego faciam verbum in Israel; (1) Quia postulasti verbum hoc; (2) Videamus hoc verbum quod factum est. (3) In like manner, we must understand the words: Maria conservabat omnia verba haec. Mary kept all these words, that is, all these things, for there is a great difference between the words of men and the words of God. The words of men are gone with the wind, and usually produce no effects:

- (3). Luke 2, 15.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

"They say, and do not." (4) But God's words are facts: "He spoke and they were made." (5)

Mary kept all these things in her Heart, that is, all the marvellous events of our Saviour's life. "This holy Virgin," writes St. Ambrose, "always carried in the depths of her heart the mysteries of God and the Passion of her Son and whatever else He did." (6)

She kept these things as wonderful tokens of the love of her dear Son for His heavenly Father and for mankind. She kept them as sacred relics preserved and cherished for most special veneration. She kept all these things as a store of precious fuel to augment divine fire brought upon earth by her divine Son and to inflame the hearts of men with fresh love. She kept them because they were the foundation stones on which our adorable Saviour willed to build His Church.

Mary kept these things in her Heart as living miracles and incomprehensible works of the all-powerful goodness of God, with which evangelical history was to be filled. She kept them as precious mysteries and secrets consoling and divine, representing the new alliance of God with men under the covenant of the New Testament. She kept them also as the precious inheritance and rich share of God's chosen children, joint heirs with the Son of God.

Our Lady kept all these words in her Heart as the source and foundation of the divine graces to be spread throughout the world, and of the immortal glories which were to shine forever in heaven. She guarded them as the boundless treasure of Divine Mercy with which she could enrich all the denizens of heaven and earth. She kept them to be the bread and wine placed on the table of the Heavenly Father to His children, as a priceless manna brought down from heaven by her beloved Son that mortal men might feast on the bread of angels.

Mary, the General of the great King's army, kept these words as celestial weapons for her to place in the hands of her soldiers and thus help them to overcome the enemies of God and of their own salvation. She kept them also as sacred torches to lighten the path of mankind shrouded in the gloom and shadows of death.

She kept them as medicine to heal our souls from all types of evil and as a powerful remedy to fill mankind with all kinds of good. She kept them as inexhaustible records of Divine Wisdom, in which we might find the divine lore of the mints. She kept them as the very Heart of Jesus, her Son, and therefore, as her own Heart. The heart of man is the source of his life, and the treasury of his secrets, plans and aspirations, so likewise Sacred Scripture, containing as it does the word of God, is the source of the life Our Saviour wills to have in His members, and the treasury of His designs and secrets. St. Augustine (7) and St. Gregory (8) both refer to Holy Writ as the Heart of God.

Our Lady kept all these words, not merely in her memory and her intellect, but in her heart, in corde suo, in that heart which is the most worthy sanctuary of all virtues, and the ocean of grace and holiness; in that Heart that is a furnace of love and charity, and the Paradise of the most Blessed Trinity. In that Heart she kept all the mysteries, marvels and every event of the life of her beloved Son, our Redeemer, to be the object of her love and of all the sentiments, aspirations and affections of her soul.

She kept them, not in part, but entirely, omnia. In the first place, Our Lady knew that no part of the Saviour's life could be termed small, that everything in Him was great, divine and admirable and that each one of His footsteps, each breath, each flutter of his eye-lids, each very least thought of His, deserved the eternal adoration of angels and men. In the second place, Mary knew that the love of her Son Jesus Christ for mankind is so great that He counts every hair of their heads: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered;" (9) all their thoughts, all their steps: "Thou indeed hast numbered my steps;" (10) and that He takes into account the least action performed for love of Him, in order to reward each deed with an eternal glory. He keeps them in His Heart as a precious treasure and guards them as the apple of His eye, according to the divine words: "The alms of a man is as signet with him, and shall preserve the grace of a man as the apple of the eye," (11) which means, "As a man having a purse full of diamonds would guard each stone jealously, so does God keep the alms given or the favor shown to a poor man, even if it were only a glass of water."

Hence the eyes of the Blessed Virgin Mary were constantly fixed on her beloved Son, and she was ever vigilant and attentive to the smallest detail of His life. Not one of these heavenly pearls and divine diamonds was lost, for she understood their infinite value, and that they would be the focus of the eternal happiness, praise and adoration of all the denizens of the heavenly Jerusalem. She hid there these treasures and preserved them in her virginal Heart, where, after the adorable Heart of the Eternal Father, they were more worthily, holily and gloriously guarded than in the hearts of Seraphim, and they worked hidden effects of light, love and sanctification more admirable than in the breadth of the empyrean heaven. Those inestimable treasures shall forever remain in Mary's Heart; there angels and saints shall contemplate, adore and glorify them throughout eternity.

But why did the glorious Virgin keep all these things so worthily and so holily in her Heart? Why? Because of her ardent love for her Divine Son and for us. She kept these mysteries in her Heart to adore and glorify them incessantly in the name of all men for whom they were fulfilled, men who nevertheless remained indifferent. She kept them that they might one day be adored and glorified throughout the world, and become like so many inexhaustible fountains of grace and blessings for all the souls belonging to the household of God.

She kept all these words so that she might reveal them to the Evangelists to be written in the holy gospel and thus they would become the center of the faith and religion of all Christians. She kept these words, finally, to repeat them to the holy Apostles, who were to make the treasures of Mary's Heart known and revered throughout the entire world.

Let us now see what is meant by the words: Conferens in corde suo. Mary kept all these things, comparing them one with the other. St. John Chrysostom and several other Fathers say that the Blessed Virgin Mary, having read what the Prophets had foretold concerning the Saviour, compared their prophecies with the events that were happening before her own eyes, admiring and honoring the marvellous conformity of the latter with the former. St. Bernard is of the opinion that the comparison concerned the admirable parallel of prediction and fulfilment of the angelical salutation, the conception of the Son of God in her chaste womb, her painless child-birth, the adoration of shepherds and kings, the flight into Egypt, and all the other mysteries of the Redeemer which Occurred in His Blessed Mother's presence. Thus did Mary keep in her Heart and compare everything she saw in her beloved Son and whatever she learned from His divine lips in their familiar intercourse. It was revealed to St. Brigid that while the adorable Infant Jesus lived with His holy Mother, He manifested many divine secrets, not merely to enlighten and guide her, but also to enable Mary to teach and enlighten others. Hence the martyr St. Ignatius, in a letter addressed to Our Lady calls her Apostolorum doctricem, "Teacher of the Apostles." (12) Other writers call her Heart the "library of the Apostles," the treasury of wisdom "where they learned," says St. Jerome, "many things they would never have known otherwise." (13)

After all this, what should be our gratitude to our heavenly Mother's most loving Heart for having preserved such great treasures for us? Should we not reverence it as a sacred depositary and faithful guardian of the infinite riches Our Saviour has acquired for us by His Blood? ought we not to honor her Heart as a living and eternal Gospel, containing the admirable Heart of our Redeemer written in letters of gold by the Holy Ghost Himself? How great should our veneration be for this holy ark of the New Testament, containing a heavenly manna unknown to the children of the world, the bread of life, which can be found and tasted only by those whose hearts are consecrated to the love of Jesus, the Son of Mary and of Mary, Mother of Jesus.

(12). Only one letter of St. Ignatius the Martyr is extant. The expression Apostolorum doctricem, is not found in it. Cf. Migne, Summa aurea, Vol. 2, col. 694, and vol. 10, Col. 928.

TESTIMONY OF THE FATHERS AND ASCETICAL WRITERS

Having listened to the Holy Ghost, whose divine Heart is the third foundation of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of the Mother of God, revealing to us through Sacred Scripture many marvellous truths which should inspire us to render fitting honor and praise to Mary's admirable Heart, we must next hearken to the Spirit of God promulgating this devotion through the writings of the Fathers and authoritative writers of the Church.

First, there are twelve Fathers and ascetical writers: St. Augustine, St. Leo the Great, St. John Chrysostom, St. Anselm, St. Peter Chrysologus, St. John Damascene, St. Bernard (who with other members of the Cistercian Order received most signal favors from our Lady) St. Bonaventure and St. Bernard, two illustrious sons of St. Francis, St. Lawrence Justinian, Richard of St. Lawrence, and venerable Louis of Grenada, (son in religion of the great St. Dominic, who preached so extensively the devotion to the Holy Rosary.)

Our first quotation is from the pen of St. Augustine. In a sermon on the Annunciation he brings out our great obligation to the loving Heart of Mary in return for her admirable consent to the Angel's request.

"O most happy Mary, who can render thee adequate thanks for the help thou hast given to a lost world by thy consent (2) to Gabriel's demand? What praise can be presented by our fallen nature, which found the beginning of the deliverance through thee? Accept, we beseech thee, our thanks, humble and weak though they be; accept our resolutions and excuse our sins by thy prayers. Receive what we offer thee, give us what we ask thee, pardon what we fear, thou who art the sole hope of our happiness." (3)

Another testimony of the ardent devotion of St. Augustine to the Admirable Heart of Mary is found in his book on the Mother of God: Materna propinquitat nihil Marine profuisset, nisi felicius Christum Corde, quam carne gestasset. "The divine maternity would not have profited Mary if she had not first borne Jesus Christ in Her Heart more happily and advantageously than in her womb." (4)

St. Leo the Great, who lived in the same century as St. Augustine, also speaks of the Holy Heart of Mary. He preached the glory of Mary's virginal Heart in the city of Rome, as is proved from the following words from his Sermon on the Birth of Christ: "A royal virgin, of the race of David, is chosen to be the Mother of the Infant-God and to conceive Him in her Heart before bearing Him in her womb." (5)

St. Anselm, the illustrious Archbishop of Canterbury and worthy son of St. Benedict, clearly reveals his love and devotion to the Mother of God in his writings, especially in a book called: The Excellence of the Blessed Virgin Mary. One passage in this work makes a special mention of the loving Heart of Mary. After the saintly Archbishop has pronounced a beautiful eulogy on the glorious Assumption of Our Lady, he speaks thus: "What praise and thanksgiving do men and all other creatures owe the Blessed Virgin Mary! The most pure holiness and the, most holy purity of her pious Heart, which surpasses incomparably the holiness and purity of all other creatures, merited that God choose her to be the restorer of the world which was lost." (6)

St. Anselm is right in attributing the resurrection and restoration of man and of all things to the most pure and holy Heart of the Mother

(2). The significance of these words of St. Augustine may be inferred from the words of Richard of St. Lawrence: Ex Corde beatae Virginis processerunt fides et consensus, per quae duo initiata est salus mundi. "From the Heart of the Blessed Virgin came the two things that marked the beginning of the salvation of mankind, namely faith and consent which Mary gave to the mystery of the incarnation." De laud. of the Sovereign Restorer. It was by the purity and holiness of Mary's Heart that she drew God the Son into her holy womb so that we might have a redeemer.

St. Peter Chrysologus, Bishop of Ravenna, to console and strengthen his flock in the midst of the many disasters and calamities of war, strove to imprint in their hearts the devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, exhorting them to have recourse to her mercy and to supplicate her to be their shelter and refuge in the misery that encompassed them. Those who followed the Saint's advice felt the effects of the inconceivable goodness of Mary, of whom this holy Bishop speaks beautifully in a sermon on the Incarnation. Here are his very words:

"He who is not surprised and amazed in considering the perfections of Mary's soul, ignores the greatness and wonder of God. Heaven is filled with awe at the sight of the majesty of God, the angels tremble with respect, all nature is overwhelmed at the brilliance of this power. Yet a virgin receives this God of infinite grandeur in her heart, where she gives Him a holy and worthy dwelling-place. And in return for so pleasing a lodging He wills that she exact from His goodness peace for the earth, glory for heaven, life for the dead and salvation for all who are lost." (7)

Can anything more glorious be said of the Heart of the august Mother of God? The Heart of Mary is the Sacred palace of the Sovereign Monarch of the universe. It is the holy house of the Eternal Wisdom which the Holy Ghost expresses in these words: "Wisdom hath built herself a house, she hath hewn her out Seven pillars. She hath slain her victims, mingled her wine, and set forth her table. She hath sent her maids to invite to the tower, and to the walls of the city. Whosoever is a little one, let him come to me. And to the unwise she said: Come, eat my bread, and drink the wine which I have mingled for you." (8)

What is this house that Eternal Wisdom, the Son of God, has built to dwell in? It is the Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. What are the seven columns? They are the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost, which support and sustain this heart and render it unshakeable to all the assaults of the devil. The victims are Mary's thoughts, affections, desires, which she sacrificed to His divine Majesty. The wine that Divine Wisdom mingled with water is the divinity of the Son of God and His humanity, united in the womb of Mary by the holiness of her Heart, which drew Him from the eternal bosom of the Father.

St. John Damascene, the great defender of holy images against the impious Emperor Leo and the iconoclasts, wrote several excellent essays on the devotion to the Mother of God from which the following lines are taken:

" . . . Thy lips were fashioned only to praise Jesus Christ and to be pressed against His. Thy mouth and thy tongue cannot taste anything but the heavenly bread and wine of the words of God, whose sweetness can fill and inebriate thee. Thy pure and immaculate Heart is always turned towards thy beloved, and is applied only to contemplate Him, to desire Him, to Seek Him and to aspire after Him . . ." (9)

St. Bernard, the glory and ornament of the Cistercian Order, expresses his ardent love for Mary's maternal Heart in these beautiful words:

"Open, O Mother of Mercy, open the door of thy merciful Heart to the prayers that we offer to thee with sighs and tears. Thou dost not reject the sinner even when he is corrupt with sin, if he comes to thee and begs thy intercession with a contrite and humble heart. It is no wonder that thy heart is filled with the greatest compassion, since the incomparable work of mercy ordained by God was accomplished in thy sacred womb in which God hath been pleased to dwell. He hath built a house of the immaculate substance of thy virginal flesh, a house supported by seven silver columns, a house in which He placed a golden bed, thy Holy Heart, on which He took His peaceful rest. The seven columns are the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost, and thou art the unique and holy woman in whom the Saviour of the World finds perfect and pleasing repose. In thy pure womb and in thy loving Heart He pours all the treasures of his power and love. Hence the Holy Spirit derives unfeigned pleasure from thee, O admirable Mary, when He wills to consecrate thy womb by the fulfilment of His divine mysteries. This adorable Spirit is a consuming fire, which inflames thy most holy soul, and consequently the loving Heart, which is filled with the splendor of His Divine Majesty." (10)

The virginal Heart of His heavenly Mother so charmed his soul that St. Bernard expresses a loving complaint in one of his works: "O Ravisher of Hearts, thou hast ravished my heart; when wilt thou give it back to me?" (11)

The Order of St. Francis has always counted Sons outstanding for their writings and sermons on the doctrine of Mary's Immaculate Conception. Among these sons St. Bonaventure was most prominent for the fervor of his devotion to the Queen of Heaven. His special love for Mary is shown in the psalter composed in her honor, containing 150 psalms modeled on the psalms of David, in one of which he calls the Heart of Mary the source of salvation. Omnis salus de Corde Mariae scaturizat. (12)

St. Bonaventure in other treatises on the devotion to Mary portrays the symbolic pictures of her august Heart. In his commentary on the second chapter of St. Luke he calls Mary's Heart the Ark of the Covenant. As the Ark contained a portion of manna which God sent down from heaven so the Heart of the Saviour's Mother kept all the mysteries of her divine Son, all the words of life and the sacred truths that He brought down from heaven to be the sweet and precious manna of our souls. (13)

St. Bernardine of Siena was another son of the Seraphic St. Francis. So ardent and tender was St. Bernardine's devotion to the Mother of God and to her amiable Heart that it is difficult to find his equal.

In a sermon on Mary's Immaculate Conception St. Bernardine shows the wonders of Our Lady's admirable Heart which will be an object of rapture for all the denizens of heaven. One marvel of the Heart of Mary is that it is the focus of a mirror towards which all the rays of the sun converge. In this mirror he sees a fire so ardent that it inflames everything placed in front of it. "Similarly," says the Saint, "all the vehement desires of all the hearts of Patriarchs, Prophets, and the other saints of the Old Testament concerning the coming of the Redeemer, united in the Holy Heart of Mary as in their center, kindle therein such ardent desires that no mind can conceive them and no words express them." (14)

St. Lawrence Justinian, Patriarch of Venice, gave manifest marks of his very special devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. His book, De triumphato agone Christi, "The Triumphant Agony of Christ," represents Mary's sorrowful Heart as a clear mirror of Our Lord's Passion and as a perfect image of His Death: Clarissimum passionis Christi speculum et perfecta mortis ejus imago. This implies that he who could view the maternal Heart of the sorrowful Mother, as the angels see it, would also see the cords, the thorns, the nails, the spear, the wounds, the pain and all the torments that the beloved Son suffered in His soul and body.

Richard of St. Lawrence, zealous penitentiary of Rouen, four hundred years ago, wrote a work in twelve parts called The Praises of the Glorious Virgin, in which he mentions six things concerning Mary's Heart.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

The admirable Heart of the Mother of God is the source of salvation. (15) It is the first of all hearts, which was worthy to receive in itself the Son of God, who came out of the bosom of the Father into this world. (16) In the meek and humble Heart of Mary mercy and justice gave each other the kiss of peace. (17) The amiable Heart of Mary received the Same wounds as our loving Redeemer suffered in His body. (18) The Heart of our Mother was the armory and treasury of Sacred Scripture for the Old and New Testaments." (19) Lastly, Mary's admirable Heart is the book of life in which the life of Jesus Christ was written in gold letters by the Holy Ghost, the finger of God. (20)

The white habit of the sons of St. Dominic shows that they belong in a special way to Mary, the Queen of Angels. After the principal aim of the Order, the glory of God, St. Dominic founded it to teach by word and example the devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary as a powerful means of salvation.

From among the writings of St. Dominic's spiritual sons I have chosen a few excerpts from the Venerable Louis of Grenada on the loving Heart of the Saviour's Mother.

"The holy Gospel ends the account of the sweet birth of the Redeemer by a very expressive sentence in which it mentions the Heart of Mary thus: 'Mary kept all these words, pondering them in her heart.' 'The story of this Gospel is truly a royal banquet and a table which God has set for the elect and has covered with thousands of kinds of delicious food. The Child, the Mother, the birth, the crib, the angels and the shepherds, all details are filled with miracles distilling drops of honey. Everyone may take what pleases him and eat what he likes. As for myself I confess that the last dessert, I mean the last sentence in that Gospel story, which pictures the Heart of Mary, is a dish of unspeakable deliciousness . . .

"O Queen of Heaven, O Gate of Paradise, Lady of the World, Sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, Throne of Wisdom, Temple of the Living God, Guardian of the Secrets of Jesus Christ, and Witness of all His works, what didst thy Heart feel in all these mysteries.... Who can understand what was in thy Heart? She was astonished to behold the Word of God, a babe without speech, to see the Almighty wrapped in swaddling ling clothes and lying in a crib. She was enraptured by the goodness of God, His generosity, His humility and His extraordinary devotion. She was astonished to see how greatly He loved man, how much He cherished them, did them honor, longed for their Salvation, ennobled and lifted them up to such a height by the mystery of His sacred humanity. "(21)

Further testimony is found in the writings of four learned writers, who are almost like four Evangelists in teaching us the devotion to the admirable Heart of Mary. I cite Joseph de la Cerda, Benedictine monk and professor of theology at the University of Salamanca; John Gerson, Chancellor of the University of Paris and French delegate to the Ecumenical Council of Constance; Nicolas Salicet, Abbot of the Cistercian Order; and Bartholomew de los Rios, of the Order of St. Augustine, whose works are entitled Hierarchia Mariana, "Hierarchy of Mary."

Listen to the Salutation to the Most Holy Heart of Mary, taken from the Antidotarium animae, "Antidotarium of the Soul" (22) of Abbot Nicolas, whose assurance that he garnered the prayers and salutation from the writings of the Fathers demonstrates the antiquity of the devotion to the admirable Heart of the Mother of God.

"I shall speak to thy Heart, O Mary, mirror of angelic beauty. I shall speak to thy most pure Heart, O Mistress of the World, I shall prostrate myself before thy holy temple and thank it with all the powers of my soul. I shall salute thy immaculate Heart from the inmost recesses of my soul, thy Heart which was found worthy to receive the Only-begotten Son of God coming out of the bosom of His Eternal Father.

"Hail, unique sanctuary, which God consecrated by the unction of the Holy Ghost. Hail, Holy of Holies, which the Supreme Pontiff dedicated for his admirable and ineffable entrance on the day of His Incarnation. Hail Ark of Sanctity, which kept within itself the Sacred Scripture engraved by the finger of God.

"Hail, Golden Urn, filled with celestial manna. In thee is found a delicious banquet, in thee are all delights, in thee are the remedies and sources of grace.

"Hail, Virginal Heart, inviolable sanctuary and noble dwelling-place of the Blessed Trinity, in which Divinity met humanity in a kiss of love. Rejoice with an eternal joy.

faith, at the blessed moment when thou didst answer the salutation of the Archangel: 'Behold the handmaid of the Lord: be it done unto me according to thy word.' May Thy soul exalt, O Mary, Mother of sweetness, and may every creature praise the happiness of thy most holy Heart from which comes the source of our salvation.

"O Furnace in which the Seraphim are inflamed! O Paradise of Delights! Oh, what pulsations of love, O Blessed Virgin Mary, did thrill thy Heart, when the vivifying Spirit of God, like a burning wind, breathed on thee. God drew thee to Him with thy whole soul.

"May thy most noble Heart be forever blessed, O Mary, thy Heart adorned with the gifts of celestial wisdom and inflamed with the ardor of charity. May thy Heart be blessed, in which thou didst meditate and cherish the sacred mysteries of our redemption, keeping them to reveal to us the opportune time. Praise and love to thee, O most loving Heart; honor and glory from all creatures forever and ever. Amen."

Among the Religious Orders existing in Holy Church, none has shown more zeal and ardor in the veneration and service of Our Lady than the illustrious Society of Jesus, whose constant work in this regard falls into three classes.

First are the Sodalties of Our Lady, established in all Jesuit colleges, which are schools of Christian virtue as well as learning, blessed Schools teaching the science of eternal salvation, which can never be wanting to those who cherish heartfelt devotion to the Mother of God.

Secondly, by their apostolic preaching the Sons of St. Ignatius have spread the knowledge and exaltation of the Admirable Mother of God throughout the world. Thirdly, many of the members, who number over three hundred authors of note in this one Society, have devoted their pens to proclaiming the glorious perfections of the Admirable Heart of Mary.

I have no intention of setting forth here all that these writers have penned concerning the august Heart of the Queen of Heaven, for it would make this work too long. I shall merely mention twelve whom I consider to be as twelve apostles of the perfections of Mary's incomparable Heart. Here are their names: Francis Suarez, Osorius, one of the first disciples of St. Ignatius, St. Peter Canisius, Sebastian Buadius, Father John Eusebius of Nieremberg, Father John Baptist St Jure, Father Stephen Binet, Father Francis Poiré, Father Paul Barry, Christopher de Vega, Cornelius a Lapide and Father Honorat Nicquet.

If you ask me where these remarkable writers learned the Science of the saving devotion to the Heart of Mary, I can only reply that it sprang from the zealous heart of their illustrious Father, St. Ignatius, who bore constantly from the day of his conversion to the end of his life the image of the Admirable Heart of the Mother of our Saviour, which is preserved as a precious relic in the Jesuit College at Saragossa.

May Almighty God vouchsafe that the example of this great Saint inspire the hearts of the readers of this book to imitate his devotion to the most Holy Heart of the Glorious Virgin Mary!

CHAPTER 11

ECCLESIASTICAL APPROBATIONS

THE Holy Ghost has inspired and approved this devotion by specific ecclesiastical approbations. Pope Julius II, (1) memorable for his particular devotion to Our Lady of Loretto, promulgated three invocations to be recited at the sound of the Angelus-bell, the second being in honor of the bent of Mary.

"O most glorious Queen of Mercy, I salute thy virginal Heart, whose most perfect purity was never stained by sin."

Pope Clement X (2) solemnly authorized devotion to the admirable Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary in six formal bulls granted to the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1674. The Pontiff dedicated every church and chapel of the Congregation to the Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary and also gave permission to institute Confraternities or Societies under the same name with special indulgences for the members.

Cardinal Louis de Vendôme, (3) legate of His Holiness Clement IX in Paris gave his approbation to the devotion to the Holy Heart on two separate occasions. Both acts of the Legate were confirmed by the Apostolic See and by Pope Clement IX.

Cardinal Peter de Bérulle, (4) Founder of the French Oratorians, has left us a wonderful treatise, Grandeurs of Christ, in which I have found deeply inspired passages in praise of the admirable Heart of the Mother of our Saviour. In one paragraph the saintly Cardinal speaks thus:

"... The state of the Mother of God gives Mary by nature and by grace the privilege to possess Jesus within herself and to possess the noblest part of Christ's being; to possess the spirit, the heart and the life of Christ so intimately that He is the spirit of her spirit, the heart of her heart, and the life of her life. O excess! O abyss! O excess of grandeurs! O abyss of marvels! O Mary, thou dost give life to Jesus Christ, and thou dost receive the life of Jesus Christ. Thou dost give life to Jesus, animating the heart and spirit of Jesus by thy heart and spirit. Thou dost receive from the heart and the body of Jesus living and dwelling in thee, life in thy heart and body and spirit together.'

Another of Cardinal de Bérulle's books entitled Oeuvres de Dévotion contains these very significant words on the mystery of the Incarnation.

« ... It is the mystery of the two noblest and most closely united Hearts that ever existed in heaven and on earth. When Jesus Christ dwelt in Mary and was part of her being, the Heart of Jesus was very close to the Heart of Mary. When Mary was living in union with Jesus, He was her all, and the Heart of Mary is very near the Heart of Jesus and influenced her life. At that moment Jesus and Mary were but one living person. The Heart of the one did not live nor beat but by the Heart of the other. . . »

"O Heart of Jesus living in Mary and by Mary! O Heart of Mary living in Jesus and for Jesus! O sweet union of these two Hearts! Blessed be the God of love Who united them together! May He unite our hearts to these two Hearts, and may He make these Hearts live in unity in the honor of the sacred unity which exists in the three divine Persons."

Here are other words from this holy Cardinal on the same subject:

"We should always seek the Son of God, and we should always find Him; for he who seeks Christ will find Christ: Qui quaeret invenit. There are three dwelling-places in which to seek Him. First is the bosom of the Eternal Father! Oh! what an august abode! Oh! what a celestial repose! The second dwelling is His sacred humanity. The third is the Heart and the chaste womb of the Blessed Virgin."

In addition to the foregoing, no less than fifteen archbishops and bishops have authorized the devotion, the office and the celebration of the special feast in honor of the Most Admirable Heart of the Mother of God.

These granting formal approbation are: Archbishop Peter d'Hardivilliers of Bourges, Archbishop Francis Harlay de Champvalon of Rouen, Bishop Claude de la Madeleine de Ragny of Amon, Bishop Simon Le Gras<sup>(5)</sup> of Soissons, Bishop Henry de Baradat of Noyon, Bishop Leonor (5). Bishop Le Gras was a relative of Mademoiselle Le Gras, foundress of the Daughters of Charity.

Goyon de Matignon of Coutances, Bishop James du Perron of Évreux, Bishop Henry de Maupas of Puy, who endorsed the devotion in his dual capacity of Bishop and Doctor of Theology, Bishop Andrew du Saussay of Tool, also Prince of the Holy Roman Empire and Royal Councillor Bishop Francis de la Pallu of Heliopolis and Bishop Ignatius Cotelendi of Metellopolis, both Vicars Apostolic of China and Indo-China, where Bishop Cotelendi died in 1662, Bishop Francis de Nesmond of Bayeux and finally Bishop Francis de Montmorency-Laval, Bishop of Petraea and Vicar Apostolic of the whole of Canada, known as New France.

Bishop Laval's approbation reads as follows:

"Francis, by the grace of God and of the Apostolic See, Bishop of Petracca, Vicar Apostolic of the whole of Canada, called New France. The Holy Ghost has taught by Sacred Scripture and by the mouth of the Fathers the excellence of the Holy Heart of His worthy Spouse, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and has by the same means exhorted all the faithful to have a particular devotion and veneration for her Heart. This book,<sup>(6)</sup> written to enkindle in the hearts of its readers the devotion to the admirable Heart and the Holy Name of Mary, has no need of our approbation, since it is in perfect conformity with the designs and intentions of the Holy Ghost. Hence it is not our will to grant approval when writing this, but rather to give public testimony of the particular esteem we feel after having read it carefully and to express the desire that this devotion be profoundly engraved within the hearts of all Christians. May the most lovable Heart of the Mother of God, which is all aflame with love for His Divine Majesty, and with charity towards mankind, together with her most august Name, be praised and honored by all men. May the Feasts, with the Offices and Masses contained in this book, be celebrated with fitting solemnity and devotion. This is the opinion that we hold of the book which we deem most worthy of being published. In witness thereof we have this testimony written by our own hand and sealed with our coat of arms:'

vinced that her most holy Heart was never stained with any kind of sin; that it was always full of divine grace and animated, possessed and guided by the Holy Ghost; that it never existed for a moment without loving God; that its love for the Almighty exceeded that of all the hearts of men and angels; that the Heart of Mary was perpetually filled with charity, zeal and vigilance for our salvation as well as with mercy and compassion for our miseries; that it was inebriated a hundred-fold with the gall and myrrh and transpierced with a thousand arrows of sorrow because of us. We have been most willingly led to grant our approbation to this book entitled Dévotion au très saint Coeur de la bienheureuse Vierge Marie containing a proper Office and Mass in honor of her Heart, and the other prayers and exercises of devotion on the subject, which we the undersigned, Doctors of the Faculty of Sacred Theology in Paris, have read and in which we have found nothing that is not in conformity with Holy Scripture, the teaching of the Church and of the Fathers, and consider it capable of exciting those who read it to honor and imitate the most holy and most worthy Heart of Mary.

CHAPTER III

EXAMPLE OF SAINTS AND RELIGIOUS ORDERS

THE Holy Spirit has also inspired many saints to show forth by word and example a most special devotion to the Immaculate Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

It is true that every saint belongs to the court of the Queen of all Saints; nevertheless there are certain ones who stand out as being very closely associated with the royal Heart of Mary, their sovereign lady. First, of course, is St. Joseph, her most chaste spouse, incomparably dear to her holy Heart. Even her parents, St. Anne and St. Joachim, cannot dispute the first place of St. Joseph in her heart, having conceded it during their lifetime, when they entrusted the Virgin Mary to his care. Then comes St. John the Baptist, truly the eldest son of Mary in the life of grace. St. Gabriel the Archangel had the inestimable privilege of being the Guardian Angel of the immaculate Mother of God. And what can we say of St. John, the disciple most dear to the heart of Our Lord, to whom Our Saviour entrusted the life and heart of His Beloved Mother from the cross? St. Luke the Evangelist also belongs to the Heart of Mary because he was chosen by her to reveal the sublime secret to mankind, that "she kept all those words in her heart."

There are many saints who have consecrated themselves under the special designation of spouse of the Queen of Angels. Among these I name as examples St. Edmund of Canterbury, St. Robert, St. Stephen, St. Alberic, Founder of the Cistercian Order, St. Bernard, St. Dominic and his disciple Blessed Alanus, Blessed Herman the Premonstratensian, St. Francis of Assisi, St. Bernardine of Siena, and so many others whose names are inscribed in the Book of Life.

St. Mechilde and St. Gertrude, noted daughters of St. Benedict, in the revelation of their surpassing devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, have shown most clearly the beauties and mysteries of devotion to the loving Heart of the Mother of Our Lord and Saviour.

St. Thomas Becket, martyred Archbishop of Canterbury, had special devotion to the seven joys of the heart of Our Lady during her earthly life, seven joys that accompanied the unfolding of the mysteries of redemption: the Annunciation, the Visitation, the Birth of Our Lord, the Adoration of the Magi, the Finding of the Child Jesus in the Temple, the Resurrection of Our Lord, and finally her own glorious Assumption into Heaven.

The contemplation of these joys of Our Lady gave much joy and devotion to St. Thomas of Canterbury; yet Our Lady appeared to him and revealed that she would extend special intercession, at the hour of death, to those who united to her Seven earthly joys the seven additional joys of her holy Heart in Heaven. St. Thomas composed a hymn proclaiming these seven heavenly joys, an inspiring canticle which is still sung and recited in many places; therefore this saint well deserves to rank among those specially favored by Our Lady because of devotion to her admirable Heart.

I have mentioned more than once the special tenderness of the Heart of Mary towards the Cistercian Order. Also belonging particularly to the Heart of Our Lady was St. Teresa, together with the entire Order of Discalced Carmelites. In addition to the writings of St. Teresa herself, I have seen a book published in Milan, by one of her followers, Venerable Father John of St. Joseph, which gives a most beautiful exposition of the ardent love and union of the Heart of the Mother of God with the Heart of her Divine Child.

St. Philip Néri, founder of the Oratorians at Rome, inspired in the members of his Order devotion patterned after his own signal love of Our Lady, devotion expressed in the writings of Dom Francis Marchese. His anthology of numerous devotional practices in honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary contains eight remarkably inspirational exercises for the Octave of the Feast of her most admirable Heart.

Among other members of religious orders who have merited distinction as votaries of the Heart of Mary because of their writings in her honor are John Tauler of the Dominican Order, Blossius the Benedictine and Lanspergius the Carthusian.

In the Life of Mother Mary Villani, a Dominican nun who died in Naples in the odor of sanctity on March 26, 1670, there is a signal proof of her devotion to the Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Mother Villani described how the Holy Ghost seemed to inspire her to recite three Hail Marys in honor of the Hearts of Jesus and Mary. At the first Ave she offered the Immaculate Heart of Mary to the Sacred Heart of Our Lord; at the second Ave she honored the sweet Heart of the Blessed Mother by presenting the Heart of her Beloved Son in thanksgiving for the graces He bestowed upon the Heart of Mary; at the third Ave she offered her own heart to the united Hearts of Jesus and Mary. Mother Villani's life records that this practice was rewarded by a vision of Our Lady, in which the Blessed Virgin expressed the joy it imparted to her and promised special protection for those who practised this devotion to her Heart and that of her Divine Son.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

St. Francis de Sales is another great saint whose words glow with burning love for the Heart of Our Lady, a love communicated to his devout daughters in religion, the Religious of the Visitation. We also see the Ursulines, and the Congregation of Our Lady, bearing in their lives the mark of the charity inflaming the Heart of Mary, the Mother of Fair Love. There are many other religious and holy persons who celebrate every year, mine on the eighth of February, others on the first of June, the Feast of the Heart of the Queen of Heaven, the most compassionate, most generous, most magnificent of all hearts, a Heart that cannot fail to pour upon this world, and obtain in the next, the richest of blessings for those who persevere in its love and veneration.

The Priests of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary have a great cause for consolation and a very special obligation of thanksgiving to Our Lord and to His most holy Mother for being called and received into a Congregation belonging particularly to their most Holy Hearts. Five principal reasons emphasize this:

First, the Congregation is wholly consecrated to this admirable Heart, one of the chief objects of its establishment being to give special honor to this august Heart, which is regarded and revered as its Patron, and as the model held up to its members, so that they may learn to conform their own hearts to its sublime pattern.

Secondly, all the churches and chapels of the Congregation are dedicated and consecrated to the honor of the mine most holy Heart. Our Holy Father Pope Clement X in his Bulls has named them "The Churches and Chapels of the Heart of Jesus and Mary."

Thirdly, this Congregation was the first to hold solemn celebration of the Feasts of the Admirable Heart of Jesus and Mary. It is not necessary to be concerned over the extreme unworthiness of him whom God has used to establish these feasts, who is the least of men, the first of sinners and the most unworthy of priests. Almighty God who created the world from nothing, and retrieved it without its having contributed to its own redemption, is wont to choose things most vile and low, which are nothing, to accomplish the designs of His Will. Did not God use St. Julian, a poor Cistercian, to induce Pope Urban IV to establish the Feast of Corpus Christi?

Fourthly, from the time Our Saviour and His Blessed Mother gave birth to this Congregation in Holy Church, it has experienced the extraordinary effects of love of the admirable Heart. Those who have the happiness to be members of the Congregation should have holy confidence that the Blessed Virgin will cherish all of them in her maternal Heart as she has so repeatedly proved. If they raise no obstacles by their sins and infidelities, they will have a secure place, for the hereafter, in her loving Heart, which is a Heaven more vast and extensive than all the heavens, for it is the abode of Him whom the heavens cannot contain.

Fifthly, if St. Paul assures all his spiritual children that neither life nor death shall ever separate them from his heart,<sup>(1)</sup> how much more strongly does Our Blessed Mother give the same assurance to her true children, for whom her love is incomparably greater than that of St. Paul for his disciples. But, on the other hand, each one of us should strive to live so that we may exclaim like St. Paul: "Who shall Separate me from the loving Heart of my adorable Father Jesus and my heavenly Mother Mary? Shall it be tribulation? or distress? or famine? or nakedness? or danger? or persecution? or the sword? No, I am sure that, with the grace of God, neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers nor things present, nor things to come, nor might, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate my heart from the holy Heart of Jesus and of His most Blessed Mother, who is also mine, "

As for the Religious of Our Lady of Charity, their very great obligations to the most holy Heart of the all-glorious Virgin shall certainly prevent any one from surpassing them in the love they owe to her Heart, after the Heart of Jesus, the most lovable, loving and loved of all hearts. They dwell in an Order which originated at the same time as the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, and is likewise entirely consecrated to the admirable Heart of the Mother of Fair Love. In token of this, the Sisters wear a silver heart bearing an image of the Mother of our Saviour, and are called Religious of Our Lady of Charity, because they have been founded to work for the salvation of derelict souls, and salvation is the greatest object of the charity that abounds in the Heart of Mary. They should think most highly of their religious vocation and follow with the greatest care and affection the devotional exercises of their holy Institute. They should often consider the very ardent love of Mary's Heart for souls redeemed by the most Precious Blood of her divine Son so that their own hearts may experience the sacred fire of charity with which they ought to exert themselves in the task of saving the souls entrusted to them by Divine Providence.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

This chapter has presented a large number of mints and religious orders who belong very specially to the most august Heart of the Queen of Saints. Through their example the Holy Ghost preaches eloquently the devotion to the holy Heart of Mary. Let us offer to her admirable Heart the honor rendered to it by all these saints and holy persons and cultivate an ardent desire to imitate their zeal and ardor. Let us beg them to make us sharers in their devotion and to associate us in the glory and praise that is rendered to the most powerful and merciful Queen of all Christian hearts that love Almighty God.

HEART OF MARY, IMMACULATE AND SINLESS

WITH good reason does Sacred Scripture call Mary the "Valiant Woman," for she is the marshal of the armies of God Himself and the principal enemy of the infernal serpent. The battalions of hell fear Mary far more than a small, weak body of foot soldiers would fear a powerful mechanized enemy force in battle array. She is as "terrible as an army set in array." (1) She has completely crushed the serpent's head. God's words to Satan after the fall of man, "She shall crush thy head" (2) mean that Our Lady would vanquish every kind of sin, mortal, venial, actual and original, the last being especially designated by the infernal monster's horrible head.

Mary would sooner have suffered all the torments of earth and of hell rather than to consent to the least venial sin, and a thousand times less to mortal sin. Thus did she completely overcome actual sin.

Concerning original sin, the holy Fathers, famous Doctors, learned theologians and sacred Councils have defended the honor of the Immaculate Conception and maintained that the Almighty God preserved Mary from original sin. I cannot understand how there are today so many Catholics and even devout persons, who seem to want to place this most worthy glorious Virgin on a level with the other children of Adam, warring against their Creator from the first moment of their existence. It is impossible to understand why anyone would maintain that the most holy Mother of God, purer than the sun, was tainted in her conception with the stain of original sins. (3)

To deny the Immaculate Conception of Our Blessed Lady is to accuse of error the infallible word of Eternal Truth, Sacred Scripture, which calls Mary the one "dove" (4) without sin or rancor, the "all fair" (5) and the "immaculate one" in whom "there is not a spot." (6)

To hold that Mary was not preserved from original sin is to oppose the divine pronouncements of the Holy Ghost, the Councils of the Catholic Church, especially the Holy Council of Trent, which declared manifestly that there is no question of Mary being included in the decree of original sin. (7)

To assert that the Mother of God was conceived in sin is to prefer private opinion to that of the Apostles, in particular, St. Andrew, St. James the Less and St. James the Greater. The glorious Apostle St. Andrew at the hour of death, expressed himself as follows: "As the first Adam was formed out of the earth before it was cursed by God, so the second Adam was formed from the virginal flesh never sullied by the malediction of heaven." (8) The Apostle St. James the Less makes a special mention of the Mother of his divine Master, calling her "most holy, immaculate, blessed above all creatures, more honorable than the Cherubim, more glorious than the Seraphim, always blessed and altogether irreproachable. (9) St. Thesiphon, disciple of St. James the Greater, called the "mouth" of the great Apostle, has left us the doctrine taught by the Apostles themselves: "This Virgin, this Mary, this holy one has been preserved from original sin from the first moment of her conception. Never would the (3). St. John here inveighs against Catholics of his day who refused to believe in the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary. He builds up a veritable thesis, adducing proofs from Scripture, the Councils, the Fathers, the Religious Orders and the liturgical feasts kept in honor of Mary Immaculate. This chapter is of special interest because the dogma of the Immaculate Conception was not then defined as an article of the faith.

Angel have Said to Mary, 'Hail, full of grace,' if she had been conceived in original sin." (10)

To refuse to believe in Mary's exemption from original sin is to show a lack of respect and submission to the Sovereign Pontiffs Alexander VI, Julius 11, Leo X, Paul V, and Gregory XV, who authorized the doctrine of Mary's pure conception, by recommending that a Feast be kept in its honor, and by approving its office. Some of these pontiffs even went so far as to forbid under pain of excommunication any opposition to this teaching either by word of mouth or in writing, in public or in private.

To uphold that Mary was not conceived immaculate is to believe that one has more light than the many Cardinals, Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops from all parts of the world, who favored the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception. It is to place oneself above the Fathers of Holy Church and all the Religious Orders of St. Anthony, St. Basil, St. Benedict, the Orders of the Cistercians, the Carthusians, the Franciscans, the Dominicans, the Society of Jesus, the Barnabites, the Teatines, and others that testified great zeal and ardor in defending the Holy Mother of God from the stigma implied in fact that she was numbered among the children of wrath and malediction.

To contradict the belief of the Catholic Church is to condemn the famous Universities of Paris, Cologne, Maintz, Valencia, Salamanca, Coimbra, Barcelona, Seville, Cracow, and nearly all the other Universities of Christendom, that refused to grant the degree of Doctor of Theology until the candidate bound himself by oath to sustain the innocence of Mary's conception.

To withhold one's assent to Mary's privilege is to give the lie to five hundred doctors in France, Italy, Spain, Germany, England, Scotland, Poland, Portugal and Flanders, who assented to this truth by numerous beautiful and learned books. The Society of Jesus alone employed more than sixty of its members to defend the honor of their Heavenly Mother in this matter by their erudite and pious writings.

To maintain that Mary was not spotless in her conception is to ridicule the many miracles wrought by Almighty God, many of which are mentioned in the letters of St. Anselm. It is to show no fear of the terrible chastisements which Divine justice will inflict upon those who oppose this doctrine as may be seen in a book written by John of Carthagen, a Franciscan.(11) It is to give preference to the impiety of the detestable Calvin, so full of hatred for the Mother of God, rather than to the devotion of the Christian world to the holiness of Mary's conception. It is to give more favor to the demons who were created in the state of grace than to the Queen of Angels. It is to elevate Adam and Eve, the first man and woman, who were the cause of the loss of countless souls, above their daughter Mary, the Mediatrix of Salvation and the Restorer of grace.

Lastly, to impugn the dogma of Mary's preservation from original sin, is to reject the wisdom of the Catholic Church, which solemnizes the Feast of the Immaculate Conception with so much fervor throughout the world, setting oneself against a fact authorized by the Church and stated by St. Augustine in the following words: Quod per universum orbem commendat Ecclesia, hoc quin ita faciendum sit disputare insolentissimae insaniae est. "To question anything that is done throughout the whole world by the order and recommendation of the Church is the most insolent folly imaginable." (12)

O Blessed Virgin Mary, I humbly beseech thee, by thy immaculate conception and through thy pure Heart, to take full possession of my heart. Give it completely to thy Divine Son and beg Him to banish from it all sin and to establish in it forever the perfect reign of His divine love.

CHAPTER 11

HEART OF MARY, OCEAN OF GRACE

IT is in the heart, that is, in the very depth and substance of the Christian soul, that sanctifying grace resides and exercises its powerful influence. There grace establishes the throne of its power, extending to the memory, the intellect and the will, affecting all the higher and lower faculties, and all the internal and external senses.

Granting this, I say that the admirable Heart of Mary is an ocean of grace. Yet it is not I who make this statement, it is the Archangel Gabriel, sent by God from Heaven to announce to the Queen of Angels that the divine Majesty had chosen her to be the Mother of His Divine Son. The Archangel greets Mary by telling her first of all that she is "full of grace." (1) Notice that he does not say she will be, but that she is full of grace.

Would you know how it is that Mary was full of grace even before the Son of God became Incarnate in her womb? You must consider two truths taught by several distinguished theologians.

The first is that Mary was filled with such eminent grace at the moment of her Immaculate Conception that, according to many learned divines, she already surpassed the chief of Seraphim and the greatest of Saints. From the beginning of her existence she possessed more grace than they enjoyed at the time of their greatest perfection.

The second truth is that the heavenly Virgin was never idle, but remained constantly turned towards God, ever exercising her love for His divine Majesty. She loved Him with her whole Heart, her whole soul and all her strength, according to the full extent of the grace that was in her, so that grace was doubled in her soul, if not from moment to moment, at least from hour to hour, and perhaps more often. She had therefore attained to an inconceivable and unutterable degree of grace when the Archangel Gabriel saluted her as being full of grace.

Now if this most Blessed Virgin was so full of grace before conceiving
(1). Luke 1, 28.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

the Son of God, what must have been the abundance and plenitude of grace poured by the Holy Spirit into her Heart and her virginal bosom, to make her worthy to give birth to the Son whom the Eternal Father begets from all eternity in His own adorable bosom, to make her worthy to be the true Mother of His Son? Surely, the dignity of Mother of God being infinite, the grace bestowed on the Blessed Virgin to prepare her to give being and life to God Himself must also in a way be infinite, for St. Thomas assures us it was proportioned to her sublime dignity.

If it is a great privilege to be Mother of God, and if no grander destiny can be conceived, then for a mere creature to form the Son of God of her own substance, what shall we say of the glory of having Him in her womb and making Him live by her virginal blood for a space of nine months! What abundance of grace did the Holy Ghost pour into her Heart to make her worthy thus to continue her office of Motherhood towards such a Son! Who could fathom what the adorable Infant, infinitely rich, generous and grateful, gave in return to the Mother from whom He constantly received during those nine months a new being and a new life, a life incomparably more precious than all the lives of angels and of men? To this we must add all the love and praises Mary incessantly tendered Him then. If Jesus bestows an eternal kingdom upon those who give a glass of water to the poor for love of Him, what gifts, what treasures, what graces did He constantly pour into Mary's pure Heart, in which He did not encounter the least obstacle to the inexhaustible blessings which He ardently wished to communicate to her.

Mary performed the duties of a Mother towards her Son Jesus not only when she conceived and gave birth to Him in Bethlehem; but also when she nourished Him, carried Him in her arms and on her bosom, clothed Him, delivered Him from the fury of Herod, brought Him to the Temple of Jerusalem, led Him back to Nazareth and cared for Him as every good mother cares for her child.

If, according to St. Bernardine,(2) Mary merited by her consent to the Incarnation of the Son of God more grace than all the angels and saints together by all their acts of virtue, what graces and merits must our Saviour's most worthy Mother have acquired when she so often carried Him on her virginal bosom. What blessings she received during her familiar conversations with her Son, when she possessed Him on earth and listened to His divine discourses; but above all when, in the Temple on the day of His presentation, as well as on Calvary at the time of His death, she offered Him to the Eternal Father as a sacrifice for the salvation of mankind.

If the Holy Ghost poured into this admirable Mother's Heart torrents of almost infinite grace to render her worthy of giving Him birth, what must He have done to dispose her to sacrifice her beloved Son in spite of so great sorrow and love? We can certainly state that as her Heart was then turned into an immense sea of sorrow, so did it also become an unfathomable and boundless; ocean of grace and holiness.

Who could conceive the almost infinite abundance of graces that filled the loving heart of the Mother of the Crucified Saviour when He visited her after His Resurrection? Measure, if you can, the extremity of this desolate Mother's sorrow when she beheld her Beloved Son actually die amid frightful torments, and you will understand the immense graces she thus merited, which Jesus Christ bestowed upon her after His Resurrection and on the day of His Ascension.

What treasures of grace enriched the most holy Heart of the Mother of God through the divine Sacrifice of the Altar at which she daily assisted with unutterable devotion, and by her daily communions made with inconceivable love during the fifteen years she remained on earth after her Son's Ascension!

After all this, be not surprised if I say that the Blessed Virgin's Heart is a means of grace, and if the mouthpieces of the Holy Ghost proclaim the grace of this glorious Virgin to be immense, even as the capacity of her Heart. "The grace of the Holy Virgin is immense," says St. Epiphanius. (3) "When I desire to contemplate the immensity of thy grace and of thy glory, my mind fails me and my tongue is dumb;" writes St. Anselm. (4) "The sacred Virgin is a treasure of life and all immense abyss of grace;" exclaims St. John Damascene. (5) "The grace wherewith Mary was filled," asserts St. Bonaventure, "was certainly an immense grace. For an immense vessel cannot be filled unless its contents are likewise immense. Now Mary is a most immense vessel, having contained Him whom the Heavens cannot contain. If she encompassed God in her bosom, how much more truly in her Heart? And if the immense capacity of her Heart was filled with grace, we must necessarily conclude that the grace which filled such a capacity was itself immense." (6)

Immense and eternal thanks be to the sovereign Author of grace, who gave His blessed Mother so great and vast a Heart and filled it with such riches that it became an mean of grace and a sea of blessings for all true children of her most sweet and loving Heart O Admirable Heart, thou wast ever closed to sin of every kind and filled with the highest sanctity of which a human heart is capable; behold I now offer thee my heart. Deign to take full and eternal possession of it, suffer not that anything displeasing to God may enter my heart but implore His Divine Majesty to establish in it the perfect reign of His grace and of His love.

Not only is the admirable Heart of the Saviour's Mother an ocean of grace, containing and almost infinitely surpassing all the graces of the Church, Triumphant and Militant, but it is also their Source and origin. As the Eternal Father chose Mary from all eternity that through her we might receive Him who is the first author and principle of all grace, so did God likewise choose her, that through His handmaid we might receive all the graces proceeding from that first source. As God deigned to give us a Saviour only with the holy Virgin's consent, so also did He eternally decree to grant my gift or grace only through Mary. "God wishes us to have everything through Mary's hands," says St. Bernard. (7) "None is saved but through thee, O holy Virgin," Says St. Germanus of Constantinople. "None is delivered from evil but through thee; through thee alone do all receive the gifts and grace of God." (8) Hence does the Church salute and invoke her as Mother of grace: Maria Mater gradae. "it is no wonder," exclaims St. Bonaventure, "that the graces of all the saints overflow in Mary as the rivers flow into the sea, for the grace of graces was to be communicated to the whole Church by her, according to the Saying of St. Augustine: 'Thou art full of grace, O Mary, of the grace thou didst find in the Bosom of God, which thou wast found worthy to spread over the whole earth.' " (9)

Finally, St. Bernard, (10) St. Fulgentius, (11) St. Bonaventure, (12) and many other Fathers agree that it was necessary for the Mother of our Saviour to contain in herself all graces necessary and useful for her state, because every grace is given to men through her intercession.

O my God, how admirable is thy goodness towards the children of men! Under what obligation are we to serve Thee, to praise Thee and to love Thee in return for all the abundant and most excellent graces wherewith Thou hast enriched the glorious Virgin! We are as much compelled to gratitude as if Thou hadst granted these graces to each one of us in particular, for Thou didst give them to Mary, not for herself alone, but for each one of us, that she might be made worthy to become the Mother of the Only-begotten Son, and to give Him to us as our saviour, our brother, our father, our head, our soul, our heart, our life and our all. May Heaven and earth and every creature therein, bless, praise and glorify thee for ever!

O Mother of perfect grace, thou wast the woman chosen to find the grace that all mankind had so unhappily lost. Through thee the God of grace and goodness restored to us what we had lost. To thee, after Jesus Thy Divine Son, must we have recourse in order to find the graces we need to serve Him and to assure our own salvation. Thy maternal Heart is the treasure and the treasurer of all these graces. In thy most loving and ardent Heart we cannot fail to find them. Hence dare we say to thee, with the beloved of thy Heart, St. Bernard: "O Mother of mercy, open the door of thy most tender Heart to the prayers and sighs of the children of Adam, thou who dost not despise the sinner however horrible his condition, if he but cry to thee and implore thy aid with a penitent and contrite heart."

HEART OF MARY, MIRACLE OF LOVE

SANCTIFYING grace is a great queen who never walks alone, but is always accompanied by the three theological virtues, the four cardinal virtues, the seven gifts and twelve fruits of the Holy Ghost and the eight evangelical beatitudes.

All these virtues and graces are found within the most august Heart of the Mother of God. As her Heart is the abode of sanctifying grace, it is likewise the palace of the virtues, gifts and beatitudes, these heavenly princesses who can never be separated from their queen. Her most holy Heart is an ocean of grace, encompassing all the grace merited for us by the Precious Blood of Our Saviour. As grace raises the holiness of her blessed Heart above all the sanctity of Heaven and earth, so all the virtues reigning in her Heart shine more brightly by far than in all other hearts of the Church Triumphant and Militant.

It would give me great pleasure to describe the marvellous perfections of each virtue, but lack of space obliges me to speak only of her most ardent love for God, her surpassing charity towards us, her most profound humility, and her perfect submission to the divine Will.

Let us begin with love, and say boldly that the admirable Heart of the Mother of Our Saviour is a living miracle of love. My intention is to show you the principle and origin of the love of God which consumes the Blessed Virgin's Heart, the qualities and perfections of that love, and its marvellous effects.

Would you know the origin and principle of this peerless love? Then raise the eyes of faith to the adorable Heart of the Father of all goodness, to the ineffable Heart of the Holy Ghost, who is the essential and uncreated love. There you shall behold the primal and eternal source of the greatest love that ever was or shall be in the heart of any creature save that of Christ.

The Eternal Father, having willed to communicate His divine Paternity to the Blessed Virgin by making her the Mother of His only begotten Son, made her participate in His own paternal love, that she might love

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

223-

His Incarnate Son with a love worthy of the Mother of God made Man. The Son of God, on His part, united His most holy Mother to Himself so intimately that, after the hypostatic union, there never was or can be a union so close as that which binds our Saviour to His Blessed Mother. Undoubtedly He communicated to her His love for His Heavenly Father, and thus prepared her to cooperate with Him in fulfilling that divine Father's will concerning the great work entrusted to Him, the work of the redemption of the world.

Then the Holy Ghost, having chosen this Virgin of virgins to be His Spouse, must have inflamed Her virginal Heart with a love worthy of so exalted a privilege; namely the love which the chosen Bride of God must experience for His divine spouse, who is Himself all love, and has transmuted, muted her with love, so that the Bride may become like unto the Bridegroom.

Such is the principle, such the source of the divine love burning in the Heart of the Queen of Heaven for the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Let us now mention the rare perfections that enrich the Heart of Mary. Here are twelve principal characteristics that impart a marvellous lustre to the sublime love of Mary's Heart. Hers is a love most holy, most wise, most prudent, most strong, most ardent, most zealous, most constant, most vigilant, most patient, most faithful, most joyful and most pure.

As for the effects of the love that reigns in the Heart of the Queen of Heaven, it would be easier to count the stars of the firmament than to number them. Count, if you can, all the moments Our Lady spent on earth, and you will be counting as many operations of Mary's love for God, for she never ceased to love Him a single moment during the entire course of her life. Count all her thoughts, words and actions, the exercise of every faculty of her soul, and of all her interior and exterior senses, and you will likewise be counting as many effects of her love, for she obeyed most perfectly the command of her Divine Spouse. "Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thy arm." (1) Hence all her interior and external actions were stamped with the seal of divine love. Count all the acts of faith, hope, charity, justice, prudence, fortitude, temperance, humility, obedience, patience and all other moral virtues which she practiced during the years of her life, and you will again be counting as many manifestations of her love, because that love was the principle, the soul and the life of all her virtues. Count all the services she so lovingly rendered to her dearest Son, as His birth, during His childhood and throughout His entire life; all the steps she took in her journeys with

(1). Cant. 8, 6.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Him and for Him; all the burdens, pains and anguish she bore for Him on account of her incredible love for Him; all the tears so abundantly shed for Him and you will still be counting further effects on her in comparable love.

But, to say much in few words, you should understand that perfect love possessed, filled and penetrated so completely the heart, soul, and all the faculties of the Virgin Mother that it constituted the soul of her soul, the life of her life, the mind of her mind and the heart of her heart. Thus love inspired and accomplished everything in her and by her. If she prayed, love prayed in and by Mary, if she adored God, love adored and praised Him in her and through her; if she spoke love spoke by her lips; if she was silent, her silence stemmed from love; if she worked, love motivated her action; if she rested, love caused her repose; if she ate or drank, it was in obedience to the words of the Holy Ghost, who is essential love: "Whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do, do all to the glory of God." (2) If she mortified herself, her decision was moved and guided by the same love, which kept her in a state of constant mortification.

Finally, the virginal Heart of Mary became so completely transfigured by love, that Suarez(3) boldly affirms that the effects and acts of its love were innumerable. Now if St Bernardine writes that the seven words spoken by the Blessed Virgin, as related in the holy Gospel, were seven flames of love, what shall we say of all the acts and effects of love which sprang from that glowing furnace, except that they were as many fires and flames of divine love, which would be capable of kindling all the hearts in the universe, if no obstacles were raised by the frigidity of sin? To this we must add the further words of St. Bernardine: "The Blessed Virgin's love for her Son was so great that she would have been willing to die for Him times without number." (4) Furthermore, it is quite certain that Our Lady's love was almost without limit or measure. Hence one must not hesitate to say she would have been ready to suffer as many deaths and as many infernal torments for her Son's sake as there are atoms in the air and grains of sand on the seashore. Now count all the acts of love mentioned by Suarez and by St. Bernardine, as well as all the deaths and infernal torments she would gladly have suffered, and you will count the effects of the love that consumes the marvellous Heart of the Mother of Fair Love.

Nor is this all. You must also count the numberless acts and the myriade.

effects of love that were ever produced in Heaven and on earth by the hearts of all the Seraphim and other angelic Spirits, of all the holy Confessors, of all the holy Virgins and of all the Saints, and you will still be counting as many effects of the ineffable love that burns in the Heart of our Saviour's Mother. It is undoubtedly true that Quod est causa causae, est causa causati, that the effects proceeding from a cause must be attributed to the principle and origin of that cause. Now it is a doctrine of faith that Mary is the Mother of the God of love. We must conclude, therefore, that the love which burns in the hearts of all the angels, and saints, and all the acts and effects of love ever produced by them, having proceeded from the adorable Heart of that God of love, are to be reckoned among the effects of the admirable Heart of His holy Mother. "is is what St. Bernard has in mind when he tells us that God had decreed that we should receive everything through Mary. (5) And another holy Doctor adds: "Without Mary's petition and intercession, nothing comes down to us from Heaven." (6)

This is also signified by the words of Raymund Jourdain: "Whatever good and precious things the world possesses has come to it through Mary, in Mary, with Mary and from Mary." (7) And have we not heard St. Irenaeus explain that God accomplished the mystery of the Incarnation only with the consent of the glorious Virgin because He willed that she should be the principle of every good for mankind? (8)

O Jesus Christ, God of love, may all the hearts and tongues of angels and of men love and glorify thee infinitely and eternally for having established such a furnace of love in thy peerless Mother's divine Heart. O God of my heart, I offer thee all her love to atone for the icy coldness of my miserable heart. O Mother of love, send into our hearts wine living sparks from the divine fire that burns in thy virginal Heart, and be pleased to associate thy unworthy children with thee in all the love and glory thou dost forever render to the most adorable and amiable Trinity.

CHAPTER IV

HEART OF MARY, MIRROR OF CHARITY

AMONG the innumerable blessings we have received from the liberal hand of our Heavenly Father, there are three very important favors which seem to pass unnoticed by the majority of men. They are three special graces wherewith His immense goodness honored us when we were given the first two commandments: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart ... and thy neighbor as thyself." (1)

The first of these favors consists in the fact that it pleased God to command us to love Him. What goodness! How great a favor! To understand this commandment accurately we would have to measure the infinite distance that separates God from man, the Creator from the creature, the All from the nothingness, the Saint of saints from the most miserable sinner, God Who is the Sovereign good and the source of all good from man who is a dark pit of evil and miseries. If we but knew who God is and what we are, we would certainly be amazed by His divine Majesty's command to love Him, for we should clearly see that God confers tremendous privileges by merely allowing us to think of Him, and that it would be a signal honor if He simply permitted us to adore Him as our Creator and Sovereign Lord. But this does not satisfy His infinite goodness towards us; He therefore commands us to love Him as our Father.

The second favor manifested is that God is not content with loving us as His children, but publishes an explicit commandment to all men on earth, whatever their condition, enjoining them to love each other as they love themselves, under penalty of incurring His eternal wrath and indignation. He forbids them, with the threat of hell fire, to harm their brethren in any way, whether by deed, word, intention or even thought, in their bodies, their Souls, their reputation or anything that belongs to them. O ineffable goodness! O admirable love!

The third favor, even greater than the others, is that God commands
(1). Luke 10, 27.

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

all men to love each other not only as they love themselves, but as they love Him. St. Augustine, St. Thomas and all theologians teach us that the love or charity with which we must love God and our neighbor is but one and the same virtue, namely, the third theological virtue. Hence our Saviour declares in the holy Gospel that the second commandment, obliging us to love our neighbor, is like unto the first, which enjoins us to love God. The reason is that, in order to love our neighbor as God wills, we must love him in God and for God. This means that we must love our fellow man with the love wherewith God loves him, not for our own interest and satisfaction, but for the love of God, and because God wants us to love him. Now to love God in this way is to love Him in our neighbor, and to love our neighbor with love similar to our love for God. Hence the second commandment is like unto the first.

Thus does the Blessed Virgin love us with a most great and ardent love. In the first place, she loves us with the same love she has for God, seeing and loving God in us. The third theological virtue in Mary's Heart is not of another nature than the one in the hearts of the rest of the faithful, which has as its sole object God and neighbor. It is true that this divine virtue is, in a sense, indescribably more ardent in the Blessed Virgin's Heart where its object is God instead of ourselves; nevertheless it is substantially the same charity (though different in degree), and the Mother of Fair Love truly loves us with the same love wherewith she loves God Himself.

I maintain, in the second place, that the most glorious Virgin loves us with a supremely ardent love, because she loves us with the very same love with which she loves the God-Man, her Divine Son Jesus Christ, for she knows that He is our Head and we are His members, that we are therefore one with Him, as members are one with their head. She thus considers us her children and loves us, in a way, even as her own Son. We are her children for two reasons: first, because as Mother of our Head, she is mother of His members as well, and Second because our merciful Saviour, when He was suspended on the Cross, out of an excess of inconceivable goodness gave us to His Blessed Mother to be her children. We had nailed Him to the Cross by our sins, we had made Him suffer the most ignominious and cruel death; yet at the very hour when we were thus unworthily and cruelly treating Him, He conferred upon us the most signal favor, the gift of His most admirable Mother. Christ gave her to us to be not only our Queen and our Lady, but Our Mother as well, saying to each of us in the person of the beloved Disciple: "Behold thy Mother." (2) He gave us to her, not as Servants and (2). John 19, 27.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

slaves (which in itself would be a great honor for us), but as her children: "Behold thy Son." Thus did Christ speak of each one of us, as though He were saying: "Mother, behold all my members: I give them to thee to be thy children. I put them in my place, that thou mayest consider them as being myself, and may love them with the same love as thou lovest me. Thou dost see, by my horrible torments and cruel death, how much I love them; do thou likewise love them as I do."

Mary's Heart is a burning furnace whose flames reach everywhere, generating more fire and warmth of love for us, than ever existed in the hearts of all fathers and mothers towards their children, of brothers for brothers, of friends for their friends, in one word, more ardour than ever burned in all the hearts of Heaven and of earth.

This love is like a dazzling Sun illuminating all things. It lightens the darkness of those who approach its glow; it reveals our faults and weaknesses, that we may detest them; it shows us our nothingness and our misery so that we may become humiliated in our own eyes. The glow of Mary's love reveals to us the many millice and snares of the enemies of our salvation, in order to save us from them; it shows us the illusion and deceit of the folly and conceits of the world, teaching us to despise them; and it manifests to us the marvels of the greatness and goodness of God, that we may Serve Him with fear and with love.

The charity of Mary is a most vigilant love, ever watching over us and our actions, in order to protect, assist and guide us in all things.

This most holy love, or rather this most holy Heart of the Mother of Uncreated Love, is Heaven's oracle for all who have recourse to it in their doubts and anxieties. It is an oracle full of incredible goodness, which resolves our difficulties, enlightens our doubts, and always imparts salutary and helpful answers, if we have recourse to it with humility and confidence.

Of this love one can truly say that it is a mighty tower and an impregnable bulwark for all the friends of God, who would choose to die rather than deliberately offend Him, especially for humble souls, for pure persons (as everyone loves most those who resemble him), and for those who have vowed in a particular manner to Serve and honor the beloved of God, namely, Mary most amiable, the Mother of Jesus; for she also loves most dearly those who love and imitate her.

Mary's love is swift to help them that invoke her. "Remember, O most pious Virgin," Says St. Bernard, "that never was it known from the beginning of the world that any of those who fled to thy protection and sought the help of thy prayers, was left unaided." "O most amiable

Mary," adds the same saint, "we cannot pronounce thy name without being comforted; no one can invoke thee without being heard or without feeling the effects of thy assistance." (3)

Mary's is a love that is mild and meek, and knows not how to be severe or terrifying. "She is full of sweetness," says St. Bernard, "her Heart and mouth are filled with milk and honey." (4) "Milk and honey are under thy tongue." (5) "Her heart is manna," writes St. Ambrose, "containing all the delights of Paradise." (6) "It is a promised land;" observes St. Augustine, "flowing with milk and honey." (7)

The love of the admirable Heart of the Mother of God is a paradise of delights for all hearts who, being truly detached from all earthly things, strive to serve, honor and love only Jesus and Mary, the King and Queen of Heaven.

Mary's is a most liberal love, which has given us an immense and infinite treasure encompassing all the riches of Divinity and whatever is rare, precious, desirable and lovable in Heaven and on earth, in time and eternity. Indeed Mary has given us the treasure of all treasures, because the love of her virginal Heart gave the Son of God, drawn from the adorable Bosom of His Heavenly Father, a resting place on earth; and through her love He entered the hallowed womb of Mary for our sake.

Mary's charity is a love most zealous for the salvation of souls. This zeal gave the Blessed Virgin, from the beginning of her life, a most ardent desire to see the Son of God come into the world to save mankind from universal perdition of sin. This zeal made her offer so many prayers, practice such mortifications and shed so many bitter tears to obtain the grace that the Eternal Father might send His Son into the world to deliver us from the bondage of hell. This zeal induced Mary to give her most willing consent to the mystery of the Incarnation. It caused her to give us the Saviour, and to preserve, nourish and educate Him for us with the greatest imaginable care and affection. It obliged her to offer Him on Calvary at the cost of the greatest suffering and anguish ever experienced.

The love of Mary is a most perfect love, than which none is more perfect or more excellent.

It is most constant and firm, for the Mother of all charity loves us with an invincible love: Amore invincibili, says St. Peter Damian. All the torrent of our ingratitude, infidelities, negligences and cowardice in her service, all our imperfections and innumerable offenses are not able to extinguish Mary's love, for it is stronger than death and hell. This love perseveres in its goodness and care until our last breath, and exerts all its power, wisdom and mercy to protect us from the malice and snares of the enemies of our salvation.

O Mother of Love, make us sharers in thy boundless charity. Obtain for us the grace of doing all things for the pure love and glory of God.

CHAPTER V

HEART OF MARY, ABYSS OF HUMILITY

CONSIDER the words of the Holy Ghost: "Deep calleth on deep." (1) What do they mean? They mean that the Holy Ghost sets before us the image of a twofold or dual abyss.

The first is the humble heart immersed by profound humility in the realization of its own nothingness, an abyss that engulfs the humble man, preventing him from seeing in himself anything but nothingness and making him love the lowliness and abjection of such nothingness.

The second is the abyss of graces and celestial blessings that every, where surround and accompany the truly humble heart.

The first depth calls for the second: "Deep called on deep," because the prayer of the humble heart has such power with God, that it is always heard. Divine Goodness can refuse it nothing. It is the profundity that summons and attracts all the graces of Heaven; God showers them into the lowly soul with open hand and without reserve. Humility is the guardian of all other graces and virtues, and they are safe where it abides, according to the words of St. Basil: «Humility is the safe treasury of all virtues.» (2)

All the greatness of the Blessed Virgin was accomplished by the humility of her most holy Heart. From the first to the last moment of her life, her humility never ceased to invoke and draw upon her grace after grace, perfection after perfection, holiness upon holiness, until it brought her to the summit of the grace and holiness that next to that of Christ ever was or shall be greatest among men. As St. Bernard puts it: "It was just that she who considered herself the least of creatures, even though she was above all others, should have been honored as the worthiest and holiest of all." (3)

Would you observe the admirable effects of such prodigious humility in the Heart of the Queen of the humble? Consider Mary throughout the course of her life, and you will see that, just as the life of Jesus was a constant exercise of humility, so the life of His Blessed Mother constituted a perpetual practice of the same virtue. As humility is our Saviour's own spiritual virtue, which He constantly preached by His example and earnestly recommended with the words: "Learn of me, because I am meek, and humble of heart"; (4) so can we say that humility is also the most beloved virtue of His dearest Mother. She urges us to practice it by her example, and does not cease to tell us with her Divine Son: "Learn of me, my dearest children, for I am meek and humble of heart." This is the constant message of her marvellous humility, which I shall now describe in its twelve principal manifestations.

The first manifestation was the complete self-annihilation with which she adored God, from the very beginning of her life, as her Creator and Sovereign Lord.

The second manifestation of the humility of the glorious Virgin's most holy Heart was the uneasiness she felt on hearing the salutation of the Angel Gabriel. Whence this perturbation? Was it from beholding the Archangel? "No," says the Angelic Doctor, "for Our Lady was accustomed to visits from angels." (5) And the holy Gospel says that she was troubled not by the presence of the Angel, but by his words: "She was troubled at his saying" (6) because he greeted her as full of grace, as one having the Lord with her in a special manner, and as being blessed among all women. That salutation is what troubles her most humble Heart, which cannot listen to such exalted praises without trembling.

The third effect produced by the humility of Mary's admirable Heart was that, after hearing St. Gabriel proclaim that God had chosen her to be the Mother of His Divine Son, and consequently the sovereign Lady of the universe, she answered the Angel with the words: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done to me according to thy word." St. Bonaventure exclaims: "How wonderfully deep is Mary's humility! An archangel salutes her; she is called full of grace; she is told the Holy Ghost will overshadow her; she becomes the Mother of God Himself; she is raised above all creatures; she is appointed sovereign Lady of Heaven and earth; and yet instead of becoming filled with pride, she humbles herself most deeply, saying, 'Behold the handmaid of the Lord.'" Heart was that, after she had conceived the Only-begotten Son of God in her blessed womb, she revealed to no one, not even to her spouse St. Joseph, the tremendous mystery which exalted her to the highest pinnacle. She would not have mentioned the sublime dignity, that raised her above the Seraphim and put the entire world under her feet, if the Holy Spirit had not revealed it to her cousin, St. Elizabeth. This stupendous silence, caused by the marvellous humility of our Saviour's Mother, excites the admiration of St. Thomas of Villanova and makes him exclaim: "O marvellous modesty, peerless humility! O admirable severity, prudence and constancy! What shall I say to thee, most sacred Virgin? Here thou art Mother of God, Lady of the universe, Queen of Heaven and earth. The greatest mystery, the most incomparable marvel, has been wrought in thee by the divine power, and thou dost tell no one. No human being knows the vital miracle, so jealously dost thou guard thy secret! Thou dost remain in profound silence, until, in the house of thy cousin Elizabeth, beholding that God Himself has revealed this miracle of miracles, then only dost thou breathe thy blessed silence, and raise to Heaven the sublime canticle of praise and adoration for the author of all these marvels: 'My soul doth magnify the Lord.'" (8)

The fifth effect of Mary's humility was accomplished during her visit to her cousin St. Elizabeth, concerning St. John the Baptist.

Its sixth effect was manifested in her relationship with St. Joseph, whom she regarded and honored as her husband. "Behold a marvellous thing!" says St. Thomas of Villanova. "See the Queen of Virgins, the Mistress of the World, the very Mother of God, not disdaining to serve a poor carpenter, to prepare his meals and to obey him like a dutiful wife! But what exalts her humility above all admiration is that she prefers to endure an unspeakable humiliation rather than reveal to Joseph the admirable mystery wrought in her by God, and her newly received rank of Mother of the promised Messiah. O prodigy of humility! Never has its like been seen before and never shall it be seen again."

The seventh effect of the humility of the royal Heart of Mary was revealed at the birth of Her Divine Son in a stable at Bethlehem. The sovereign Empress of the universe went to lowly Bethlehem to give birth to the King of men and angels, the Redeemer of all mankind. Yet she found no lodging there and being turned away from every house, was obliged to seek the lowly abode of animals. There she brought forth the only Son of God the Father, the King of Glory, the sovereign Lord of all (8). Luke 1, 46-St John Eudes does not give the reference for this quotation from the works of St. Thomas of Villanova.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

things. And she sustained these humiliations without a complaint and with most perfect humility.

The eighth effect of the admirable humility of the Mother of God became apparent when she subjected herself to the Hebrew law of Purification.

The ninth effect of the humility of the blessed Heart of Our Saviour's Mother was the virtue she practiced during the forty days' penance of her Divine Son in the desert. Remember what we have said above; namely, that our Saviour's incomparable love for His Blessed Mother made Him desire her to resemble Him as closely as possible, and caused Him to engrave in her Heart a perfect image of all the states and mysteries of His most holy life.

The tenth effect of the humility of Mary's all-pure Heart became manifest at the wedding of Cana in Galilee, where she obtained from her beloved Son the miracle whereby He changed water into wine. But how did she induce Him to perform that miracle? Was it by exerting her authority as His Mother? By no means. Was it by pressing Him with repeated entreaties, to show her power over Him and the reality that she was indeed His Mother? No, for she did not even presume to entreat Him, but merely made plain to Him, with the greatest modesty and humility, the need for additional wine. Mary left it entirely to His divine will to act as He thought best.

The eleventh effect of the humility of the admirable Heart of the Mother of Jesus was that she suffered with her beloved Son all the contempt and insults He endured during His public ministry from His enemies, who offended and affronted Him in a thousand ways, seeking to bind Him as a madman, to stone Him like a blasphemer, and even to hurl Him from the top of a mountain. She likewise endured with her Son all the humiliations and ignominies of His Passion, when He was treated as a criminal, bound and throttled like a thief, torn with whips, crowned with thorns, reviled by the shocking preference of the mob for Barabbas, and nailed to a cross between two bandits. Yes, my Jesus, Thy most worthy Mother bore with Thee all this shame and humiliation! As Thy glory is now her glory, so were Thy ignominies her very own, which she bore with such humility that she never uttered a complaint to God or man. O prodigious humility! Most humble Mary, pray to thy dear Son that He may grant us the grace to learn from Himself and from thee how to suffer insults and humiliations patiently and with humility, and never to complain.

The twelfth effect of the humility of the Admirable Heart of Mary is recorded in the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles where it is written that, after the Ascension of Christ into Heaven, St. Peter, St. John and the other disciples withdrew to the Cenacle of Jerusalem. There they remained until the coming of the Holy Ghost, united in prayer with the holy women and Mary, Mother of Jesus, whom St. Luke the Evangelist mentions last, not only after the holy Apostles, but even after the sinner from whom our Saviour had driven seven devils. How can it be that she who is the first in dignity; in merit and in sanctity should be put in the last place? It is that her most profound humility compelled her scribe, St. Luke, to name her thus in the last place, according to the lowliness of her self-estimation, considering and treating herself as the least and most unworthy of creatures. What peerless humility! The Queen of Heaven and earth, the Mother of the King of kings, among whose ancestors fourteen kings are numbered, treats herself and wishes to be treated by others as though she were nothing at all.

Such, then, are twelve effects or manifestations of the humility of the incomparable Heart of Mary, Mother of God. But that is not all, for we must count, if we can, all the moments of her life, and we shall be counting as many acts and effects of her humility, for her entire life constituted, in fact, a constant exercise of that holy virtue.

O Queen of the humble, thou seest how remote we are from the practice of true and perfect humility. Obtain from thy beloved Son the pardon of all the sins we have committed against this great virtue; offer to Him thy very humble Heart in reparation and satisfaction for our misdeeds; and entreat Our Lord to grant us the graces we need to enable us to imitate carefully and faithfully the most holy humility of the amiable Heart of Jesus and Mary.

CHAPTER VI

HEART OF MARY, EMPIRE OF THE DIVINE WILL

AFTER the most amiable Heart of Jesus there never was nor will be, in Heaven or on earth, any heart where the adorable will of God reigns so perfectly and gloriously as in the admirable Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

In the first place, the glorious Virgin always esteemed and revered the Divine Will as her origin and principle, the source of her being and her life, to which she constantly referred her use of the gifts as to their first cause.

Secondly, she considered and honored the Divine Will as her last end and as the center of her existence, knowing full well that she existed in the world only to accomplish and do the Creator's Will in all things. To this end all her thoughts, words and actions were directed, and in this amiable center her pure Heart exclusively sought and found its sovereign contentment and complete rest.

Thirdly, Mary considered and respected the Divine Will as ruler and sovereign, whose every order was so dear and precious, that she would have preferred a thousand deaths to the slightest disobedience.

Fourthly, Our Lady considered and loved God's holy Will as her true Paradise, where she found sublime delights, because not only did she desire everything that God ordained, but she willed her acceptance in the manner most pleasing to Him. Hence, as God Himself derives infinite pleasure from the operation of His decrees, so did our heavenly Virgin receive the greatest joy and happiness from her faithful fulfilment of the Divine Will.

Fifthly, Mary considered God's holy Will not only in itself, but also manifested in the will of St. Joseph, her most worthy Spouse, in the edicts of the pagan emperor Augustus, in the whole Mosaic law, and in every disposition of divine Providence towards her Divine Son, herself and all other creatures. She loved the most holy Will of God in all these aspects, and subjected herself as lovingly as when she considered it directly in its essence.

The sixth illustration of the perfect reign of the Divine Will in Mary's

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

Heart is shown by the fact that, although this incomparable Virgin owed obedience to none save God Himself, and while as Mother of God and Queen of Heaven and earth she held sovereign sway over all creatures, she nevertheless practiced very faithfully what the Holy Ghost was to teach later on through St. Peter: "Be ye subject therefore to every human creature for God's sake," (1) Mary was, in fact, always ready to yield not only to her superiors, but to her equals and even her inferiors, preferring the will of others to her own, whenever it was not contrary to the good pleasure of Almighty God.

What else shall I say? I may add that the most pure Virgin's love for the sweet Will of God was so intense, that it truly constituted the soul of her soul, the spirit of her spirit and the heart of her heart. This spirit and heart caused her to live a heavenly life, animated every power of her soul and all her interior and exterior senses, was the principle of all her actions, and inspired her to loving acceptance of all her afflictions.

I hear my Saviour tell us: "I came down from Heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of Him that sent me." and "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me that I may perfect His work." (2) The Blessed Mother can indeed truly repeat after Him: "I am in the world only to do the will of my Creator and I find my supreme pleasure in its constant fulfilment."

We read in the works of St. Gertrude that one day she made the following request of her divine Spouse: "I ask, dear Lord, and I desire with all my heart that thy most praiseworthy Will be accomplished in me and in all thy creatures, in the manner most pleasing to thee." (3) If Saint Gertrude possessed such great love for the Will of her divine Spouse, what shall we say, what can we think of the Queen of all saints, whose love for the Will of Him who is her God, her Creator, her Saviour, her Brother, her Son, her Father and her Spouse, was greater than the love of all angels and men together?

We can certainly say that Mary's incomparable love of the Divine Will formed her and identified her with it. Hence God could well say to her first of all what He says of His Church through the Prophet Isaias: "Thou shalt be called my pleasure" (4) which is equivalent to saying: Thou art my Heart, my love, my Bride, my beloved in whom I am delighted and well pleased; because thy love for my Divine Will is so great that thou art identified with it.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Finally, the adorable Will dwelt in the Blessed Virgin's holy Heart as in its own home, holding its keys as uncontested Master. God's Holy Will dwelt there as in its kingdom, enjoying complete and sovereign sway. Mary's blessed Heart was the triumphal car of the Divine Will bearing a triumph over all its enemies. It was the Heaven of the glory of God's Eternal Will, a paradise where everything was subject to its orders, nothing contrary to it, and all things were consecrated to its praise and worship.

Mary's obedience to God's adorable Will caused Mary to utter the divine Fiat, more admirable, in a way, than the Fiat whereby God created the universe. God's Fiat created the world, but Mary's Fiat was the occasion by which God became man and man, God. St Bernard says: "We were all created by God's eternal word, and behold we die; in thy brief answer, namely, Fiat, we find a new being and are called back to life." (5) "I dare affirm of the Blessed Virgin," writes St. Anselm, "what St. John has said of the eternal Word; namely, that as nothing was made without Him, so also nothing was made without her. The great God accomplishes more through the Blessed Virgin's Fiat than through His own. Why? Because God's Fiat was a Fiat of command, whereas the Blessed Virgin's Fiat was a Fiat of obedience." (6)

What greater praise could be pronounced concerning the obedience to be glorious Mother of our Saviour? How admirable! "Nothing is made save through Mary's hands," says St. Bernard, "and God Himself became man only after that admirable Virgin had said Fiat."

Let us harken also to St. Andrew of Jerusalem, who says: "God ordered light to be, and all things are made. The Blessed Virgin says: Be it done unto me according to Thy word, and the greatest of all things was accomplished. God's Fiat is a Fiat of command; the Fiat of the Mother of God is a Fiat of obedience. By God's command heaven and earth were made: by the Blessed Virgin's obedience, the admirable incarnation of the eternal Word followed." (7)

The final act of submission and obedience to the Divine Will that sprang from holy Mary's maternal Heart was her consent to that adorable Will concerning the Passion and death of her beloved Son. This consent she gave with such wonderful obedience, that if such had been the Eternal Father's Will, she would have been as ready to crucify and sacrifice Christ with her own hands, even as Abraham prepared to sacrifice his only son Isaac, yet with incomparably greater love and obedience.

Thus the Divine Will ever reigned in the most Holy Heart of the Queen of Heaven, and thus will it ever be. May we not truly say, therefore, that adorable Will of the Almighty possesses her admirable Heart more mightily, more magnificently and more gloriously by far than all other hearts that ever were or shall be in Heaven and on earth? It possesses the authority and power over Mary's Heart, where it will reign forever, where it will eternally receive the veneration, homage and adoration of all the angels and saints.

Infinite and eternal glory, then, to that adorable Will for all the marvels it has ever wrought in the pure Heart of the Mother of God! Unending praise and thanksgiving be to her most admirable Heart for all the love and honor that its most perfect submission and obedience have ever tendered and shall forever render to the adorable Will of the Heavenly Father!

CHAPTER V11*HEART OF MARY, TREASURE-HOUSE OF GRATUITOUS GRACES

THE Immaculate Heart of the Blessed Virgin is the sanctuary of gratuitous graces, by which are meant graces imparted by the Holy Ghost not so much for the sanctification of the recipient as for the instruction, comfort and benefit of other souls.

St. Paul enumerates nine such graces: the gift of speaking wisely; the gift of speaking with knowledge; the gift of faith; the power of healing the sick; the gift of miracles; the gift of prophecy; the gift of speaking in diverse tongues; the discernment of spirits; the gift of interpreting Scripture.(1)

What is the gift of wise speech, or the word of wisdom? The gift of wise speech is a grace of the Holy Ghost that enables us to expound with clarity the truths of faith, while the word of knowledge is a gift of the Holy Spirit which imparts facility in explaining truths that concern morals.

What is the gift of faith? It is, according to St. Chrysostom, the special confidence necessary to perform miracles, or, according to St. Ambrose, a grace of the Holy Ghost which provides strength to preach the Gospel boldly and fearlessly. Other theologians define it as the heavenly light which must enlighten in a special manner the minds of those who preach the Gospel.

What are the graces of healing and the gift of working miracles? These two graces can really be combined because the grace of healing the sick has the effect of restoring bodily health through miracles, while the gift of working miracles manifests the power of God through miraculous works.

What is the gift of prophecy? It is a grace of the Holy Ghost by which (1). Cor. 12, 8-10.

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

we know future events and secret things that cannot be known in a natural way. This gift likewise includes the grace of revelations.

What is the discerning of spirits? It is a light of the Holy Ghost, whereby are known the thoughts, desires, movements and interior affections proceeding from a good or evil principle.

What is the gift of speaking diverse tongues? It is the gift bestowed by the Holy Ghost on the Apostles at Pentecost, and includes the special facility in making heavenly truths understood by those to whom they are taught.

What is the gift of interpretation of Scripture? It is a grace of the Holy Spirit enlightening the intellect to understand the sense of Holy Writ, and animating the will to extend this understanding to others.

Did the Blessed Virgin possess all these graces? Yes, without doubt. Such is the opinion of St. Albert the Great, (2) Suarez, and many other great theologians who offer several substantiating proofs. First of all, since Our Lady was full of grace, according to the declaration of St. Gabriel, she must therefore have possessed all graces. Secondly, her incomprehensible dignity as Mother of God must necessarily have been adorned with the highest and most perfect gifts of the Holy Ghost. Thirdly, being after her Divine Son, the universal dispenser of all graces in the Church, Mary must necessarily have possessed the totality of the graces that she was to obtain for human kind.

We may therefore say, first, that the Holy Ghost gave the Blessed Virgin a most penetrating and clear understanding of Sacred Scripture, together with a great facility in explaining its truths concerning faith and morals.

Secondly, Mary possessed in the highest degree the special confidence necessary to work miracles.

In the third place, Our lady possessed more perfectly than any Saint the gift of actually working miracles, because apart from the miracle of miracles wrought by her cooperation with the Father, the Son and Holy Ghost in the ineffable mystery of the Incarnation, we have every reason to believe that she worked many other wonders, though they have not been recorded.

In the fourth place, many proofs could be adduced to reveal that Our Lady enjoyed the gift of prophecy. Be it enough to mention the prophecy expressed in the Magnificat: "Behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed," (3) for it includes all the honor and homage that will ever be paid to Mary in Heaven and on earth, while endless ages run, and throughout eternity.

In the fifth instance, having received the gift of prophecy, the most Blessed Virgin likewise possessed the grace of revelations in a much more excellent degree than all the other Saints.(4) Throughout her life, says St. Andrew of Crete,(5) she was enlightened by countless divine revelations. How many mysteries did not the Holy Ghost reveal to her, even from the moment of her Immaculate Conception? How many wondrous secrets did she not hear from the adorable lips of her Beloved Son during the rich hidden years He spent at her side? How many lights did she not receive from her familiar conversations with the Angels? Finally, St. Ambrose (6) and many other holy Doctors have testified that St. John the Evangelist owed his intimate knowledge of the divinity of Christ and the revelations contained in the Apocalypse to his special relationship to Mary and his filial services to her.

In the sixth place, the holy Virgin possessed the gift of discerning spirits more perfectly than the greatest Saints, as this gift is contained in that of prophecy.

In the seventh place, she received on Pentecost with the Apostles, the gift of speaking in diverse tongues. St. Albert the Great, St. Antoninus and St. Athanasius assert that Mary received it with greater plenitude than the Apostles themselves, for the instruction and consolation of many of the faithful, who came from every part of the world to seek and to consult her as an oracle of the Holy Spirit.

In the eighth place, being endowed with the gift of wisdom and of faith, and the spirit of prophecy, Mary likewise possessed the grace of interpreting Scripture with much more perfect clarity than was ever granted to anyone else.

But what relation do all these graces bear to the most holy Heart of our heavenly Mother?

They are related to it as effects are to their cause, as streams to their source, as lines to their center, as the solar rays to the sun. For is it not true that the love and humility of the amiable Heart of Mary having drawn the Holy Ghost to take up His abode, likewise attracted the complete plenitude of all His gifts and graces? Hence do we justly term her virginal Heart the sanctuary of the graces of the divine Spirit. This being so, it is only fitting that Heaven and earth, men and angels, and every creature be employed in blessing, praising and glorifying the thrice Holy One, who has enriched the incomparable Heart of Mary with so much grace, so much Sanctity and so many marvels.

I do not exhort you, dear reader, to imitate the graces just described, for these sublimities are admirable rather than imitable, but I adjure you to take cue not to fall into the sentiments of Luther, Calvin and other sectarians, who seek to snatch from the Church some of its greatest and most signal jewels, by attempting to deprive it of the grace of revelations (7) and the gift of miracles.

Throughout the history of the Church there have been such manifestations of the power of God. The Spirit of Light operated marvellously and powerfully in certain chosen and faithful Souls. The spirit of darkness, who is the ape of God, tries to counterfeit these works, in order to discount their value, making them seem to be like his own, full of falsehood and deceit. The world brings forth many more thorns than roses; fool's gold is far more abundant than true ore. In the time of Achab, King of Israel, the deceitful spirit spoke through more than four hundred. false prophets, while the Spirit of Truth spoke only through the prophet Micheas. It is indeed with strong reason that St. John the beloved disciple cries out to us: "Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits, if they be of God." (80

There are in this confused world persons too credulous, believing too easily, and there are others to whom belief is too hard. These two extremities are dangerous, and the wise will avoid both of them. To accept every revelation or supposed miracle is the mark of a weak, imprudent spirit; to reject every revelation is the mark of a rash, unreasoning spirit. Tell me, do Sensible men destroy all currency because much of it is counterfeit? Satan had always had diviners and false prophets, from the earliest days, but God has also had His chosen mouthpieces, and He always will have them, in fulfillment of His Divine promise: "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy: your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions." (9)

God has many ways to lead souls to Heaven, and as Master of Life, He leads as He wills, some souls by ordinary paths, others by extraordinary paths. The way of faith is the great highway built to guide men to eternal life; yet is not faith founded upon revelation? And is it not by revelation that we hold the mystery of our creation?

(7). St. John Eudes probably added these concluding paragraphs to justify his belief in the visions and revelations of Mary Des Vallées, a saintly woman of Coutances.

(8). 1 John 4, 1.

it is true that the fundamental revelations of our faith are authorized and ratified by Holy Church; yet it is a mark of faith to treat with respect anything which suggests the shadow of Almighty God, so long as no error appear, and with prudence to refrain from attributing to the devil what may perchance come from God. That is why it is wise to withhold judgment in such matters. Those, who by reason of their office or by order of their superiors must investigate these manifestations, should never rely on their own knowledge or experience, but, seeking counsel and careful theological study, they should humbly seek the aid of the Holy Ghost and invoke the Mother of Truth and of the Eternal Light, so that thus they may fulfil the words of St. Paul: "Extinguish not the spirit. Despise not prophecies. But prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (10)

CHAPTER VIII*HEART OF MARY, INESTIMABLE TREASURY OF RICHES

THE immense liberality of divine goodness has granted us possession of four great treasures here on earth.

The first is the most Holy Eucharist, containing all that is richest, most precious and most admirable in time and in eternity, in all the angels and all the Saints, in the Queen of saints and angels, in the sacred humanity of the Son of God and His divinity, in the divine Essence and in the three eternal Persons.

The second treasure is Sacred Scripture, which epitomizes all the truths, all the revelations, all the mysteries and every revealed secret of the Godhead, for which reason St. Augustine (1) and St. Gregory (2) call Sacred Scripture the Heart of God.

The third treasure is the relics of the saints, which the Church possesses, cherishes and honors as the dowry of her divine Spouse.

The fourth treasure is the admirable Heart of the glorious Virgin, whose riches are unfathomable.

In the first place, the Holy Heart of Mary is "the treasure of the love of the Eternal Father," says St. Methodius, (3) Bishop and Martyr, "because in her immaculate Heart the adorable Father placed His love," that is, His only and well-beloved Son, when He sent Him for the world's salvation into the virginal womb and maternal Heart of holy Mary. This beloved Son, the Heart and treasure of His most loving Father, was enclosed for nine months in the sacred bosom of the most pure Virgin, and He shall forever dwell in her maternal Heart; hence her virginal Heart must be honored as the precious treasure of the love of the Father of all goodness.

Secondly, the Queen of Heaven's most august Heart is the treasure of

the only Son of God. In her marvellous Heart He hid and preserved all the mysteries and all the wondrous manifestations that took place in Him while He dwelt on earth, according to the divine text: "and his mother kept all these words in her heart." (4)

Jesus poured into the Heart of His Mother the plenitude of the treasures of wisdom and knowledge that are hid in His own Heart. Beyond that He has enriched it with all the treasures of grace and mercy acquired for us by His Precious Blood and His saving death. Christ imparted to Mary the power of distributing these treasures "to whom she pleases, when she pleases and as she pleases," says St. Bernard. "In thy hands, O Mary," says the pious and learned Dionysius the Carthusian, "are all the treasures of the multitudinous mercies of God." (5)

The most august Heart of the Queen of Angels is not only the treasure of the Father's love, and of the Son's goodness; it is also the treasure of the charity of the Holy Ghost. Into this treasure-chest the Holy Spirit poured immeasurable wealth of graces: all the graces of the holy patriarchs and prophets, of the holy apostles and martyrs, of the holy priests and Levites, of the holy confessors and virgins, all the graces granted to every saint, and all gratuitous graces. In the treasury of her heart the divine Spirit has enthroned all the theological, cardinal and moral virtues to an incomparably higher degree than they are to be found in the hearts of all the angels and saints. In Mary's Heart the adorable Spirit has concentrated the plenitude of His sevenfold gifts, His twelve fruits, and the eight evangelical beatitudes. We may therefore say with St. Andrew of Crete that her most admirable Heart is itself "the most holy treasury of all sanctity." (6)

Let us add with St. Epiphanius that her most holy Heart is "the admirable treasure of the Church." (7) It is the store-house of glory, felicity and jubilation for the Church Triumphant. St. Bernard exclaims: "By thee! O holy Virgin, Heaven was peopled, hell emptied, and the ruins of the heavenly Jerusalem were rebuilt."

Our Lady's Heart is likewise a treasury of graces and mercies for the Church Militant, for St. Germanus of Constantinople pronounced that 'no man is delivered or preserved from the world-wide snares of Satan save through Mary; and God grants His graces to no one except through her alone.'

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

Our loving Mother's heart is a treasury of solace and comfort for the Church Suffering because, as has been shown, the pangs of Purgatory are constantly diminished, hour by hour, thanks to the marvellous charity of Mary's Heart.

Finally, no grace or favor ever comes to us from the lofty throne of Almighty God without passing through the merciful hands of Mary, Mother of Charity.

Let us join with St. Cyril, Patriarch of Alexandria, to salute our most lovable Mary with our whole heart, saying to her: "Hail, O holy Mother of God, thou art the most precious treasure of the entire universe."

O incomparable treasure! O admirable Heart! O ineffable goodness of the most adorable Trinity, to give us this marvellous maternal Heart and inestimable treasure, or rather, these most holy Hearts and very rich treasured. Actually we possess four Hearts and four treasures: the adorable Heart of the Eternal Father, which is His Son Jesus Christ, whom we possess in the Holy Eucharist; the loving Heart of Jesus Christ Himself in the Relics of the Passion; the Divine Heart of the Holy Ghost, in Sacred Scripture; and the most tender Heart of Mary, Mother of God. What respect for the Sacred Relics! What veneration for Holy Writ! What devotion and tender affection for our dearest Mother's most excellent Heart!

How rich are we not rendered by the possession of these four great treasures, especially the first and the last, which are the divine Heart of Jesus and the most holy Heart of Mary! We surely thus possess the means to pay off all our debts and satisfy all our obligations. And indeed we are encumbered with three great debts, as well as three great obligations.

First of all, we are obliged to adore and glorify the Most Holy Trinity in all Its grandeurs and in all that It is, in Itself and in Its creatures. To meet this obligation, we shall offer to the three Divine Persons all the adoration, honor and glory that have been and ever shall be rendered to the Blessed Trinity by the most worthy Heart of Jesus and Mary.

Secondly, we are bound to love God with our whole heart, our whole soul, and with all our strength, as much for His own sake as because of His great love for us. Yet we have not even begun to love Him as we should. To pay this debt and to make up for our deficiency, let us offer to the Eternal Father the Divine Heart of His Only-Begotten Son, whose burning love for the Almighty Father is truly worthy of Him; and let us offer to Jesus the most holy Heart of His Blessed Mother, whose love immeasurably surpasses that of all the angels and saints together.

Thirdly, we are obliged to Satisfy Divine justice for our innumerable offenses, negligences and sins. To discharge this obligation, let us offer all the sorrow, anguish and sufferings endured by the all-perfect Heart of Jesus and Mary out of love for us, and let us offer ourselves to them that we also may endure, for their sake, whatever sufferings it may please them to make us bear.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Whenever we experience any spiritual or temporal necessity, let us beg the Eternal Father, with deep humility and greatest confidence, to grant our requests through the most loving Heart of His Divine Son. And let us implore the Son, through His Mother's tender Heart, to grant us the assistance we need in the manner most pleasing to Mother and Son; thus we shall certainly obtain our desire.

When we are sad and desolate, let us remember that we possess a treasury containing inestimable riches, the Blessed Virgin's most holy Heart, a Heart that holds more love and affection for us than the hearts of all the devoted fathers and mothers that ever were, are, or shall be, nay, than the united hearts of all the angels and saints. What a subject of joy and comfort this should be for us! If we but raised the wealth of love and tenderness stored for us in the admirable Heart of our good Mother, we would surely die of joy.

CHAPTER IX

HEART OF MARY, SANCTUARY, CENSER AND ALTAR OF DIVINE LOVE

THE hearts of all the angels and saints of Heaven constitute, according to the different degrees of love possessed by those same hearts, as many diverse sanctuaries of divine Love, where Almighty God is adored, glorified and loved forever. The divine Heart of our most amiable Saviour, however, is the Sanctuary of sanctuaries and the Love of loves. As from all eternity, ever shall it adore, glorify and love God in a manner infinitely worthy of divine grandeur and sublime goodness.

The most holy Heart of the peerless Mother of our Saviour is the second sanctuary of divine love, a sanctuary fashioned by the Holy Ghost Himself, Who is love essential and uncreated, a sanctuary never defiled by sin, but always adorned with the highest degree of every virtue. Mary's Heart always was, and shall forever remain, the glorious abode of the Saint of saints. In it there always existed and ever shall exist greater honor, glory and love for the Most Holy Trinity than in all material and spiritual sanctuaries that ever were, are or shall be in Heaven and on earth.

This adorable sanctuary comprises several features that we shall now have to consider.

The first is its perpetual sacrifice ceaselessly offered to God, a sacrifice of love and praise. Mary offered the sacrifice of love, for during her pilgrimage on earth, and still much more since her Assumption into Heaven, her virginal Heart constantly made a perpetual exercise and sacrifice of love towards God, a love never surpassed, except by the love of the deified Heart of Jesus.

She also offered the sacrifice of praise, for her Heart is a perpetual host of praise and adoration, of glorification, of thanksgiving to the Most Holy Trinity, which is more worthily praised, more perfectly adored and more highly glorified by Our Lady than by all human and angelic minds and hearts in heaven and on earth.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Mary's is the Heart represented by the golden censer held in the hand of the Angel mentioned at the beginning of the eighth Chapter of the Apocalypse.<sup>(1)</sup> It is a golden censer, to show that Mary's immaculate Heart is unmixed love as typified by pure gold. The Angel in whose hand it is held is the Angel of the great counsel, namely, our Blessed Saviour Himself, to show that the holy Heart of Mary always belonged to God alone, and that it was ever possessed and guided by the Angel of the great counsel. If the heart of an earthly Sovereign is in the Lord's hand, to be ruled as He wills, how much more truly the Heart of the Queen of Heaven? The Angel of the great counsel fills the censer with fire from the altar, adding great quantities of incense, which are the prayers of the saints, to signify that the Son of God filled His holy Mother's Heart with the sacred fire He had come to bring upon earth, and that all the adoration, praise and prayers of her virginal Heart proceed from the adorable Heart of Jesus.

The prayers of the Saints are placed in Mary's Heart, represented by the golden censer, to make us understand that the Saints place their prayers, and all their praise and adoration rendered to God, in the admirable Heart of the incomparable Mother of their Saviour, that being united to her prayers, their own may become more acceptable and efficacious in the sight of the Divine Majesty.

So much concerning the nature of the sacrifice of love offered in the august sanctuary of Mary's most pure Heart. The victims of love there offered are threefold:

First is her Divine Son, the adorable victim offered by the Blessed Virgin with all her heart and love unspeakable in the Temple of Jerusalem. and on Calvary. She still continually offers Him to God in Heaven, and in each of the Sacrifices being daily celebrated throughout the world. If all Christians possess the right to offer to the divine Majesty the same sacrifice that is offered by those who are honored with the sacerdotal character, how much more truly must not the Mother of the sovereign Priest enjoy that right and power? I do not claim that Mary is corporeally present at the sacrifices offered on earth, but she does assist at each Holy Mass in spirit, heart and affection.

John Gerson, the pious Chancellor of the Paris University, says: "If Mary did not receive the character of the sacerdotal office on the night of the Lord's Supper, nevertheless, both then as well as before and after, she was anointed with the interior grace of the faithful. She was not to (1). Apoc. 8, 3

consecrate, but to offer a pure, holy and spotless Host on the altar of her Heart." (2)

The second sacrificial victim is the Saviour's Mother herself. As our adorable Redeemer immolated Himself for the glory of His eternal Father and for the salvation of mankind, so too His most holy Mother, wishing to imitate Her Son as far as possible, likewise sacrificed herself for God's greater glory with a Heart burning with love for His divine Majesty. Thus Mary lived on earth in a state of perpetual sacrifice of her whole being.

The third victim comprises countless souls that have been sacrificed to God in the marvellous sanctuary of Mary's virginal Heart. To understand this, we should remember that if the Eternal Father gave us all things when He gave us His Beloved Son, (3) this gift applies still more truly to her to whom He gave the Divine Word to be her own Son. Hence the Queen of Heaven and Earth, knowing full well that all things in the universe belonged to her, and wishing to employ all of them for the greater glory of Him from whom she received them, offered and sacrificed as victims of His divine Majesty every creature in the world. She knew that sacrifice is the greatest honor that can be rendered to God, and that we therefore cannot make a holier use of anything that belongs to us than to offer, give and sacrifice it to the sovereign Lord of all things, provided it be done in accordance with His holy will.

These, then, are the three types of victims that were offered to God in the sanctuary of the immaculate Heart of the Mother of our Sovereign Priest. Mary will forever continue to offer these victims in Heaven, just as her Son Jesus Christ continues the perpetual offering of Himself and His possessions to the Almighty Father.

Let us, in turn, give ourselves unreservedly to the Son of God and His Blessed Mother, that we, and all that we have, may be joined in their sacrifices, and united to them in the ardent love of their offering.

The true identity of the High Priest who offers all these sacrifices in the sanctuary of Mary's virginal Heart is none other than her Heart itself, which is therefore the sanctuary of divine love and, in part, the victim of love offered therein, as well as the officiant who offers it with peerless love.

Another adornment of our admirable sanctuary is the altar of divine love, on which all the foregoing sacrifices have been and will forever be

(3). Rom. 8, 32.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

offered. It is again the most loving Heart of the Mother of Fair love. Let us listen again to the saintly and illustrious doctor John Gerson, who wrote: "After the divine sacrifice offered by Our Lord Himself on the altar of the Cross, the one most pleasing to God and most useful to mankind, is the sacrifice offered to the divine Majesty by the most holy Virgin on the altar of her Heart, when she so often and with so great a love offered her beloved Son as a living Host. Here is the true altar of holocausts whereon the sacred fire of divine love was continually burning without interruption day or night. It is the golden altar seen by St. John before the throne of God in Heaven." (4)

Of this altar of the glorious Virgin's ardent Heart, united as it is with the divine Heart of her Son Jesus, do we meet at the beginning of Holy Mass, Introibo ad altare Dei. "I shall go up to the altar of God." These two Hearts being only one Heart, as we have often said, they are likewise but a single altar. On this altar the sacrifice we are about to offer has been offered time and again by both Mother and Son. Therefore does Holy Church put those words three times on the lips of the priest at the beginning of Mass, to admonish us that we should offer our sacrifice on that divine altar, and not merely on the material and visible altar, which is only a shadow of the former. Having therefore to offer our sacrifice on so holy and divine an altar, we must offer it in union with the love, charity, humility and holiness of the admirable Hearts of Jesus and Mary who are in a sense but one Heart and one altar. We also designate it as the Holy of Holies when, on ascending to the altar, we pray God to deliver us from our iniquities "ut ad Sancta sanctorum puris mereamur mentibus introire," that we may be worthy to enter with pure minds into the Holy of Holies."

Holy Church refers again to the Heart of Mary when we are made to say during the wonderful sacrifice: "We humbly beseech thee, Almighty God, command these to be carried by the hands of thy holy angel (the Angel of the great counsel) to thine altar on high, in the presence of thy divine majesty, that as many of us as shall, by partaking at this altar, receive the most sacred Body and Blood of thy Son, may be filled with all heavenly blessing and grace."

Notice that when the priest says: Ex hac altaris participatione, he kisses the material altar as being the figure of the true mystical and spiritual altar; namely, the Heart of Jesus and Mary. This reveals the intimate union our own heart should have with that most amiable Heart at all times and in all places, but more especially during the oblation of the divine Sacrifice.
(4). Tract. 9 super Magnif. Partit. i.

SANCTITY OF THE HEART OF MARY

O admirable heart, O heart most loving, thou art the foremost sanctuary of Divine Love, the holiest earthly victim, the golden throne offering perpetual incense of prayer and sacrifice, the altar of sacrifice. Thou art the saint of saints and the queen of all those privileged to offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

O reader, priest of God, think of the august sanctuary of Mary's Heart, and the holy love, purity and fervor with which you must offer the same sacrifice every day. In the name of God I counsel you to realize the words: Introibo ad altare Dei, remembering that you go in to the altar of God, which is the heart of Jesus and Mary. And when you mount the altar steps, give yourself yet again to Jesus and Mary, that you may be united to their immaculate purity and to a holiness higher than that of the Seraphim.

Those of you, O readers, who are not priests, when you enter a church to assist at the Holy Sacrifice, or to say your prayers, hearken to the heavenly voice that strikes your ears: Pavete ad sanctuarium meum." (5) Reverence my sanctuary." Tremble because you are sinners coming before your judge, and having humbled your heart, beg pardon and implore of Him the grace of perfect repentance.

O Mary, mother of Mercy, O mother of loving grace, hide us in thy blessed Heart, draw us to share in thy constant sacrifice, and immolate our hearts forever in thy sanctuary and in thy altar, to the eternal glory of Thy Beloved Son.

(5). Lev, 26, 12,

CHAPTER X

HEART OF MARY, CENTER OF THE CROSS AND CROWN OF MARTYRS, DOCTORS AND VIRGINS

WITH much reason we may call Mary's most Holy Heart the Center of the Cross through which Salvation came to us. 'The profundity of Mary's love did not prevent her from experiencing most poignant Sorrows. Albert the Great, (1) St. Bernardin, (2) and many other Saints affirm that Our Lady would have died of sorrow at the foot of the Cross, had not divine power imparted to her extraordinary strength as she shared the Passion of Her Beloved Son. Hence the Fathers of the Church consider her to have been in truth a martyr and more. Many doctors boldly proclaim that Mary suffered more than the combined sufferings of all martyrs. No one ever could or ever can understand the depths of the sorrow of her most loving heart.

O Mother of my Saviour, thy well-beloved Son has exalted thee with a crown more glorious and shining than the crowns of all the martyrs. Not only hast thou suffered more than they, therefore making thy sorrow more glorious, but also the holy Martyrs have revered and honored thee as their queen and their mother, through whose intercession they have obtained the grace to merit the palm and eternal crown of martyrdom. They lay their glorious crowns at thy feet, O Mary, for to thee, after God and thy Divine Son, they owe their triumph and everlasting bliss.

Among the countless martyrs, I shall cite three who hold special obligations to the heart of the Blessed Virgin. First is John Travers, an Irish theologian, imprisoned and burned at the stake by King Henry VIII of England. It is recorded that he prayed particularly to Our Lady for the grace of martyrdom, which she promised to him. When the tribunal of judges asked if he had written a book in defense of the Primacy of the Pope, he cried out, showing his hand: "Here are the three fingers with which I wrote the book, and I shall never retract." Although his body was burned, those three fingers remained intact, nor was it possible to burn them.

Secondly I cite St. Andrew of Sio in Greece, sustained by Our Lady through most terrible and prolonged martyrdom at the hands of the Mohammedans in 1463. His mangled remains were found to have been miraculously restored in the grave, so that his body, when disinterred by the faithful, appeared whole and incorrupt, because of his constant invocation of Our Lady.

The third martyr, chosen because of the extent of his sufferings and his prayers while being dismembered, is St. James Intercis, a Persian who obtained his crown under the Emperor, Theodosius the Younger.

Now if you would derive benefit from these thoughts of Our Lady's heart considered as the Center of the Cross of Christ and as Queen of Martyrs, you must not doubt the great love of her heart for the countless souls who are crucified in this life. It will be most pleasing to her if you will commend to her special protection all afflicted persons everywhere, but particularly those held captive by the Mohammedans, and likewise those Christians who are destined to suffer the greatest of human tribulations, the persecution of Antichrist at the end of the world. Implore the Mother of Mercies that she may be the Comforter of the Afflicted and obtain from her Divine Son the grace that all their sufferings may be turned to eternal and holy profit.

Offer to Mary all your own pains of mind and body, begging her to offer them to her Crucified Son, uniting your tiny crosses to the tremendous crosses, for the Glory of God.

In addition to the crown of martyrdom, the Blessed Virgin also is called by many theologians the teacher of the Apostles and Doctors, and is crowned with a diadem of learning and virtue beyond that of saintly doctors and confessors. Therefore you must invoke her specially on behalf of those souls suffering in the darkness of paganism, heresy and sin. Have recourse to the heart of Mary in all your doubts and worries, begging her to grant you the light to avoid the snares of error in this world.

Her third crown is that of Queen of Virgins, which she possesses far more excellently than any saintly exponent of the virtue of purity, far beyond any perfection that can be written or described. Beg Mary to imprint in your soul a great love for chastity and an inconceivable hatred for impurity.

CHAPTER XI (I)

HEART OF MARY, WORLD OF WONDERS

FROM the beginning of time the Three Divine Persons have cherished a most ardent love for the glorious Virgin, upon whom They have showered such inestimable favors, even to the communication of Their adorable perfections. (2)

In addition, think of the numberless churches which, in every century since the time of the Apostles, God has caused to be built all over the world in honor of the incomparable Mary, where her praises are chanted night and day. Among these churches there are more than sixty in Rome alone, sixty-six in the city of Naples, eighty thousand in Spain, and an uncountable number in France. At Avignon not only is the main altar of the Cathedral dedicated to the Mother of God, but every one of the many other altars in the edifice are likewise dedicated.

Consider the feasts of the universal Church, which include seven principal feasts of Our Lady, not to mention fifteen others celebrated in special localities or churches. Also, every Saturday of the year is dedicated by Holy Church to Our Lady.

Add to the great number of Orders, Congregations and Sodalities the processions and pilgrimages made wherever Christianity prevails in honor of the Blessed Virgin with the approving sanction of Holy Church. Together with these are the miracles performed by God through veneration of the Mother of God, and the blessings poured by Our Saviour upon those who honor and cherish pictures and images of His Beloved Mother.

Then consider the number of books that have been penned in praise of the Queen of Angels, in such quantities that one noted bibliographer counts more than five thousand, composed by persons of importance, Popes, cardinals, bishops, theologians, emperors, rulers, princes, lords, canons and religious. There is scarcely a nation which has not produced literature in praise of Mary, for among these writers are men of Ethiopia, Africa, Arabia, Dalmatia, Sardinia, Syria, Hungary, Scythia, and of the West and East Indies. Others are Irish, Scottish, Polish, Portuguese, Sicilians, English, Flemish, French, German, Greek, Spanish, Italian.

No less than forty-six Popes have written treatises concerning the Mother of God; fifty-seven Cardinals; thirty-four Patriarchs; two hundred and fifty-nine Bishops; twelve Emperors, six Kings and Queens, princes and lords, eighteen, not to count the many works of members of religious orders.

Imagine for yourselves the innumerable panegyrics and sermons which have been pronounced in every part of the world at all times by successive mighty Fathers in praise of the Mother of Our Saviour, together with the praises chanted forever by the blessed in Paradise.

Even thus has the majesty of God proclaimed His love for Mary. Omnis gloria Filiae Regis ab intus. All the glory and all the splendours of the peerless daughter of the Most-High spring from within, from her admirable Heart.

Mary's Heart is truly a world of wonders because it is the principle and source of everything great and admirable in the peerless Virgin. We have already listened to the Holy Ghost preaching the grandeur and marvels of His most worthy spouse, but let us open our ears of our heart to hear again the words of tradition throughout the centuries of history, inciting our zeal for devotion to the admirable Virgin Mary.(3)

In the First Century, there stand out the Twelve Apostles, and in the second, St. Irenaeus, St. Ignatius and St. Justin Martyr. From the Fathers of the Third Century I chose, writing in praise of Mary, St. Gregory Thaumaturgus, Bishop of Neocaesarea, and of the fourth, St. Athanasius, renowned Patriarch of Alexandria, together with St. Ephrem, Father of the Eastern Church, whose invocations to Mary constitute a most beautiful litany.

In the Fifth Century there is the great St. Augustine, and St. Eucher, Archbishop of Lyons. From the sixth I cite St. Fulgentius, who, while defending the Divinity of Christ so ardently against the Arians, had signal devotion to proclaiming the praises of the Mother of our Saviour.

In the Seventh Century, Pope St. Gregory extolled Our Lady as "the mountain towering above all creation in dignity," (4) while St. Ildefonsus, Archbishop of Toledo, vehemently cursed the Helvidians and other heretics who clued to deny the perpetual virginity of Mary.

(3). In this concluding chapter St. John Eudes summarizes the history of the devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary in Catholic Tradition. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, V. 7. PP. 607 ff.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

In the Eighth Century, St. Germanus, Patriarch of Constantinople stands out particularly for his writings and sermons in praise of Our Lady, having special recourse to her most merciful heart.

From the writers of the Ninth Century I have most frequently quoted a religious of the Augustine Order who sought to conceal his name by calling himself by the extraordinarily humble title, "The Idiot." (5) Nevertheless God Who exalts the lowly saw that he became known by his true name, Raymund Jourdain. His writings reveal exceptionally profound devotion to the Mother of God.

I wish to mention a few other writers of subsequent centuries, particularly St. Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury, whose love for the Glorious Virgin Mary, his Princess, shines particularly in his treatise on her excellence. (6) I quote from his panegyric, which should suffice to warm even the coldest hearts, the following words: "O woman admirably unique, and uniquely admirable~, grant me the grace that thy love may be constantly in my heart, and that thou wilt bear me forever within Thy Heart."

In the Twelfth Century the great St. Bernard, expounding the symbolism of the twelve stars in the crown of the woman envisioned in the Apocalypse, says that they represent the mysteries and virtues of her life, while the twelfth star signifies the "martyrdom of her Heart." (70

St. Bonaventure, Albert the Great, Thomas a Kempis, St. Thomas of Villanova, Arnould of Bonneval, all have written eloquently on the prerogatives and privileges of the incomparable Mary. The revelations and writings of St. Brigid, including the vision of the Admirable Mother of Our Saviour,(8) have been approved by Holy Church.

In conclusion, if we were to recount everything written by the Doctors of the Church, and all that God has caused to become known through His s:saints, concerning the privileges, excellence and perfection of Our Lady, it would fill an almost countless number of large volumes.

Mother Most Admirable, what great and glorious things have been said, thought and written in praise of thee and of thy loving heart To me it seems incontestable that thy heart is the centre of all these wonders, having drawn down the munificence of the Most High by its humility, purity and love. That is why I regard, hail and honor the Virginal

(5). St. John Eudes follows the opinion of Salazar and other writers who assigned the works of "The Idiot" to the Ninth Century. But Theophilus Raymund, the editor of Jourdain's works, discovered that this learned writer was Abbot of Celles and lived about 1381.

Heart under so many titles and symbols. Infinite and everlasting praise be to God, the Sovereign of all hearts, for having filled thy admirable Heart with such miracles of wonder and grace!

O Queen of my heart, I have testified many times already, but I shall repeat thousands of times again, imploring all the inhabitants of heaven to repeat with me and on my behalf, that all sublime prerogatives are thine, and that if the least Of thy perfections were wanting, and it could be given thee by the complete destruction of myself, I should consent to it with all my heart.

CHAPTER I

TWELVE REASONS FOR HONORING THE HEART OF MARY

THE truths contained in the eight preceding parts oblige us to honor the Admirable Heart of the Mother of God, but there are additional reasons compelling us to do so, among which the twelve principal motives are these:

1. We ought to honor and love the things that God loves and honors, and through which He is loved and glorified. Now, after the most adorable Heart of Jesus, there is no heart in heaven or on earth which has so loved and honored God, or has rendered Him so much glory and love, as the most worthy Heart of Mary, the Mother of the Saviour.

2. Who could possibly describe the ardent flames of love in the incomparable Heart of the Mother of God toward her Beloved Son Jesus? Count, if you can, all her thoughts, all her words, all her actions, labors, anxieties and vigilance in feeding, clothing, protecting and rearing our divine Saviour, and you will count so many reasons obliging us to love and praise her most amiable Heart.

3. Count also all the thoughts, feelings and affections which filled her motherly Heart with regard to our salvation, and you will count so many obligations on our part to love and honor Mary.

4. Picture yourself the means employed by the Mother of mercy to cooperate with her Beloved Son our Saviour in the great work of the Redemption of the world, that is, her prayers, fasts, mortifications, tears, sufferings, and her most poignant sacrifice of her dear Son at the foot of the cross, her Heart utterly consumed with love and charity, and you must realize that all these facts are just so many additional obligations on our part to revere and love her most worthy Heart.

5. The holy name of Mary has always been so highly honored in the Church, that, according to Surius, St. Gerard, Bishop of Pannonia, ordered the people of his diocese to prostrate themselves on the ground at the mention of her holy name. Blossius (1) reports that in his time it was the universal custom in the Church that, whenever the holy name of Mary was pronounced, everyone knelt, and all the faithful prayed, sighed and wept with most extraordinary devotion and fervor. This devotion is not dead, because the feast of the Holy Name of Mary is celebrated in a number of churches, especially in the Order of the Redemption of Captives, where the office of her holy name is recited on all Saturdays not assigned to an office of nine lessons. If the venerable name of Mary be worthy of such great veneration, what honor should we not render to her Admirable Heart?

6. Holy Church never ceases to sing daily, in addressing the only Son of Mary, "Blessed is the womb that bore Thee, and the paps that gave Thee suck," (2) because we can never sufficiently praise and revere the consecrated womb in which she bore the Son of the eternal Father, nor the blessed breasts at which she nursed Him. What honor and praises should be given to her most worthy Heart?

7. According to the aspirations of St. Paul the hearts of the faithful become the abodes and dwellings of Jesus Christ, (3) and Christ Himself assures us that the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit reside in the hearts of all who love God, (4) so who can doubt that the Most Blessed Trinity dwells perpetually in a most admirable and ineffable manner in the virginal Heart of her who is the Daughter of the Father, the Mother of the Son and the Spouse of the Holy Spirit, Mary who alone loves God more than all other creatures combined? This being the case, with what devotion should we not honor her immaculate Heart?

8. If we are indebted to the holy Evangelists for having left us the written records of the life of our Redeemer and the mysteries of our Redemption, how much more do we owe to our most holy Mother for having preserved for us this precious treasure in her maternal Heart?

9. Is it not we miserable sinners who pierced this most innocent Heart of Mary, at the time of the Passion of the Saviour, with countless thou sands of shafts of sorrow by our innumerable sins? How greatly are we obliged, then, to render all the honor within our power in order to make some reparation for the most bitter anguish that we caused her loving Heart to suffer.

10. The Admirable Heart of Mary is the perfect image of the most divine Heart of Jesus. It is the pattern and model for our own hearts; and all our happiness, perfection and glory consists in striving to transform them into so many living images of the sacred Heart of Mary, just as her holy Heart is a consummate likeness of the adorable Heart of Jesus. Therefore it is most useful, good and beneficial to exhort Christians to practise devotion to the most august Heart of the Queen of Heaven. The sovereign devotion is to imitate what we honor, says St. Augustine; (5) so who can fail to perceive that, in encouraging the faithful in devotion to the most amiable Heart of the Mother of God, we are also exhorting them to imitate the most eminent virtues that adorn it, to engrave its likeness on their own hearts and to render themselves worthy children of such a Mother?

11. Not only is the Heart of the Mother of Our Saviour the prototype and model of our own hearts, but her Heart, after the adorable Heart of Jesus, is also Sovereign Ruler of all the hearts that have been created to love God, since she is Queen of the universe. For that reason all hearts should look upon and imitate the Heart of Mary as their model, but in addition they are obliged to render it all the homage that they owe to it as to their Sovereign.

12. Finally consider all the attributes and perfections of the incomparable Heart of the Mother of Fair Love, and you must realize that there are just that number of reasons compelling us to praise, honor and love this most praiseworthy and lovable Heart.

(5). De Civit. lib. 8, Cap. 17.

CHAPTER 11

TWELVE METHODS OF PRACTISING THIS DEVOTION

ALL that has been said in the foregoing pages demonstrates that the devotion to the most holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin is most firm and well-established, and that we are obliged by a countless number of reasons to render special honor and veneration to this Heart. Therefore we must now seek proper and suitable methods of doing so. Here are twelve principal recommendations:

1. If you wish to afford extreme happiness to the virginal Heart of Our Lady, so zealous for the salvation of your soul, bear and do what our Lord tells you in these words: "My son, give me thy heart;" (1) and "Be converted to me with all your heart (2) To that end make a firm and, true resolution to fulfil your solemn promise to God in baptism; to make a complete renunciation of Satan, of the works of Satan which are synonymous with sin, and of the pomps of Satan which are synonymous with the world; and to follow our Lord in His teaching, example and virtues. And in order to be converted to God not only in heart but with all your heart, cultivate an ardent desire (and ask Him for the grace to fulfil it), to transform all the passions of your heart and turn them toward His Divine Majesty, placing them at the service of His glory. For example, the passion of love should be directed towards loving only God and one's neighbor in God and for God; the passion of hate, towards hating only sin and all that leads to sin; the passion of fear, towards fearing nothing in the world except offending God; the passion of sadness, to the end of letting nothing sadden us except the sins we have committed against God; the passion of joy, towards seeking all our joy in the love and service of God, and in doing His most holy will everywhere and in all things; and so on with the other passions.

2. In order that our Saviour may perfectly possess each heart, listen to these holy words and practise them: Hoc sentite in corde vestro, quod et

(1). Prov. 23, 26.

(2). Joel 2, 12.

PRACTICE OF THE DEVOTION

in Corde Mariae, "Keep in thy heart the feelings which are in the Heart of Mary, the Mother of Jesus." These principal feelings are:

- i. Horror and abomination for every kind of sin.
- ii. Hatred and scorn for this corrupt world and everything pertaining to it.
- iii. The lowest possible esteem, and even of scorn and hatred, toward self.
- iv. Profound esteem, respect and love for all the things of God and His Church.

v. Veneration and love for the Cross, that is, for privations, humiliations, mortifications and sufferings, which are one of the richest treasures that a Christian soul can possess in this world, according to the oracle from Heaven: "My brethren, count it all joy, when you shall fall into divers temptations," (3) so that you may say with St. Paul: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." (4)

3. One of the most useful and important ways of honoring the most worthy Heart of the Queen of virtues is to strive to imitate and to implant in your heart a lively image of her holiness, meekness and forbearance, humility, purity, devotion, wisdom and prudence, patience, obedience vigilance, faithfulness, love and all its other virtues.

4. Offer your heart frequently to the Queen of all hearts consecrated to Jesus, and implore her to take full and complete possession of your heart so that Mary May give it entirely to her Son, fill it with supernatural sentiments to adorn it with virtues, and mould it according to the Heart of the Divine Son and His Blessed Mother.

5. Assist the poor, widows, orphans and strangers, protect the helpless, console the afflicted, visit the sick and imprisoned, and perform other similar works of mercy. All these acts are most highly pleasing to the most merciful Heart of the Mother of Grace.

6. The greatest joy that we can afford the admirable Heart of Mary, all aflame with love for the souls which cost the Precious Blood of her Son, is to work zealously and devotedly for their salvation. If the hearts of the angels and saints in heaven rejoice for each conversion of a sinner on earth, the Queen of Angels and saints derives infinitely more joy from it than that of all the denizens of heaven combined because her heart possesses more love and charity.

7. Cultivate particular devotion to all the saints who enjoyed some special relationship with the most lovable Heart of the Mother of God, for example, those mentioned in Part Seven, Chapter Three.

(3). James 1, 2..

(4). Gal. 6, 14

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

8. Remember what has been said above: that Our Saviour has given us His own divine Heart, along with the most holy Heart of His Blessed Mother, to be the model and rule of our lives. Make a careful study of this divine rule, therefore, in order to follow and keep it faithfully.

9. Our Saviour has given us His divine Heart, together with the holy Heart of His Blessed Mother, not only to be our rule, but also to be our very Heart, so that as members of Jesus and children of Mary we may share but one heart with our adorable Head and our incomparable Mother. This privilege should help us to Perform all our actions with the Heart of Jesus and Mary, that is, in union with the holy intentions and dispositions that motivated Jesus and Mary in all their actions. To this end strive earnestly, at least at the beginning of your principal activities, to renounce yourself entirely and to give yourself to Jesus so that you may become united with His divine Heart, which is one and the same with the Heart of His Holy Mother; thus may you enter into its love, charity, humility and holiness, so that you may do all things in the holy dispositions which have always filled it.

10. Pay some special honor daily to the royal Heart of the sovereign Lady of the universe. This may be done through an act of devotion or a prayer offered for that intention, in imitation of Blessed Herman of the Order of St. Dominic, who each day used to recite an Ave Maria in greeting to the most amiable Heart of Mary.

Even though, following the example of this holy religious, you were to say only one Ave Maria each day in honour of the admirable Heart of the Mother of God, you would be doing something highly pleasing to her and most advantageous to your own soul, since the great Suarez, that wonder of learning and piety, said that he would rather lose all his knowledge than lose the merits of a single Ave Maria.

11. In all your affairs, necessities, perplexities and afflictions, have recourse to the most benign Heart of Mary, regarding it as your refuge in every need, and as a refuge, fortress and safeguard which God has given you as a shelter in the midst of all the miseries engulfing man in this valley of tears, this place of exile and banishment. Yes, the most bountiful and gentle Heart of Mary is truly solarium exilii nostri, "The solace and comfort of our exile." Whoever has recourse to it with respect and confidence will feel the marvellous effects of its incomparable goodness. There glows in the maternal Heart of our most charitable Mother more love than in all the hearts of the fathers and mothers of all time past, present and yet to come.

Mary's Heart is constantly mindful of us and the little things that concern us. Her Heart is so filled with kindness, meekness, mercy and generosity that never has anyone been known to invoke this Mother of Goodness in humility and confidence without receiving comfort in her presence.

PRACTICE OF THE DEVOTION

It is a Heart full of wisdom and enlightenment which possesses a perfect understanding of all our needs and of all that is most fitting for us to have. It is a most generous Heart, strong and mighty to fight our enemies, to repulse and crush whatever oppresses us, to obtain from God whatever it asks of Him, and to shower us with all kinds of blessings.

Finally, it is the Heart of our great Queen, our most bountiful Sister and our most amiable Mother, to whom all power is given in heaven and on earth and who holds in her hands for distribution to men all the treasures of her beloved Son, cui vult, quando, vult et quomodo vult, says St. Bernard; "to whomever she wills, whenever she wills and however she wills."

12. The twelfth means of honoring the admirable Heart of the Mother of Our Saviour is to celebrate its feast, or rather its feasts, with particularly marked devotion. I say "feasts" for there are several feasts of the most august Heart of our Heavenly Queen.

The first is celebrated in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and in several other places on February 8th, and in a number of other communities and churches on the first day of June. (5)

The second is the feast of the most ardent longing of the virginal Heart for the birth of our Saviour, which is called the feast of the Expectation, and is observed on December 18th.

The third is the feast of the Sorrows of the Pure Heart of the Mother of Jesus, which is celebrated on the Friday following Passion Sunday.

The fourth is the feast of the Resurrection of the Heart of Mary which was restored to life by the Resurrection of her Divine Son: "(Her) spirit (was) revived," (6) and overwhelmed with the greatest joy imaginable when this beloved Son visited her after His Resurrection. For that reason this feast is observed under the name of the Apparition of the Risen Jesus to His Most Holy Mother, on the first free day after the octave of Easter.

The fifth is the feast of the Joys of the Heart of Mary on July 8th.

There are in addition many others, for all feasts of the Blessed Virgin are really feasts of her Admirable Heart.

The feast of the Immaculate Conception, celebrated on December 8th,

(5). The Congregation of Jesus and Mary and the Order of Our Lady of Charity, founded by St. John Eudes, still solemnize the Feast of the Holy Heart of Mary on February 8th. In the Universal Church the Feast of the Immaculate Heart of Mary is now celebrated on August 22nd.

(6). Gen. 45, 27.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

is the feast of the Creation or formation of her most holy Heart, which was fashioned by the almighty hand of God and filled with grace and love from the very first of its creation.

The feast of the Nativity of Mary is the feast of the birth of her Heart, which on that day began to live a life more holy than any other life.

The feast of the Presentation of Mary in the Temple commemorates the solemn and public dedication of her Heart to eternal Love, which is God Himself.

The feast of her angelic Marriage (7) with St. Joseph is the feast of the divine betrothal of the two purest of Hearts, two virgin Hearts so closely united that they form but a single heart which loves God more than do all the hearts of the Seraphim.

The feast of the Annunciation commemorates the greatest miracle of the marvellous Heart of this admirable Mother, which on that day becomes an unfathomable depth of wonders, where greater and more prodigious things take place than have ever happened or ever will happen, no matter how great or worthy of admiration, in all centuries past, present and yet to come.

The feast of the Visitation is the feast of the Magnificat and of the inspired words that came forth on that day from her blessed Heart so filled with the Holy Spirit.

Christmas is the feast of her Divine and Virginal Childbirth, the feast of the delights of her Heart, which is utterly suffused and exalted with joy and love for her lovable Infant upon beholding Him born before her eyes.

The feast of the Purification is the feast of the first public and solemn sacrifice which her Heart made to Almighty God of His Son, her dearest Child. It is also the feast of the humility of her Heart, when she took her place in the temple among the ordinary mothers, and joined the ranks of the poor in offering what the poor were accustomed to offer.

The feast of the Assumption commemorates the triumphs of her Heart, the feast of its most perfect and intimate union with the Heart of the Most Blessed Trinity; the feast of the glorification and crowning of her Heart as Sovereign ruler of all hearts.

Finally, all these solemnities are the feasts of the most holy Heart of the Queen of every heart, because, as we said before, her Heart is the source and origin of whatever is great, holy and admirable in each of these feasts. And thus, the feast of the Holy Heart of the Mother of God, which is celebrated on February 8th, encompasses all the other feasts of (7). This feast is celebrated in some religious orders; on January 23rd.

our holy Mother, for it is the feast of her Heart strictly speaking-the feast of this Heart which is the principle of all her holiness, all her holy virtues, all her holy mysteries, and all the glories and grandeurs that she will possess everlastingly in heaven: "All the glory of the King's daughter is within." (8)

After that, judge for yourself how many great and marvellous things are honored by this holy solemnity of the Admirable Heart of the Queen of the Angels, and with what devotion it ought to be celebrated.

To all the above recommendations add meditation on the virtues, excellences and wonders contained in the admirable Heart of the Mother of the Saviour, which is an excellent way to motivate yourself to love and honor it

EXCELLENCE OF THIS SUBLIME CANTICLE

SACRED Scripture includes a number of inspired canticles that were composed by saintly women, for example, the canticles of Mary, sister of Moses and Aaron, of Deborah, of Judith, of Anna, mother of the prophet Samuel, all of which give thanks to God for outstanding favors received from His divine bounty. But the holiest and worthiest of all canticles is the Magnificat of the Mother of God, which stands unsurpassed because of the dignity and holiness of its author, as well as because of the great and admirable mysteries it contains. This is to say nothing of the miracles that God has performed by means of this canticle. While there is no record of any miracles having been performed through other canticles, St. Thomas of Villanova, (1) the Archbishop of Valencia, points out that upon the recitation of this canticle the Holy Spirit wrought a number of wonders on behalf of St. John the Baptist, the holy precursor of the Son of God, as well as in the person of his parents. Experience also has shown on more than one occasion that the Magnificat is an excellent means of expelling evil spirits from the bodies of those who are possessed by the devil. Several other esteemed writers report various miracles which have taken place through the recitation of this canticle. (2)

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

There is no evidence that the Blessed Virgin Mary ever sang or spoke it publicly more than once during her lifetime, but we cannot doubt that she recited it numberless times in private. Some writers report that Our Lady has often appeared in churches, during Vespers, surrounded by throngs of angels, and that she has been heard to sing her marvellous canticle with the angels and the priests so melodiously and enchantingly that no words can express the perfection of her participation.

Remember, too, whenever you sing or recite this virginal canticle, to surrender yourself to the Holy Spirit so that you become united to the devotion and all the holy dispositions with which it was sung or spoken by the Blessed Virgin Mary and by countless numbers of zealous saints.

(2). Cf. St. Anselm, in lib. Miracul.

CHAPTER 11

THE TRUE CANTICLE OF MARY'S HEART

I CALL the Magnificat the true Canticle of the most holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary for several reasons.

First of all, it originated in her immaculate Heart and its melody vibrated her heart-strings before it found voice on her lips.

Secondly, the words were sung only through the impetus and inspiration flowing from her Heart-from her corporeal, spiritual and divine Heart. 'The corporeal Heart of Mary, being filled with acute and extraordinary joy, impelled her most holy mouth to sing this Magnificat with extraordinary fervor and jubilation; her spiritual Heart, being wholly delighted and enraptured in God, brought forth from her hallowed lips them ecstatic words: "And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." (1) But Her divine Heart, that is to say, the divine Child who was hidden in her blessed womb and dwelling in her Heart, the soul of her soul, the spirit of her spirit and the Heart of her Heart, is the primary author of this canticle. It is this divine Heart which inspired the mind of the holy Mother with the thoughts and truths contained in the canticle. It is the Heart of Jesus who pronounces through her, its prophetic utterance of praise.

Thirdly, the Magnificat is the canticle of the Heart of the Mother of uncreated love, that is, the canticle of the Holy Spirit, Who is the spirit and the Heart of the Eternal Father and the Divine Son. The Holy Ghost is also the Heart and the Spirit of the Virgin Mother, pervading and possessing her so completely that her very presence and voice filled with the same spirit St. Zachary, St. Elizabeth and her unborn child, St. John the Baptist.

Finally, it is the canticle of the Heart and the love of Our Lady, because it is the divine love inflaming her utterly that inspired her to pronounce the words of this marvellous canticle-words which, according to St. Bernardine, are like so many flames of love darting from the ardent furnace of divine love burning in the immaculate Heart of this incomparable Virgin.

(1). Luke 1, 47.

278-

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

O canticle of love, O virginal canticle of the Heart of the Mother of love, having thine origin in the Heart itself of the God of love, Who is Jesus, and in the Heart of the personal and incarnate love which is the Holy Spirit, it is fitting only for the most blessed lips of the Mother of love to sing and pronounce thy message! The very Seraphim deem themselves unworthy to do so. How is it, then, that miserable sinners like us dare to repeat thy divine words and to pronounce with our worldly mouths the ineffable mysteries thou dost contain? Oh, with what respect and veneration should this most holy canticle be recited and sung! Oh, what should be the purity of the tongue and the holiness of the lips that intone it! Oh, what fire and flames of love should it kindle in the hearts of the ecclesiastics and religious who repeat and sing it so often! One should indeed be all heart and love in order to sing and recite this canticle of love.

O Mother of pure and tender love, deign to make us partakers of the holiness, fervor and love with which thou didst sing this admirable canticle here on earth, and as thou wilt sing it everlastingly in heaven with all the angels and the saints. Obtain for us from thy Divine Son the grace to be numbered among those who will sing the Magnificat eternally with thee, that we may give immortal thanks to the most adorable Trinity for all the wonders wrought in thee and through thee, and for the countless graces bestowed on all mankind through thy blessed intercession.

"MY SOUL DOTH MAGNIFY THE LORD"

THE first verse contains only four latin words, Magnificat anima mea Dominum, but they are words imbued with great mysteries. Let us weigh them carefully and devoutly; let us consider them attentively, in a spirit of humility, piety and respect, in order that we may be inspired, like the Blessed Virgin, to magnify God for the great and marvelous things that He wrought in her and through her, on her behalf and for us as well.

Here is the first word: Magnificat. What does this word mean? What does it mean to magnify God? Is it possible to magnify one whose grandeur and magnificence are immense, infinite and incomprehensible? Not at all; such a thing is impossible-impossible for God Himself, Who cannot make Himself greater than He already is. We cannot magnify God, that is, make Him greater in Himself, since His divine perfections are infinite and therefore cannot be increased in themselves, but we can magnify Him in ourselves. "Every holy soul," says St. Augustine, "can conceive the eternal Word within himself by means of faith. He can engender God in other souls by preaching the divine Word, but he can magnify His creator by loving Him so truly that he too may say: 'My soul doth magnify the Lord.'" (1) "To magnify the Lord," continues St. Augustine, "is to adore, praise and exalt His immense grandeur, His supreme majesty, His infinite excellence and perfections."

We can magnify God in several ways: first of all, by our thoughts, having a most exalted idea of God and the highest esteem for Him as well as for all things of God; secondly, by our devotion, loving God with all our hearts and above all things; thirdly, by our words, always speaking with the most profound respect of God and all things pertaining to Him, and by adoring and praising His infinite power, His incomprehensible wisdom, His immense goodness and His other perfections; fourthly, by our actions, always performing them solely for the glory of God; fifthly, by practising what the Holy Spirit teaches us in these words: "Humble thyself in all things, and thou shalt find grace before God, for great is the power of God alone, and he is honoured by the humble." (2) In the sixth place, we can magnify God by willingly bearing the crosses that He sends us for love of Him; for there is nothing that honors Him more than suffering, since our Saviour found no means to glorify His Father more excellent than the torments and death of the Cross. Last of all, we can magnify God by preferring and exalting Him above all things through our thoughts, affections, words, actions, humiliations and mortifications.

(1). Sermon de Assumpt.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

But alas! How often do we do just the contrary! Instead of exalting God, we lower Him; instead of preferring Him to all things, we prefer the creatures to the Creator; instead of preferring His Holy will, His interests, His glory and His happiness to our own will, interest, honor and satisfaction, we do just the opposite, putting Barabbas before Jesus.

Such is not thy behaviour, O holy Virgin! Thou didst always magnify God most highly and perfectly, from the first moment of thy life until the last. Thou didst always magnify Him most excellently by all thy thoughts, affections, words and actions, by the most profound humility, by the multitude of thy sufferings, by practising all virtue in a sovereign degree and by making saintly use of all the powers of thy soul and of all thine interior and exterior senses. In a word, thou alone hast glorified God more worthily and magnified Him more highly than have all other creatures combined.

We come now to the second word of our canticle, which is anima. "My soul doth magnify the Lord." Notice that the Blessed Virgin Mary does not say "I magnify," but "My soul doth magnify the Lord," in order to show that she magnifies Him from the utmost depths of her Heart and with her whole inner strength. Thus does she magnify Him not only with her lips and tongue, her hands and feet, but she also employs all the faculties of her soul—her understanding, memory, will and all the powers of the superior and inferior part of her soul, exhausting full inward and outward strength in order to praise, glorify and magnify her God. She does not magnify Him exclusively in her own name, nor to discharge her infinite obligations because of the inconceivable favors that she has received from His divine bounty; she magnified God in the name of all creatures and for the graces that He has bestowed upon all men, since He became man in order to render men God-like and save the whole human race, if men will but cooperate with the designs of His inconceivable love for them.
(2). Ecclus. 3, 20-21

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART

Here is the third word: mea, "my soul." What is this soul which the Blessed Virgin calls her soul?

My first reply to this question is that I know a great author (3) who maintains that this soul of the Blessed Virgin is her Son Jesus Christ, the soul of her soul.

Secondly, I answer that these words, anima mea, refer first to the individual and natural soul which animates the body of the immaculate Virgin, and second, to the soul of the divine Infant Whom she is carrying in her womb, Who is so closely united with her own soul that their two souls, in a certain sense, form but a single soul. In the third place, these words, anima mea, "my soul," indicate and include all souls created in the image and likeness of God who have ever been and ever will be in the whole world. St. Paul assures us that the Eternal Father has given us all things in giving us His Divine Son, (4) so there can be no doubt that, in giving Christ to His divine Mother, He thus gave her all things and therefore all souls belong to her. Mary is not unaware of this, and she also knows full well her sacred obligation to make use of everything that God has given her, for His honor and glory. Consequently, when Mary pronounces these words, "My soul doth magnify the Lord," considering all the souls of the past, present and future as souls who belong to her, she includes them all in order to unite them with the soul of her Son and her own soul, and in order to avail herself of every soul for praising, exalting and magnifying Him who descended from heaven and took flesh in her own virginal bosom so that He might accomplish the great work of their redemption.

We come now to the last word of the first verse: Dominum, "My soul doth magnify the Lord."

Who is this Lord whom the Blessed Virgin magnifies? It is He who is the Lord of lords, the sovereign and universal Lord of heaven and earth. This Lord is the Eternal Father; this Lord is the Son; this Lord is the Holy Spirit—three divine Persons who are but one God and one Lord, having but one single essence, power, wisdom, goodness and majesty. The most pure Virgin praises and magnifies the eternal Father for having associated her with His divine paternity by making her the mother of the very Son whose Father He is. She magnifies the Son of God for having deigned to choose her to be His Mother and Himself to be her true Son. She magnifies the Holy Spirit for having willed to accomplish in her the greatest of His works; that is, the adorable mystery of the Incarnation. She magnifies the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit for the infinite graces which They have granted to her and intend to bestow on all mankind.

(3). Vigerius, in suo Decachordo, chord. 7.--Cardinal mark Vigerius, a Franciscan, died at Rome in 1516.

(4). Rom. 8, 32.

Let us learn from this canticle that one of the principal duties required by God, and one of our greatest obligations towards His divine Majesty, is gratitude for His blessings, for which we must render thanks to Him with all our hearts and with most special devotion. Let us be eager, therefore, to imitate the glorious Virgin in her sublime thanksgiving, and to say frequently with her: "My Soul doth magnify the Lord," in order to thank the Most Blessed Trinity, not only for all the graces that we have received, but also for all the blessings that Providence has ever bestowed on all creatures. And in saying the words anima mea, let us remember that the Eternal Father, in giving us His Only-begotten Son, has given us all things, consequently the holy souls of Jesus and His divine Mother, together with all other souls in general, belong to us. For that reason we can and should profit by these souls for the glory of Him who has given them to us, through an ardent desire to praise and glorify God with our whole heart, our whole soul and all our strength. In these words we should include all the hearts and souls in the world, which are ours and which we wish to unite into one great heart and one single soul, to be employed to praise our Creator and Saviour.

CHAPTER IV

-MY SPIRIT HATH REJOICED IN GOD MY SAVIOUR"

THESE divine words, uttered by the inspired lips of the Mother of our Saviour, reveal to us the ineffable and incomprehensible joy that enraptured her heart, her spirit and her soul, together with all its faculties, not only at the moment of the Incarnation of the Son of God within her, but during the time that she bore Him in her blessed womb; indeed, even throughout the remainder of her life, according to Albert the Great and other Doctors. It was such an excessive joy, especially at the moment of the Incarnation, that, just as her holy soul was separated from her body during the last moment of her life by the strength of her love for God and her superabundant joy upon beholding herself preparing to Join her Son in Heaven, so also, if her life had not been miraculously preserved, she would have died of joy upon realizing the inexpressible bounty of God on her behalf and that of all mankind. History recounts numerous instances of persons who, hearing news of even temporal benefit, have died of joy, so it is most credible that the Blessed Virgin Mary would have died of joy if she had not been sustained by virtue of the divine Child in her virgin womb, because hers was the greatest cause for joy that ever existed or ever shall exist.

Mary rejoiced in God, in Deo; that is, because God is infinitely powerful, wise, good, just and merciful; because He so admirably displays His power, goodness and all His other divine attributes in the mystery of the Incarnation and the Redemption of the world.

Mary rejoiced in God her Saviour, in Salutari, because He had come into the world to Save and redeem her first and foremost, preserving her from original sin and overwhelming her with His graces and favors in such an abundance that He made her His mediatrix and cooperator in the salvation of all mankind.

Her Heart was overcome with joy because God had regarded her favorably, that is, had loved and approved of the humility of His handmaid, in which He found a most singular happiness and pleasure.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

"Herein," Says St. Augustine, "lies the cause of the joy of Mary—that He beheld the humility of His handmaid. It was as if she were saying, 'I rejoice because of the grace that God has granted to me, for it is from Him that I have received the reason for this joy; and I rejoice in Him because I love His gifts for love of Him.'" (1)

Mary rejoiced for the great things that God's omnipotent goodness had wrought in her, the greatest wonders that had ever come to pass in all the preceding centuries, the greatest that will ever take place in all the ages to come, as we shall see further on in the explanation of the fourth verse.

Mary rejoiced not only for the favors that she had received from God, but also for the graces and mercy that He had showered upon all men who were disposed to receive His priceless gifts.

Mary's heart rejoiced not only in the goodness of God toward those who place no obstacle in its way, but also in the manifestations of His justice toward the proud, who scorn His generosity.

In addition, the rejoicing of the Blessed Virgin sprang from another very special cause most worthy of her incomparable bounty. St. Antoninus cites this reason, (2) and I repeat it here so that it may encourage us to love and serve Mary whose love for us is so very great. Here it is. In explaining the words Exsultavit spiritus meus, the Saint says that we must interpret them as we do those spoken by our Saviour on the cross: "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit (3)" that is, Father, I commend to Thee all who will be united with my spirit through faith and charity. "But he who is joined to the Lord is one spirit." (4) In like manner, the Mother of the Saviour being wholly delighted and ecstatically enraptured in God when she pronounces these words, "My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour . . ." sees in spirit the almost countless multitude of those who will have special love and devotion for her, and be numbered among the predestined, from which she derives an inconceivable joy.

That being the case, who is it that will not be inspired to love this allgood and all lovable Mother, who experiences such deep love for those who love her that she regards and loves them as her own spirit, soul and heart? Let us listen to what Lanspergius the Carthusian says to each one of us, that we may be made to realize that truth:

(1).Sup. Magnificat.

(2).Part, 4, tit. 15, cap. 2. § 29.

(3). Luke 25, 46.

(4), 1 Cor. 6, 17

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART 285 -

"I exhort you, my dear son, to love our most blessed Lady and divine Mistress. If you wish to safeguard yourself against an infinite number of dangers and temptations, of which there are so many in this life, if you wish to find comfort and never to be overcome by sorrow in your adversities, if, in short, you wish to be inseparably united with our Saviour, then cultivate special veneration and love for His most pure, amiable, meek, faithful, gracious and powerful Mother. If you truly love Mary and try conscientiously to imitate her, you will find that she in turn will be a most sweet and tender Mother to you, and that she is so filled with kindness and mercy that she despises no one and never ignores those who invoke her aid, because her greatest desire is to dispense to all sinners the treasures of the graces which her Divine Son has placed at her disposal. Whoever loves this immaculate Virgin is chaste; whoever honors her is devout; whoever imitates her is holy. No one loves her without feeling the effects Of reciprocal love. Not one of those who love her can perish; not one of those who try to imitate her can fail to attain eternal salvation. How many wretched sinners has she taken to her merciful bosom when they were in despair and abandoned to all sorts of vices, with one foot in hell, if we may use the expression; yet they were not rejected by Mary when they had recourse to her goodness. Rather were they snatched by her from the jaws of the infernal monster, being reconciled with her Divine Son and replaced on the path to paradise by the power of her intercession? It is a grace, a privilege and a power specially conferred upon Mary by her omnipotent Son, that she is able to obtain penance for those who love her, grace for those who are devoted to her, and the glory of heaven for those who strive to imitate her." (5)

Here is another joy of the Queen of Heaven which is indicated in these words: "My soul hath rejoiced . . ." a joy which surpasses all the others. Several holy Fathers and important Doctors write that this Virgin Mother, being ecstatically elevated to God at the moment of the Incarnation of her Son within her, was filled with the same inconceivable joys which are possessed by all the blessed in heaven, and that she was rapt to the third heaven, where she had the happiness of seeing God clearly face to face. In proof of this, these holy writers advance the indisputable maxim that all the privileges with which the Son of God has honored His other saints were also bestowed by Him upon His divine Mother. Now St. Augustine, St. John Chrysostom, St. Ambrose, St. Basil, St. Anselm, St. Thomas and a number of others do not hesitate to assert that St. Paul, while he was still on earth, saw the essence of God when he was transported to the third heaven. Who can doubt, then, that the Mother of Our Saviour, who always lived in the most perfect innocence and who alone loved God more than all the other saints combined, enjoyed this same favor, not only on one Occasion but on several, particularly at the happy moment of the conception of her Son? This is the opinion of St. Bernard, Albert the Great, St. Antoninus and many others. "O blessed Mary," exclaims the holy Abbot Rupert, "it was then that a deluge of joy, a furnace of love and a torrent of heavenly delights burst upon thee, wholly absorbed and inebriated thee, and made thee experience what no eye has ever seen, no ear has ever heard and no human heart has ever understood." (6)

Let us learn from this that the children of the world are victims of very pernicious error, being gravely mistaken in imagining that there is no joy or happiness on earth, that there is only sadness, bitterness and affliction for those who serve God. O insupportable delusion! O hateful lie which can proceed only from him who is the father of all errors and falsehoods! Do we not hear the voice of Eternal Truth crying out: "Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that worketh evil . . . but glory, and honor, and peace to every one that worketh good," (7) and that the heart of a sinful person is like a sea that is always troubled, agitated and disturbed: "The wicked are like the raging sea"; (8) that the fear of God changes the hearts of those who love Him into a paradise of joy, gladness, peace, happiness and "The fear of the Lord shall delight the heart, and shall give joy, and gladness, and length of days"; (9) and that true servants of God possess a felicity that is greater, more genuine and more steadfast, even in the midst of the most overwhelming tribulations, than all the pleasures of those who espouse the cause of Satan? Do you not hear St. Paul assuring us that he is filled with consolation and imbued with joy in the midst of all his tribulations? (10)

Do you desire to learn these truths from experience? "O taste, and see that the Lord is sweet." (11) But if you wish to acquire this experience, you will have to renounce the false pleasures and misleading delights of the world.

O holy Virgin, implant in our hearts a share in the scorn, aversion and detachment which thy virginal Heart always felt toward the false pleasures of earth. Obtain for us from thy divine Son the grace to seek all our happiness, joy and delight in loving and glorifying Him; in serving and honoring thee with our whole heart and soul and with all our strength.

CHAPTER V

"HE HATH REGARDED THE HUMILITY OF HIS HANDMAID"

IN ORDER to understand this verse appropriately, we must consider it in relation to the preceding verse from which it springs: "My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour, for He hath regarded the humility of His handmaid; behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed."

This verse contains two principal truths, the first of which is expressed in these words: "He hath regarded the humility of His handmaid." What is this humility of which the Blessed Virgin speaks here? The holy Doctors are divided in their opinions about it. Some of them say that among all the virtues, humility is the only one which never perceives or becomes aware of itself, for he who believes himself to be humble is really proud. Therefore, when the Blessed Virgin says that God has regarded her humility, she is speaking not of the virtue of humility but of her lowliness and abjection.

Other authorities maintain that humility in a soul consists, not in being ignorant of the graces that God has bestowed upon it and the virtues that He has granted, but in returning His gifts and keeping for oneself only nothingness and sin; and that the Holy Spirit, speaking through the mouth of the Blessed Virgin, wishes to teach us that among all the virtues He beheld in her, He loved her humility and approved of it most of all, because the Blessed Virgin had humbled herself beneath all things, and this humility persuaded His divine Majesty to elevate her above all creatures by making her the Mother of the Creator. "O true humility," exclaims St. Augustine, "which gave birth to God for the sake of men, and granted life to mortals! The humility of Mary is the heavenly ladder on which God descended to earth. For what is the meaning of respexit, if not approbavit, 'He hath approved?' There are many who appear humble in the eyes of men, but their humility is not beheld by God. For if they were truly humble, they would not find pleasure in the praises of men, and their spirits would not rejoice in the eulogies of this world, but in God." (1)

"There are two kinds of humility," says St. Bernard. "The first is the daughter of truth; it is cold and without warmth. The second is the daughter of charity, and it inflames us. The first consists of knowledge and the second of love. Through the first we realize that we are nothing, and we learn this humility from ourselves and from our own wretchedness and weakness. Through the second we trample underfoot the glory of the world; and this humility we learn from Him Who annihilated Himself and fled when they sought Him out to offer Him the glory of royalty; but when they hunted Him down to crucify and plunge Him into the depths of opprobrium and ignominy instead of fleeing He voluntarily offered Himself." (2)

The Blessed Virgin possessed in a sovereign degree these two kinds of humility, especially the second; and St. Augustine, St. Bernard, St. Albert the Great, (3) St. Bonaventure, St. Thomas and several other writers all maintain that the words which the Holy Spirit uttered through the mouth of the most humble Virgin, Respexit humilitatem, mean true humility.

If you ask why God regarded the humility of the most glorious Virgin rather than her shining purity or other virtues, seeing that she possessed them all in the highest degree, Albert the Great will reply, together with St. Augustine, that God preferred to look down upon her humility because it was more pleasing to Him than her purity. "Virginity is highly praiseworthy," says St. Bernard,

"but humility is necessary. The former is counselled; the latter is commanded. You can be saved without virginity, but there is not salvation without humility. Without humility, I dare say that the virginity of Mary would not have been at all pleasing to God. If Mary had not been humble, the Holy Spirit would not have descended upon her; and if He had not descended upon her, she would not have become the Mother of God. She pleased God with her virginity but she conceived the Son of God through her humility. Hence it must be inferred that it was her humility which rendered her virginity pleasing to His divine Majesty." (4)

O holy humility, thou hast given us a God-Man and a Mother of God, and consequently thou art the source of all the graces, favors, blessings, privileges and treasures that we possess on earth and hope to possess one day in heaven. Thou art the destroyer of all evil and the source of all good. Oh, how we should esteem, love and desire this holy virtue! With what fervor we ought to implore it of God! Oh, with what ardor should we seek and embrace all the means necessary to acquire it! Whoever has no humility has nothing; and whoever does possess it has all the other virtues. Hence it seems, to quote the Holy Spirit speaking through the mouth of Holy Church, that the Eternal Father sent His Only-begotten Son into the world to become incarnate and to be crucified only that He might teach us humility through His example. It is what Holy Mother Church proclaims in this prayer on Palm Sunday: "Almighty and eternal God, who didst cause our Saviour to take upon him our flesh and to suffer death upon the cross that all mankind may imitate the example of his humility, mercifully grant that treasuring the lessons of his patience we may deserve to have fellowship in his resurrection." "What the devil has destroyed through pride," says one of the holy Fathers, "the Saviour has reestablished through humility." (5)

O Jesus, King of the humble, grant us the grace, we beseech Thee, to learn well the divine Lesson which Thou hast taught by these holy words: "Learn of me, because I am meek and humble of heart." (6)

O Mary, Queen of the humble, it is thy privilege to crush the head of the serpent, which is pride and arrogance. Crush it completely, then, in our hearts, and make us partakers of thy holy humility, that we may sing with thee for all eternity, Respect humilitatem ancillae suae, rendering thanks to the Most Blessed Trinity for having been so well pleased with thy humility that It deemed thee worthy, because of it, to become the Mother of the Saviour of the world, and to cooperate with Him in the salvation of all mankind.

CHAPTER VI

"HENCEFORTH ALL GENERATIONS SHALL CALL ME BLESSED"

This brings us to the second part of this verse, namely: "From henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." We need not be astonished if the most holy Virgin says something here about herself which is highly favorable, and refers to her own glory and praise, for it is the Holy Spirit Who speaks through her lips. Here is one of the greatest, most celebrated and most important prophecies that was ever made or ever will be made, announcing to mankind the infinity of admirable things that God will accomplish everywhere on earth in every age and everlastingly in heaven on behalf of the Mother of the Redeemer, in order to make her known, loved, served and honored throughout the world.

This great prophecy, informing us that all generations are to acknowledge and acclaim the Mother of the Blessed Saviour, applies to the whole universe, from the highest heaven to the lowest depths of hell. For not only has the Most Blessed Trinity sent the Archangel Gabriel, one of the first princes of Its empire, as ambassador, to announce to Mary that she was full of grace, and that the Lord was with her in order to accomplish in her the greatest wonder of all time, and that she is blessed forever among all women; this same Trinity also exalts Mary above all the angels on the highest throne of glory.

The eternal Father honors her as the most blessed of all women, making her eternally the Mother of the Only-begotten Son Whose Father He is, and granting her a power which supersedes all the powers of heaven and earth.

The Son of God proclaims her blessed among all the nations who hear His holy Gospel, which teaches the fulness of the grandeurs that He has bestowed upon Mary in choosing her to be His Mother.

The Holy Spirit renders her supremely blessed and glorious in choosing her as His most worthy Spouse and endowing her with His holiness in such a high degree that she is Queen of all the saints.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

At the hierarchies of angels acknowledge Mary to be blessed, because in contemplating her on the day of her triumph and glorious Assumption, they find the glorious Virgin so filled with wonders that they can speak of them only with admiration and transports of delight. Quæ est ista? they ask, Quæ est ista? Who is she? Who is she? And after the adoration that they continually tender to God in heaven, their foremost activity is to proclaim incessant praises of their Sovereign Empress.

Do we not hear the voice of holy Church Militant which perpetually sings all over the earth: "Blessed is the womb of the Virgin Mary which bore the Son of the eternal Father, and blessed are the breasts which nourished Him?"

Have we not already heard of the merciful Virgin once declaring to St. Brigid that there is no pain in purgatory which is not eased through her mediation? And do we not hear the voice of Holy Mother Church asking God to deliver the poor souls from that prison of divine justice through the intercession of Blessed Mary ever Virgin: Beata Maria semper Virgine intercedente? It must convince us that the souls of the Church Suffering are not only relieved in their agony but also delivered from it through her mediation.

Is it not also true that the souls who were in Limbo from the beginning of the world until the death of the Son of God profited by the intercession of this incomparable Virgin, since it was she who gave them the Redeemer to free them from captivity?

Let us descend still lower to the utmost depths of hell. If it is true, as St. Thomas, the Angelic Doctor, says, that the miserable damned are punished citra condignum—that is to say, they do not suffer the full torments merited by their sins—it is certain that this is a concession of divine Mercy. Now it is also true that for every effect of grace or mercy that proceeds from the adorable bosom of Divine Bounty our Mother of Mercy prays, and her prayers are effective. Therefore all the souls in hell ought to recognize and revere her as the most benign and sweet Mother of mercy. But because they do not do so, let us compensate for their neglect, praying all the inhabitants of heaven to do likewise.

What shall we say of the wretched demons? Is it not true that, in spite of the rage they directed against this most bountiful Virgin because of the souls that she frequently snatches from their claws, they are nevertheless constrained to acknowledge her inconceivable charity whenever they are forced to abandon their prey by virtue of her intercession? And that upon the pronouncement of the holy name of Mary, they are compelled to leave the bodies in their possession and flee to their infernal dungeon?

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART 293 -

Thus it is that all the generations of heaven, of angels, of saints, of the Church Triumphant, Militant and Suffering, and even of hell itself, fulfil this prophecy of the glorious Virgin: "All generations shall call me blessed."

Finally, there is no country in the world, no nation under the sun, either great or small, rich or poor, no religious or priest, no man or woman, not under the obligation to confess and proclaim that the Mother of the Saviour is the most blessed, powerful, generous, compliant, admirable and amiable of all creatures; for she seems to belong to the world and to think only about doing good to all who love and invoke her, and to make them partakers of her own happiness and felicity.

"O many times blessed!" exclaims the holy Doctor John Gerson. "Blessed first of all because thou hast believed. Blessed, secondly, because thou art full of grace. Blessed thirdly because thou art blessed. Blessed fourthly because the Almighty hath wrought great things in thee. Blessed in the fifth place because thou dost possess the joys of motherhood together with the glory of virginity. Blessed, last of all, because thou art incomparable, having been and always to be without equal." (1)

Let us listen now to St. Germanus, Archbishop of Constantinople, addressing Mary most admirable. "Who does not admire thee, who does not love thee, O most bountiful Virgin? Thou art our firm hope, our sure protection, our unshakable refuge, our most vigilant guardian, our perpetual safeguard, our most powerful help, our strongest defense, our unconquerable tower, the treasure of our joy, the garden of our delight, our impregnable fortress, our inaccessible bulwark, the port of those who are in danger of shipwreck, the security of sinners, the asylum of the abandoned, the reconciliation of criminals, the salvation of the lost, the blessing of the accursed, the general and public purveyor of every kind of blessing. In short, who could ever comprehend the effects of thy mercy? O heaven! O Queen of heaven! Blessed be thou amongst all generations! There is no place in the world where thy praises are not sung; and there is no race or tribe from which God does not receive some tribute and service through thy mediation." (2)

O holy Virgin, my heart is overcome with joy to see thee proclaimed blessed by all generations, past, present and yet to come, and I implore the Most Blessed Trinity with all my heart to allow this divine prophecy to be fulfilled even more and more throughout the universe. Oh, would that every breath of mine, every pulsation of my heart and veins, every use of the faculties of my soul, and all my interior and exterior senses, were as so many voices continually singing, in company with all the angels and saints, with the whole Church and all creatures: "Blessed is the womb of the Virgin Mary which bore the Son of the eternal Father, and blessed are the breasts which nourished Him." O blessed Mary, Mother of God, ever Virgin, temple of the Lord, repository of the Holy Spirit, who alone without rival hast been found most pleasing to Our Lord Jesus Christ, pray for thy people, intervene for the clergy, intercede especially for all devout women, and grant the help of thine incomparable goodness to all who honor thee.

CHAPTER V11*"HE THAT IS MIGHTY HATH DONE GREAT THINGS UNTO ME: AND HOLY IS HIS NAME"

IN THE preceding verse the Blessed Virgin prophesied that all generations shall call her blessed; in this verse she reveals the reasons for this honor, ~namely the great things that God has done to her.

What are these great things? Let us listen to St. Augustine. "It is a great thing," he says, "for a virgin to be a mother without the cooperation of man. It is a great thing for her to have borne in her womb the Word of God the Father, to have clothed Him with her own flesh. It is a great thing for her who characterizes herself as a handmaid to become the Mother of her Creator." (1)

"It is a great thing," says St. Antoninus,(2) "to have created heaven and earth out of nothing. It is a great thing to have brought manna down from heaven in order to nourish the Chosen People in the desert for forty years. It is a great thing to have given the Israelites possession of the promised land after having exterminated all the kings and people who inhabited it. All the miracles that our Saviour performed in Judea, giving sight to the blind, driving out devils from the bodies of those who were possessed, curing the sick, restoring the dead to life, are great and marvelous things. But the mystery of the Incarnation, which the infinite power of God wrought in the Blessed Virgin, incomparably surpasses all these other things. It is what prompts her to say, 'He that is mighty hath done great things!'"

"Here are the great things," says St. Thomas of Villanova,(3) "that God wrought in the most holy Virgin. He elevated her to such a high degree of grandeur that all the eyes of men and angels cannot scan that eminence. He transformed this granddaughter of Adam into the Mother of her own Creator, the Lady of the world, the Queen of heaven and the Empress of all creatures. A new prodigy appeared in the world, to the great wonderment of heaven and earth: a God-Man, a Man-God; God become man, and man united with God. Prodigy of prodigies, miracle of miracles, after which there remains nothing on earth worthy to be admired!"

"It is quite true that all the wonders witnessed on earth are as nothing compared with this incomprehensible event. We admire the miracle that God performed when He allowed His people to pass dry-shod across the Red Sea. That is a trifle. Here is something far greater: it is the immense ocean of the Divinity confined within the body of a young and mortal virgin. We admire the bush that burned without being consumed. That is a little thing; here is a virgin who brings forth a Child while preserved, serving her virginity intact. We admire the prophet Moses lying in a tiny cradle of rushes. That is insignificant; let us rather admire the King of Heaven lying in a manger. We admire a column of fire and a pillar of cloud which guided the people of God in the desert. That is nothing; instead let us admire the essential fire of Divinity enclosed in a tiny cloud in order to guide and govern the whole world. We admire the manna sent from heaven. That is a mere nothing; let us admire the Word of the Almighty Father Who descends from heaven into the bosom of the Virgin Mother. We admire the sun halted in its course by the command of Josue, or retreating at the prayer of Ezechias. That is unimportant; let us admire the God who voluntarily annihilates Himself. We admire the prophet Elias restoring a dead child to life. That is a small thing; let us admire the Son of God, co-equal and co-eternal with His Father, restoring Himself to life after having died on the Cross. We admire the same prophet Elias ascending into heaven. That is nothing wonderful; let us admire the Man who ascends to the throne of the Divinity and becomes God."

It is what St. Cyprian (4) extols when he exclaims, "O Lord, how admirable is Thy name! Truly Thou art a God Who dost perform wonders. I no longer admire the marvelous construction of the world, nor the stability of the earth, nor the order and arrangement of the days, nor the course and brilliance of the sun; but I admire a God made man in the womb of a virgin; I admire the Almighty brought down into a cradle; I admire the Word of God united personally with the mortal and perishable body of a man." (5)

Finally, God wrought such great things to this chosen virgin that He could not have accomplished greater marvels. He could easily make a world larger than the one He did make, a sky more vast, a sun more brilliant; but He cannot make, says St. Bonaventure, a mother greater and nobler than the Mother of God. For if He could make a greater mother, He would have to give her a more excellent son. Now is it possible to find a son more worthy than the Son of God, whose Mother is the Blessed Virgin?

What more shall I say? I quote a great prelate distinguished for learning and piety, Rutilius Benzonius, Bishop of Loretto, who is not afraid to assert that God elevated this incomparable Virgin to such heights and granted her such extraordinary privileges that it may be said that she gave, so to speak, greater things to His Divine Majesty, in a certain sense, than the gifts granted to her. Everything that Mary received is finite and limited, confined within the bounds of created things, but the Queen of Heaven, gave birth to the Son of God, the Creator and Sovereign Lord, the Saviour and Redeemer of the world. From God she received the privilege of being His creature, of being pleasing to Him, of being full of grace, of being blessed among all women. But she made it possible for God to be our Emmanuel, that is to say, God with us; to be the Redeemer of men through the precious blood that He received from her; to possess all power in heaven and on earth as a man; to be the universal Judge of the whole world as a man; to be seated at the right hand of the Father as a man; to be the head of the whole Church as a man; to be the leader of the angels as a man; to forgive sins as a man.

If our Saviour gave His Apostles the power to perform miracles greater than those that He Himself performed, according to the testimony of the Gospel, (6) we need not be astonished that He granted to His most holy Mother the power to give Him gifts even greater than those she received from Him and this power is one of the marvels to which Mary refers when declaring that the Almighty "hath done great things to her."

After that, who will not admire the great and wonderful accomplishments of Almighty God with regard to the glorious Virgin? And who will not acknowledge that it is the Holy Spirit Who was speaking through her: Fecit mihi magna qui potens est? Oh, what a wealth of prodigies and miracles is bound up in these words! Oh, what a great thing it is to be both virgin and mother, and to be a virgin and the Mother of God! Oh, what a great privilege it is to be associated with the Eternal Father in His divine fatherhood, to be the Virgin Mother, in the fulness of time, of the very Son generated from all eternity without a mother! Oh, what a great thing it is to be clothed with the virtue of the Most High, to be a partaker of His adorable fecundity in order to be the Mother of the Son, who is consubstantial, co-equal and co-eternal with God His Eternal Father! Oh, what a great thing it is to give temporal birth from a virginal bosom to Him who was born before the beginning of time in the bosom of the Father of mercy! Oh, what a great thing it is for a mortal creature to give life to Him from whom she received her own life! Oh, what a great thing it is to be the worthy Spouse of the Holy Spirit, associated with Him in the production of His adorable masterpiece, the God-Man.

Such indeed are the great and marvellous things that God wrought upon the Queen of heaven, but lo! here follows the miracle of miracles. Great, holy and admirable as thou wert, O Virgin Mother, thou didst always look upon, demean and humble thyself as if thou wert the least and most insignificant of all creatures. "It is a great thing for the Queen of Angels to be a virgin," says a Holy Father of the Church, (7) "it is a great thing for her to be a mother, it is a greater thing for her to be a mother and virgin at the same time, and it is a very great thing for her to be a virgin and the Mother of God; but what surpasses all else is that, great as she is, Mary considers herself as if she were nothing."

Furthermore, Mary uses all these tremendous powers, her immense privileges, her sublime mercies, to help the humble, the wretched and even the most hopeless, if they will simply have recourse to her with humility and confidence. "All power," says the holy cardinal, Peter Damian, "is given to Mary in heaven and on earth, and nothing is impossible to her who holds the power to restore and hope of salvation in the most despairing individuals." (8) "Yes," exclaims St. Bonaventure, "because the Almighty Lord is most powerfully with thee, O Mary, thou art therefore most powerful with God, most powerful through Him, most powerful in Him." (9)

O most powerful and benign Virgin, with all my heart do I give infinite thanks to the Almighty for having made thee so great, so powerful and so admirable. With all my heart do I also offer, deliver and abandon myself entirely and irrevocably to the great power that God has granted thee, imploring thee most humbly to exercise it on my behalf for the total destruction of whatever in me is displeasing to Him and to thee, and to establish in its stead the perfect reign of His glory and love.

The Blessed Virgin, having affirmed that the Almighty has wrought great things in her, then adds these words: "And holy is His name," words which contain six great mysteries.

The first is that the mystery of the Incarnation, being a mystery of love, is attributed to the Holy Spirit, who is personal love, as the masterpiece of His love and bounty, in fulfilment of the words of the angel: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee." (10)

The second mystery indicated in the words, "and holy is his name," is that the holy humanity of the divine Infant whom the Blessed Virgin conceived in her womb is sanctified by His most intimate union with essential Holiness, the Divinity. This is further designated by these words of St. Gabriel: "The Holy which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."(11)

The third mystery is that the Infant God is thus sanctified and made the Saint of saints in order to sanctify and glorify the name of the Thrice Holy One as much as it deserves, as well as to make it sanctified and glorified on earth, in heaven and throughout the universe, thus fulfilling the proclamation: «Hallowed be thy name.» (12)

The fourth mystery included in the words, "And holy is His name," is that the Saviour of the world, whom the holy Virgin bears in her most sacred womb, is divinely anointed with the unction of divinity, that is, He is sanctified and consecrated as a Saviour so that He may exercise the functions of Saviour, and of the Sanctifier of all men, a mission He commences at once with regard to His precursor, the Baptist, and His relatives, St. Zachary and St. Elizabeth.

The fifth mystery is that the Holy Spirit, by overshadowing Mary in order to accomplish in her the most holy work that ever was or will be done, and the Saint of saints, holiness itself and the source of all holiness, by being conceived by her, filled and overwhelmed her with an ocean of grace and inconceivable holiness.

The sixth mystery indicated in these words, "And holy is his name," is that the ineffable mystery of the Incarnation is an inexhaustible source of all the grace and holiness that has ever been, is now and ever will exist in heaven and upon earth.

Behold and admire how many wonders are contained in these few words pronounced by the hallowed lips of the Mother of the Saint of saints, Whose holy name be praised, sanctified and glorified for all eternity.

CHAPTER VIII

"HIS MERCY IS FROM GENERATION UNTO GENERATION, TO THEM THAT FEAR HIM"

WE COME now to the second part of our divine canticle, the true canticle of the most holy Heart of the Mother of tender love, and a very precious relic of her immaculate Heart.

Having magnified God for the infinite favors bestowed upon her and having made this admirable prophecy, "All generations shall call me blessed," which includes a world of wonders which the Almighty has wrought and will continue to accomplish for all time and eternity to render this Virgin Mother glorious and venerable throughout the universe, she makes yet another prophecy that vibrates with rich comfort for all mankind, particularly for those who fear God. In it our peerless Mary affirms to us that the mercy of God extends from generation to generation to all those who fear Him: "And his mercy is from generation unto generation, to them that fear him."

What is this mercy? "It is our most bountiful Saviour," explains St. Augustine.(1) The eternal Father is called the Father of Mercy, because He is the Father of the Word Incarnate who is uncreated mercy itself. It is this mercy which the royal prophet David begged God, in the name of the whole human race, to send into the world through the mystery of the Incarnation, when he prayed: Show us, O Lord, Thy mercy, and grant us Thy salvation. (2) The Word Incarnate is all love and charity; therefore He must be all mercy. God is naturally and essentially allmerciful, says St. Jerome, and always ready to save by His clemency those whom He cannot save according to His justice. But we are so wretched and so inimical to ourselves that when mercy is offered to us for our salvation, we turn our backs on it in scorn.

It is through the Incarnation that the Son of God exercised His mercy on our behalf, and His great mercy, according to these words of the (1). Exposit. Sup. Magnif.

(2). Ps. 84. 8.

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Prince of the Apostles: "According to his great mercy (He) hath regenerated us."(3) All the effects of the mercy which our Saviour has wrought in men from the beginning of the world up to this moment, and will continue to produce for all eternity, have proceeded and will proceed from the adorable mystery of His Incarnation, as from their source and primary origin. That is why David, in asking pardon for his sins, prays in this fashion: "Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy."
(4)

Three elements are necessary for mercy: the first is that it takes pity on the miseries of others, for he is merciful who bears in his heart, through compassion, the miseries of the wretched; the second, that it possess the greatest will to help the outcast in their miseries; the third, that it pass from thought and will into effect. Now our most benign Redeemer became man that He might manifest His great mercy. First of all, having become man and assumed a body and a heart capable of suffering and sorrow, like ours, Our Lord was so filled with pity at the sight of our troubles and rendered so sad by carrying them in His Heart that no words can express his suffering because on one hand, He bore an infinite love for us, like the very best father for his children, and on the other hand He kept constantly before His eyes all the misfortunes of body and spirit, all the anguish, tribulations, martyrdoms and torments which all His children would have to endure until the end of the world. His most tender and loving Heart would have caused Him countless deaths had not His love, stronger than death itself, preserved His human life so that He might sacrifice it on the cross for our sake.

Secondly, all our tribulations were present to our most merciful Saviour at the very first moment of His life, and He resolved so firmly, ardently and steadfastly at that time to help us free ourselves from them and He so faithfully preserved this intention in His heart from the first to the last instant of His life, that all the most atrocious cruelties and tortures that wretched men, to whom Christ was so wonderfully good, caused Him to suffer while He was on earth, as well as all His prescience of the ingratitude, outrages and crimes with which we would repay His adorable mercy, were not capable of cooling even slightly the ardor and strength of His will to show mercy to mankind.

Thirdly, what did He not do and suffer in order to deliver us effectively from all the temporal and eternal miseries into which our sins had plunged us? All the actions of His life-of a life of thirty-four years, of a life divinely human and humanly divine-all the virtues that He practised, all His steps and travels here on earth, all the labors that He endured, all the humiliations, privations and mortifications that He underwent, all His fasts, vigils, prayers and sermons, all His sufferings, wounds and sorrows, His most cruel and shameful death, His precious blood shed to the last drop-were not all these things, I repeat, employed not only to rid us of every kind of evil, but also to grant us possession Of an eternal empire, filled with an immensity of glory, grandeur, joy, felicity, and inconceivable and inexpressible blessings? O bounty! O love! O superabundance! O incomprehensible and inexplicable mercy to my Saviour, how well indeed art Thou called the God of Mercy! O human heart, how frightful is thy hardness and stupidity if thou dost not love this God of love! Oh, what shalt thou love if thou dost not love Him Who has so much love and kindness for thee?

(3). I Pet. 1, 3.

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART 303

But what is the meaning of the following phrase: "From generation unto generations, to them that fear Him?" According to the explanation of holy Doctors, these words mean that, since our Saviour was made flesh and died for all men, He also pours the treasures of His mercy upon all those who do not oppose but rather fear Him. Being the inexhaustible fountain of grace and mercies, God also derives a sovereign pleasure from bestowing them continually upon His children, everywhere and at all times. Although, according to St. Bernard, divine Mercy is equally shared by the Three Divine Persons, together with all the other divine attributes, it is nevertheless attributed particularly to the person of the Son, as power is to the Father and bounty to the Holy Spirit. It is particularly the Incarnate Word who, through His great mercy, delivered us from the tyranny of sin, from the power of the devil, from eternal death, from the torments of hell and infinity of evils and miseries, God acquired for us, at the cost of His Precious blood and His Divine life, the same eternal empire which His Eternal Father had given to Him.

But Our Lord did not will to accomplish this great work by Himself. In addition to doing all things in union with the Heavenly Father and the Holy Ghost, Christ also willed to associate His most holy Mother with Him in the great work of His mercy. "It is not good for man to be alone,"(5) said God when He willed to give the first woman to the first man; "let us make him a helpmate like unto himself." So also does the new Man, who is Jesus Christ, choose to have a helpmate in Mary, and the eternal Father gives the Blessed Mother to the Beloved Son to assist Him and cooperate with Him in the great work of the salvation of the world, which is the work of His great mercy.

(5). Gen. 2, 18.

When St. Catherine of Siena was in Rome, she pronounced several magnificent eulogies in honor of the Mother of God on the feast of the Annunciation in 1379-eulogies motivated and inspired by the Holy Spirit-of which these four invocations are most worthy: "O Mary, Bearer of Fire! O Mary, Peaceful Ocean! O Mary, Fiery Chariot! O Mary, Administrator of Mercy!"

Mary is called "Bearer of Fire" because she carried in her virginal body Him who is all-enkindled with love and charity toward mankind, who said that He came to bring fire to the earth, and proclaimed that His greatest desire was to inflame all hearts with love. (6)

Mary is called a "Peaceful Ocean" because she is an immense sea of grace, virtue and perfection, an ocean that is always calm and peaceful, that sustains and transports everyone to the port of eternal salvation without trouble or difficulty.

Mary is a "Fiery Chariot" completely inflamed with love, charity, goodness and meekness on behalf of true Israelites . . . "the Chariot of Israel," (7) that is, of the true children (of God); but she is equally as terrifying to all the demons as she is meek and kind to men. Whoever honors, loves, serves and invokes Mary with humility and confidence will ascend to paradise in a fiery chariot.

She is the "Administrator of Mercy" because God has endowed her with extraordinary goodness, meekness, generosity and kindness, with unparalleled power, that she may desire and be capable of helping, protesting, sustaining and comforting all the afflicted, the miserable, and those who have recourse to her in their needs and necessities.

Mary does this continually with regard to individuals, kingdoms, provinces, cities, houses and even the whole world, according to these words of one of the holiest and most learned Fathers of the Church, St. Fulgentius, who lived almost twelve centuries ago. "Heaven and earth," he says, "would long since have been reduced to the nothingness out of which they were created, had not the prayers of Mary sustained them." These words must be understood to include not only the firmament but also the other skies which contain the sun, the stars and the moon." (8)

Let us, then, acknowledge and honor the Mother of the Saviour as the Mother of Mercy, with whom her beloved Son willed to share His great mercy to associate her in the works of His clemency and benignity. Infinite and eternal thanks be rendered to Thee for this partnership! O my

"HE HATH SHOWED MIGHT IN HIS ARM"

IN THE preceding verse the Blessed Virgin Mary praised and glorified the effects of divine Mercy originating in the Incarnation of the Saviour and extending from one generation to another to all who fear God. In this verse she magnifies and exalts the prodigies of Divine Might which shine forth so admirably in this same mystery.

The great God, she says, hath put down the mighty with His arm. What arm is this? St. Augustine, St. Fulgentius and St. Bonaventure all maintain that it is the Word Incarnate, according to the prophet Isaias; "And to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" (1) which text St. John applies to the Son of God. (2) Since it is with his arms that man performs his actions, it is similarly through His Divine Son that God accomplishes all things. "Just as man's arms," says Albert the Great, "extend from his body, and his hands from both the arms and body, so also does the Son of God extend from the Almighty Father, while the Holy Spirit proceeds from both the Father and the Son."

But what is the meaning of the words "He hath showed might?" They mean that God has acted powerfully, and that His power has produced admirable effects in his arm, through His Only-begotten Son and Incarnate Word, who is His arm. It is through Christ that the Eternal Father created all things; it is through Christ that He redeemed the world; through Christ He vanquished the devil and triumphed over hell; it is through Christ that God opened heaven to us; it is through Him that He performed an infinite number of other miracles. "The words that I speak to you," says the Son of God, "I speak not of myself. But the Father who abideth in me, he doeth the works." (3) Oh, what wonders are wrought by Divine Might in this ineffable mystery of the Incarnation! What a miracle to behold two natures, infinitely removed from each other, so closely united that they form but a single person! What a Miracle to behold the Word Incarnate come forth from the consecrated womb of a virgin without destroying that virginity! What a wealth of miracles in the institution of the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar! What a miracle, last of all, for Divine Might to have elevated a daughter of Adam to the dignity of Mother of God, and to have enthroned her as Queen of the angels and of the whole universe!

Among the works of God, some are attributed to His hands and fingers, like the heavens: "The heavens are the works of thy hands" (4) of will behold the heavens, the works of thy fingers." (5) Others are attributed to one of His fingers, "This is the finger of God," (6) like the wonders that He performed through Moses in Egypt. But the incomparable work of the Incarnation is attributed neither to the hands or fingers of God; it belongs to the arm of His divine Might because it incomparably surpasses all the other works of His adorable Majesty.

"It is an admirable thing," says St. John Damascene, "that He who is perfect God becomes perfect man. This God-Man is the newest of all things; indeed, He is the only new being that has ever appeared or ever can appear under the sun, in whom the infinite power of God is made manifest far more than in all that the universe encompasses. For what is there greater and more admirable than to behold God made man?" (7)

Let us listen now to Richard of Saint Victor who, in explaining these words of the royal prophet, Descendet sicut pluvia in vellus, (8) exclaims: "O the glory of the Blessed Virgin! O marvellous grace! Admirable dignity of the Mother of this divine Child! Oh, what goodness on the part of this adorable Child who, being the Son of God, wills to become the Son of Mary! Oh, what dignity of the Mother of Jesus to possess the fruit of fertility together with the flower of virginity! What a marvel to behold a virgin who bears a son, not just an ordinary son but a son who is God! Truly the glory of Mary is a glory altogether unique. Descendet sicut pluvia in vellus, 'He will descend like rain upon fleece.' Who will descend? The Only-begotten Son of God. Whence and to what place will He descend? From the adorable bosom of the divine Father into the virginal bosom of His Mother." (9) So speaks Richard of Saint Victor.

Will you listen, after that, to the holy Cardinal Hugues as he explains these words of the Psalmist: "Sing ye to the Lord a new canticle:

because he hath done wonderful things." (10) What are these marvellous things? "They are," says this saintly cardinal, "that He has caused God to be made man, a virgin to become a Mother, and the hearts of the faithful to believe these two mysteries. It is a wonderful thing that God delivered up His own Son to the spite of slaves, His beloved Son to the hatred of His enemies, the sovereign Judge to the ignominy of criminals and condemned creatures, the First to the last (for a man is the least of all creatures), and the Innocent to the impious. (11)

Here are two additional factors of the highest importance. The first is that nowhere is divine Might more apparent than in the remission and destruction of sin, according to these words of holy Church: "O God, Who dost manifest Thine omnipotence more in forgiving us our sins and showing us mercy than in anything else." The wrong done to God through sin is so great, that only the infinite might of an immense bounty can pardon it, and sin is such a frightful monster that only the arm of the Almighty can crush it.

The second wonderful manifestation of this adorable Might is the virtue and strength that it imparts to holy martyrs and to all persons who suffer extraordinary afflictions, that they may bear them generously and in a true Christian manner for the love of Him Who suffered the torments and death of the Cross for their sake.

This is a brief summary of the countless miracles performed by the all-powerful arm of the Word Incarnate, miracles which He continues to perform daily for the glory of His divine Father, the honor of His most admirable Mother and the salvation and sanctification of mankind, to incite men to love and serve Him with all their hearts, as He loves them with all His Heart.

CHAPTER X

"HE HATH SCATTERED THE PROUD IN THE CONCEIT OF THEIR HEART"

Aside from the effects of divine Might as indicated in the preceding pages, here is yet another of the greatest importance, proclaimed in the words of the Blessed Virgin Mary: "He hath scattered the proud in the conceit of their hearts." What does that mean, and who are the proud? The holy Fathers explain this text in various ways. Some of them say that they are the rebellious angels whom God drove out of heaven and cast into hell for their pride. Others understand them to mean Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Nabuchodonosor, Antiochus and other enemies of the people of Israel. St. Cyril and St. Augustine explain them with reference to the demons that our Lord drove out of the bodies and souls of men when he came into the world. St. Augustine writes further that we may also infer these proud to mean the Jews who scorned the humble coming of our Saviour, for which they were rebuked.

Hugh of Saint Victor and Dionysius the Carthusian say that these words designate all men dominated by pride, while Cardinal Hugues declared that these proud are the heretics whose minds are divided and at variance because of the diversity of their thoughts and errors. There are still others who assure us that these prouds are sinners in general who rebel against the divine will.

Finally, certain holy Doctors write that we must apply these words to the emperors, kings, princes, philosophers and all the tyrants who have opposed the proclamation of the holy Gospel, personages whom God has exterminated and cast into hell fire. These also include all men, who will persecute the Church until the coming of the antichrist, for the majority of the words of the Magnificat are prophecies expressed in the past tense, dispersit superbos, as if those things were already fulfilled, in order to show that they will just as certainly take place as if they had already happened.

Let us now examine the meaning of the words: "In the conceit of his heart." St. Augustine explains them in this way: "He hath destroyed the proud by a secret and profound resolution of His divine will. For it was by a profound determination that God was made man, and the innocent suffered in order to redeem the guilty; a most secret resolution of which the devil could not have had knowledge." (1)

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

But because the Greek reads thus: "In conceit of their heart," other Doctors are led to offer this explanation: "He has destroyed and exterminated those whose hearts were filled with high esteem for themselves;" or else: "He has scattered the thoughts and resolutions that the proud were meditating in their hearts," in conformity with these words of the prophet Isaiah: "Take counsel together, and it shall be defeated." (2)

Here is another most important secret which the Blessed Virgin reveals to us in the words "He hath scattered the proud in the conceit of their heart." They mean, according to the opinion of prominent writers, that not only does God disperse and annihilate the evil thoughts and pernicious designs contrived against Him and His friends by the wicked, but also that He converts all their pretensions into their own confusion, the glory of His divine Majesty and the increased holiness and eternal happiness of those who serve Him. Furthermore, He opposes them with their own weapons, Mente cordis sui, striking back at them with the very same arrows launched by their malice against Him and His children: "The arrows of children are their wounds." (3) He makes use of their designs to fulfil His own. He causes the evil intentions of their impious minds to be turned to their own perdition and the advantage of His servants. God converts the obstacles which the wicked place in the path of the works of His glory into very powerful means employed to give them more firmness, perfection and brilliance.

Did not Satan's malice toward the first man lead to his own confusion while proving advantageous not only to man but to all posterity? God brought forth such immense good from the evil into which the temptation of the devil caused Adam to fall that Holy Mother Church sings: "O happy fault, that merited such and so great a Redeemer."

Did not the accursed envy and bad will of the brothers of Joseph serve divine Providence as a means of exalting him even to the extent of sharing the royal throne of Egypt, and of earning for him the extraordinary title of the God of Pharaoh? Of what advantage to Pharaoh's successor was his hardness and cruelty against the chosen people except to drown him with his whole army in the depths of the Red Sea, and to manifest still more strikingly God's protection of His own children?

(1). In Magnif.

(2). Isa. 8, 10.

(3). Ps. 63, 8.

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART

What was the intention of the perfidious enemies of Christ and the evil spirits in treating the Son of God so ignominiously and cruelly as they did, if not to make His name infamous and hateful throughout the world? As we read: "Let his name be remembered no more." (4) Thus they strove to thwart all His designs and nullify the great work that He had undertaken for the redemption of the world. Yet God employed their abominable hatred to fulfil the determination of His infinite bounty with regard to the human race.

What was the intention of the tyrants in slaughtering so many thousands of holy martyrs, if not to ruin and completely exterminate the Christian religion? And yet, did not Divine Might use this means to render its establishment more solid, holy, extensive and glorious?

Finally, we may truthfully apply to all who persecute and oppose the servants of God what St. Augustine said of the godless Herod who slaughtered so many innocents in the attempt to destroy Him Who came to save the world: "Behold a wonderful thing, that the hatred and cruelty of this impious enemy of God and men was much more profitable to these blessed infants than all the friendship that he could ever have shown them and all the favors he could ever have bestowed on them." (5)

Thus does the all-powerful arm of the Incarnate Word overthrow the undertakings of the proud in the devising of their hearts: "He hath scattered the proud in the conceit of their heart."

It is through the humility of thy virginal Heart, O Queen of Heaven, that all these great things are accomplished, since thy marvellous humility drew the divine Word from the bosom of His Father and clothed Him with flesh in thine own virginal bosom. We also look to thee to crush the head of the serpent, that is, to stamp out pride and arrogance. We may indeed say to thee, therefore: "Thou art the glory of Jerusalem, thou art the joy of Israel, thou art the honour of our people, for thou hast done manfully." (6)

This first phrase, "Thou art the glory of Jerusalem," is the voice of the angels, whose downfall has been atoned through thy intercession. The second, "Thou art the joy of Israel," is the voice of men, whose sadness has been changed into joy through thy mediation. The third, "Thou art the honor of our people," is the voice of women whose shame has been blotted out by the blessed Fruit of thy womb. The fourth, "Thou hast done manfully," is the voice of the holy souls who were imprisoned in Limbo and set free from captivity by thy beloved Son, the Redeemer of the world.

O most holy and desirable humility of Mary, thou art the source of all blessings. O hateful pride, thou art the cause of all the evils of earth and hell. "Every proud man is an abomination to the Lord," (7) says the Holy Spirit; not only is the proud and arrogant man abominable in the sight of God, but "he is abomination itself."

O Queen of the humble, efface from our hearts whatever is contrary to humility, and make this holy virtue reign within us for the glory of thy Beloved Son.

CHAPTER X1

"HE HATH PUT DOWN THE MIGHTY FROM THEIR SEAT, AND HATH EXALTED THE HUMBLE"

THE time being ripe when the Father of Mercy was pleased to fulfill His intention from all eternity to save mankind, His divine wisdom, whose resolutions are impenetrable, willed to employ means to that end which apparently had no capacity for or conformity with the greatness of this mighty work. What are these means? Here they are. God sent His Only-begotten Son into the world in a perishable and mortal state, in such abjection and lowliness that He Himself says, "I am a worm and no man" (1): bearing as a tide of honor in Scripture, Novissimas Virorum, (2) "the most abject of men."

This adorable Father wills His Only-Begotten Son, generated in His bosom from all eternity, and equal to Him in all things, to be born of a Mother who is in truth most holy, but so lowly and humble in her own eyes and in the eyes of the world that she esteems herself the least of all creatures.

Furthermore, this divine Father, wishing to provide helpers and coworkers to work with His Divine Son in this supreme work of redemption of the world, chose twelve poor fishermen without learning, eloquence or any other qualities that might have distinguished them among men. He sent these twelve fishermen throughout the land to destroy a religion based on conformity with human inclinations, a religion rooted for several thousand years in the hearts of men, and to establish instead a completely new religion which is opposed to the first and contrary to all the inclinations of human nature.

These twelve poor fishermen went everywhere to preach and establish this new faith while destroying the first religion. But how were they received? Everyone row up against them-the great and the lowly, the rich and the poor, men and women, the learned and the ignorant, losophers and priests of false gods, kings and princes; all men in general expended every effort to oppose the preaching of the Gospel which twelve fishermen strove to proclaim. They were seized and cast into prison with chains on their hands and feet, they were treated like rogues and magicians, they were beaten, burned, stoned, crucified; in short, they were made to suffer all the most atrocious torments.

But what happened? They emerged victorious, they triumphed gloriously over the great, the powerful, the wise and all the monarchs of the world. They annihilated the religion, or rather the irreligion and abominable idolatry which hell had established throughout the world, and they established the Christian faith and religion in its stead. Finally, they became the masters of the world, and God bestowed on them the principality of the earth: "Thou shalt make them princes over all the earth." (3)

God upset the thrones of kings and the pulpits of philosophers; He conferred the first empire of the world to a poor fisherman, whom He elevated to such eminent power and glory that rulers and magnates considered it a great honor to kiss the dust of his sepulchre and the feet of his successors. What is all that, if not the fulfilment of this prophecy of the Blessed Virgin, Deposuit potentes de sede, et exaltavit humiles. "He hath put down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted the lowly and humble?"

Notice that these words, as well as the other phrase of this inspired canticle, although expressed in the past tense, deposuit, nevertheless implies the past, present and future because they are uttered in a prophetic spirit. Indeed, the fulfillment of this prophecy has appeared manifestly in past centuries, and will continue to appear more and more in the ages to come, until the end of the world.

In past centuries, did not divine Might put down the proud Saul and replace him with the humble David? Did God not confound and destroy the arrogant Aman and the proud Vasthi to replace them by the humble Mardochai and the pious Esther? Did not Josue destroy more than thirty Chanaanite kings, turning their kingdoms over to the people of Israel?

Did not our divine Saviour deliver mankind from the bondage of the demons who before His Incarnation had subjected the world to their cruel tyranny? Did he not banish the rebellious angels from heaven and the fallen man from paradise? And did He not restore mankind, after he had humbled himself through penance to the grace of His Creator? Did He not banish the godless Diocletian from his imperial throne to replace him with the pious Constantine? Did He not drive out the arrogant Eugene and give the throne of his empire to the humble Theodosius?

dosius? Did He not exterminate the high priests, the Scribes and the Pharisees, to transfer their authority to poor fishermen chosen to share with Him the throne of His divine Justice, and the power which His Father had given Him to judge men and angels?

Thus it is that Christ humbles and destroys the great and powerful of this earth who misuse their power, and exalts the lowly and humble who practice the words of the Apostle: "Be you humbled therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in the time of visitation." (4) This Christ has always done from the beginning of the world; and He will continue until the end of time, even to the coming of the antichrist, who through his abominable pride will attempt to exalt himself even above God Himself: "Who opposeth, and is lifted up above all that is called God." (5) But He who annihilated Himself in order to confound the arrogant and exalt the humble will kill him with a single breath: "The Lord Jesus shall kill with the spirit of his mouth," (6) casting him into the lower depths of hell; and having resuscitated His two prophets Elias and Enoch, He will bring them publicly and gloriously into heaven to shame their enemies who behold them.

O Queen of humble hearts, extinguish the accursed arrogance which reigns within us and replace it in our hearts with the humility of thy Son and thyself, so that we thy children may resemble our most adorable Father and most amiable Mother.

"HE HATH FILLED THE HUNGRY WITH GOOD THINGS: AND THE RICH HE HATH SENT EMPTY AWAY"

SOME Doctors of the Church explain these prophetic words with reference to the good and the bad angels, the humble and the proud angels, the angels obedient to God and the angels in revolt against God. The good angels, acknowledging that God brought them out of nothingness and drew all their perfections from His divine Bounty, return all things to God and use their angelic qualities to pay Him homage, keeping-for themselves only their nothingness. For that reason God allows them to pass from the state of grace in which they are into the state of glory, showering upon them the inestimable blessings that constitute the blessed eternity.

The bad angels, on the contrary, contemplating the excellence with which God has endowed their creation, find self-satisfaction in them, appropriating their perfections and glorifying themselves as if they possessed these excellences in themselves. By insupportable pride and arrogance they oblige Divine justice to strip away their brilliance and perfections, to reduce them to an extreme wretchedness and barrenness, and to cast them into the depths of hell.

Other Doctors explain these words with reference to the Gentiles converted to God by the Christian faith, and to the Jews remaining in their blindness. The Gentiles before the coming of the Son of God on earth existed in extreme poverty (which is indicated by the word esurientes), because they had no knowledge of their Creator and adored no other god but the devil. And when they embraced the Christian religion, God enriched them with its inconceivable treasures. The Chosen People, on the contrary, having uncompromisingly rejected the Saviour of the world and remaining obdurate, were stripped of all the gifts, graces and favors with which God had honored them: "The rich he hath sent empty away."

Still other Fathers of the Church understand them words to mean the holy patriarchs, prophets and all the just of Old Law who felt an insatiable hunger, a burning thirst and a most vehement desire for the coming of the Redeemer, and were thereby filled with grace and holiness: "He hath filled the hungry with good things." On the other hand, the arrogant priests of the Jews and the proud Pharisees, convinced as they were of their own wealth of virtue and holiness, and scorning the graces that the Son of God offered them, miserably lost the Law, the faith and the eternal salvation which God had placed in their hands.

The Blessed Virgin possessed such perfect faith and such an ardent love for the Saviour Who was to come on earth, that her hunger, her thirst and her desires were much greater and livelier than the desires of all the patriarchs, prophets and saints who had preceded her or who were living in her time. Thus is it true that our adorable Saviour, so long anticipated, so fervently desired, so ardently begged of God, the Only-begotten and beloved Son of her virgin womb, overwhelmed Mary with an infinity of inconceivable and inexplicable blessings during the nine months that she carried Him within her in the world, when, later, she received him so many times into her immaculate breast and motherly Heart in the Blessed Eucharist after his Ascension, and above all since she possesses Him perfectly in Heaven.

St. Augustine applies the word esurientes to the humble, and divites to the proud. "The humble," he says, "realize that of themselves they are nothing, and that they stand in extreme need of the help and grace of heaven; but the proud are convinced that they are full of grace and virtue. That is why God takes pleasure in showering His gifts on the former and in depriving the latter of His bounty." (1)

These same words are also understood to mean all the poor whose hearts are detached from the things of earth, who love and embrace poverty for the love of Him who, possessing all the treasure of divinity, willed to become poor for love of us so that we might possess eternal riches. But we must understand the text to refer particularly to those who have voluntarily stripped themselves of all things through the holy vow of poverty, in order to imitate our divine Saviour and His most holy Mother more perfectly in their state of poverty, which was so extreme that the Son of God uttered these words: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air nests: but the son of man hath not where to lay his head." (2) Oh, what great treasures are encompassed by this voluntary poverty, since our Lord Himself said: "Blessed are ye poor, for yours is the Kingdom of God." (3) Oh, how dangerous is the possession of worldly wealth, since He Who is eternal truth also said: "Woe to you that are rich, for you have your consolation!" (4) And speaking through St. Paul, He utters these terrible words: "They that will become rich, fall into temptation, and into the snare of the devil, and into many unprofitable and hurtful desires, which drown men into destruction and perdition." (5) That is why, if you love riches, do not love the false riches of this world but the true wealth of heaven, which is the fear and love of God, charity toward your neighbor, humility, obedience, patience, purity, and the other Christian virtues which will lead you to the possession of an eternal empire.

This explanation of the aforementioned word, esurientes, is highly comforting. It is also a prophecy of the most holy Mother of God, referring to the enormous task yet to be accomplished of converting infidels, Jews, heretics and false Christians throughout the world. It was foretold and proclaimed long ago by the oracle of holy Scripture, by the mouth of the Church, and by the voices of the Fathers, Doctors and saints through whom the Spirit of God has spoken.

Open the sacred books and there you will hear the divine Spirit speaking of our Lord through the mouth of the royal prophet, assuring us that Christ will rule and reign throughout the world, (6) that all the kings of the earth will adore Him and all peoples will serve Him; (7) that all tribes will be blessed in Him and all nations will magnify Him; (8) that the whole universe will be filled with His glory; (9) that all generations without exception will adore Him and glorify His holy name; (10) that the whole world will be converted to Him; and that all the tribes of the world will fall prostrate before His face to adore Him. (11)

Do you not hear the eternal Father, speaking to His Divine Son in the second Psalm, promise Him, as His inheritance, all the nations of the world and possession of the entire earth? (12)

Do you not hear the Church so often praying thus to God: "Let all the earth adore thee and sing to thee: let it sing a psalm to thy name?" (13) Are you not familiar with the solemn prayers offered by Holy Church each year on Good Friday for the sanctification of all her children and the conversion of all heretics, Jews and pagans? Do you not know that every day she obliges her priests to offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass to God for all men and to implore the salvation of the world in these words: "We offer unto thee, O Lord, the chalice of salvation, beseeching thy clemency, that it may rise up in the sight of thy divine majesty, as a savour of sweetness, for our salvation, and for that of the whole world?" Tell me then, I beg of you, would the Holy Spirit Who animates and guides the Church in all things permit her to offer prayers that were futile and unheard?

This great general conversion has been revealed by the Spirit of God not only to the prophets of the Old Law but also to the holiest men and women of the New Law. Does not the great Apostle St. Paul assure us that all the Jews will be converted, and that their conversion will be followed by that of the whole world? There is every reason to believe that God will not refuse His Grace to all other men.

Our Lord said one day to St. Brigid, whose revelations have been approved by three Popes and two General Councils: "The time will come when there will be but one fold, one shepherd and one faith, and when God will be known to all." (14)

"You must realize," Christ revealed to her on another occasion, "that pagans will have such great devotion that Christians will be only their servants in spiritual life, and then shall we see the fulfillment of the Scriptures, which say that the people who know Me not will glorify Me, and that the deserts will be edified. At that time all will sing: Glory be to the Father, to the Son and to the Holy Spirit, and honor to all the saints!" (15)

All the holy Fathers (16) agree that after the death of antichrist the whole world will be converted, and although some of them assert that the world will last but a few days after his death, while others say a few months, some authorities insist that it will continue to exist many years after. St. Catherine of Siena, St. Vincent Ferrer, St. Francis of Paula and a number of other saints have predicted this ultimate universal conversion.

Then shall we witness the fulfillment of this great prophecy of the Queen of prophets, Esurientes implevit bonis, although not perhaps so perfectly as we might wish; that is, with no one left on earth who did not know and love God. But if this conversion is not completely general, it will prove, nonetheless, a delicious and magnificent feast for all those who possess a great hunger and burning thirst for the glory of God and the salvation of souls. They will be overwhelmed with inconceivable happiness and joy upon seeing their Creator and Saviour known, served and honored throughout the world, together with His most worthy Mother, and beholding the demons who now possess so many rich treasures on earth-that is, so many souls of infidels, heretics and bad Catholics-dispossessed of all, according to these divine words: "And the rich he hath sent away empty.'

Even if this prophecy is not completely fulfilled on earth, it will find its entire and perfect fulfilment in heaven, where the insatiable hunger and burning thirst possessed by all the saints during their earthly lives for the glory of God and the salvation of souls will be perfectly satiated and slaked, and these words will be fulfilled in each one of them: "I shall be satisfied when thy glory shall appear." (17) There is no mind capable of understanding, nor tongue of expressing, the least particle of the inestimable and inexpressible blessing which God will shower upon them for their great zeal in promoting His honor on earth, and for the salvation of the souls whom they have delivered from the possession of the devil.

O Mother of Mercy, who by thy prayers and merits didst hasten the time of the Incarnation of the Saviour of the world, hasten too, we pray thee, the desirable time of this great conversion which is so necessary for the salvation of so many souls who perish daily. Alas, take pity on them, O Mother of grace, and pray to thy Son to have pity on all the works of His hands, to have compassion on them because of the many sufferings which His holy humanity endured and the Precious Blood that He shed in order to save these souls from falling into hell.

CHAPTER XIII

"HE HATH RECEIVED ISRAEL HIS SERVANT"

Almighty God fashioned two orders of creatures at the beginning of the world, angels and men; the angels in heaven, men on earth. Both of them were so ungrateful that they revolted against their Creator, the angel through pride and man through disobedience to the commandment of God. The sin of the angel, being a sin of pride, was found to be so enormous in the eyes of God that divine Justice obliged Him to drive the angelic sinner out of paradise and cast him into hell. But His Mercy, seeing that man had fallen into sin through the temptation and seduction of Satan, took pity on him and resolved to withdraw him from the miserable state to which he had been reduced, even making a pledge to that effect. And even the countless and enormous sins committed by the Jews, the Gentiles and all men since that promise were not capable of preventing its fulfilment, but they did delay it for many centuries, during which time the whole race of Adam, condemned and cast out by God, was plunged into an abyss of darkness and a whirlpool of inexplicable evils from which it was impossible for it to emerge unaided. The more humanity went forward, the more deeply mired it became in this gulf, the more it wallowed in the mud and filth for its sins. (1)

God was known only in Judea, (2) and even there He was known very imperfectly and by very few persons. All the others were enshrouded in the darkness of hell, the whole earth was covered with idols and idolators, and the tyranny of Satan oppressed the whole world. The law of Moses revealed sin but it did not cure it. Thus it seemed that God, by an eminently just judgement, had entirely forgotten mankind abandoned in this deplorable state as a punishment for its crimes. His mercy did not manifest itself; there was evidence only of the terrible signs of His wrath which had cast one third of the angels into hell, had engulfed the whole army to be swallowed up in the waters of the Red Sea, had rained torrents of fire and flames from heaven to reduce great cities to ashes, had delivered His people on several occasions to the fury of their enemies, and had allowed men to suffer many other fearful punishments.

But finally the Son of God, mindful of His mercy which He seemed to have forgotten for more than four thousand years, Recordatus misericordiae suae and of the promise He had made to Adam, Abraham, David and a number of other prophets, to draw the human race from the pit of evils, Himself descended from heaven into the virgin bosom of the handmaid, Mary, where to His divine person He united the wretched human nature which He had abandoned, becoming man in order to save all men who long to be numbered among the true Israelites; that is, who seek to believe in Him and love Him.

That is what the Blessed Virgin announces to us through these words: "He hath received Israel his servant, being mindful of his mercy," for several holy Doctors explain them as the mystery of the Incarnation. This verse forms the conclusion of her inspired canticle; it is a recapitulation of its ineffable mysteries; it is the end of the Law and the prophets, the dispersal of the shadows, the consummation of the symbols. It is as if Our Lady were saying, "Here is the fulfilment of the predictions of the prophets; this is the fruition of the truth of the promises of God; this is what impels me to sing from the depths of my heart, "My soul cloth magnify the Lord." This is the great cause of my joy and delight, "And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." This is what will Make me proclaimed blessed by all nations. These are the great things that the Almighty has done to me. This is the origin and inexhaustible source of the unfathomable graces and mercies that God will shed on generation after generation of all who fear Him. 'nine are the greatest miracles of His infinite might and immense bounty. This is what will exalt the humble and bring ruin to the proud: "He hath received Israel his servant."

But what is this Israel? Several saints affirm that these words must be applied first of all to the people of Israel, the Son of God having willed to be made man and take birth from the Israelites notwithstanding their past ingratitude and the outrages that He was to receive at their hands. I say "first of all," for the divine Word also united Himself with all human nature and not only with the people of Israel.

But why does the Blessed Virgin say, "He hath received Israel his servant?" It is the Holy Spirit speaking through her and imparting two meanings by the word puerum. In the first place, He gives us to understand that the Son of God became not only man in order to make us

THE CANTICLE OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART 323 -

God-like, but He also became an infant to make us children of God: i.

Secondly, the Incarnate Word is placed before us not only as man and child, but also as servant. It is the same thing that the Holy Spirit declares to us through the mouth of St. Paul in these terms: "He emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant." (3) And do we not hear the voice of Our Saviour telling us Himself that He came not to be served, but to serve? (4) O superabundance Of incomparable love! The sovereign Mon. arch of the universe takes the form of a servant in order to deliver us from the bondage of Satan and make us children of God! O my Saviour, we are unworthy to be Thy slaves; yet Thou, not content to call us friends and brethren, hast made us children of the same adorable Father whose beloved Son Thou art, and consequently His heirs and Thy coheirs.

But Thou dost go even further, for, by another excess of unequalled goodness, Thou dost will to bear the title and to be in reality the Spouse of our souls, our souls to be Thy true spouses as Well, and consequently to be but one with Thee and to share all things with Thee.

That is still not sufficient to satisfy the ardor of Thy love for us. Thou dost will to be our head, and us to be thy members, and therefore to be but one with Thee, as members are but one with their head. Thou dost will us to be animated by the same spirit, to live the same life, to have but one heart and soul, and finally to be consummated in unity with Thee and the Heavenly Father, just as Thou art one with Him. Is not this, my dearest Jesus, what Thou didst ask of Him for us on the eve of Thy death in pronouncing this prayer: "That they all may be one, as thou Father, in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us." (5) "I in them and thou in me; that they may be Made perfect in one, and that the world may know that Thou hast sent me, and that thou hast loved them even as me." (6) O miracle of love! O prodigy of charity! O abyss of goodness!

O my Saviour, I am not amazed by the assurance that Thou wilt grant us possession of the same kingdom that the Almighty Father hast given Thee, that Thou wilt invite us to feast at the same table with Thee, and that Thou wilt seat us on Thy throne, in throno meo, even as Thou art seated upon the throne of Thy Royal Father. If we are but one with Thee, we should possess the same kingdom, eat at the same table, share the same throne, be animated by the same spirit, live the same life and have but one heart and soul with thee. Can we conceive of more admirable bounty? Has there ever been, and is it possible to imagine comparable magnificence. O human heart, how hard, how unfeeling, how unnatural thou art, if such goodness is incapable of softening thee! O monster of ingratitude, what wilt thou love if not Him who holds such a love for thee; indeed, who is all tenderness and love toward thee!

Such are the wonders contained in these words of the Mother of Jesus: "He hath received Israel his servant," since they teach us the mystery of the Incarnation, the source of all these miracles of charity.

But what is the primary cause of this ineffable mystery? and consequently, of all the infinite blessings which proceed from it? Do you not hear the most pure Virgin affirming in these words, Recordatus misericordiae suae? Yes, Mother of grace, it is indeed divine mercy that is the origin of the Incarnation of thy Son, and of all the immense treasures proceeding therefrom; and for all these things, next to the incomparable mercy, we are indebted to thy maternal Heart? For by what other means didst thou bring the eternal Word from the adorable bosom of His Father into thine own virginal bosom and sacred womb? Do we not hear the Holy Spirit who, speaking through thee, declares that while the eternal King was dwelling in the bosom and Heart of His Father, the most profound humility of thy lovable Heart gave forth such a pleasing and powerful odor that, rising up to Him, it pleased God to the extent of attracting Him to descend to thee, where He became incarnate for the redemption of the world? Is it not what is meant by these divine words: "While the king was at his repose, my spikenard sent forth the odor thereof"? (7) It is the explanation offered by the saints, who say that the spikenard is a tiny but extremely fragrant herb which represents thy sweet humility.

But, aside from the merit and strength of this holy virtue, how many ardent sighs didst thou send heavenward! How many tears didst thou shed! How many fasts and mortifications didst thou practise! How many earnest and ardent prayers didst thou offer to obtain from the Father of mercy the fulfillment of His promises regarding the Incarnation of His Son, and to draw the attention to this same Son to the prayers and cries of all the holy patriarchs, prophets and just persons who preceded His coming on earth! Veni Domine, veni et noli tardare, veni et libera nos, "O Lord, come without further delay, come to deliver us from all the evils which cover the earth."

After divine mercy, then, O holy Virgin, it is to the humility, love, charity and zeal of thine admirable Heart that we are indebted for His adorable Incarnation, as indicated in these holy words of thy divine canticle: "He hath received Israel his servant." Oh, may all the angels and saints for ever sing to thee a canticle of gratitude, praise, blessing and immortal thanksgiving, in the name of the whole human race, for the inexpressible debt it owes to thee for all eternity!

"AS HE SPOKE TO OUR FATHERS, TO ABRAHAM AND HIS SEED FOREVER"

THE final verse of the Magnificat sets before us the truth of the word of God and His fidelity to His promises. In Sacred Scripture He is justly called "faithful and true," (1) being not only true to His words, but very truth itself- essential, eternal and impregnable truth. Not only is God faithful to His promises, but He is fidelity itself, infinitely powerful, wise and good: infinitely powerful in overcoming all obstacles to the fulfilment of His promises; infinitely wise in fulfilling them most appropriately at the most suitable time and place, infinitely good in fulfilling His word in the manner most useful and advantageous to those to whom the promises were made.

Men speak freely and are quick to promise many things, but their words and promises are frequently nothing more than lies and frauds. God speaks little: Semel locutus est Deus. (2) He has but one Word in His Mouth: Verbum erat apud Deum, (3) but with this single Word He gave being to all things: Dixit et facta est. (4) With this single Word He supports and preserves all things: Portans omnia verbo virtutis suae. (5) With this single Word he governs all things. With this single Word He makes and fulfills all His promises truthfully and faithfully, and He always accomplishes even more than He promised. He promised Abraham, first of all, to give him a son who would be called Isaac, and He gave him countless sons. He promised to multiply his children to equal the number of the stars in the heavens, and then gave him a Son who is the Creator and sovereign Lord of heaven and earth, man and God at one and the same time. God promised Adam and the other patriarchs and prophets to deliver men from the dark perdition of sin, and then He was not content simply to withdraw them from this wretched state and to free them from the bondage of Satan; He also became man in order to make them like God; He became the Son of man so that men might become Children of God; and He descended from heaven to earth to transport them from earth to heaven.

It is these promises made to Adam, Abraham and the other Fathers and patriarchs which the Blessed Virgin mentions in the final words of her divine canticle, "As He spoke to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed for ever;" a promise that He fulfilled when He took flesh in her blessed womb. He declared this truth to the Jews when He said to them: "Abraham your father rejoiced that he might see my day," (6) that is, the day of my Incarnation and birth, of my dwelling on earth, whence he hoped for his salvation and that of the whole world. "He saw it," that is, he knew Christ by faith, or else he knew Him through the revelations that the Heavenly Father made to him, "and was glad."

We see, therefore, how God is true to His words and promises, a fact which should afford us wonderful comfort, because this most faithful fulfilment of the pledges of God provides us with infallible assurance that all His other promises to mankind will likewise be perfectly realized.

What are these promises? There are two kinds: those which belong to this life, and those which concern the life to come.

What does God promise us in this life? He promises that He will preserve us from evil if we live in fear of Him: «No evil shall happen to him that feareth the Lord.» (7) Yes, for all things work together for the good of those who love God: "To them that love God all things work together unto good." (8)

He promises to keep track of every step that we take in His service: "Thou indeed hast numbered my steps;" (9) to feel the wrongs that are done to us as if He Himself were wounded in the pupil of His eye: "He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of my eye;" (10) to cherish our good works like the apple of His eye: "The alms of a man is as a signet with him: and shall preserve the grace of a man as the apple of the eye." (11)

These are the promises made to us by our Saviour concerning our present life, but there are many others referring to the life in heaven. Our most benign Saviour promises us that on the day of the general resurrection, not only will He cause our bodies to rise again, but He will also clothe them with the brilliance, incorruptibility, immortality and glory of His own most holy body: "Who will reform the body of our lowliness, made like the body of his glory"; (12) He will have us dwell with Him not only in heaven but also in the bosom and heart of His Father: "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me"; (13) He will make us kings of the very kingdom that the Almighty Father conferred upon Him: "And I dispose to you, as my Father hath disposed to me, a kingdom"; (14) He will make us His Father's heirs and His own co-heirs; (15) He will share all His possessions with us; (16) He will give us the same glory that His Father has given to Him; (17) He will associate us with His angels, mat us on their thrones, have us live their lives and enjoy their felicity; (18) He will permit us to dine at His table; (19) He will seat us on His own throne; (20) we shall be through grace and participation what He is by nature and essence; (21) and, finally, we shall be but one with Christ and His Eternal Father who are also but one, as we have already said. (22)

Those are the marvellous promises of our most bountiful Redeemer. But is it possible for such great wonders to be fulfilled? Yes, that is as certain as it is that God is God. It is what the Blessed Virgin tells us: "As he spoke to our fathers: to Abraham and to his seed for ever."

O Christian, how admirable is thy religion! How holy and exalted is thy profession! How blessed and advantageous is thy state! Why dost thou not die of joy at the revelation of these rapturous truths! How is it possible for thy heart to remain cold and icy in the midst of them ardent games of the love of thy God for thee? Oh, how fearful will be the furnaces of hell for thee if, instead of loving the God who so loves thee, thou dost despise Him, outrage Him and trample upon His divine commandments! O my God, with all my heart do I wish to love Thee, not all for fear of meriting hell, but purely for love of Thee. O my Saviour, I implore

Thee to take full, complete and eternal Possession of my heart. Our adorable Saviour is not the only Being to be called the Faithful and True, for Holy Mother Church ascribed this same quality to His Beloved Mother Mary: "Virgin most faithful." This Virgin Mother has declared to her devotees, that among all the titles of honor in the litanies sung daily in her praise those most pleasing to her are: "Mother most amiable," "Mother most admirable" and "Virgin most faithful." And indeed with good reason she bears that title, being most admirably faithful to her words and promises.

Let us listen to her speaking: "Come over to me, all ye that desire me." (23) (i.e. the Holy Spirit, who causes her to speak thus.) Omnes. Not only some, but all-men and women, great and lowly, rich and poor, young and old, children and adolescents, the healthy and the sick, just men and sinners, faithful and unfaithful, learned and ignorant; for I desire to help all of you in your necessities and obtain the salvation of each and every one. Come to me, for I am the Mother of your Creator and Redeemer; to me, your Queen and Sovereign; to me, your Mother, your all-loving Mother: "The Mother of Fair Love." (24)

Come to me with great confidence, for God has given me all power in heaven and on earth, and my love and tenderness for you are greater than all mothers have ever had, now have, or ever will have in their hearts. Come to me, for even as I have given life to your adorable head, who is my Son Jesus, I can also give it to His members: "He that shall find me shall find life." (25) Come to me, for I have given you your Saviour, I can cooperate with Him in your eternal salvation, and I long to do so: "He that shall find me . . . shall have salvation from the Lord." (26) Come to me, for I will help you in all your needs. I will remain always with you to guide you everywhere and in all things. I will comfort your heart in afflictions. I will protect you amid the dangers of this life and defend you from the host of your enemies, visible and invisible. I will light your way in the dark and strengthen you in your weakness. I will sustain you in temptations and assist you specially at the hour of death. I will receive your souls when they leave your bodies and present them to my Beloved Son. Finally, I will lodge you in my bosom and my motherly Heart. I will keep you always before my eyes, and prove the fullness of my truly maternal love.

But listen to me, my children: "Now therefore, ye children, hear me." (27) "And blessed is the man that heareth me." (28) What have I to say to you? Cast your eyes upon my life on earth, and consider the virtues that God granted me the graces to practise there. They are as so many voices saying to you: "Blessed are they that keep My Ways" (29) that is, who travel the road of faith, hope, charity, humility, obedience, purity, patience and the other virtues that I practised on earth. Then embrace all these virtues in your hearts, and above all, cultivate a great love for my Son Jesus Christ. And if you love Him, keep all His commandments faithfully: "Whatsoever he shall say to you, do ye." (30)

Finally, we must realize that my Divine Son and I love all those who love us. (31) Love us, therefore, as your Father and your Mother, and we will love you tenderly and ardently as our dearest children. And if you truly love us, strive to implant a love for us in the hearts of other men, and these words will be fulfilled in your regard: "They that explain me shall have life everlasting." (32)

These are the words and promises of our most bountiful Mother, and she will infallibly fulfill them on behalf of her true children, for she frequently accomplishes even more than she has promised.

O Jesus, Only-begotten Son of God, who has willed to become the only Son of Mary and to accept us as her children and thy brethren, make us partakers, we humbly beseech Thee, of thy wondrous filial love for her, as well as of her admirable love for Thee, that we may love Jesus with the Heart of Mary, and Mary with the Heart of Jesus, and that we may have but one heart and love with Jesus and Mary.

INTROIT

Let us all rejoice in the Lord while celebrating this festival in honor of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a festival which rejoices the Angels and suggests to them new canticles of Praise Of the Son Of God. Ps. 44. My heart uttered a good work: I address my works to the King. Glory

COLLECT

O God who didst will that Thine Only Begotten Son who dost dwell with Thee from all eternity should live and reign in the Heart of the Virgin Mary; grant us, we beseech thm the grace to celebrate continually with one only heart, this most holy life of Jesus and Mary, to have but one heart with them, and one among ourselves, to accomplish Thy will in all things with a generous heart and resolute will, that So we may merit to become Ue to Thy Heart. Through the Same Lord.

LESSON FROM THE CANTICLE OF CANTICLES (C. 4)

How beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou! Thy eyes are doves eyes, besides what is hid within. Thou art all fair, O my love, and there is no spot in thee. Come from Libanus, my spouse, come from Libanus, come: thou shalt be crowned from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the dens of lions, from the mountains of the leopards. Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse: thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes, and with one hair of thy neck. I sleep, and my heart watcheth. Open to me, my mea: quia caput meum plenum est rore, et cincinni eci guttis noctium. Pone me ut signaculum super cor meum, ut signaculum super brachium meum; quia fortis est ut mors dilectio, dura sicut infernus aemulatio. Lampades ejus, lampades ignis atque flammarum. Aquae multae non potuerunt exstinguere caritatem, nec flumina obruent illam. Si dederit homo omnem substantiam domus suae pro dilectione, quasi nihil despiciet eam.

GRADUALE

Estote imitatores Jesu et Mariae, sicut filii carissimi: et ambulate in dilectione, sicut et ipsi dilexerunt vos. Hoc sentite in cordibus vestris, quod et in Corde ipsorum: et omnia vestra in humilitate et caritate fiant! V. Convertimini ad Deum in toto corde vestro: et sit vobis cor unum et anima una.

ALLELUIA, Alleluia V, (Ps 56:2 Mach. 1)
Paratum cor meum, Deus cordis mei, paratum cor meum, ut faciam omnes voluntates tuas corde magno et animo volenti. Post Septuagesimam, omissis Alleluia, V. et Sequentia, dicitur Tractus.

TRACTUS

Vide, Domine, quoniam tribulor, conturbatus est venter meus, subversum est Cor meum in memetipsa, quoniam amaritudine plena sum. V.
Factum est Cor Virginis speculum clarissimum passionis Christi, et imago perfecta mortis ejus, quia stigmata illius in Corde suo portavit. V.
Mortificationem Jesu semper in Corde et corpore suo portavit, ut vita Jesu manifestaretur in illa.

SEQUENTIA

Lactabunda canant pie
Cuncta corda Cor Mariae.
Cor amandum omni corde,
Cor laudandum omni mente.

MASS OF THE ADMIRABLE HEART

Cor aeterni Numinis
En factum est Virginis
Cor aeternum.
Haec est Virgo sapiens,

sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled:
for my hair is full of dew, and my locks of the drops of the night. Put me as a seal upon thy breast, as a seal upon thy arm: for love is strong as death, jealousy as hard as hell. The lamps thereof are fire and flames. Many waters cannot quench charity, neither can the floods drown it: if a man should give all the substance of his house for love, he shall despise it as nothing.

GRADUAL

Be ye imitators of Jesus and Mary as their cherished children, and walk in their love as they have loved you. Conceive in your hearts the sentiments of their Hearts and may all your actions be performed in humility and charity. Turn to God with your whole being and have but one heart and one soul among you.

ALLELUIA. Alleluia (Ps. 56:2 Mach. 1)

My heart is ready, O God of my heart, my heart is ready. To do all that Thou willest with a generous being and resolute will. (After Septuagesima Sunday, the Alleluia and Sequence are omitted.)

TRACT

Behold, O Lord, the grief which oppresses me; my heart is troubled within me for
I am filled with bitterness.

V. The Heart of Mary has become a faithful mirror of the Passion of Jesus Christ, for she bore the Stigmata in her Heart.

V. She constantly bore the mortification of Jesus in her Heart, and in her body, that the life of Jesus might be manifested in her.

SEQUENCE

Now let all hearts rejoice and sing the praises of the Heart of Mary.
Every heart should love her dearly, and every heart give highest praise.

 (c. 2)

In illa tempore: Pastores loquebantur ad invicem: Transeamus usque Bethlehem, et videamus hoc verbum, quod factum est, quod Dominus ostendit nobis. Et venerunt festinantes: et invenerunt Maravished the Heart Divine;

The Son, right-hand of God the Father, has made Himself the Heart and Son of her, the mother of Incarnate God.
 The flower of the Heart of the Almighty, the flower of the Virgin's heart, is now become both flower and fruit.
 O heart of Mary pure, thou joy of all our hearts, thou solace of our xii,

Thou miracle of love, thou mirror of great charity and book of life,

Thou art the living fountain of heavenly gifts, the treasure of the faithful, the lofty throne of Christ,
 The burning bush, that glows with fire Yet never is consumed, the furnace of celestial love,
 O admirable fire, in thee there is mingled the miracle of flame and dew.

O wondrous dew, imparting life, O fire giving happiness to those whose hearts are pure,
 Pour forth into our souls this dew of life, and kindle in our hearts the flames of love.

O Jesus, Heart of Mary, O dew, O fire,
 O fount of grace, burn, purify, possess the hearts of all mankind[

THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

O love make haste to spread thy kingdom every where, upon the earth even as Thou dost reign beyond the starry firmament!
 Renew our hearts in praise, make all things new on earth, singing forever the glory of Jesus and Mary, Amen.

CONTINUATION OF THE HOLY GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. LUKE

At that time: The shepherds said one to another: Let us go over to Bethelchern and let us see this word that is come to pass, which the Lord hath showed to us.
 And they came with haste: and they riam, et Joseph, et Infantem positum in praesepio. Videntes autem cognoverunt de verbo, quod dictu erat illis de puero hoc. Et omnes qui audierunt, mirati sunt: et de his, quae dicta erant a pastoribus ad ipsos. Maria autem conservabat omnia verba haec, conferens, in Corde suo (Credo)

OFFERTORIUM OFFERTORY

Gaudete mecum omnes, qui diligitis me, quia Cor meum elegit Altissimus, ut poneret in eo thronum suum, et regnum Filii dilectionis suae. (Alleluia)

SECRETA

Tua, Domine, propitiatione, et Cordis sanctissimi beatae Mariae semper Virginis intercessione, auferatur a cordibus nostris concupiscentia carnis et oculorum, atque ambitio saeculi: tibi quoque, cum hac oblatione, in igne tui amoris atque in flamma aeternae caritatis jugiter immolentur. Per Dominum.

found Mary and Joseph, and the infant lying in the manger. And seeing, they understood of the word that had been spoken to them concerning this child. And all that heard wondered: and at those things that were told them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these words, pondering them in her heart (Creed)

Rejoice with me, all you who love me, for the Most High has chosen my Heart to set up His throne and to establish therein the Kingdom of the Son of His love. (Alleluia)

SECRET

O Lord, by Thy mercy and through the intercession of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Mary, ever Virgin, drive out from our hearts the concupiscence of the flesh, the concupiscence of the eyes, and the pride of life, and grant that with this oblation, these hearts may be forever immolated in the fire of Thy love, and in the flames of eternal charity. Through the same, etc.

COMMUNIO

Beatum Cor tuum, O Maria Virgo, thesaurus sanctitatis, fornax divini amoris, thronus omnium virtutum, sanctuarium divinitatis! Dei Genitrix, intercede pro nobis. (Alleluia)

POSTCOMMUNIO

Domine Jesu Christe, qui miranda sanctissimae vitae, passionis et resurrectionis tuae mysteria, in sacratissimo Corde Matris tuae admirabilis conservari et glorificari voluisti: praesta, quaesumus; ut meritis et intercessione ejusdem Cordis amantissimi, sicut te panem vivum, ac Regem nostrum, ex altari tuo suscepimus; ita in corde et corpore nostro viventem et regnantem portare et glorificare, nosque in te et propter te solum vivere valeamus. Qui vivis et regnas cum Deo Patre, in unitate Spiritus sancti Deus, per omnia saecula saeculorum.

COMUNION

Blessed is Thy Heart, O Virgin Mary!

It is the measure of sanctity, the furnace of divine love, the throne of all virtues, sanctuary of the Divinity: Mother of God, intercede for us. (Alleluia)

POSTCOMMUNION

Lord Jesus Christ, who hast willed that the marvellous mysteries of Thy Life, Passion and Resurrection, should be preserved and glorified in the Most Holy Heart of Thy admirable Mother, grant us, we beseech Thee, through the merits and intercession of this most loving Heart, that as we have received Thee at Thy altar, who art our living bread and our king, so we may bear Thee and glorify Thee living and reigning in our hearts, and that we may live in Thee and for Thee alone, who, being God, dost live and reign with God the Father, etc.

First Noctury,

Ant. Mary offered her Heart to watch early for the Lord who made her; she prayed in the presence of the Most High and He granted the desires of her heart. Psalms as the Feasts of the Blessed Virgin Mary Ant. She made ready her Heart for the Lord and loved Him with a perfect heart; He delivered her from all her enemies. Ant. She kept strict guard over her Heart; therefore was she loved by God, who granted her her Heart's desires.

V. My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready,

R. To do all that Thou wilt.

Lesson 1: Canticle of Canticles (C. 4)

How beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou! Thy eyes are doves eyes, besides what is hid within. Thou art all fair, O my love, and there is not a spot in thee. Come from Libanus, my spouse, come from Libanus, come: thou shalt be crowned from the top of Anwa, from the top Of Sannir and Hermon, from the dew of lions, from the mountains of leopards. Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse; thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes, and with one hair of thy neck.

Lectio III (C. 8)

Quia est is qui ascendit de deserto, deliciis affluens, innixa super Dilectum suum. Pone me ut signaculum super Carum, ut signaculum super brachium meum, qui fortis est ut mors dilectio, data sicut infernas acmuli: lampades ejus, lampades ignis tuas flammarum. The voice of my beloved knocking. Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is full of dew, and my locks of the drops of the rights.

R. Blessed art thou, O Holy Virgin Mary and most worthy of all praise because thou didst form Christ in thy heart by faith and love. Blessed art thou amongst women and blessed is the fruit of thy Heart, Jesus. V. He is the God of my heart and my portion forever. Blessed.

Lesson III. Ibid. (C. 8)

Who is this that cometh up from the desert, flowing with delights, leaning upon her beloved? Put Me as a seal upon thy heart, as a sea upon thy arm: for love is strong as death, jealousy as hard as hell. The lamps thereof are fire and flames. Many waters cannot quench charity, neither can the flood drawn it; if a man should give all the substance of his house for love, he shall despise it as nothing.

R. I beheld her beautiful as a dove and roses and lilies of the valley surrounded her heart; she cried out in a loud voice, saying: "Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples because I languish of me that I should do Thy will, O my God. I have willcd it and Thy law is in the midst of my heart. My heart is ready,

O God of my heart, my heart is ready. V.
Thou shalt call my will in thy heart.

Therefore, from this heart as from a fur-met of Divine love, the Blessed Virgin uttered good words, i.e., words of burning charity. As from a vessel full of the best wine, nothing can come forth but he bc~t ~vinc, or as from a furnace of intense heat, there comes forth nothing but burning fire; so from the Heart of the Mother of Christ, no words could come forth but words of Divine love and burning zeal. We have few words spoken by the Mistress and Mother of wisdom, but they are weighty and wise. The seven words spoken by the Blessed Mother of a Christi benedictissima Matre leguntur dicta, ut mystice ostendatur ipsam fuisse plenam gratia septiformi. Cum Angelo his tantummodo locum est: Quomodo fiet istud? ct: Eme ancilla Domini. Cum Elisabeth his ctiam, scilicet illam salutando, et Deum laudando, cum ait: Magnificet 2 anima mea Dominum. Quae verba considerate; atque rumina mens devota, cum ipso propheta sit: Quam dulcia faucibus meis, id est, omnibus affectionibus, cloquia oralis Form dulcedo haec, quam in verbis beatissimae Virginis devota mens scilicet, est ardor piae devotionis, quam in cis anima expunctualiter probat. Dicat igitur meus devota: Quam dulcia faucibus meis cloquia tua. Distinguamus veto per ordinem has septem flammulas amoris verborum Virginis benedictae. Prima est flammula amoris separantis: scilicet, amoris transformantis: tertia, amoris communicantis: quarta, amoris jubilantis: quinta, amoris saporis: sexta, amoris compatiens: septima, amoris consum-

Christi sunt so many marvels of wisdom and virtue~ mystic sign that she was full of the seven-fold grace. She spoke with the Angel: "How shall this be done?" and "Behold the handmaid of the Lord!" With Elisabeth with me, viz., to greet her and to praise God, when she said: "My soul doth magnify the Lord." With her Son twice, once in the Temple, "Son, why hast Thou done so to us," and at the Marriage Feast, "They have no wine." To the servants once: "Whatever He shall say to you, do ye." In all these cases she spoke little except that in praise and thanksgiving to God, she spoke more at length, viz., when she said: "My soul doth magnify the Lord," since she was speaking not with man, but with God.

R. Praise God the Father with me and cult His Name above all forever, for He gave me His Heart, His only Son. This is my beloved Son and my most loving heart. V. Let all generations praise God the Father and exalt Thy most holy Heart, O Jesus, His only Son. This is, etc.

These seven words came forth as seven outgrowths and acts of love, varying in kind and degree like seven flames from the furnace of her heart. The devout mind, meditating and pondering these words, says with the prophet: "How sweet are Thy words to my palate," i.e., my affections. This sweetness which the devout soul finds in the words of the Blessed Virgin is the fire of pious devotion which the soul experiences in their meditation. The devout soul, therefore, says: "How sweet are thy words to my palate." Truly we distinguish an order to these seven darts of love-the words of the Blessed Virgin. The first is a dart of separating love; the second of transforming love; the third, communicating love; the fourth, joyful love; the fifth, savouring love; the sixth, compensating

Lesson VII: The Gospel of St. Luke

At that time, the shepherds said one to another; "Let us go over to Bethlehem and let us see this word which is come to pass, which the Lord has shewed us.

Homily of St. Bonaventura on St. Luke
(C. 2)

Here is commended the diligence of the shepherds, whose praise may be summed up under three heads, with regard to the certitude of the discovery, viz., that it was fully confirmed, quickly published and studiously preserved. In the first place, it was fully confirmed by creditable signs and evidence, wherefore it is said,
"And they found Mary and Joseph and the Child lying in a manger." They found Him because they sought Him diligently and earnestly. And now that He is found with Mary, a Virgin, with Joseph, a just man, and in a manger; for he who wishes to find Christ, must have purity as regards his heart, justice as regards his neighbour, and humility and Lectio VIII.

Fuit tertio studiose conservata, unde subditur: Maria autem WDSrV2bat omnia verba haec, conferens in Corde suo, tanquam prudens et discreta, secundum illud; Miscricordia et veritas te non deserant. Circumdanda cas gutturi tuo, et de-reverence with respect to God. Not only was it fully confirmed, but also quickly published, wherefore it is added, "And all who heard marvelled at the Child who was born, at what was told them by the shepherds, viz., what they had heard from the angel.

R. H~, O ye children, and know that you are in my heart in life and in death. Therefore learn of me for I am meek and humble of heart and you shall find rest for your souls.

V. Lay this up in your hearts and do all your works in humility and charity and you shall find rest for your souls.

in the third place, it was studiously preserved whence it is added, "But Mary kept all these things, pondering them in her Heart." It was also prudent and discreet, according to this: "Mercy and truth are not wanting to Thee. Compass

Hence it is said of the fool, "The heart of a fool is like a broken vessel and does not hold wisdom." Hence the Heart of Mary is the Ark, containing the secrets of Divine eloquence. And therefore it is designated by the Ark of Moses of which it is said that it contained the cables of the Divine law. And since she not only preserved them, but also understood them, it is added, "pondering them in her heart" so that she could say, I have hidden Thy words in my heart

His Mother kept all these things, pon claing them in her heart. Here is de scribed His glorification and this in two ways, viz., by the testimony of His Mother and the proof of His own power. As to the testimony of His Mother it is said, "And His Mother kept all these things, pondering them in her licart," that she might give testimony at the proper time and place. Thus it was said, "But do thou, Daniel, keep silence and scal the book until the appointed time." And since she understood this, it is said "in her heart" according to these words. "The heart of the wise men knoweth the time to . answer," and it is said of the Trans figuration of our Lord that the disciples kept the secret among themselves.

1. This Salutation which is at once a magnificent consecration to the Hearts of Jesus and Mary and a real treatise in abridged form of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts, has been recited since 1643 in the various institutes of St. John Eudes. The Blessed Virgin promised the Servant of God "to give to all recite it with devotion, desires; to purify themselves more and more from all sorts of sins, in order to be more capable of receiving divine gifts and blessings." And, in fact, numberless graces which seem almost miraculous, have, at all times, been obtained, testifying to the efficacy of this prayer.

Salutation to the Blessed Virgin Mary(1)

Ave, Maria, Filia Dei Parris.	Hail Mary, Daughter of God the Father.
Ave, Maria, Mater Dei Filii.	Hail Mary, Mother of God the Son.
Ave, Maria, Sponsa Spiritus sancti.	Hail Mary, Spouse of the Holy Ghost.
Ave, Maria, templum totius Divinitatis.	Hail Mary, Temple of the Divinity.
Ave, Maria, candidum liliū fulgidae semperque tranquilla Trinitatis.	Hail Mary, Immaculate lily of the most splendid and ever-pure Trinity.
Ave, Maria, rosa praeulgidā coelicae amoenitatis.	Hail Mary, Radiant True of heavenly fra- grance.
Ave, Maria, Virgo virginum, Virgo fidelis de qua nasci, et de cujus lacte pasci Rex coelorum voluit.	Hail Mary, Virgin of virgins, virgin most faithful, of whom the King of Heaven did will to be born.
Ave, Maria, regina Martyrum, cujus ani- mā doloris gladius petransivit.	Hail Mary, Queen of martyrs, whose soul was pierced with a sword of sorrow.
Ave, Maria, domina, mundi, cui data est omnis potestas in coelo et in terra.	Hail Mary, Queen of the universe, to whom all power has been given in heaven and on earth.
Ave, Maria, regina cordis mei, mater, vita, dulcedo, et spes mea charissima.	Hail Mary, Queen of my heart, my mother, my life, my consolation, and my dearest hope.
Ave, Maria, mater amabilis.	Hail Mary, Mother most amiable.
Ave, Maria, mater admirabilis.	Hail Mary, Mother most admirable.
Ave, Maria, mater misericordiae.	Hail Mary, Mother of Mercy.
Ave, Maria, gratia plena Dominus tecum.	Hail Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee.
Benedicta tu in mulieribus, Et benedictus fructus ventris tui Jesus. Jesus.	Blessed art thou amongst women. And blessed is the fruit of thy womb,
Et benedictus sponsus tuus Joseph.	And blessed be thy spouse, St. Joseph.
Et benedictus pater tuus Joachim.	And blessed be thy father, St. Joachim.
Et benedicta mater tua Anna.	And blessed be thy mother, St. Anne.
Et benedictus filius tuus Joannes.	And blessed be thy adopted son, St. John.
Et benedictus angelus tuus Gabriel.	And blessed be thy angel, St. Gabriel.
Et benedictus Pater aeternus, qui te ele- git.	And blessed be the Eternal Father who chose thee.

(1). Saint John Eudes recommended this prayer for the conversion of sinners and advised his children to say it at the bedside of the sick. The Blessed Virgin promised him that "all who Say it with devotion, or at least good will if they are in the state of grace, receive an increase of divine love in their hearts at each of the twelve salutations or benedictions contained in it; if they are in mortal sin, she will knock at the door of their hearts with her own sweet virginal hand to urge them to open it to grace." And she added that when persons are found steeped in sin and difficult to convert, it would be well to encourage them to say this salutation, or at least to consent to having it said for them.

360 - THE ADMIRABLE HEART OF MARY

Et benedictus Filius, qui te amavit.
Et benedictus Spiritus sanctus, qui te sponsavit.

Et benedicti in aeternum omnes qui benedicunt te et qui diligunt te.
Amen.

And blessed be the Divine Son who loved thee.
And blessed be the Holy Ghost who espoused thee.

And blessed be forever all those who bless and who love thee. Amen.

Rosary of the Admirable Heart of Mary(1)

On the cross the Creed is said to adore all the mysarries of the Christian Religion in the Sacred Heart of the glorious Virgin, in union with the faith with which this same heart was always animated, and in union with all the adorations and praises which it has rendered and will eternally render to these same mysteries.

On the three first small beads the following words are said in union with the love of the Three Divine persons with regard to this most amiable Heart: Ave Cor Sanctissimae, beatissimae Virginis Mariae. "Hail Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary."

On each large bead the Gloria Patri is said to thank the Most Holy Trinity for all the graces poured so abundantly into this abyss of graces; and for all the favors which, through her intercession have been granted to the whole human race, and to ourselves in particular.

On the two first decades the following is again said:

Ave Cor Sanctissimae beatissimae Virginis Mariae. "Hail Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary."

This is done to fulfil our duties of respect towards this most worthy heart, in union with the devotion and praise which have been, are, and will be rendered it by all the hearts, of Angels and Saints; uniting ourselves at the first Ave to the devotion of the Seraphim; at the second with the Cherubim and thus through the whole angelic choir from which we proceed to the hearts of the Patriarchs, of the Prophets, of the Martyrs, etc.

On the third and fourth decade is said: Per Cor amantissimum sanctissimae Matris tuae, O bone Jesu, fiat cor nostrum secundum Cor tuum. "Through the loving Heart of Thy most Holy Mother, O Good Jesus, make our hearts like unto thine."

And this to beseech Our Lord by the heart all inflamed with love, of His Most Holy Mother, that our hearts be according to His Heart by a perfect imitation of the love, charity, humility, submission, obedience, patience, innocence, purity, hatred of sin, contempt of the world, entire disengagement from all that is not God, and of all the other virtues of this Adorable Heart.

On the fifth and sixth decades are said: Per Cor amantissimum, sanctissimae Matris tuae, exaudi nos Jesu. "Through the loving Heart of Thy most Holy Mother, Hear us, O Jesus."

This is to supplicate Our Lord, by the Heart of His Most Holy Mother by which He is more loved than by all the hearts of men and Angels together, to graciously hear the prayers which we offer and to grant us the particular favors we ask either for ourselves or for others. Because He can refuse nothing which we ask with humility and confidence by this most loving, most lovable and most loved Heart.

At the end is said the Salutation Ave Cor Sanctissimum, "Hail, Heart Most Holy," (P. 358).

(1) This rosary of six decades by St. John Eudes may be said in Latin or English.

Benedictum sit Cor amantissimum et dulcissimum Nomen Domini Nostri Jesu Christi, et gloriosissimae Virginis Mariae Matris ejus, in aeternum et ultra. Nos cum prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria. Amen.

Blessed forever be the Most loving Heart and the most sweet name of our Lord Jesus Christ and of the most glorious Virgin Mary, His Mother. May the Virgin Mary and her most merciful Son bless you. Amen.

Consecration to the Admirable Heart Of Mary

O most holy Heart of Mary, ever Immaculate, ever Virgin, holiest, purest, noblest, greatest, inexhaustible fountain of goodness, sweetness, mercy and love; model of every virtue, image of the Adorable Heart of Jesus Christ ever burning with the most ardent charity, who invest God more than all the Seraphim together. Heart of the Mother of the Redeemer, seat of peace, wherein mercy and justice are allied, whence peace between Heaven and earth has begun to be treated, who didst feel our miseries so deeply, who didst suffer so much for our salvation, who still lovest us so ardently and who dost merit by all these rights, the respect~ love and confidence of all men to accept my poor tribute of love.

Prostrate before thee I tender thee the most profound homage of which I am capable; I thank thee for the feelings of love and mercy with which thou art so deeply moved at the sight of our misery; I offer thee my humble thanks for all the gifts I have received from thy goodness, and I unite with all the pure souls who delight in honoring, praising and loving thee. They have learned from the Holy Spirit Who directs them, that it is through thee they must go to Jesus Christ, and offer to this God-Man their need of adoration.

Therefore, O most loving Heart, thou shalt henceforth be the object of my veneration, of my love and most tender devotion; thou shalt be the way whereby I shall go to my Saviour, as it is through thee that His mercy shall come to me; thou shalt be my refuge in every need, my consolation in every affliction; from thee I shall learn the purity, humility, meekness and above all, the love of Jesus; I shall ask for these virtues through thy merits and so shall infallibly obtain them. I presume to offer thee my heart sullied with a thousand sins; all unworthy as it is I trust that thou wilt not despise it. Grant by thy powerful mediation that it may be purified and detached from every creature; penetrate it with sorrow for my sins; fill it with the love of the Divine Heart of Jesus, thy Son, that it may be eternally united with thine in Heaven, there to love God forever. Amen.

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown.(1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution(2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world(3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1).Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumers ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2)The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.

2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae et Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a savior of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre de Bérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking. They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.
